THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southern Christian Convention and the Congregational Churches of the Southeast.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY

VOLUME LXXXIV.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 1932.

NUMBER 1.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

By DR. W. C. WICKER.

SHALL WE SAVE IT?—

Elon College needs the loyal support of every member of the Church at this time of depression. The campaign for funds is being presented to all the churches in the Southern Convention with the hope that there will be a hearty and liberal response. We need $50,000 to carry on the work of the College and meet urgent obligations. Unless the membership of the church responds liberally, we shall be unable to continue the work of the College. No one should depend on others to do his part. We shall need the full cooperation of all. Good will is important and we crave that blessing from all. Our prayers are needed at this time as never before. Our children and young people should give our College all the patronage possible. We should save our College for our Christ and for His Church for the Kingdom. But with all these gifts and graces we must have money to pay debts. Every church should undertake to raise as much money as possible. We want free-will offerings, but these offerings should be large enough to pay our debts, which are obligations we owe.

SHALL WE RETAIN DR. SMITH AS PRESIDENT?—

It all depends on what we do in the next few days. We have until January 15, 1932, to determine whether we shall justify him to give up his church in Norfolk and remain with the College. Our people should be willing to give to the limit of their ability; yes, even beyond their ability, to save our College. Like some of the best friends of the College, we should be willing to make sacrifices for the College, borrow the money and make a donation now to meet the urgent needs of the College and pay the money back as may be possible. It seems that our people would respond to the call in this time of need and save the College, but possibly there are those who think that the need is not so serious as it really is. Being at the center of conditions at the College, I am acquainted with the situation, and know that I do not exaggerate when I say that the College needs the hearty response and liberal support of all her friends at this time. It is our College in name; shall we save it and mark it ours in fact, or lose it forever? Your gifts, the payment of our debts will determine which we shall do.

GLOOMY CONDITIONS.—

To the monthly meeting of the administrative committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America went Rev. Arva Brush Keeler, director of the department of buildings and property of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions. Director Keeler told the committee that Protestant churches in the United States owe some $135,000,000. Church bonds amounting to $6,000,000 or more have been defaulted by twelve denominations alone. Church credit, said he, is none too good; church building projects are being held up by the depression. Director Keeler suggested a remedy: let a small group of rich men establish a fund of $10,000,000 to draw three per cent interest, to be lent to needy churches on long-term notes at four per cent. The Council appointed a committee to study the matter.

SUBSCRIBE FOR YOUR CHURCH PAPER.—

More gloomy than the church-building condition reported by the journalists last week is the publication of church papers. Special in their appeal, ecclesiastical papers find paid advertising skimpy, subscriptions few. Many weeklies, like those of the Methodist Episcopal Church, are subsidized by their denominations. Indeed, it seems almost impossible to run a Church paper without subsidization of some kind.

Last summer The Living Church, high-church Episcopal weekly, begged for help. Last week it announced that aid had come "from anonymous sources." The Southern Churchman, low-church Episcopal weekly, also needed help, and still does. Three weeks ago the World's Christian Fundamental Association, publisher of The Christian Fundamentalist, announced it was $1,600 in debt because "one dear friend" is no longer able to give from $1,250 to $2,500 a year. To these names were added last week two more: The Churchman, independent liberal Episcopal weekly, and The Presbyterian Advance, Southern independent weekly. Both are old, respected. The Churchman, edited by Dr. Guy Emory Shipler, is the oldest church paper in the English-speaking world, founded in 1805. THE CHRISTIAN SUN needs a larger subscription list in order to meet expenses and we must have them if the paper continues to be published. It has been suggested by one of our most benevolently-minded members that an endowment fund be established for THE SUN, and we would like to see his suggestion take concrete form.

THE GOSPEL FOR TODAY.—

The voice of the gospel was heard at the public meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America on Thursday evening, when Dr. Robert E. Speer spoke on "The Gospel for Today for the Individual," and Dr. Charles E. Jefferson in "For the Nations." Dr. Speer stressed the good news to the individual in the realms of his convictions, character, and conduct. He pleaded for a display of humble joy, fearless freedom and courage, the old veracities, simplicity of life and kindness of daily duty.

"The world has become a big apartment house, pestered by loud speakers," declared Dr. Jefferson. "Other nations are so close we can almost hear them turning things over in their minds. The sixty-five nations must live in peace, if the family of nations is not to degenerate into a menagerie of nations. God is the God and judge of the nations. All nations are under the law of love.

"We cannot go on as we have been going," he prophesied, and lamented the poverty of the world, the selfishness incarnate in the present profit system, and the weight of armaments. "I see stormy weather," he predicted. "The church is going to lose a lot of members and money and must be ready to be the church militant."

OLDEST KNOWN TEXT OF BIBLE DISCOVERED.—

The newly-found papyrus books are older than any Greek manuscript of the Bible, or parts of the Bible hitherto known. They have been described in the Times by Sir Frederick Kenyon. There does not appear to be anything revolutionary in this new and early text. But for more news about it we must wait. The chief importance of these papyrus books appears to lie, paradoxically, in the fact that they are not important. They do serve, however, to confirm the correctness of the text which we have and everything which confirms the correctness of the Bible is of importance. The spades of the archaeologists have made great contributions to the study of the Bible and still their search goes on revealing new evidence of the origin of the Sacred Scriptures. The study of the Bible is receiving more attention today than ever before in its existence and is a perennial source of inspiration.

UNITED STEWARDSHIP COUNCIL MEETS.—

About thirty secretaries and members of stewardship commissions from the larger denominations met at the Robert Morris Hotel, Philadelphia, about the first of last month, in the sessions of the United Stewardship Council. Starting twenty years ago with the stewardship of money or substance, many have been advocating the title as "the accepted portion." By adding the stewardship of time, talents, life, personality, prayer, etc., including all that we have and are, they have almost come to make stewardship synonymous with Christianity in action, or even the Christian life, which means that there is no longer any "stewardship" left! A committee of five was appointed to study this subject for a year and to correspond with other members of the council, with a view to issuing a clear statement of what stewardship really is, not a definition in a single sentence, not a treatise, but possibly a new series of stewardship principles.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. A. W. Hurst, pastor, Elon Church, occupied the pulpit of Christian Temple, Sunday, January 3rd. The editor is absolutely within the bounds of safety in saying that the people of Christian Temple had wholesome, instructive and inspirational sermons on that day.

Dr. W. A. Harper, who recently returned to Elon from travelling in the Near East, has been appointed a member of the faculty of Vanderbilt University School of Religion, Nashville, Tenn. Dr. and Mrs. Harper left for Nashville December 31st. Our best wishes go with them to their new home. Dr. Harper is a successful teacher and may be counted on to make good in the position to which he has been appointed.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, writing under date of December 23, says: "We have a fifth Sunday meeting started in our (Alabama) Conference that is going to mean much. The meeting was held at Cragford the last fifth Sunday and was a success. It is in the nature of a Layman's movement, with Brother O. C. Mitchell, Cragford, Ala., as president; Brother V. E. Kitchens, Roanoke, vice-president. I am acting as secretary. Meeting of next fifth Sunday will be with our Roanoke church."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A carload of food and supplies is being collected and will be shipped to Elon College the last of this week. Rev. J. M. Roberts, Suffolk, Va., is in charge of the work in connection with this car, and all those who are desirous of contributing to the good of the cause should send groceries, hams, meat, etc., to Mr. Roberts, who will greatly appreciate their assistance and will see that they get full credit for their contribution. Further information may be obtained from Mr. Roberts, or Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., who is in charge of the Virginia Emergency Campaign. It might also be stated in this connection that Mr. Lester is extremely anxious that the various churches finish up their solicitations. Haste in this matter is imperative at this time.

AN URGENT LETTER.

(Dr. C. H. Rowland, president of the N. C. and Va. Christian Conference, mailed out to all pastors in the Conference the following, under date of December 31, 1931):

Dear Brother:

The needs of Elon College are well known to you, and you know that immediate action is necessary. I trust you have been busy these days securing money and pledges for the College. The time for all of the friends of the College to rally has come, and I feel sure they will not fail her in this time of great need. We want every member of every church in our Conference to be given an opportunity to make some kind of a contribution. We have fifteen days to finish the canvass, and we trust each church will come up one hundred per cent strong. It is important to do this work now.

The Board of Trustees was in session yesterday, Wednesday, December 30th, and passed the following resolution:

"Resolved; That we, the Board of Trustees of Elon College, express our appreciation to the pastors of our constituency for the interest manifested and support pledged to the College in the present campaign, and we call upon every pastor to make a determined effort to see that the canvass be completed in the church or churches he serves with all thoroughness possible, and report to Chas D. Johnston, Elon College, N. C., by January 14, 1932."

With all best wishes,

Very truly yours,

C. H. ROWLAND, Pres.,
N. C. & Va. Conference.

DAMASCUS.

We had a good day at Damascus December 20th. After Sunday school and preaching service, we spent nearly an hour in a sort of round-table discussion of the church's financial obligations and how to meet them. The fellowship was great. The imaginary distance between pulpit and pew was gone. We were just friends with a common interest in a great cause. Pledges and plans which promise spiritual growth and financial sufficiency were made and adopted.

This church, like others of its age, has had its set-backs as well as its periods of growth. The prospect at present is encouraging. There are no finer people than these. They are increasingly manifesting their interest in intelligent and consecrated action.

Modesty will not allow me to account in detail a great pounding given me a few weeks ago and the almost daily remembrances in substantial gifts by these people with whom I am happy. I thank God for the spirit of love and friendship in our midst.

B. J. HOWARD.

ROSEMONT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Christmas services at the Rosemont Christian church were well attended this year, and the services themselves were beautiful and impressive. Our sunrise service on Christmas morning was more largely attended than it has been in many years. The Sunday school entertainment was given on the night of the 23rd in the presence of a large audience, and the program by the members of the school was greatly enjoyed.

The Rosemont church is studying the gospel of Luke for three months. The pastor preaching from some portion of a chapter at each service, and having the members, who will, to study those two chapters each week, and ask any question they wish, and he gives the answer the following Sunday evening. It is hoped that this method will create deeper interest in Bible study among the people who attend the services.

Another item of interest at Rosemont is the recent organization of a Men's Missionary Society, with W. H. Farrow, president; L. H. Stewart, vice-president, and William M. Sparkman, secretary and treasurer. In addition to its purpose to study, and try to create an interest in missions, it is to be a booster organization for the church. A fine interest is being manifested, and it is hoped that much good is to result from the organization.

PRINTED PRAYERS.

To sit down and write a prayer from a studied, intellectual point of view, as one writes a poem or an essay, or even an article such as this, would be travesty upon the sweetest and truest soul-impulses and the finest and richest means of grace known to human beings. Printed prayer can touch a life only as it expresses the spontaneous outburst of another life in its hour of devout appeal, whatever the state of the one who prays. It may be the hour of contrition and confession, or of spiritual ecstasy, or of intense solicitude for others, but it must be the hour of experience when the deepest emotions, tempered with reason, stir and compel.

The question is not shall prayer be spoken or written. Whether by voice or pen, the point of matter is that the one who prays should put oneself, on behalf of the whole world, under the kind and measure of burden which lifts and conquers. That sin might be renounced, not placated; that physical distress might be relieved, fervor and faith increased, love nurtured and dispensed; and that the Christian's work, too often misconceived and misdirected, might be tried as by fire to prove of what sort it is, real prayer for these things and their like gives one a divine sense of the reality of our Lord's suffering, and brings the true child of God to the very pinnacle of peace and power.

Is a victorious attitude incompatible with agonized petition? Not at all. Knowing that in three days the temple of His soul should rebuild, soon to be lifted to surpassing heights of eternal bliss, from the cross Jesus cried: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" Or, let us ask again: Does one supplicate while one praises? In the truest sense. The more filled with praise the more burning one's desire that all mankind might come to enter and know the ineffably precious Way of Life and that not one trusting, forgiven soul should miss, even here and now, a foretaste of the glory of God's unbounded grace.

MRS. J. J. L.

THE HUNGER OF HEARTS.

To me, time has proven fact that the philosophy of Jesus Christ will stand sure and true until the end. The love of pleasure and the deceitfulness of riches may ensnare us for awhile, but ere long our hearts grow hungry for those abiding comforts that make us conscious of the presence of God. False imaginations and empty theoretical speculations may entice us along for awhile, but we soon awake to our dire need of that something that fills our inmost souls with those supreme joys that none but the God of Glory can give. I believe it was Augustine who said: "God has created us for Himself, and in Him only do we find rest." Brilliant intellects may flash in, now and then, on the trend of truth but scarcely has the age passed before they are numbered with the forgotten, and those unstable minds who were deceived thereby are turning back with hungry hearts in search of those lost joys of the bygone days. To me, the established teachings of Christianity offer us the greatest certainties of life and peace; and no materialistic non-spiritual reasoning or explanation of immortality can satisfy the cherished hopes of our hungering hearts and our aspirations of soul. What spiritual undertakings we can become in our vain searchings for comforts that can never be found in the venacular of the physical senses. Such accentuations lead for a time to outright revolting against the irresistible teachings of our Christ, until our distracted thoughts are in some way arrested and we are made sufficiently conscious of our defeat, to emerge, by the grace of God, from the tumult and vanity of our backslidings into a new awareness of our supreme need of God. Jazz may be sought with an incessant crave; thrills may be strenuously in the ascendancy of our thought in life, and feverish pleasure seeking may be the dominant purpose of our life, but sooner or later we awake to our folly, with joy ridden hearts and impoverished souls; prodigals returning to our Father with hungry hearts, begging for a place of humble service in His kingdom, after these recent years of many transgressions.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

DR. EDWARD M. NOYES, of Newton Centre, Mass., is again serving as winter pastor of the Tourist Church at Seabreeze, Fla.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL is the subject of an attractive leaflet issued by the Congregational Church Extension Boards. It carries a very fine picture of Miss Coghill.

REV. GEORGE D. OWEN, pastor of the Union Church at Ormond, Fla., was re-elected president of the Daytona Beach Ministerial Association at its recent annual meeting.

REV. C. ARTHUR LINCOLN and family, of Datona Beach, Fla., were the recipients of a Christmas gift of a beautiful radio from members of the congregation. The gift was sincerely appreciated.

REV. FRED P. ENSMINGER, D. D., spent the Christmas holidays visiting his two sisters in Sanford, Florida. This was Dr. Ensminger's old home, and his sisters are active in the Congregational church at Sanford.

REV. GEORGE L. HANSCOM, D. D., formerly pastor of the church at Melbourne, Fla., has been elected mayor of Mount Dora, to which place he removed last spring. Dr. Hanscom was at one time pastor of the church at Mount Dora.

DR. C. REXFORD RAYMOND and family from Chatanooga, spent the Christmas holidays at Melbourne visiting their daughter and son-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. Orville D. Ullom. They were welcome visitors in the Jacksonville office en route.

REV. O. H. DENNY, pastor of the church at North Miami, Fla., writes enthusiastically with regard to the progress of the work there. He reported 126 in Sunday school and new members each Sunday, with also new members coming into the church. Mr. Earl Henshaw, who is Scout Master, has twenty boys in his Sunday school class.

"MY GOSPEL" is the title of the sermon preached by Dr. Elisha A. King on the tenth anniversary of his pastorate at the Community Congregational Church at Miami Beach. This sermon has been printed in pamphlet form, and is a strong, vital and optimistic message. Dr. King preaches every Sunday over WIOD at 4:45 in the afternoon.

THE DEDICATION of the new church at Fort Myers has been set for February 14th, according to the pastor, Rev. O. T. Anderson. The State Superintendent recently visited that church and found a beautiful building with fine surroundings, much like a park. The congregations and the Sunday school are both growing since the new church was opened.

DR. CHARLES H. BEALE, Pastor Emeritus of Grand Avenue Congregational Church, Milwaukee, will serve the Congregational Church at St. Petersburg, as interim pastor during the winter months. Dr. Beale has served many important churches in the country in this capacity since his retirement from the active pastorate. His son is his successor at Milwaukee. Dr. Beale begins with the St. Petersburg church on January 3rd.

SUNDAY EVENING FORUMS were recently resumed at the Edison Park Church in Fort Myers, Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor. Recently the mayor of the city gave an interesting address, especially emphasizing the city's beautification program. An extended account of this address was printed in the Fort Myers press. These forums are drawing large and interested congregations to the beautiful new church in Edison Park.

REV. RICHARD WRIGHT, retired New England pastor, who enjoys a winter home at Winter Park, has been elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Hungerford School at Etonville, near Winter Park, and is rendering an important service to the colored people of this community, which has the unusual distinction of being a chartered borough made up exclusively of colored people.

DR. J. EDWARD KIRBY, recently preached a sermon on "The Religious Democracy of Jesus" at the United church in Raleigh. This sermon was quoted at length in the Raleigh paper. Dr. Kirby said, "Citizenship in a kingdom such as Jesus lived and practiced will give any government, any social order, its highest type of character; and not to follow its leadings is to put any government or any order at the bar of judgment sooner or later."

MELBOURNE, FLA. Under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. Orville D. Ullom, there has been organized a Cub Pack for the young boys in the community. He is assisted by Mr. Fred Hewitt, one of the young men of the church, a former football player at Stetson University. The Cub Pack is already rendering a splendid service to the young boys, not only of the church, but all the whole community. The pastor has the vision of a church serving the community.

THE NEED IS GREAT. The Home and Foreign Boards are facing very unusual needs at this time—needs that if not met will mean hardship, suffering and retrenchment of work. At the same time the receipts have been reduced so greatly that the boards are running deeply into debt. May the churches of the southeast make very special efforts to raise their full apportionments and not only meet the needs of the boards in this crisis but help them to meet the needs of the churches and the missions.

WINTER PARK, FLA. The Woman's Union of the Congregational Church recently held their annual meeting and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Carl L. Willis; Vice-President, Mrs. C. A. Vincent; Secretary, Mrs. Raymond O. Ward; Treasurer, Mrs. Frank Lindergreen; Chairman of Department of Missions, Mrs. Harlan P. Beach; Chairman of Department of Service, Mrs. Nellie B. Newell. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. William Cammack, whose home is in Winter Park, but who, with her husband, was formerly a missionary in Africa.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION of the Orlando District in Florida recently met in Sanford and was largely attended. The Winter Park Congregational Society was awarded the banner for the largest attendance, having twenty-two present, and also the banner for having registered the largest percentage of its members. Walter Ward of that society was elected vice-president for the district for the coming year. Dr. Karl Lehman, well-known in the Christian Endeavor world, and now a resident of Sanford, gave an address on "What Christian Endeavor Stands For."

THE CHALICE CLUB is the name of an organization for young people in the Congregational

Community Church at Birmingham. More than eighty attended a recent meeting. The church bulletin says, "This is indicative of the steady growth induced by excellent programs prepared by George Nealans. The Chalice of friendship is being raised by many eager fingers these days." At the evening services for a number of weeks Dr. Trevor Mordecai, the minisetr, gave a series of sermons on the subject "In Defense of Youth." One of the sermon topics was, "What Youth Thinks of Religion."

APPORTIONMENT PAYMENTS. Only seventeen days remain for the sending of apportionment contributions to the mission boards, if these apportionments are to be credited to 1931 reports. Every effort should be made to forward all contributions on or before the 10th of January. Anything mailed on that day will be credited. The churches in Florida should send their payments to Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla., and elsewhere in the southeast the payments should be sent to Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, 933 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

REV. THOMAS H. DERRICK, who has served the Congregational Church at Orange City for the past four years, recently read his resignation which will take effect on January 3rd, the anniversary Sunday of the beginning of his pastorate. Mr. Derrick resigns because of illness. He plans to go to the Veterans' Hospital at Lake City, for treatment. All his friends hope for a speedy recovery. Mr. Derrick came to Orange City from Peabody, Mass., and during his pastorate he has won the friendship of all, and has been outstanding as a vigorous and vital preacher. He has been a teacher at two sessions of the Young Peoples' Conference at Camp Immokalee.

ROLLINS COLLEGE, at Winter Park, has four hundred and eighty-three pupils enrolled for the 47th year of the college, which was organized by Congregationalists, the first college in the State. This registration does not include students in the conservatory of music or the school of art. It is significant that fifty-nine students this fall were transferred from forty-nine colleges to Rollins. The Knowles Memorial Chapel is rapidly nearing completion. The famous ecclesiastical architect in charge, Ralph Adams Cram, of Boston, with Mrs. Frances Knowles Warren, of Boston, the donor of the chapel, were recent visitors at Winter Park, planning for the final details of the building. The Annie Russell Theater, presented by Mrs. Edward W. Bok, is also nearing completion. Both the theater and the chapel are built in Mediterranean architecture and together occupy one entire block in the center of the college campus.

DR. ROBERT McDONALD has returned to the First Church, Miami, which he serves as pastor during the six months of the winter season. A reception of Dr. and Mrs. McDonald and Rev. Helen F. Lanham, associate pastor, was held at the church following Dr. McDonald's return. During the six months of the summer season Rev. Helen F. Lanham has been in full charge of the work and has received over forty new members into the church and the congregations for the summer have been larger than ever. The special Sunday evening services, with sacred concerts, guest speakers, etc., have been a feature of the summer program. Another feature of the work has been a reorganizing and developing of the Christian Endeavor Society, which now has forty-five and fifty in attendance at the weekly meetings. Mrs. Lanham will continue to serve as associate minister and it is expected that with Dr. McDonald and Mrs. Lanham both serving this church, it will make real progress during the coming months.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-TWO.

This is a new year; this a new month, a new week, a new day. Our omnipotent Creator does not have to repeat Himself in re-creation. He creates anew. Every day is a new day, fresh and fragrant, as the first day that gladdened and cheered the hearts of Adam and Eve in Eden. Not even the dregs and the dross from a previous day are brought over to impair or impoverish the new day. Night intervenes. And night functions in the process of time as the ebbing ocean functions in the process of nature—both are God's clearing house: a process, a place of cleansing and purification. The dying day, carrying into the mysterious process of time called night, is cleansed of the dust, debris and smoke of industry and enterprise, and, with the rising sun each morning, God presents to His children the gladness and glory of a wholly new and a wholly different day. The process is the same as that of the ocean, whose ceaseless, ebbing flow of its briny waters gather up the froth and filth of millions of putrefied streams and, through the process of the sun and the movement of the planets, sends back the waters to refresh the earth and sustain vegetable and animal life—as pure as that which gurgled gladly out of the first springs, to water the flowers of Eden.

1932 is a new year. There has never been one like it before, there will never be another like it. Each day of it is new. We poor mortals, by our own impotence and deficiency, may not be able to carry into each new day absolutely new lives and new experiences, but this will be no fault of the day. God has done His work perfectly. If our strength is not renewed and our energies are not multiplied, and our lives are not created afresh to greet each new day, the fault is ours and not that of our Creator. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." (Isa. 40:31.) He who holds the infinite expanse of the seas in the hollow of his hand, He who at His word controls the times and seasons, can make us new for each new day and can give us energy and strength sufficient for our endurance, our tasks, our trials, whatever they may be.

As in time, so in eternity. We are living in eternity now; that eternity of God's new and mysterious and marvelous creation, creating for us not new days merely, but new privileges, new purposes, new plans, new pursuits. God's time, God's eternity, God's children; all are in His hands and His powers of creation are never exhausted. With infinite possibilities before us, we begin the new year with new hopes, new desires, new anticipations, ever looking to Him Who is the Author and Finisher of our faith—that faith without which nothing is new, and with which faith hope springs eternal to make all things new.

J. O. A.

THE WORD.

We shall never get beyond the logic of the Logos, nor the philosophy that enabled its author to write "In the beginning was the Word." This emphasizes and incarnates the idea of him who, in writing the first verse of Genesis, said: "In the beginning God." The writer of Genesis is thinking about incarnation. The writer of Genesis proceeds to unfold for us the plan and pursuit of creation; the writer of the Logos proceeds to unfold for us the plan, the purpose and the power of the Incarnation. For the writer of Genesis, God is revealing Himself through His work; for the writer of the Logos, God is revealing Himself through His Word, viz.: That Word embodied in and spoken through His only Begotten Son. In Genesis, we are brought face to face with law: law of things, law of forces, law for peoples. In John's gospel, we are brought face to face with love, the love of God as spoken by, and revealed through, His Son: love for all mankind, love for all the world. And this is that toward which the ages have been bringing us more and more. True, God's creative act and power still obtain and are manifest. But the law and the light of love, because of the obstinacy and rebellion of man, have not yet become so obvious and operative in all the world. Nations still rise up against nations, races against races, color against color. He who penned the Logos, "In the beginning was the Word," penned also that message coming out of the depth of eternity and of eternal ages: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Science is giving us constantly new revelations of God's might and majesty in creation. They are telling us that law everywhere obtains, that law rules in all realms and processes of nature. Back of the law, however, is the Law-Giver, and after all, the law of nature is nothing more or less than our human reading and interpretation of God's plan of doing things. Every true scientific discovery, every physical law laid down, is only a human interpretation of the way in which the Creator is working, and the great Law-Giver is revealing Himself in nature.

Religion and the religious teachers are but interpreters of the way and the Word and the work of love. God is law, but that which John would have us see is that He Who reveals Himself in law ever and always speaks in terms of love. All of creation, all of incarnation, all of revelation, are founded in the fact that love is the fundamental factor in all God's plans, purposes and powers. God, speaking through and in the incarnation, is the Prince of Peace, the power of inexhaustible and eternal love. All the forces of nature, all the factors of divine authorship, are forces and powers of love. The love of God is to control the doubts and destinies of men, and through love, one to another and to Him, can we His children, enjoy fellowship one with another, and with Him Who incarnates Himself in His only Begotten Son, and in every son and daughter who learns to love Him because he first loved us.

OUR GREATEST SIN.

Dr. Fred B. Smith, at one time Moderator of the National Council of Congregation Churches, declared, in a public address that he delivered in many places of our country two years ago, that America's greatest sin was that it was crowding God out. Not drunkenness, bad as that was; not lewdness, deplorable as that was; not dishonesty and greed, as widespread as they are; but crowding God out of our minds, our plans and our pursuits, this is our greatest sin. One wonders now if Dr. Smith, with clear insight, was not prophesying as well as preaching. Unemployment is prevalent; investments are insecure and unstable; human industry and human institutions of every type, are crumbling around us and falling to pieces beneath us. Is it possible that we have built on a foundation of sand, and now when the rain and the storm come, the foundations are swept from beneath us and our house falls? Fred B. Smith thus declared in his address that which another had declared a long time ago: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." One wonders in a time like this if the foundation on which we are building is secure. Have we not centered our thoughts, our plans and our activities on things, and, in our haste and lack of foresight, wasted our energy and consumed our strength in the grasp and the greed of things? Things that are visible, are temporal, perishable. "For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." If we build on things that are seen, they are temporal; if we build on things that are unseen, they are eternal.

But we have God left. He is our refuge and our strength. In Him is light and life and wisdom and strength. From Him cometh our help. And so, while we are driven to inconvenience, much loss of labor and means and effort, we can look up from the debris of our wrecked plans and disappointments and say, "We have God left." Other things fail us, but God never faileth. And so, in this time of depression, in this time of wrecked hopes and aspirations, we can get new courage if we will, new strength if we may, in the thought that God remains with us, and God never faileth.

AS THE KINGDOM COMETH.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will get a thrill out of the history of the Philathea Class of Suffolk, written by Mrs. W. H. Yates and printed elsewhere this week. This history, though filled with events and incidents in detail, is not tedious, but stimulating, and inspiring. This for the reason that it breathes of life and reveals the character of the kingdom of God.

When our Saviour in the flesh described to His disciples the kingdom of heaven, He always puts into His description, two ideas:

1st. A small beginning.

2nd. Growth—the manifestation of increasing power.

The parable of the mustard seed, that of the leaven and the rest, all have the two elements of smallness and then the increase of power.

It is simply wonderful what a few people can accomplish for good when they band themselves together in consecration, and hold on to their task and pursue their plans tenaciously and devotedly. No history, however lengthy, can tell of the achievements of this Philathea Class the past seventeen years. As one reads it from the pen of Mrs. Yates, one's imagination goes on the rampage. Prayers and contributions for the poor and the needy, the fatherless and the homeless; prayers for and safe investments in Christian Education, giving youth a chance; prayers, consecrations, donations to Missions, giving the blind a chance to see, the ignorant an opportunity to know, the worshipper of idols the privilege of knowing the true and living God; and through it all the teacher and the taught in that Class growing stronger, happier, better in all things that pertain to life and love and service. One wonders how many smiles have gladdened the faces of those who gave, how many thrills have come to those who received, how much love and life have resulted from the efforts and the fellowship of this one Class. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and so, while the Class has done much for others, as the bare facts and figures indicate, greater blessings have come to the teacher and members of the Class, and their lives bear testimony of the power of a purpose and pursuits consecrated to God. We congratulate Mrs. Yates and all her co-workers, and we envy, as well as felicitate, the good and the great teacher of that Class—Col. J. E. West—made better and greater now because of the service the Class has challenged him to render. J. O. A.

PROHIBITION AND COMMON SENSE.

The trouble with prohibition is not the law, but the attitude (or appetite) of those who would alter, or abuse, that law. Prohibition seeks to safeguard the interests of society, and there are always those in a society who care more for their individual taste and indulgence than they do for the welfare of society. Bootleggers and violators of the liquor law are no new thing under the sun; they have existed from of old, and beyond which the history and memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Federal Judge John J. Hayes, in his charge to the grand jury at the December term of his court at Greensboro, very sanely declared, "When any law is knocked from pillar to post, ridiculed and made the cause for laughter and disgust, the problem of enforcing that particular statute is multiplied a thousandfold." And Judge Hayes was certainly reciting history and declaring a fact when he said that "the liquor traffic of the world has never been amenable to the law; and the ingenuity of man has not been able successfully to cope with the traffic in whisky." A fundamental definition says: "Law is the organized virtue of a community, state or nation," but there are ever and always those who oppose the organized virtue of a community, because it makes against the greed and appetite of individuals. Judge Hayes tells his jurymen something of why there is so much propaganda against prohibition: "Citizens of states without their own enforcement machinery have busied themselves with spreading propaganda designed to weaken the national enforcement act and to seek its nullification. This has prevented other states from succeeding in their efforts to enforce the prohibition law." The Judge scoffed at the idea, flaunted by many, that dry laws make crime. "There will be some kind of laws regulating human conduct and people violating these laws until the millenium arrives. A person is kidding himself when he thinks that to abolish laws is to do away with crimes and criminals. There was plenty of crime before the prohibition act was created." And the Judge proceeded to give examples from history showing that "violations of the laws pertaining to the manufacture of whiskey" were as rampant and flagrant in the days before prohibition as at present, if not more so, and to claim now that under prohibition there is increased corruption among public officials" is to ignore facts.

The Judge cited the prosecution of several of these officers before prohibition days. "The people of this country as a nation are not consuming as much liquor in proportion now as they did before the prohibition law was enacted, since people certainly do not indulge as much in an unlawful practice as they do in a practice having legal sanction. If an outlawed industry succeeds better than a legal business, then the economic laws are out of gear."

Be it forever remembered that the friends of temperance, and not its foes, put into the organic law of our land the 18th Amendment, and with a larger majority than that ever given any amendment; and that the friends of temperance and sobriety, and not its foes, are the ones to alter that Amendment. Before the people of this nation shall succumb to the propaganda carried on by a reeking wet press and a reeking wet following, they will have to be convinced that the friends of temperance, and not its foes, are the ones who want the present statute and Amendment altered. Common sense, as well as good citizenship, naturally declare that the friends, and not the foes, of a law are the ones to alter it if it is to be altered, and to improve it when and where it is to be improved. J. O. A.

CHARITY AS A CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

The definition of Charity in the Standard Dictionary is: "Benevolence, in the widest sense; Christian love." Much of that which is rated as Charity seems to be lacking in Christian love. There are many ways of raising money in this day, to help crippled children, the unemployed, needy families, and afflicted people, that seem to be means of securing patronage rather than helping others. Ball-games, balls, card parties, dances, and other attractions that appeal to the desire for excitement or pleasure, are used as attractions to draw people together for games and sport.

To give all or part of the proceeds of such games or entertainments, adds to the respectability of the performance in the public mind, and really claims the support of Christian people. Charity should develop in the mind and conscience of Christians the spirit of Jesus as well as relieve the needs of others. A game of bridge does not stir within the human breast the spirit of Christian love; the thrill of a dance fails to stir the heart of Christian love; the excitement of a football game and the shout of thousands does not arouse sympathy for the helpless and move the heart to help the helpless. If a thousand people would go to see a thousand shut-ins, or hungry sculs, and give as much as the ticket costs for a seat at the game, the result would be a hundred-fold more helpful, not only to the receivers, but to the donors themselves. There are good ways to do good, and there are doubtful ways to do good. Doubtful means make doubtful results. Christian charity is the most difficult thing in all the realm of Christian service. "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (I. John 3:17.) How can a Christian come in contact with want and have his heart touched in sympathy for those in need at a game or a dance? This article is not discussing the right or wrong of the parties and games named above, but the question of using them in the name of Charity.

Real charity moves the heart and help is given in the spirit of Jesus Christ who gave Himself to save and help men. W. W. S.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The close of the year is the time for taking an inventory to determine the state of the business. Most commercial interests this year find the result more or less discouraging; but when the manner of living is taken into account, the difference is as much in the living expenses as in the shortage in business. Economy in the expense of conducting business and in living costs might make the result in 1932 brighter than in 1931. The losses in 1931, in farming, business, and banks, has been larger than any year of this generation; but the ventures have been unusually great, and that made the losses greater. The experience of 1931 is a useful lesson, and if people are apt to learn, it may be a good lesson.

The Christmas time has been a joyous time of quiet, reunions, hospitality, and gifts. A crowd of church ladies, of more than twenty five filled our dining-room after prayer meeting December 23rd, and loaded the table with sugar, flower, canned goods, fruits and other good things and overwhelmed us with their kindness. Added to all the other good things, was a turkey, well-dressed. Of course, ladies believe in dressing. Then, later, a good woman called and handed me an envelope containing cash from the church people; and on Christmas day the mail brought me a beautiful Christmas card from a generous friend and his wife and, inside of that beauty, was a twenty five dollar check on the Farmers Bank. On top of all this kindness more than a hundred Christmas cards came through the mail.

The kindness and generosity of the people of God in the church overloads a grateful heart with grateful thanks too sincere and rich to be expressed in words. Christmas giving, like the Sunday school, began with presents for children; but now it embraces everybody, even preachers, and grandparents. The amazing thing in all this good will, and good gifts, is that so many intelligent people share in all the gifts and joys of Christmas and then take no part in Sunday school or church. All the good that they enjoy in the Christmas time, comes to them from Bethlehem's Babe, who received the visit of the shepherds and the worship and gifts of the wise men. If men were wise they would all seek the salvation that comes only through Jesus Christ, for there is none "other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.)

The cantata, "The Light Eternal," given by the choir on Sunday night, December 20th, under the leadership of Mrs. Vernon Holland and Mrs. Wallace as organist was wonderfully rendered to a full church. All music is rooted in religion and all true religion is rooted in Jesus Christ. The choir is a part of the preacher's message and really represents the praise in the hour of worship. The Psalms are in the middle of the Bible, and that seems to suggest the value of music in worship.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and his family came home in time for Christmas; but he is spending this week, under the advice of the doctor, at Virginia Beach, for quiet rest to recover his strength.

OUR PROVING.

Yielding the life to service for Jesus, means we will have to submit to a course of training under the Master Teacher. The life has to be fitted for service. He who said, "Learn of me," was thoroughly surrendered to the Father's will. This same Jesus asks the same submission in His followers. He takes us at our word when we pledge our all to Him. He hears that pledge and does not treat it lightly. He intends to hold us true to all we pledge, as He Himself is true. That vow, made in secret, behind closed doors with only our Lord listening, will lead us far into the prayer-life. Again and again we will have opportunity to accept the Lord's challenge to "prove me now." Again and again we will see Him pouring out what we have asked until we are overwhelmed by it.

So never ask the Lord for anything you are not willing to have measured to you, heaped up, pressed down, and running over. That is God's way of giving. He never does things by halves. In answer to every right prayer, He gives much more than we ask, especially if we are put through the waiting test, before He answers our call. Delay on God's part always means He is going to give "exceedingly abundant above all we ask or think."

Have you ever asked the Lord to "send into my life just what I need to best fit me for service for Thee"? Were you not afraid of what would come, even as you asked that? Have you proved your Lord far enough in the prayer life to know that He will answer a prayer like that, surely and speedily? How we dread the test such a prayer is sure to bring. A feeling almost of terror seizes us as we pause to think where it may lead, and what the Master may require of us. We almost wish we had not gone so far in prayer with Him.

We would not go back, for above it all comes the thought of the loss we sustain if we fail to go all the way with our Lord. Then there are His "others" He may be depending upon us to reach for Him. Others who may never be reached if you, if I, fail the Master now. If we fail to submit to the testings and provings, our Lord must needs put us through before we can give Him our best service. The testings which force us into a thousand delightful intercourses with the Master; intercourses which serve as milestones to mark the way of our journey, which leave us many a delightful memory and strengthen our courage to meet the next test.

Oh, the testings, temptations and siftings are sure to follow the prayer for fitness for service. We will be tried until it would seem at times we surely must cry out, if the trial becomes more severe. Its severity increases, the hurt goes deeper, but instead of crying out, we cry up. Instantly, He who said, "I will never leave thee or forsake thee," comes very, very near.

Our Jesus, who said, "I am with you alway," comes so near we can hear Him gently saying, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation make the way of escape, that ye may be able to endure it." Have you not found it true, when we get quiet before the Lord and let Him speak to us, we can almost hear His voice and feel the touch of His hand?

When He comes so near us as that, when we feel our Lord's hand strong upon us, can we refuse any service He may ask of us? Are we not glad we took upon ourselves that solemn, binding vow? Would you want to go back to the old self-directing course, the old indifferent life? Is not the peace and security His presence brings worth far more than all we have given up? It means not only that we will be kept in "the peace of God," for there is even a better promise given us. "The God of peace shall be with you."

VIRGINIA VALLEY LETTER.

I have recently closed my last revival meeting for the fall, and will attempt to give a little account of my doing during a busy revival season.

My first meeting was at Bethel. The outlook at first was rather discouraging, but before closing the meeting we had the joy of seeing twenty-four souls won to Christ, some of whom were backsliders reclaimed. Sixteen new names were added to the church roll. Some of those reclaimed were already members of the church. I count it a fine thing when back-slidden church members yield to Christ and begin living a Christian life in real earnest.

My next meeting was at Leaksville. Here I was ably assisted part of the time by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. All regretted that he could not stay through to the close of the meeting. But we had a good meeting anyway, resulting in five conversions, all of whom united with the church. Bro. Crutchfield preached good sermons, and made many friends in the community, and all will be glad to see him any time he can come back.

I held a meeting next at Joppa. I began my work as pastor at Joppa twenty-five years ago, and have been pastor there ever since, except a period of four years in that time. This has always been one of my weakest churches, and I have never been able to reap any large harvest in any meeting there. However, I believe this was the best meeting I have ever held there in all these years. Congregations were above the average, and fifteen professed faith in Christ. Nine united with the church there, and several will unite with the Methodist church nearby. I was assisted here, and also at Bethel, only by my wife, who had charge of the music in both meetings.

From Joppa I went to Timber Ridge for a meeting. Here I was assisted by an evangelist unknown to most CHRISTIAN SUN readers, Mrs. Margel Spencer. I have been pastor at Timber Ridge fourteen years, and this was the greatest meeting I have ever had there. Congregations were far above the average. About forty-five accepted Christ or renewed their broken vows to Him. Twenty-seven have thus far united with the church, and others, I think, are coming in soon. It was, indeed, a great meeting in many ways. Mrs. Spencer is a consecrated woman with a great passion for souls, and is being mightily used of God in winning the lost to Him.

I shall have three other meetings to hold in my field as soon as the winter is over. In the meantime I expect to spend as much time in my study as regular pastoral duties will allow.

A. W. ANDES.

WINDSOR, VIRGINIA.

We wish to express our profound and grateful appreciation of the many beautiful Christmas cards and other tokens of esteem received from our friends. Our wish for you, beloved brethren, is a happy and blessed New Year.

I am convinced that one reason why we seem to be out in a wilderness of depression and despair is that there has been a dreadful tendency on the part of the masses to forget God, our loving Father, and unfailing Benefactor; and our Lord Jesus Christ, our Elder Brother. Indeed, far too many of us have been enumerating our difficulties and too few of us have been counting our blessings. It is high time that we realize that we are enjoying many of the glorious benefits and blessings of Christianity.

In these dark and "perilous" times, let us stop and listen to the voice of Moses (Deut. 33:3): "Yea, He loveth the people; all His saints are in thy hand." Wonderful place! Happy place! Protected place! What more could you ask of the Heavenly King? Can you be afraid or despondent when the strong, triumphant, tender hand of the Almighty Universal Father hold you?

In these dark and trying hours can you not trust the loving hand that clung to Calvary, to cling to you in everlasting embrace? Beloved, there is a way out of our difficulties; it is the "way" of of Him who said, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life." The world needs Jesus.

Preachers of the glorious gospel of the Son of God, preach the Word, preach Christ and His salvation. This sin-cursed world needs nothing so greatly. And consecrated laymen, be faithful witnesses for Jesus as you have opportunity, by your life and love for the lost.

One and all, let this be our motto: "They help every one his neighbor; and every one saith to his brother, Be of good courage." (Isa. 41:6). Won't you make up your mind, dear reader, that by the power of God, you are going to live a real Christian life throughout 1932? This will bring happiness to you, and glory to God.

E. B. WHITE.

SOUTH NORFOLK.

(The following personal letter to the managing editor, is from Brother O. D. Poythress, who is an enthusiastic and tireless worker.)

Just sending you a little line from up my way to say, "Hope and pray that your Christmas was a pleasant day, and here's wishing you for 1932 a happy and prosperous year."

Old Santa remembered us all very generously; in fact, very much better than any of us deserved.

Our church services were very largely attended, and a very fine spirit manifested. On last Sunday evening, our choir and a group of young people, directed by Mrs. W. J. Baxter, presented the sacred cantata and pantomime, "Come Ye to Bethlehem." This was greeted with the largest and most enthusiastic audience we have seen in our church in the last three years. Think our choir sang its best, and the pantomime was almost perfectly executed. It was all very impressive and uplifting. On Tuesday evening, another cantata, entitled "Santa in Storyland," was presented by the pupils of the Sunday School, from the various departments. This was also splendidly executed and each participant carried out his part in a very fine way. Mrs. C. M. Hanbury had charge of this program, and she was very ably assisted by the departmental superintendents. This was also greeted with the largest attendance I think I have ever seen here for an entertainment of this kind.

Our work at South Norfolk is very encouraging, in spite of the depressed financial conditions, and we are hopefully and prayerfully looking forward to 1932 being one of the most successful years in the history of our church. The average attendance at both the Sunday school and church services is very much better than it was a year ago.

MEBANE.

With great personal joy the writer filled his first appointment as pastor of our Mebane church on the first Sunday in December. Before accepting the pastorate, we paid them a surprise visit—an unannounced visit—and observed one of the most interesting sessions of Sunday school we have ever witnessed. I never saw more evidence of careful preparation on the part of officers, teachers and pupils. It was a program that successfully enlisted the active interest of every person in the group. Though so perfectly timed and carried out accordingly, it was one of such spiritual depths and purposes that one never thought of the mechanical.

If any discouraged Sunday school worker wants to know if a small group can carry on a good work with a holy enthusiasm and how it is done, I take the liberty of inviting such a one to visit us at Mebane.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Blessed Creator, Ruler of the nations, sin is rampant and souls are being tried. At this time when for each of us the New Year embraces a new chance, we pray Thee relieve economic pressure, equalize opportunity to earn, rid men's minds of evil plotting. Thou Who carest for men's needs, give to Thy representatives serious concern for the character of men's deeds. Put more conscience and care into civil leadership. And strengthen, Father, the Christian's purpose and promise to keep close to the path of Jesus' earthly tread—the only path that is safe for salvation. For Jesus' sake. Amen. L.

MONEY TALKS.

Money talks, and it says:

"Catch me and keep me, if you can, but I have wings. Find me and blind me, and I mysteriously disappear. Dig and delve, scratch and scrape, grind and grasp in order to get me, and lo, I am a broken bauble and a bursting bubble!"

"Save me and store me for worthy ends—for budget or bonds, for rainy days, for self-improvement, and for service to others, and I will be as faithful a servant as you are honest a master."

"Hide me and hoard me for selfish ends, to see my glitter and glow, to hear my clink and crackle, to feel my pressure and power, and I will canker and corrode in your hands. I will pauperize your mind, poison your soul and paralyze your will."

"Give me and guide me to serve and to save others, to meet and to match entrenched human need with incarnate human love, to share and to spend my brightest and best, and I will come back and crown you with satisfaction and success!"

Money talks, and it says:

"I am you! You will be what you make of me!"—William Hiram Foulkes.

NEWS ITEMS.

The following interesting news item comes from Mrs. V. L. Carter, of Wadley, Ala:

The first meeting of the conference year of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church of Roanoke, Ala., met in the home of Mrs. E. M. Hood, with a splendid beginning.

A very interesting program was rendered including a review of the work of Doctor and Mrs. M. J. M. White, our missionaries in the Philippine Islands.

Several ladies from the Lowell Society met with us.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS.

MRS. W. M. JOY, Editor.

WOMAN'S SOCIETIES.

PROGRAM II.

"Our Commissioners for Service—The Hands and Feet."

Worship Helps.

Hymn—"America, the Beautiful," or "Oh, Beautiful My Country."

Scripture Reading—Isaiah 46:6-12; 49:8-13.
Prayer—That we may acquire the "mind of Christ" so that we may feel that all men and women, everywhere, of every race and color, are members of one family of God the Father.

Introductory talk by Leader—Last month our program was based on the General Council, which is the "head" of our united denomination. This would be of no use without "hands" and "feet" to carry out its dreams of service and today we are to consider the Home Boards as the hands, and the American Board as the feet in this work of world service and world friendship which we generally know as Missions.

First Speaker—"The Home Boards."

Special Music.

Second Speaker—"The American Board."

Questions for Discussion.

1. On the map, describe roughly the work of the American Board and the work of the Home Boards.

2. Indicate the work of the Christian Churches.

3. What share of the work does our church have?

4. What are the primary motives for the missionary enterprise today?

Hymn—"Send the Light."

Mizpah—Benediction.

For this program you will read a copy of the little booklet, "Our Congregational-Christian Body at work." Also the map of Congregational Home Missionary work and the missionary map of the world, or other maps, on which to indicate areas of our missionary activities. Any of these materials may be secured by addressing the Commission of Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. The booklet is only 10c.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

"GOD AND THE CENSUS."

Theme—"The Lasting Gift."

I.—Business Period.

II.—Study Period.

Chapter IV.—"The Churches Must Still Educate."

1. Let the leader use pages 44-77 as an introduction to chapter.

2. Where the Church Fails—A member, pp. 447-48.

3. The Unreached Army of Children and How the Church May Reach Them—A member, pp. 49-53.

4. The leader should bring the chapter to a close with this as her thought—"Seek Them Where They Are."

III.—Worship Period.

1. Call to Worship.

2. Hymn—"Another Year Is Dawning."

3. Leader—The greatest gift the world has ever known—God's gift of His Son—is an everlasting gift, for does not John 3:16 say: (Read). (Here make a few comments on the subject.)

4. Prayer.

5. Solo—"Across the Sky Shades of Night."

6. Offertory.

7. Hymn—1st verse: "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

WILLING WORKERS OR JUNIORS.

TOPIC—"OPEN WINDOWS."

Theme—"God's Children in Africa."

I.—Worship Period.

1. Opening Song Response—"Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts."

2. Memory Verse—"If any man serve me, let him follow me; that where I am, there shall also my servant be."

3. Song—"I've a Story to Tell."

4. Prayer (for the boys and girls of Africa.)

II.—Study Period.

1. Chapter III.—Open Windows.

(a) Have pictures of Africa, and encourage the children to talk about the people and their customs.

(b) Story Period.

Leader may divide chapter into two parts and appoint some one to tell each part.

(c) After the Story—Ask questions about main points, and encourage the children to talk about the story.

2. Song.

3. Benediction.

Poster III. White cardboard for background and red heart cut from cover paper. Cut windows and hinge them with gummed tape so they will stand open. Paste in window a picture of group of children. Write on poster: "Open the windows of your having a heart in center of poster. Omit the word "heart," and at bottom write, "And Make Friends."

HISTORY OF PHILATHEA CLASS OF THE SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH FOR 17 YEARS ENDING OCT. 1931.

In the year 1913 a little band of women known as the class of Col. J. E. West, was possessed with a desire to do greater things for their Master and King. They felt the wonderful lectures given each Sunday morning by their most worthy teacher should be learned and enjoyed by larger numbers. They were eager to share with others the blessings they were receiving and enjoying.

After much talking, one Sunday morning in September we started the ball rolling by electing the following officers: President, Mrs. I. W. Johnson; vice-president Mrs. W. H. Yates; secretary, Mrs. R. O. Harvey; teacher, Col. J. E. West.

The first few weeks the ball did not roll very fast or very far, and when asked one Sunday morning about being organized, our teacher, Col. J. E. West, said, "Yes, they organized, but it has been dropped like a sugar-rag." Sometimes it takes a simple remark to spur things on.

The following Sunday I invited the class to hold its first business meeting in my home the following Monday night. Strange to say, there did not seem to be time for it, for they had their excuses, so finally Mrs. Johnson, the president, said, "We will meet tomorrow night if there are only two of us present." The night came; so did the members. There were visitors also and what a meeting we had.

The organization of the Philathea Class of the Christian Sunday School, Suffolk, dates from this time, which was October 27, 1913, with the following thirteen charter members: Miss Elizabeth Batt, Miss Effie Beale, Miss Evie Harrell, Miss Duppier Kilby, Miss Eunice Langston, Miss Rose Riddick, Mrs. R. C. Harrell, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. J. E. Philhower, Mrs. J. E. West, Mrs. W. H. Yates, Mrs. R. O. Harvey, Mrs. Clarence Harrell, and our teacher, Col. J. E. West. The president, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, presided, and from the beginning we knew with such a leader the Philathea Class was going to be a success. Membership committee, visiting committee, and social committee were appointed and later a hospital committee was added. It was decided to keep 25c of the collection each Sunday in the class treasury but this was changed at the next meeting and on motion it was decided to keep half of the collection for the class each week.

Finding we had a treasury but no treasurer, Mrs. J. E. West was elected to fill the office. After two months she was promoted to teacher of a class so Miss Vickie Ellis was elected to fill her place. This office she has filled efficiently ever since, and in 1922 she was elected to the office for life.

Here we are "all set." "Let's go," but where to? Should we build up our class to sit out in the main Sunday school room where the hub-bub was so great we could not hear what one another said? Mrs. J. E. West was appointed a committee of one to present a petition to the superintendent of the Sunday school, asking for the use of one of the rooms for our class. The class adjourned to meet with Col. and Mrs. J. E. West on November 24, 1913.

At this meeting our enrollment had grown from 13 to 32. Each member carried a birthday offering which amounted to $14.34. Our president had written a note of thanks for our classroom, which had been given us, and had each member sign her name to it. It being Thanksgiving she pinned it to the picture of a turkey and sent it to the superintendent, Mr. C. A. Shocpe.

At the end of our first year there were 77 members. Of this number only a few ever attended Sunday school before. The rapid growth of our class was directly due to the efforts of our president, who gave her time, strength and heart to the work and her co-workers, who were ever ready to serve her for the Master's cause.

During the first year, while it was a rule not to take special offerings, the free-will contributions enabled the class to contribute monthly to the Orphanage with special offerings at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. We also subscribed a membership of $10.00 yearly to the Christian Missionary Association.

For all purposes $129.21 were raised during the first year. We do not have a record of the number of visits made by the committees but surely there was an awakening that was caused by the personal contact of the members with those who were not in the habit of attending Sunday school for we continued to grow.

We began our second year with a great deal of enthusiasm. The same officers were re-elected and our most efficient president was always busy at work herself and busy putting others to work. It has always been the custom of the class to elect officers at the October meeting and to have the anniversary in November with our teacher and his wife as host and hostess.

Everybody looked forward to this event. Everybody came and brought a birthday offering. (We were not so old then and it did not take so many pennies.) The offering at the second anniversary amounted to $14.00.

It was about this time that we realized our teacher needed a reading stand, so a committee was appointed and the stand was bought at a cost of $16.50.

Just as we were going along nicely, Mrs. Johnson felt duty called her elsewhere, so in March she tendered her resignation as president of our class to become a teacher of a class of young girls.

As much as we hated to give her up, we felt there was no greater work than that of teaching and training our daughters in the Master's work, so her resignation was very reluctantly accepted. She carried with her the love and prayers of the class.

I, being vice-president, was elected to fill the unexpired term. What was to be done? All felt our loss and the futility of my even trying to do the far-reaching work Mrs. Johnson had done. My plea was, "You, the members of this class, must pull together as never before, for although I feel the foundation is too solid to fall, it has been greatly weakened because the cornerstone has fallen out. I alone cannot hold the class, but we together with God's help, can continue to grow."

The regular work was carried on. Some new members were enrolled and all committees were active. Cottage prayer meetings were held under supervision before the Lightbourne revival held in our church that year.

We were anxious to be doing something. Work that was needed in the classroom was done. The walls were painted, floors stained, windows were screened, and a drugget purchased for the floor.

We held a rummage sale to raise money to help meet our expenses and perhaps it will be interesting to know that in this way we raised $71.92. The amount raised by the class from all sources for the second year was $189.62.

While we had a good year, we suffered a great loss, for God had seen fit to call home Mrs. W. H. Barnes, who was our first member to pass into the Great Beyond.

As we cast eyes to the class picture that was taken that year, well do we remember the invalid chair and the saintly person who was such an inspiration to all of us.

It was this year also that we lost Miss Florence Harvey, who left us to make her home elsewhere. Not only was she missed by the class, but by the entire church, as she had been the leader of the choir for a number of years.

At the beginning of the third year, Mrs. Rochelle Harrell was elected president and served the class efficiently for eight months when she moved away from Suffolk. Mrs. W. R. Mitchell was appointed to take her place.

Being very much in need of a piano the class took this as their special work for the year. The piano was purchased at a cost of $285.00, to be paid for on the installment plan. Col. West gave $25.00 towards it. $31.40 was realized on a lawn party; $75.85 was made on a rummage sale; and $15.02 on sale of waste paper, making a total of $132.27, our first payment.

Another membership of $10.00 was taken in the C. M. A.

It is said, "To be missionary, we must study missions and we must give to missions." Our teacher was chairman of the mission board of the Southern Convention, so naturally being missionary himself, he wanted his class to be missionary.

It was decided to place on the table a mite box for missions. This was done May, 1917. Although it was a free-will offering, $680.77 has passed through this little box.

$26.00 was donated to buy a hymn board for the church.

This year the war was upon us. When we were called upon we always tried to respond. With Col. West's help of $100.00, the class turned in $127.42 to the Red Cross Fund. $5.00 was donated to the Christian Endeavor to purchase Testaments for our soldiers. $200.00 was subscribed to missions to be paid $40.00 a year, for five years.

The fifth year of our class, while the regular work was carried on, especial interest was taken in our Orphanage, missionary and war work. Mrs. W. C. Crocker was elected president. $21.00 was donated for Syrian-Armenian relief. $200.00 was subscribed to the Elon standardization fund to be paid $40.00 each year, for five years.

It was this year that the class made plans, raised money and bought a beautiful loving cup, which was presented to our teacher on December 23, 1917, in token of the esteem in which he is held.

At the beginning of the sixth year, with Mrs. Crocker re-elected president, there were 72 members on the roll. While it might seem we didn't continue to grow let us remember people do not always live in the same place. Quite a few had left town to make their homes elsewhere, so it required work to secure new members to fill their places.

Especial interest should be made of the hospital and visiting committees in visiting the sick and shut-ins, taking them magazines and flowers.

Again there was an empty chair in our class, for God had seen fit to call a most faithful member, Mrs. A. T. Norfleet. While we missed her, our loss is her gain.

We began our eighth year with Mrs. J. E. Smith president. In November a check for $20.00 was sent to B. D. Jones for C. M. A. dues. In December a check for $25.00 was sent to the Orphanage to buy toys and goodies for the orphans at Christmas time. In April a check for $40.00 was sent to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, this being the fourth payment on our mission pledge. In September a check for $40.00 was sent to Dr. Harper to pay the third installment on pledge to Elon College.

Due to the "flu" epidemic the community nurse found that she had more than she could do unless somebody came to her rescue.

Through Mrs. A. H. Baker, the class gave $100.00 to help buy her an automobile to be paid for in four payments. $100.00 was donated to care for a T. B. patient in Catawba.

It was in May of this year that our class entertained the Berea Class. There were 131 present. Very often Mrs. Smith could not be present

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

YOUTH HOLIDAY CONFERENCE AT ELON.

Twenty-five young people, counsellors, and visitors worked with and looked in upon the Youth Fellowship Annual Conference of Leaders held at Elon College December 28th to 31st. Among those present were the Youth Fellowship president, presidents, vice-presidents and secretaries of North Carolina Christian Conferences, a representative from Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Associate Young People's Secretary for the United Church, and Misses Pattie Coghill and Priscilla Chase, of the Extension Boards, and Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Mission Secretary of the Southeast, and Rev. F. C. Lester, Chairman of the Board of Christian Education.

Important steps were taken in the perfection of the organization of the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast Convention of the Congregational-Christian Church. Youth Fellowship is looking forward to the time of the next Southern Christian Convention as a time to have certain goals accomplished. The coming spring will be filled with enthusiastic endeavors to reach these goals throughout the entire Southeast. Outstanding among the goals set by the Holiday Conference are: encouragement in the support of Elon College, programs for fifth Sunday's (College Day) for the Young People's page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN; a study of worship in each local young people's group; encouragement for attendance upon Elon and other, summer schools; 100 young people for Elon Summer School in 1932; week-end conference of officers in Conference; spring rallies in Conferences.

A complete report of this Holiday Conference may be had by any one making the request of Herman Truitt, Glen Raven, N. C.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

JANUARY 17, 1932.

MY SHARE IN THE HOME.

Scripture: Luke 2:40-51; 15:25-31.

"Home is not the costly mansion,
Nor the humble, lowly cot;
But, perchance, if there 'tis nestling,
Dear one, pray, disturb it not."

Topics that may be discussed in the program: "The Ideal Home," "What My Home Means to Me," "Things I'd Like to Do for My Home," and "The Blessings of Home." These may be assigned before time for the meeting so that adequate time for preparation may be had.

THOUGHTS ON THE TOPIC.

The ideal home is a Christian home. In it there is a place for every individual. Each joy is shared with the other members of the family. There is true companionship in such a home. Love and protection cheer the home group and make them stronger for the outside world. Dreams and hopes are shared. Self-sacrifice proves the love for each other. There is always forgiveness for mistakes. There is confidence and trust in each other. There is welcome for the weary and comfort for the sad. There is much in the word "home" that cannot be put into words, or bought with gold. Home is near and dear to all of us.

Edgar A. Guest, in his poem, "Home," puts a lot of truth in his few well-chosen words. Parts of this poem are given here:

"Home ain't a place that gold can buy or get up in a minute; Afore it's home there's got t' be a heap o' livin' in it."

"It don't make any difference how rich ye get t' be,
How much yer chairs an' tables cost; how great yer luxury;
It ain't a home t' ye, though it be the palace of a king,
Until, somehow, yer soul is sort o' wrapped 'round everything."

Each person who shares the benefits of the home is duty-bound to share also in the work and care of the home, to contribute some part to its helpfulness, and to share with the interests of the others in the home. Because of the faithfulness of some members of the family it may be easy for young people to forget their duties and to neglect their privileges as members of a home group. Check up to see that you are not neglecting your part as a member of a home.

All around us today we may see family groups who live together in a house, yet have no home in the real sense of the word. Some of this may be caused by the change in the interests of women, which in turn have been caused by many changes in modern ways of living. Perhaps women, as the main home-makers, have not yet found their place in the modern world. Ida M. Tarbell, in a study of women in the home, says: "I doubt if there is today a more disintegrating influence at work—one more fatal to sound social development—than that which belittles the home and the position of woman in it. As a social institution nothing so far devised by man approaches the home in its opportunity or equals it in its successes. From this high conviction the great mass of women never have and never can be turned. What does happen constantly, however, is loss of joy and courage in the undertaking. When these go the vision goes. The woman feels only her burdens, not the big meaning in them. She remembers her daily grind, not the possibilities of her position. What has come to her is a common human experience, the discovery that nothing is quite what we expected it to be, that if hope is to be even half-way realized it will be by courage and persistency. It is not the woman's business which is at fault; it is the faulty handling of it, and the human difficulty in keeping heart when things grow hard. What she needs is a strengthening of her wavering faith in her natural place in the world, to see her business as a profession, its problems formulated, and its relations as to the work of society as a whole clearly stated."

Has your church made an every-member canvass in the campaign to raise $50,000.00 for Elon College? If not, the time is very short and the matter very urgent, and if any SUN reader can make a donation and has not done so, this could be made, and will be most helpfully made, by sending the same to C. Sunday School Lesson

By REV. S. A. BENNETT, Elon College, N. C.

THE FIRST DISCIPLE.

LESSON II—JANUARY 10, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 1:35-49.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world."—Jno. 1:29.

Introduction.

John the Baptist was engaged in strenuous evangelistic work and won many disciples. His followers were quickened by his stirring message of repentance and preparation for God's kingdom. Jesus approved the work and message of John and received water baptism from him. In the lesson for today we see the disciples of John becoming disciples of Jesus.

Personal Evangelism.

Notice the personal, direct, experiential nature of the evangelistic method as shown in this lesson. John was standing with two of his disciples. They saw "Jesus as he walked," and John said, "Behold, the Lamb of God." These disciples heard Jesus speak and followed him. Jesus asked them what they sought and they asked him where he lived. He told them to "come and see." They visited with him. Andrew then finds his brother Simon. He brought him to the Messiah or Christ. Jesus gave him a new name, Cephas in the Aramaic language, commonly spoken by Jews in Jesus' time. Petros in the Greek, meaning rock or stone.

Philip followed Jesus and then found his friend Nathaniel. The same personal evangelism that figured so effectively in the work of the early Christian movement.

Come and See.

In verse 39, Jesus said, "Come and ye shall see." In verse 46, Philip said, "Come and see." The faith here evoked was on the basis of experience. The doubter could be convinced by experience. A vital experience of life is convincing. Have you received sufficient personal experience of Jesus that you can say to your friend, "Come and see?" Does your Sunday school mean so much to you that you feel like telling others to "Come and see?" Values that are deeply experienced are worth recommending to others. It is no burden to recommend to our friends something we have found of great worth.

Lay-Evangelism.

In most of our churches today the people regard scul-winning to be the task of the minister or professional evangelist. The more we emphasize this the less vital we make the work of the laymen. The minister has his work. There is a place of importance and worth for the evangelist. But when laymen have a religious experience so valuable and so vital that they personally are glad to speak to their friends about it, the minister can do a much greater work for God and righteousness. This religion so vital that men personally can recommend it, is a contagious kind that spreads. And these religious values so real that men can see them are very convincing. Jesus is a great teacher. Let us follow him in spirit and method.

O'HENRY HOTEL MODERNIZED.

The following article from a recent issue of the Manufacturers' Record, will be of interest not only to residents of Greensboro, but to the many members of the Christian Church who know Mr. Darden:

"With the completion of improvement initiated some months ago, the O'Henry Hotel at Greensboro, N. C., with 304 rooms, each with bath, will have been renovated from cellar to attic, making it one of the modern hotels of the South. In March, 1931, the hotel was put in the hands of receivers. On August 1st it was purchased by J. M. Darden, president of Sands and Company, Suffolk, Va., for $650,000. Subsequently the Darden-Bland Hotel Company, Inc., was organized and the hotel sold to that company, whose officers are as follows: J. M. Darden, Suffolk, president; T. L. Bland, Raleigh, N. C., vice-president and general manager; L. C. Vaughan, Greensboro, treasurer; A. L. Bland, secretary; J. M. Darden, Jr., Roanoke, Va., assistant secretary. With the officers, the following constitute the board of directors: H. W. Stephenson, Atlanta; Z. A. Snipes, Atlanta; and P. D. Snipes, Raleigh.

"The company was organized with $300,000 capital, and a large part of this money is being spent on improvements which include general rebuilding of the entire property. Every necessary repair to mechanical equipment is included in the program, which also calls for new furniture where necessary; rebuilding and refinishing of worn pieces; entire new set of kitchen fixtures; new carpets, linens, etc.

"With the exception of Mr. Bland and his son, the others associated with Mr. Darden in the hotel enterprise have been connected in business with him for many years. H. W. Stephenson of Atlanta has been associated with him for 40 years, and others from 15 to 35 years each.

"The new hotel will be managed by the Associated Hotels, Inc., headed by T. L. Bland. Other hotels in the group include the following: Hotel Sir Walter Raleigh, Raleigh, N. S.; Hotel Bland, Raleigh, N. C.; Hotel Robert E. Lee, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Hotel Zinzendorf, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Hotel Ricks, Rocky Mount, N. C., and Hotel Petersburg, Petersburg, Va.

"Greensboro citizens who were responsible for the first hotel company, decided that the name should be O'Henry in honor of the noted American short story writer, William Sidney Porter, who was born on West Market Street, Greensboro, September 11, 1862, and who worked in a drug store operated by his uncle, on the site where the hotel now stands. O'Henry's mother died when he was only three years of age. He was tutored by an aunt, and attended no other school. This tutoring ended when he had reached the age of fifteen. In 1882, when he was twenty, O'Henry moved to Texas, spending some time on a cattle ranch before beginning his journalistic career as a reporter on the Houston Post. Later he purchased Brann's Iconoclast, which he converted into a ten-page fiction weekly, naming it the Rolling Stone. He soon abandoned the venture and undertook a journey to Central America; this trip proved, in later years, a mine from which he drew some of his best tales. O'Henry set about raising bananas on a large scale, but the venture proved unsuccessful, and he returned to Texas, where he lived a short time before moving to New Orleans, when his literary work began in earnest. He remained there until he moved to New York in 1901. He died June 5, 1910."

If the reader of this line is in arrears for THE SUN and knew how very much the $2.00 for renewal was needed, it would go forward to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, by the first possible post.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It takes good women to put things across when they are called upon. We asked them to furnish chickens to give the children a Christmas dinner, and they did the job well. They sent us chickens dressed and undressed. A number of coops came in with a dozen hens in them to make our little folks happy on the beautiful Christmas Day. The children had a real nice dinner and all were happy. Our good friend, Mr. J. M. Darden, sent us 100 lbs. of excellent candy and 150 lbs. of peanut butter. Mr. A. T. Holland sent a bag of peanuts. Several churches sent us presents for each child. All were happy and had a happy Christmas. We are grateful to all who lent us a helping hand in making each little fatherless and motherless child happy.

While your Superintendent did his best to see that all the children had a happy day, it was with a heavy heart filled with sorrow. Only a few days before Christmas the First National Bank of Burlington, where we had our Orphanage funds, closed its doors. The news struck us like a bolt of lightning out of a clear sky. We had been doing business with this bank for a number of years. It held the confidence of the entire surrounding country and did a big business. It closed its doors on $5,400.00 of our money. It left us with $75.00 in our cash box, with 105 little children looking us in the face. It has been hard to sleep or eat. 105 children, homeless and helpless, to care for; bills to meet and the Thanksgiving offerings practically all in. Has the Good Lord suffered this to come upon us to test the Christian people to see if they will arise and out of real sacrifice meet this need.

It can be easily done if all would take a part. We have thirty-one thousand members in the Southern Convention. Suppose we have twenty thousand real active members. If each one will give just 25c each, that would make $5,000.00. The little children in our Sunday schools could give pennies and nickels and raise the $400.00 easily. No one would miss it, all would be happy, and our little children would be fed. Will the churches and Sunday schools arise and meet this calamity that has befallen us?

Very respectfully,

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY

JESUS EQUAL WITH GOD.

LESSON: John 5:19-23.

"He thought it not robbery to be equal with God." (Phil. 2:6.)

Matthew (11:27) tells us, "No man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him." These words testify to the unity of the Son with the Father. So does also the lesson (Jno. 5), which is before us, "whatsoever things the Father doeth, these also doeth the Son."

It is made clear, however, that any one may know the Father to whomsoever Jesus reveals the Father, and Christ's message was "Whosoever will may come." To "follow Him," then, revealed the Father, and to follow Him now reveals Him.

Furthermore, if we are to know God, it must be in Christ. Christ said so and expressed it in the parable of the marriage feast. Only in Him do we find God, just as only in a working knowledge of arithmetic can one find the value of logarithms. But when we come to Christ we come to God Himself, and then we become partakers of His divine nature and divine power, for he gives us a new life, which causes us to love him, to hate sin and abstain from it. In thus honoring him we honor the Father himself hath said:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." Do we believe this?

Prayer—In thee, Lord Jesus, have we found the Father, and in thee shall we ever see Him. Let us never fall into unbelief; but keep us with thee; and show us thy glory, and may we abide with thee forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

SIMPLICITY OF SALVATION.

LESSON: I. Cor. 1:17-21.

"Christ meant to preach the gospel: not with the wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect." (Verse 17.)

Christ thanks the Father, "because he hath hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hath revealed them unto babes"; and to us he says: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Thus Christ tells us to be as simple as a child; to understand that no natural wisdom of man can comprehend the truth unto salvation. It hath not entered into the heart of man, however intellectual, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. An understanding of salvation is of the wisdom of God, and because it is, and because it is exalted above the wisdom of the world, the way of a simple child is the way of entering where we can understand and know Him. It hath pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Without belief, all are lost. They will sink with all their intelligence. Do you believe? If not, why not?

Prayer—Merciful God, give us grace to believe, by the Holy Spirit, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LESSON: Isa. 57:15-21.

"I dwell with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit." (Verse 15.)

It may take a long time; but the prodigal son will come home at last, and humble himself before his God. It is morally certain that the child who is brought up in God's light, taught to know God, and trained in His way, though departing from it all, will eventually come back. The promise still holds true: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Ultimately there is no peace to him who is separated from the Lord. God has said, and we have seen much of it come to pass, that "every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess Him." The worm of sorrow and distress which comes as a result of this separation will gnaw at the heart. One may assay to disbelieve and to live without God, and he may think he has peace; but has he? It is often evident that under the smooth surface is unrest, and after awhile, ere one is aware of it, troubles in his life cast up mire and dirt.

Our message today is that any man, however wretched, may humble himself and come to the Lord and be forgiven, healed and set straight. The Lord has established his throne "in the high and holy places," and "with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit." He is an holy one, above all sin, and yet not so high but that he will dwell in the hearts of miserable misguided sinners. The most important thing to remember about it is this: "Humility is the only door through which the high and holy one enters our hearts."

Prayer—O Lord, thou delightest not in the strength of man; but thou takest pleasure in them that fear thee and in those that hope in thy Mercy. Give us humble hearts and lowly spirits, so shall we have peace of soul with thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A PRAYER OF DAVID.

LESSON: Psalm 138.

David is thanking the Lord for loving kindness and the revelation of truth to him; he is thanking him for an increased understanding of his word; he is thanking him for answering his prayers and strengthening his soul; and so real is God to him that he declares he believes that all the Kings of the world will praise him when they understand His word.

How long will people in a so richly-God-blessed country refuse to come to him in praise and receive mercy at His hands? Why will they not learn to sing His praises? It must be as Isaiah said, "Because sentence . . . is not speedily executed, therefore, the hearts of men are set . . . to do evil." Christian people, as one voice and church with one accord, need to declare as never before the simple message of repentance unto salvation.

But our peculiar message today is: If they will not come, let his true children not forget to praise him and be loyal. He will some day perform his work in them.

Prayer—Dear Lord, we confess our faults. We are like them that dream. We weep over our failures. Forgive us and baptize us with thy Spirit. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SALVATION WHOLLY OF GOD.

LESSON: John 6:43-47.

"No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." "And they shall be taught of God." "Not that any man has seen the Father, save he which is of God."

The text as quoted above is an abbreviation of the lesson. Read it again carefully. Can anything be more definite as to the absolute necessity of God in redemption?

No man awakens himself out of the sleep of sin; no man is truly penitent of himself, or comes to Christ for mercy, or believes in the forgiveness of sins, and is born again, except that God touches his consciousness and moves him.

How comes it then, that God saves some and others He does not? It is understood that He would save all. Well—this is a mystery, and only when this life is done shall it be fully answered. Notwithstanding, Christian experience among the devout souls of Christendom bears witness of the fact that there is a Spiritual revelation and certainly to those who obey the Lord's call. Sam Jones said: "There is no proof, but get on the platform and see." He who does, experiences the Father drawing him. It is felt when serious thoughts stir us; when longings after God press upon us; when we feel the emptiness of the world upon us; when we are troubled and long for peace; when the word of God attracts us; when conscience accuses us; when something prompts us to holier living; all these things are the workings of the Father in us and they have been called "The Voice of God."

So God teaches us to know our sins, and inspires our prayers for mercy and our avowals of Trust in Him, the true and everlasting God. He says, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore, with loving-kindness have I drawn thee."

Prayer—Dear Lord, with our whole heart we confess our sins and claim thy salvation this day. Grant us grace that we may have our all in thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

TRUSTING IN THE DARK.

LESSON: Psalm 31:19-24.

"Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues."

Our experience seems to be the same as David's; that the faithful are confronted, if not surrounded, by mortal enemies; but it is likewise true that David's trust in God which overcame his enemies, is also our's, and his trust is our trust. Perhaps it is better to put it this way: He who gives God his whole heart, God gives back His own whole heart with all his goodness and his salvation. They flee to him, and "he maketh his face to shine upon them."

It was that trust which delivered Joseph from the wicked woman; Daniel from the lions, and his friends from the fire. Many times, perhaps, have we been delivered from an enemy when we were altogether unconscious of it. The Lord knows our weakness and, of his great goodness, saves us often.

Prayer—Dear Lord, thou knowest us thy servants. When we can see thee we have good courage, but when we cannot see thee our hearts grow faint. O Lord, help thou our weakness, hide us in the secret of thy presence, and strengthen our hearts, so that we can know thee and trust in thee even when we cannot see thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

FROM THE GLORIOUS TO THE INGLORIOUS.

LESSON: Matt. 17:1-9.

"He bringeth them into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun."

In the transfiguration, the Saviour is given a spell of rest in preparation for his passion; and the disciples are given a glorious experience before witnessing his struggle in Gethsemane. Upon the mount, his divinity shines out and reveals that he who suffers is in the bosom of the Father. In the garden his divinity is hid by tears and the sweat of blood, and it reveals itself only in his perfect obedience. All the disciples (Continued on Page 13) on Sunday mornings. When she was absent Mrs. C. C. Rawls, vice-president, presided.

HISTORY OF PHILATHEA CLASS.

At the election of officers in October, 1921, which was the beginning of the ninth year, Mrs. T. A. Barbee was elected president. At this time there was an orchestra in the Sunday School. The class obligated to pay $3.00 each month to help defray the expenses of said orchestra.

In November $20.00 was sent to B. D. Jones for C. M. A. dues, and $25.00 was sent to Mrs. A. H. Baker for automobile, $25.00 was sent to the Orphanage for Christmas, $20.00 was sent to Richmond Church to help the ladies in an apron contest. We were glad to have the opportunity to help the Richmond Church.

It was this year we thought we were going to be honored with a visit from Governor Trinkle. Committees were appointed to invite the ladies' classes of the town to join us on this great occasion. They accepted the invitation most graciously, one and all, but—the Governor never came. Our hard luck.

Again we were sad, for two had been taken from our ranks, Mrs. G. W. Truitt and Miss Mary Lewis.

At the beginning of the tenth year with Mrs. Barbee still our president, we purchased two dozen more Bibles for our class.

Checks were sent for C. M. A. and Orphanage, $10.00 was sent to the Superannuated Fund. The class at this time was contributing to all benevolences of the church.

At our anniversary meeting this year we were honored with the following visitors: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, and Dr. I. W. Johnson. They were introduced to the class by Col. J. E. West, and each responded with jolly and fitting remarks.

Wanting to go forward in our work, it was decided to appoint ladies to visit other classes of the town and see how they conducted their classes on Sunday mornings. This move created a fellowship which continues to grow.

In January, 1923, Elon College was burned to the ground. The call came, and to show our loyalty to the College, we pledged $50.00 a year for five years, to the emergency fund.

Two electric fans were installed in the classroom during the month of June at the cost of $50.00. New awnings were placed at the windows at a cost of $18.00.

The class entertained the Baraca Class, officers of the Sunday School, and choir members in April.

At our anniversary meeting in our eleventh year it will be interesting to know that a birthday offering was taken, but instead of a penny a year for our personal age, it was a penny a year for the age of the class. This offering amounted to $8.45. Checks were sent as usual to meet our pledges and membership dues.

This being the last payment on our mission pledge, Dr. Atkinson was anxious for us to renew it for five more years, but the class voted to discontinue it as there were other channels ahead of us calling for money, for instance the remodeling of our own church.

Mrs. S. C. Nelms, somehow, found some glad rags about this time, and glad rags they proved to be, as the class realized $56.95 from the sale of them.

$35.00 was donated to the Sunday school to help buy song books.

The twelfth year began its work in the midst of bad weather and sickness. The first business meeting was held in November, and the president had an honor bestowed upon her by being elected to the office the third time. The work went on as usual. Committees were active, attendance good, and checks were sent to meet all of the class obligations. To increase the attendance each Sunday morning, cards were sent out during the week to the absent members. This brought results.

Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun was elected president at the beginning of the thirteenth year. Our treasurer reported having a balance of over $400 in the treasury, and so, at the suggestion of Col. West, $285.05 was deposited in the bank on interest.

In April of this year we had the very great pleasure of being present in a joint meeting of the Baraca Class and the class of men from Cypress Chapel, at which time we were invited to meet with the ladies' class at Cypress Chapel in June. We went and enjoyed the fellowship very much.

The building program was on at this time and we were ever ready to do our part to make it a success.

And now, as we move on to the fourteenth year, we find ourselves very much torn up getting ready for a bigger and better classroom. It was decided this year when a member passed away, flowers not to exceed $5.00 should be sent by the class. Other obligations having been cleared up, it was voted to give $20.00 a year to missions through the W. H. & F. M. Society.

Again we were sad for death had claimed Mrs. Margaret Brown and Mrs. Susie Holland.

There are no records of the class from June, 1928, to May, 1929.

I think we can safely say that our fifteenth year was spent here and there, wherever it was best for us to be, until we became permanently located in our new Philathea room. It was this year we purchased our chairs. We donated our drugget to the church to be used in Dr. Staley's study, and purchased two new ones for our room. For chairs, carpets, screens, awnings, window shades, druggets and song books, the class paid out $557.65.

Mrs. Clarence Harrell was elected president early in 1929, and she has proven to be a most capable leader. She not only presides but when it is necessary she can do anything. Some times she sings, some times she recites; in fact she fits in anywhere. She has a strong personality along with her talents and has proven to be a very good leader. During her two and one-half years in office nearly 500 visits have been made by committees. $100.00 has been given to the building fund, $60.00 given to missions, and $25.00 sent to the Orphanage each Christmas.

We have had the pleasure of serving supper to Elon Alumni for three years, and if there were time to go deeper into it there would be other things very much worth mentioning. While these hard times are on us this class is casting a ray of sunshine where otherwise it would be dark.

Special mention should be made of the ladies who have served as secretary these past eighteen years.

This history could not have been written had the minutes not been recorded. That has been no easy job. We are very much indebted to: Mrs. R. O. Harvey, Mrs. R. C. Harrell, Mrs. George Daughtrey, Miss Effie Beale, Mrs. R. D. Crocker, Mrs. Rosa Russell, Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Mrs. A. D. Brinkley, Mrs. R. P. Wright.

I often wonder if this work would have been accomplished if the little band of women had not been inspired and the class organized years ago. Our work has not been confined here but others have seen, have organized, and gone to work, so frankly, there is no end to what is being done at the present time. While we are doing great work, it is only as the Master would have it. Let us be submissive to his will and stick to our motto:

"I am only one, but I am one,
I cannot do everything, but I can something.
What I can do, I ought to do,
And by the grace of God, I will do."

MRS. W. H. YATES.

FAMILY ALTAR.

followed him, but in the transfiguration we see some following him more closely, and hence they are lifted up to greater heights and thrust down to greater depth in their experiences. This is characteristic of the life of Jesus. It was often in the valley of labor and pain, but there were sweet places in between.

Likewise his children also must bear the cross, experience sorrows and endure the pain; but they shall likewise have hours of happiness full of a foretaste of eternal glory.

In the soul that is hid with God, there is rapture beyond utterance and a delight of love which endures all things and surpasses understanding. Of course, every one does not have the same experience, and therefore, one must not make it the test of his own state of grace, nor prescribe it unqualifiedly for others. But there is a test that every one can make for himself, and also one in which one may have no hesitancy in prescribing to others, and that is, that every Christian shall experience that "the kingdom is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

Every Christian has access to God in prayer and to him will God reveal the way; and every Christian will have seasons of joy more refreshing than the daily tenor of his life. He needs these seasons to help him in the more sordid experiences. No doubt that is one of the reasons that God has granted us an ever-recurring Sunday—for holy transfiguring experiences. No doubt we sin most against ourselves when we do not use it for such purposes, making visions of the spiritual impossible.

Again the Lord would not make every day Sunday. He would not keep us in the heights. He would not let the disciples build their dwelling place there. Like as with us, the most of life is in the valley. We need these seasons of refreshing to enable us to go with him and endure life through the valley without losing our faith. There is greater danger in joys than in sorrows. Yet we must taste the cup of joy in order that sufferings may be a benefit to us. Follow Jesus more closely, and joys and sorrows will become more intense, and we will be transfigured after his likeness from glory to glory.

Prayer—Dear Lord, help us to see thy glory and praise thee as we ought. Increase our faith so that when we walk through the wilderness we may still be conscious of thee, and rejoice in the hope of seeing thee face to face. Lead us faithfully on by thy counsel, and make us glad to carry thy cross unto the end when we shall be received up unto thee. Amen.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY.

February 14, 1932 will witness the tenth celebration of Race Relations Sunday—a day when in hundreds of communities throughout the country men and women, young people and children of all races will meet together not as Nordics or Negroes, Orientals or Hebrews but as children of one Heavenly Father.

In preparation for this day the Federal Council of Churches through its Commission on Race Relations has issued a packet of suggestive material for many types of observance. There are worship services for churches and Sunday schools; there are programs for women's and young people's societies; there are suggestions for a mass meeting and for general community activities, not just on Race Relations Sunday but over a period, to show how interracial goodwill may be vitalized in the community. These suggestions are based on actual experiences of a host of cities where during the past ten years the Sunday nearest Lincoln's Birthday has been marked by some expression of interracial friendship.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

CHURCH AND NEWSPAPER. By William Bernard Norton. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This is one case where the publisher's statement that, "this is by far the most important book on its subject" may be accepted without question.

Dr. Norton is well qualified to write a correctly informative book which will truly help ministers and laymen to obtain more and better religious publicity. He has an expert knowledge of the workings of both church and newspaper; for twenty-four years he served as county, town and city minister, then put in twenty-three full years as a writer of religious news for city dailies.

A young newspaper man, himself the son of a minister, in conversation with the writer of this review, once summed up briefly but eloquently some of the reasons for mutual misunderstanding between the pulpit and the press. This understanding volume written by one who was for many years religious editor of that well-known and often-denounced-from-the-pulpit Chicago daily, The Tribune expands the same subject at greater length and far more constructively. Its chapters contain much sound wisdom as to the principles of news interest and the methods by which the good will and co-operation of the newspaper as a medium of publicity may be cultivated.

There is a preface by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, an admirable index, and an appendicular chapter in which is concisely discussed "The Dream of a Religious Daily—Well Meant but Yet a Dream."

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3¾x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

MARRIAGES

CRONIE—BARFIELD.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Barfield, Roanoke, Ala., Route 2, Thursday evening at 7:00 o'clock, December 24th, I united in marriage their daughter, Miss Jessie, to Mr. Arthur F. Cronie, of Ney, Ohio. Only a few friends and relatives were present. After a tour of various points in Florida, they will make their home in Ohio.

The bride is the daughter of a prosperous farmer and loyal church worker. The groom is a member of the Church of Christ at Bryan, Ohio. Best wishes of a host of friends go with them that their lives may be long and happy.

G. H. VEAZEY.

OBITUARIES.

DOFFLEMYRE.

Wesley Eugene Dofflemyre, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dofflemyre, of Bethel Church, was born April 24, 1929, and died November 27, 1931, aged 2 years, 7 months, and 3 days. Death came rather suddenly and unexpectedly, and was a great shock to the parents and others. They have the deepest sympathy of the community. Funeral services were held at Bethel, November 29, 1931.

A. W. ANDES.

WRENN.

David Wrenn was born March 4, 1857, and departed to his reward October 11, 1931. He leaves a wife, 5 children, 27 grandchildren; 14 great-grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn the loss of this Godly one.

Brother Wrenn was a loyal and faithful deacon of Palm Street Christian Church, for 15 years. He loved his Church, and above all, he loved his Christ. Our loss is his eternal gain. May God bless his memory. Funeral service was held at Bethlehem Christian Church in Alamance County.

J. L. NEESE.

PEEK.

John O. Peek was born February 28, 1848, near Cedar Town, Ga. He died at his home near Cragford, Ala., December 1, 1931. He joined New Harmony Christian Church about thirty years ago, and remained true and faithful to the last. He was a member of the Masonic Fraternity more than thirty years, and was buried with Masonic honors. The funeral services were held at New Harmony church with his pastor, this writer, in charge. Interment was made in the cemetery just across the road by his wife, who preceded him to the grave more than a year ago. He was a good citizen, a kind and affectionate husband and father, and was true to his God.

He leaves to mourn their loss seven children, fifty-eight grand-children, twenty-four great-grandchildren, and other relatives. His friends were numbered by his acquaintances. He was liberal with his means for the promotion of Christ's kingdom. He gave the first $100.00 to the building of Southern Union (Bethlehem) College.

We feel that our loss is heaven's gain, and we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well. May God comfort the bereaved in the prayer of his humble pastor. G. H. VEAZEY.

THOMAS.

My friend, LeRoy Thomas, 24 years of age, had spent the Lord's Day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Thomas, shared impressively the awe and grief of the young wife, parents and sisters. Jonesboro, and was returning to his post of duty in the U. S. Navy, Norfolk, Va., when he was fatally injured in a motorcycle-automobile accident. Thus came the deplorable and untimely ending of a life that was promising, because highly qualified by inheritance and training. Several hundred people attended the funeral, made beautiful the burial and the love and pray for those who loved him through life. B. J. HOWARD.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

ANDERSON.

Deacon Arthur Smith Anderson was born March 19, 1861. November 27th, he was called to his reward.

He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Miss Ethel, and a brother, J. W. Anderson. February 4, 1912, he united with the First Christian Church, Winchester, Va. On August 2, 1916, he was ordained to the office of Deacon. To the end he lived a faithful and consecrated life, true and loyal to his Master, and to his Church. May God's blessing and comfort be with the bereaved ones.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

HILLIARD.

Sister Lena Fleming Hilliard, a devoted member of Mt. Auburn Christian Church, Warren County, N. C., departed this life November 23, 1931, at the age of sixty-two years, nine months and twenty-three days. At the age of three she was left an orphan and was reared in the home of relatives. She was a daughter of Jacob Fleming a sister of Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., of Burlington, N. C., a granddaughter of "Uncle Jack" Fleming, of Warren County.

In early childhood, Sister Hilliard professed faith in Christ, and united with Mt. Auburn Christian Church, and was a faithful member of this church throughout her life.

December 13, 1892, she was united in marriage to W. A. Hilliard. To this union were born six children, all of whom with her husband, survive to mourn their loss in her departure: J. Fleming, Miss Ella, W. E., H. C., Walter L., Miss Lena Mae. Sister Hilliard was a devoted and faithful wife, loving mother, a consecrated Christian, a good neighbor and an abiding friend. She loved her family with a beautiful devotion, her church with a passionate fondness, and her Saviour with unflinching loyalty. She was the happy mother of a son consecrated to the Christian ministry from early childhood and lived to see all her children converted to the Christian religion as a result of her Christian training and example together with that of her husband, who is a faithful deacon in his church.

The beautiful Christian life she lived will be a sweet memory to those who are left in the remaining years they linger on the shores of time and they can look forward through Christ to join her in the happy home of the soul beyond the skies.

WATCH NIGHT SERVICES.—

Most of the New York City churches held watch night services Thursday night, December 31, 1931, when the old year passed into history. Old Trinity church began its services at 11:15 with singing of the Litany in procession and the service lasted until shortly after midnight. The rector, Dr. Stetson, delivered the address. At the Riverside Church, Dr. Fosdick preached and the full choir sang the old year out and the new year in. It is commendable that so many of the New York churches, as well as those in other parts of the country hold these services, and they are increasingly well attended. This surely is a most constructive and worth-while way to see the old year out. Christmas should in like manner be made more of an occasion for the celebration of the birth of our Saviour than it is in many places where it seems rather to celebrate Bacchus and Mars.

PROHIBITION.—

The allied forces for prohibition are working hard setting up the New York campaign. At an informal luncheon the other day the plans were presented in outline to a few of the pastors. Col. Raymond Robins and others spoke at this meeting, and while what they said was not for publication purposes there can be no harm in pointing out that there are good reasons for believing that some sections of the great American public, especially our business men, begin to see what nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment is likely to mean in the way of general breakdown of law. The campaign in New York is to be made next month and there is evidence of increasing interest in it. Anti-prohibition certainly has its innings in our press and one cannot but be hopeful that this campaign may gain a little publicity for the dry side of the argument—for the sake of variety if nothing more.

HOSPITAL FUND.—

Many churches and synagogues of the city of New York made a collection during the Christmas holidays for the benefit of the fifty or more hospitals associated in the united hospital fund. These hospitals provide free treatment for the destitute sick, so that the churches are glad to aid them. Last year in a similar appeal to the churches some $35,000 was added to the hospital fund. Because of the unusual need this year there is earnest hope that much more than this has been raised. The hospitals affiliated in this drive make no distinction of creed in the help they extend to all who cannot pay. Nothing appeals to the people more in the time of sickness than such service and the kindness shown by the spirit that prompts the hospital movement. No greater work for the kingdom of God can be done than to relieve the sick. Christ never neglected to care for the sick in his day and the spirit of it is Christ-like.

MINISTERS' WEEK.—

The Chicago Theological Seminary offers a new feature January 25-29—"Minister's Week," with programs available to all pastors of the mid-west—President A. W. Palmer announces for this special week short courses of four lectures each by members of the faculty in the principal fields of ministerial training; tours of Chicago's social, educational and religious institutions in the afternoons; a reception and a religious drama the first evening and the annual Alden-Tuthill lecture course the remaining evenings. Admission is open to all wishing to attend. This will give great opportunity to the ministers who can avail themselves of the privileges offered to refresh their minds on many theological questions, to stimulate their thought along religious lines, to hear the most modern lecturers discuss their conclusions, ideals, and imaginations in the field of theology, church history and other kindred subjects

ELON COLLEGE RESUMES WORK.—

The work of the College began January 4th, with practically all old students returning and over twenty-five new students entering with others to follow. The outlook for the Spring Semester is very encouraging. The new President continues to grow in popularity both at the college and in the field, and in the light of the financial condition the campaign for $50,000 is being pushed as much as possible with hopeful results. Some churches have completed their canvass, some are in the midst of the campaign, some have waited until after the holidays closed with the hope that more could be done. All churches in the Southern Convention should continue the canvass until the entire amount called for is realized. The college needs the full amount and more to meet urgent debts. We have the right man in the right place in our President. He is untiring in his energy, and inspires confidence in the minds of all who know him. If the church will stand by him with constant prayer and with liberal financial support, he will save the college and pay off its obligations. Twenty-five new students from the Atlantic University have entered Elon College and others will come. Let all the friends of the college rally to its support and we shall be proud of the results.

ALUMNI OF ELON.—

There never was a time in the history of Elon College when a united movement of the Alumni to give liberal support to their Alma Mater would mean more than now. She needs the enthusiastic loyalty of every student that has ever attended the college whether a graduate or not. The fin-condition of the country is such that no one can do as much financially as in normal times, but the college needs thousands of friends to give their loyal support by active influence, by speaking words of commendation of what the college can offer in educational advantages, what she can do in training for Christian leadership, what she offers in the preparation of teachers, what she has done and is prepared to do in the preparation of students for graduate work in our best universities, and what many of her students are doing in all the professions and walks of life. The Alumni can determine the policy of the college for the future. Her President is open-minded in thought and ready for the best suggestions that can be offered by the Alumni for better things. He is well-grounded in religious thought and principles, tried and true by practical experience in the field of leadership in the church, safe and sound in his theological preparation, and stands firmly on the Bible as the source of truth for the religious life. Give him the best you have for Elon and he will be able to make Elon what every Alumnus would like to see it become.

DR. SMITH A BUSY MAN.—

Since assuming the presidency of Elon College, Dr. L. E. Smith has been one of the busiest men in the Church. He has made several trips to Norfolk, looking after business for the College and the field with which he has been so closely identified. During the past week he has been to Atlantic University in consultation with the faculty and students about entering Elon College for the rest of this scholastic year. He is constantly called on to make addresses, preach sermons on special occasions, and hold conferences on various phases of the work of the College. He is called on to do a great deal of correspondence about the work of the campaign and is constantly on the go, meeting engagements and holding meetings with various individuals and groups in the interest of the College. If all of the ministers and laymen of the Church were as anxious to save Elon College as is our president, it would only be a matter of a few months until we would be assured that the College would be saved and all the debts would be met in due time, and the College be in a flourishing condition. However, it will take time, sacrifice, contributions, co-operation, loyalty, and devotion to the College to make it what all those who love it would like to see it become. All these essentials to the success of the College will eventually be contributed from the loyal hearts of her sons and daughters, when they realize her needs, the critical conditions that exist, and the fine leadership that we have in our president. But, we need all of these contributions now. Shall we give them? We cannot afford not to!

NOTES-PERSONALS

Bank failures are entailing inconvenience and working many hardships; but only through trials and difficulties do men and women reach and reveal the best that is in them.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter, Elon College, has been called to the pastorate of our Lynchburg church, and we are advised he has accepted. Bro. Coulter is a senior in Elon College and a successful pastor of some nearby churches.

The concert given by First Christian Sunday School Orchestra of Richmond, Va., in the church auditorium last Sunday evening, was well attended and caused much favorable comment. The orchestra numbers thirty-five instruments and is probably the largest organization of the kind in the entire South.

We felicitate Rev. M. T. Sorrell and his faithful workers in our Danville, Va., church in their successful achievement in adding more and needed room to their already enlarged church house. This is the second addition to the building since Bro. Sorrell began his pastorate there only a few years ago. Evidently a faithful crowd of workers at Danville.

Through Dr. L. E. Smith's efforts, and his reputation especially in and about Norfolk, Va., twenty-five students of the former Atlantic University, Virginia Beach, Va., have so far been transferred to and entered Elon College. This University went into the hands of receivers in December, and not a few of the students knew and esteemed Dr. Smith and so entered the institution of which he is head. We are glad to have this fine group of young men and young women enter Elon.

Dr. Martyn Summerbell, Lakemont, N. Y., on Sunday, December 20th, celebrated his 84th birthday anniversary. Dr. Summerbell is the cultured, honored and "beloved old man" of the Christian Church. In all our brotherhood both North and South, no minister is more widely known and more universally esteemed. His 84th anniversary was made memorable by a service in Lakemont Christian Temple, this being the church of Starkley Seminary, of which Dr. Summerbell has been president for the past 33 years. The Chronicle-Express of Penn Gan, N. Y., devotes two columns to the exercises of the day, and an account of Dr. Summerbell's career. We hope to give SUN readers, at an early date, some of the salient features and achievements of this faithful man of God.

UNIQUE CHILDREN'S SERVICE

We had quite a unique children's service last Sunday night. I have had so-called Children's Services before, but they were merely in honor of the children. The service was opened by John Holland. Scripture was read by Oscar Hitchins. Little three-year-old Peggy Rountree sang, "The Old Rugged Cross." Jan Corbitt then led the congregation in prayer. Jean and Ann Haley sang a duet. The junior choir sang a number of selections. Four boys received the offering. This part of the service took forty minutes. Then the pastor spoke for fifteen minutes on "The Value of Good Habits."

This is our second children's service, for we plan to have one each first Sunday night. We keep a record of all those who take part, in order that over a period of a few months, every child may have some part in the services.

There are a number of reasons for having these services. Even church services may become monotonous. Any special service is an attraction, and, needless to say, it is impossible to keep the parents away when their children are on the program. Moreover, it is a means of drawing children who are not affiliated with the church. If publicity is desired, one cannot find a better way. "Murder Will Out"; and so will good works. Then we must remember that "Where there is no vision, the Church will perish." We are responsible not only for today, but also for tomorrow. Then let us begin with the children, for "of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

R. L. HOUSE.

HOLLAND WATCH NIGHT SERVICE.

A very unique Watch Night Service was held on New Year's Eve at the Holland Christian Church. The service was sponsored by the Holy Neck, Holland Baptist and Holland Christian Churches.

From 9 to 11 o'clock, a young people's social was held in the Sunday school rooms, attended by nearly a hundred young people and a few adults.

Games and social songs were enjoyed freely by this youthful group. Miss Tillye Holland of the Holy Neck Church, was in charge of the social program. At the conclusion of this program, refreshments, consisting of salted peanuts, grapes and apples were served, after which the group marched up the stairway to the auditorium to the tune of "Follow the Gleam," led by Mrs. W. M. Jay and Mrs. Sumner Rawles.

The service from 11 to 12 o'clock was of a worshipful nature and was conducted by Dr. W. M. Jay, the only pastor present. The Baptist pastor, is a student supply and non-resident, while Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor of Holy Neck was on a visit with relatives in South Carolina.

Christmas carols were sung by the group and the scripture lesson was read responsively by two girls, Catherine Jolly and Margaret Pittman.

An appreciable number was the solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," sung by Mrs. Sumner Rawles and pantomimed by Miss Louise Bracey. Another feature of this program was the recognition of the young people who had returned from college, teaching or work, and were spending their Christmas at home. Miss Frances Everett, student at Averett College, responded for this group of young people, in a brief address, speaking of the responsibility of young people to the church and the duty of the church to the young people.

Her remarks were very commendable and worthy of practical use. A quartet, "Was It You?" was sung by Mrs. S. L. Wright. Mrs. J. J. Gwaltney, W. M. Jay and Marshall Harrell. Dr. Jay then gave a short talk on the relation of the old year to the new year. Mrs. Sumner Rawles sang another solo, "Sunrise Tomorrow." The audience had just finished singing, "I Gave My Life to Thee," when Father Time (Charley Harrell, Jr.) entered in black flowing robe, long beard and gray hair. He approached the platform slowly, carrying a scythe in his hands and a candle that was nearly burned out. Just at 12 o'clock, little Juanita Smith, dressed as a fairy, tripped down the aisle, carrying a large white, full-sized candle, dated 1932. She lighted her new candle from Father Time's fading light as he passed out of view.

The little fairy, representing the New Year, shared her light with several who came forward and then all the candles were lighted. In the light of a hundred candles, the audience, increased now to many more, sang, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," and was dismissed by a consecration prayer by Dr. Jay. It was a very effective way to close the Old Year, and begin the New Year. Many expressed the fact that it was one of the most impressive services they ever attended.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

DANVILLE, VA.

Sunday, December 13, marked the opening of a new addition to Third Avenue Christian Church. For some months the auditorium has proven to be too small for the congregations. Time went on and notwithstanding the present conditions, the church was forced to move for more room. The task was undertaken, and the 13th proved the lucky day for our entrance into the new building. The new building was placed in front of the old one, tearing away the front of the old building; a Spanish design being placed back for the new addition. The new addition adds 26 by 33 feet to the building. The new addition has a 26-foot door that lifts, which makes not only more auditorium room, but also arranges for new room for the Bible class. In addition to this, the old walks were all torn away and new ones arranged. Then another addition was the tearing away of the old pulpit and equipment and giving much more room with a neat and attractive arrangement.

The opening day was marked by a large attendance, though the weather was not so good. At the opening service in the evening the following spoke in brief: Mr. Ed. Harris gave a short history of the church. "About 19 years ago the church was organized with a few members in a school building near the present sight. It is now used for a dwelling. The church was organized by Rev. Sanders Klapp. The Church moved along very well in the first building. Then for a number of years no definite progress was noted. Five years ago, upon the arrival of Mr. Sorrell, the present pastor, plans were soon made and a $3,000.00 addition was made for needed room. By the time this was paid for the Sunday school had grown so much that it was necessary to make another $1,500.00 addition to take care of the demand. This was paid for almost by the time it was completed. Then again this year the church found itself too small to take care of the growth that had been made, and this $2,000.00 addition has been made. We again find ourselves with all bills about paid." Mr. Harris stated during the past five years the church has grown from one hundred and nine members to more than four hundred and thirty. The Sunday school has grown in like manner.

Policeman Price then gave a very interesting talk on what the church had meant in Danville, and the esteem the church had gained from all that entered its doors. Bro. P. H. Ricketts, the assistant pastor, made a few remarks, stating the purpose of the church. In brief, he stated that the church had the interest of the people at heart and would have all feel that while we belonged to the Christian denomination, that the church was a community church for one and all. Mr. Dickerson, of the Danville Lumber Co., and a member of the Second Baptist Church, followed with a few remarks. His talk was based upon the work of the church, but for the most part on what Mr. Sorrell had done not only for the church, but all those who had made his acquaintance. He stated that his efforts had been untiring and with his hope and ambition no church with his service, could help but grow. In conclusion, he pledged in behalf of the church and its visiting brethren, their one hundred per cent support, with the belief that "the little church on the hill" was rendering the greatest service of any church in Danville.

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

MISS MARGUERITE DAVISON is enjoying a well-earned vacation at her home in the East and will be speaking in churches there in the meantime.

THORSBY CHURCH. It is a pleasure to visit the Thorsby church, which has a varied program. A Sunday night song service which had special musical numbers between three selected hymns, led respectively by Miss Helen Jenkins, Miss Klingenhoefer, Mr. Gerald Smith and Rev. E. W. Butler. The Thorsby Sunday school has outgrown its quarters.

MR. DONALD LEE WEST of the School of Religion, Vanderbilt University, and of College Side church, is getting out a book on the mountains called "Crab Grass." Mr. West was born in the mountains of North Georgia, was graduated from Martha Berry School and Lincoln Memorial University and spent last summer in studying the folk schools in Denmark. He is preparing for work in the mountains of Kentucky.

AT BIRMINGHAM, the Congregational Community church is raising a relief fund known as "Dr. Mordecai's Relief Fund." For a week the Women's Guild served noon lunches at the Parisian Store, which netted a profit of $100.00 a day. The Business Woman's Club gave a supper and entertainment which had a larger return. It would be difficult to find an organization which has more enthusiasm or "drive" than the growing Birmingham church.

WHITEHALL CHURCH is valiantly struggling to raise the money to move the old building over onto the new highway running from Waycross to Brunswick. Rev. Alan Jones, with a good friend, recently went out and in a short time had nearly one hundred dollars raised and lots of help volunteered when the moving process really begins. And under the inspiration of Miss Annie Campbell, the ladies are making quilts. What a spirit will move the folks of that community when the desire is fulfilled to have a beautiful white church on a splendid lot on this superior highway. May the good Lord let it come speedily. Anybody want to help?

CHURCHES RALLY. The first Fifth Sunday Rally of the Clanton, Eclectic and Central Alabama Congregational churches was held at Union Church, Mountain Creek, on November 29th. Nine churches are in this group. Rev. R. A. McKay preached the sermon. Miss Davison and Mrs. Gerald Smith told missionary stories. Eleven people led the discussions of a program for the church work for 1932. Four pastors discussed what churches might do. Three women spoke for the Women's Societies. A Sunday school superintendent and a Sunday school teacher talked of Sunday school objectives and a young man and a young woman discussed Summer Student Service Work. The next Rally, on January 31st, will be held at Mt. Olive church, Tallahassee.

COLUMBUS, GA., United Congregational Christian church, has been enjoying the fine preaching of Rev. A. W. Hutchins for the last three months. He has supplied the pulpit every Sunday and the people think he is one fine preacher. That is always good news. The trouble is there is not money enough to keep on the field all the while, and for that reason plans are under way to get a young unmarried man to go into this promising field and see what three months of preaching and every-day pastoral work will do. Meanwhile if any church, north or south, wants a pastor who can preach, visit, plan, be cordial and always seeking to make others happy and at ease, write Rev. A. W. Hutchins, 660 Delmar St., Atlanta. He also has a splendid wife who fits admirably into the pastor's life.

THE OLD FIRST Congregational Church of Columbus, Ga., which, under the leadership of Dr. McQuarrie two years ago, was fast coming into close fellowship with the Rose Hill Christian church, but was stopped in its progress when Dr. McQuarrie was stricken a year ago, has now deeded its property to the C. C. Building Society. Doubtless the last meeting that this church will ever hold was at the old parsonage beside the vacant lot where their old church once stood, Sunday afternoon, December 20th. The meeting was to authorize the sale of the property to the Building Society. Rev. Chas. Smith, pastor of the Phoenix City Congregational church, led the devotionals. Rev. M. J. Sweet was elected moderator and Rev. John Farr, the first pastor, was elected scribe. It was a good meeting. Out of it there is likely to grow a spirit uniting with the Rose Hill church, in its new program. So may it be.

UNISON PRAYER used in the Community Church, Miami Beach, Fla., Dr. E. A. King, minister: "O God our Heavenly Father, the One to whom we turn in all our trials and tribulations, we come to Thee this day with contrite hearts because we feel that we have lived too much in this world without thought of Thee; we have depended too much upon ourselves for our success and our prosperity. But Thou hast promised that Thou wilt receive us and revive us when we repent and come back to Thee.

"We come to Thee today, our loving Father, and cast all our care on Thee. May it please Thee to make the experiences of these trying days work out for our everlasting good so that we may be established in righteousness, strengthened and settled in our faith, comforted and encouraged in all good endeavors and enabled to live triumphantly in the midst of discouragement and difficulty. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

GOOD NEWS comes from some of our churches that the apportionment is being paid before the close of December. Not all, however, have been able to follow the slogan: "Apportionment paid by December 15th." New Light, Rev. W. C. Carpenter, pastor, made good. Much credit goes to the retired minister, Rev. F. J. Hadden and his wife, for this. They gathered up the hens, took them to the market, sold them, paid the apportionment, had ten dollars left over, which they paid on their new piano. Good work! Another progressive, though small, church is Gaillards, Pleasant Hill. Our licensed minister, Mr. Crawford Moncrief, is also on the roll of honor. They made it in plenty of time—before the 15th. And never forget Fredonia, the church which entertained our Conference so wonderfully in October. They went over the apportionment long before the zero hour, December 15. Rev. L. L. Stanley is pastor there. The very first to pay in full was Hampton at Lovejoy, with Rev. Carl Parker as pastor. There are a lot who have paid in part and likely some who have paid in full and belong on the honor roll, but ye humble writer is far from home as he writes this and much mail will tell some big stories, he hopes, when he gets home for "Ye Good Olde Merry Christmas." If any one who reads these lines knows of churches which paid their apportionment by December 15th, it would be a joy to get a letter telling all about how you did it, and how much better a Christmas your church had because they gave the Mission Present to Jesus for His birthday before they spent all their money on—those mighty sweet little youngsters of yours. How much more Christmas means when we remember—how wise it is to bring gifts to Him, whose birth we celebrate. Lest we should forget how many of our churches will put into their New Year's list of resolutions, "We are going to begin right now to plan to pay our 1932 apportionment by December 15, 1932." I wonder! Is it "The Pastor as does it?" Not much. Its the live layman. (But, of course, the live pastor will remind you of it.) But no good layman will let him gather it in all by himself. Help that true yoke fellow, and share in the blessing. Ye ho! You Carolina and Georgia churches: In two weeks this writer is going to try to find out just how many of you got your apportionment paid before January 10, 1932, the dead line. That will be the final round-up. It will be an honor to be in that list. How I hope not one of our churches will fail. There is time, if you get busy—very busy—right now.

STAMP ALBUMS.

The Church Extension Boards and the American Missionary Association are interested in the World Friendship Stamp Album published by the American Board this spring. United States stamps tell interesting stories of men and things which relate to the development of the country and to true stories of the part which Home Missionaries have had in this development. Stamp collectors will be interested to watch for current stamp items in the American Missionary Number of the Congregationalist.

A new Lincoln story and responsive service, "Lincoln and the Indians," has been prepared by the American Missionary Association, 287 fourth Avenue, New York, for use in Bible schools on Lincoln Sunday, February 14, 1932. Superintendents are invited to order their supplies early in order to insure prompt delivery.

NEW YEAR.

Life's highway goes awinding
Down the cycle of the years,
Sometimes through smiling valleys,
Sometimes through vales of tears.
But sunlight floods the heavens
Though a cloud may intervene;
And love is here to cheer us
Though the way has darksome been.
We joy in earthly friendships,
And God's love that ne'er has failed,
With radiant life awaiting
When the future is unveiled.

BANK DIRECTORS' MEETING OPENS WITH PRAYER.

The small Protestant group, of which Rev. J. S. Porter, Prague, Czechoslovakia, is the shepherd, has started a bank in that city. The meetings of the directors are always opened with prayer. The Government Inspector was present officially at one such meeting. Afterwards he expressed himself as surprised and pleased with such a start. All of the net income of the bank is used in the interests of church and benevolent work. There are but two paid clerks—the remainder of the officials give their services.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A DAY OF PRAYER AND FASTING.

Some of our neighboring communions are calling for denomination-wide observance in the churches of a Day of Prayer and Fasting. This seems a most appropriate thing to do. By sad, and even painful instances, dangers confront and befall us. Our whole financial and economic scheme and program seems to have failed. A recent writer points out that Americans were proceeding on the basis of economic formulas and foundations, and that the light for all transactions and conduct came from economics. Now when economists are most needed, there is not one to show us the way out. Read current literature, recent publications on economics, and one will find as many cures suggested for the present financial ailment as there are so-called economists to write them. Some one has properly called it all "financial quackery." There is not even a patent medicine economic remedy, and each economist is advocating his own wares with few to take them.

The plain fact is that the Creator of this universe laid moral and spiritual foundations, built this earth on moral principles, and to ignore the foundation is to be ignorant of the strength of the structure. Financial and economic principles and policies are fundamental, but only as they are an inherent and integral part of morality and spirituality. We are never going to have a sound and safe economic structure until confidence is restored, and confidence is a moral quality and a spiritual principle. There is money, but every one who has it is afraid to deposit or invest, because of shaken confidence. We must get back to foundations. "And other foundations can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus the Christ." We need access to the throne of grace and to get our hearts and our minds fixed on "Him Who is the author and finisher of our faith." This writer's conviction is that nothing will help like a day of fasting and prayer.

Then our church and denominational interests and institutions are suffering. If our people would meet in their churches and give themselves to a day of prayer for the Church and its enterprises, and then would fast for a day and give to these Church needs the price of food denied for a day, this would be a substantial contribution to pressing needs, and would certainly be a contribution to our own spiritual lives and an impetus to spiritual growth and kingdom enlargement. This would, indeed, strengthen our faith and stimulate our confidence in God. Jesus is still saying as of old, "According to your faith, be it unto you." (Matt. 9:29.)

Why should we not have a day of fasting and prayer throughout all the bounds of our Southern Convention?

J. O. A.

OUR ENTERPRISES AND THEIR NEEDS.

Our personal needs are many and the demands for comforts and conveniences are exacting—very. Yet, there are other needs than those of bodily care and comfort. The needs of the Kingdom of our Lord are likewise essential, pressing, exacting. At the present hour, enterprises of our Church, which represent for us the Kingdom, come with calls that cannot be ignored, with demands that cannot go unheeded. These are, first, our College; second, our Missions; third, our Orphanage; fourth, our Church paper. These are all owned, sponsored and governed by our Southern Christian Convention. The Convention has planted and nurtured these through the years and through these the Convention functions and makes its contribution to the Kingdom and to the world. And right now all four of these enterprises of the Convention are in sore need.

The College greatest and most of all now, because the weight of its indebtedness presses heaviest, and its expenses are necessarily heaviest and most exacting. The very mind and intelligence of the Convention are one with our College, and to the College we must ever look for directing intelligence and control. Our pulpits, as well as our pews, in very large part, have been supplied by the classrooms and laboratory of Elon College. It is essential to our Convention life, prestige, power.

Then, through Missions, the Convention grows—lengthens its cords—strengthens its status, increases its members and resources. Plant a church through missionary efforts, and you have made accessible additional resources. The Convention grows in numbers only in proportion to its missionary expression and activity. And through foreign missions the church expresses and engenders its spiritual life and resources. Missions must be supported if the Convention is to live and grow.

Then the Orphanage. Through this the Convention expresses its benevolent spirit, and shows its regard for charity. Intelligence is not enough; spirit, reality and growth are not enough. Love for the poor and needy must express itself. The sense of benevolence, the disposition to charity, expresses itself in its Orphanage. The Orphanage is essential to the Convention in its expression of benevolence, as its deed of charity.

And then the Church paper is necessary to one and all of the Convention interests and enterprises. Through the Church paper we integrate our Church life and activity, and through its columns learn our lessons of moral and spiritual attempts and achievements. Through this medium our homes are enlightened and edified, our institutions are revealed and exemplified, and our families are instructed and advised in all that is best in Church, life and the Kingdom.

Now these four enterprises call us out of their need. They are indispensable in themselves and as agencies for our blessing and benefit. Bank failures, business depression, economic conditions have put all these enterprises to great disadvantage and inconvenience. Shall we now deny our selves that the Kingdom of our Lord may be built up and his name glorified in the earth? J. O. A.

THE CHURCH PAPER AND CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

No organization prospers without an organ to make known its principles and report its work. Without a paper, members would know little of their organization or of one another. It is the medium through which unity is maintained and work is carried on. The Church paper is not only the medium through which interest is created and co-operation in work is developed, but it is the expression of the purposes and plans of the denomination. The Christian Church issued the first Religious Paper, and since that time all denominations print their church organs. Such papers are essential to the life and service of the Church.

The church paper is not only a great help to the Church, as an organization, but it is of equal value to the individual church members. No members can be his or her best member who does not read the church paper. And it is equally important that the church paper come into the family. No family can be what it professes to be, and what it wants to be without the Church paper. It costs less for what it is worth than anything that comes into the home. It contains nothing but wholesome reading matter, has no doubtful information and cultivates clean thinking, clean conversation, and virtuous living. Nothing comes into a Christian home of more value than the church paper. People who read the church paper attend Sunday school and church and support the cause by contributions and service, because they keep posted as to work and needs of the Church. Imagine a preacher who does not read his church paper and does not have it come into his home.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, published in Richmond, Va., by the Central Publishing Company, 1536 East Broad Street, is the church paper of the Southern Christian Convention. The price per copy for a year is $2.00. That means that it costs only 4 cents a week. A young girl reported to me the other day that she had collected $18.00 on back pay for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and she seemed to be proud that she had succeeded in doing it. Other girls were out at the same time in doing the same kind of work. If you are a subscriber and a reader of the SUN, please show it to some other member and ask that person to subscribe.

TURKISH PAPER GIVES GREECE ADVICE.

An interesting paragraph appeared not long ago in a Turkish daily newspaper: "It appears that great demonstrations have taken place in Athens in favor of the annexation of Cyprus to Greece," runs the bit, and that the Greeks are shouting 'Cyprus or death.' As we have now become friends, let the Greeks allow me to give them a bit of advice; stop this sort of shouting. There was a time when we ourselves were likewise shouting 'Crete or death'—but it did no good. We lost not only Crete, but all of European Turkey besides—and in spite of that, we are not dead yet."

IMPRESSIONS BY THE WAY.

So much has been written concerning the European countries that one hesitates to express any convictions relative to their condition. There are no burning religious issues stirring their souls, except in Russia, and we did not go to Russia. Religion is taken for granted in European countries, just like the weather, and that is the sad part about it. To paraphrase Goldsmith—"Ill fares the nations to hastening ills a prey, where civilization flourishes and vital religion decays." And yet in staid old Westminster Abbey in a sermon we heard the most heartening spiritual utterance of our sixteen weeks and a day abroad. "To be a Christian today is not to look forward to a blissful paradise, but to choose the right side in pandemonium." This exhilarating spiritual tonic however but serves to exhibit in depressing barrenness the all-surrounding desert of religious apathy—apathy of thought and apathy of life. Formalized worship, devout reverence, there is in plenty, but religion in the service of brotherhood, religion as a social program crusading for the Kingdom of God on earth—well it is not there.

The situation is well summed up in two statements—one by the apostolic of the Orthodox Armenian Gregorian Church, a man of lowly character. In our interview I had complimented the abiding qualities of the ancient Church and declared what an inspiration its sacrifices and sufferings through the centuries had been to the Churches of the West. He smiled most benignantly and gratefully. I then ventured to ask what were the most significant trends in the ancient church in the realm of religious education. "We are giving our village priests a thorough training for their work," he replied and then added: "They will know the history, dogmas, hymns, and rituals of the Church and their meanings as never before." I pressed him further and asked specifically: "But, your majesty, that is how you must address an apostolic, what is being done to insure Christian character in the people? Is there no teaching respecting our Christian obligations in social living?" He became excited. He talked rapidly and under great emotion. My interpreter said that the great churchman quit thinking and began making a speech. The substance of his outburst was that social programs are an impertinence and that, when people grow up in the worship of the Church, everything will be all right. This is the view too of the Greek Orthodox Church.

The second statement came from a Roman Catholic layman—a distinguished international lawyer. We were talking of the educational policies of the New Italy, and there is no discounting the theory on which Italy's reorganization program for her schools rests. He is a director of the University of Florence and of the International Education Society. He is particularly interested in how America and Italy may together work out educational problems. It was a pleasure and a profit to talk to such a man. Toward the end of our two-hour interview, I asked about religious education. "We would not think of allowing our children to grow up ignorant of their religion—our religion—the Catholic religion," he instantly replied, with an emotion rarely displayed by a man in such a station. "But how do you educate your children in religion?" I ventured to insist. "We teach them the history and ritual of our faith," he said. Italy is forging ahead under the strong hand of the great Mussolini, whose slogan "For the honor of Italy," enables him to enlist the populace in his programs of reform—but its progress is exterior, superimposed, man-made. It does not spring from nor does it utilize the spiritual resources of the people. There is religion everywhere, but a depressing dearth of religious program—a description that applies not only to Italy, but to France, Germany, Jugo-Slavia, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales with equal accuracy. Even the great day of prayer for the approaching World Disarmament Conference held on December 15th, in historic St. Paul's Cathedral, London, when the Archbishop of Canterbury preached while the representatives of royalty and the state as well as thousands of ordinary people listened, impressed you most of all as a great pageant with an almost complete absence of those spiritual yearnings we are accustomed to associate with such occasions. Printed prayers simply do not stir the soul to action. Accuracy in expression may end in vacuity of program. Not only "may," but Europe's present state of spiritual depression, far more serious than her economic depression, clearly demonstrates that it actually does."

I am indebted to Mrs. Harper for an expression that certainly characterizes all these countries, especially including Greece and the Near East where our chief interest as "special representatives" of the American Board lay—they are one and all "efficient in leisure." The siesta established by law in some countries and sanctioned by custom in others, is a real institution among these peoples. They simply do not understand how we live so strenuously in America. A very intelligent English merchant, a university man and brother-in-law to an Oxford master, ventured to prophesy that ere long we would "break under the terrific strain of such steady application." And so stores open late and close early and provide Saturday half-holidays and some times additional ones on other days of the week. A grasping employer cannot deprive his servants of these "calm places" in the work-program of the week, because the law makes it illegal to do so in not a few countries. And then many of them as individuals are skilled in using their leisure in cultural avocations. We can learn something from the Old World at these points. We are proficient in production and have made leisure possible for our masses as well as our classes by our marvelous mechanical achievements, but we have not learned to be efficient in appropriating leisure nor in its enjoyment. When we are through working in America, we descend into the grave. We have no beautiful twilight period of life profitably devoted to cultural embellishments. The sun of our living sets with precision and the night of death crowds the twilight out. And yet I must confess that I prefer the American skyscraper and industrial smoke-stack to the pyramids and obelisks of these ancient lands.

The Old World lacks the security that accompanies our much-berated American materialism. To them we are the fabled land of dollars and so often the helpless tourist feels that he is being penalized financially because of the land of his nativity revealed by his accent or his passport. One cartoon we shall never forget. It was entitled, "The Land With Golden Streets." In the foreground marched President Hoover as band director, his countenance wreathed with smiles. On one side strode the Senate playing a trombone entitled "High Tariff." On the other walked the House of Representatives playing a cornet entitled "Foreign Investments." To the rear stood a massive structure labelled "The Federal Reserve Bank," and behind marched the populace all smiles and jollity. And yet these peoples love America and they treat Americans with every consideration. We have been the recipients of almost numberless little courtesies in all the lands we visited just because the people wanted us to know they appreciate and love America. Our people spend money with them freely and they, therefore, do not hate us for our material prosperity. They realize that we have beaten them at the game and they are good losers. Slyly they hope yet to win. At any rate we Americans appreciate the beguiling manner in which these people greet us and separate us from our coin—painless financial dentistry, I would call it.

An outstanding element in all their programs is nationalism—intense nationalism, fanatical almost at times. "Buy British," is a typical slogan. "Spend your vacation at home and so help the exchange rate," is met with on every hand. Self-sufficiency, the very opposite of brotherhood in social, economic, and political life, underlies all their programizing. The League of Nations is a good political stage across which the several national grandees may strut and air their sentiments or poses, but a different spirit animates the market-places and the national bourses or stock exchanges. Religion has been crowded out of the political arena and the baser element of self-interest dominates inter-relational action there. Tariff walls will not bring international prosperity. The way of a world organized around the principle of brotherhood in the service of mankind. Disarmament Conferences will be fruitless so long as fear, so long as selfishness, rules the council chambers of the nations in their political attitudes the one toward the other. There is but one avenue of racial happiness and human prosperity open to us—the way of Jesus, the way of love,

And with this thought—comforting thought—we bring the story of our travels to a close, grateful to God for His preserving watchcare over us, to the generous friend who made the journey possible for us, to the American Board officials and missionaries in so many lands and places whose wise planning and sympathetic counsel made it so much more enjoyable and meaningful to us, and turn our faces and our hearts to that land of the Western Sun, the land of our nativity, the land of our devoted affection, there to take up our part in making America not only the land of the brave and the home of the free, but the blest dwelling place of those who seek the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, where may His Kingdom truly come and His will be fully done.

DOUBLE-YOU.

We like the signature which the editor has placed at the end of these little articles, for it has such a wealth of meaning and no one individual can lay claim to the authorship. When spelled out we get more of the significance of the little letter; doubleyou includes you and me as we work in the vineyard of our Lord. He also is included and his power vibrates in and through and over all. Some do not like to hear the word "we" used in public speaking but when we consider the Apostle Paul's words, "None of us liveth to himself," we can realize that those around us have a part in what we do or say. We admired the way in which Colonel Lindberg spoke of his trip across the Atlantic, using the word "we". He included an inanimate object in his "we", so why should we not include those around us instead of ourselves alone? We are not independent of our fellowmen whatsoever we may attempt to do and as the little articles over this signature come to our mind through the guidance of the Holy Spirit, incidents in the lives of others are woven into them and "only the thread that binds them is ours." Yet, the thread is not ours alone, but comes from the loom of the Master Spinner. The poet, Longfellow, has likened us to ships that pass in the night which greet one another; we need the look and the voice of those around us to encourage and spur us on toward the goal that has been set before us by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, his visible presence. Some one has said, "God saves us singly, but He doesn't leave us to live singly." The Christian life is essentially one to be lived out with others.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Elon College needs the financial support of the Christian Church as never before. The College plant cost one million and a half, but the debt is about a half million dollars. That means, if the debts were paid, the College would be worth in actual cost one million dollars. The people who gave large sums of money while the buildings were in course of construction, are not giving now; in fact, two of them have passed away; but the buildings are there, the title is in the Board of Trustees for the Christian Church, and the Church must carry on the good work which has been so well done for forty years.

If you put out of the church the splendid churches that have been built, and the pastors that have led in the great work, as the fruit of Elon College, you would hardly recognize the Southern Christian Convention. You can hardly think of a prominent church in the Southern Christian Convention whose pastor is not a graduate of Elon College. The college has grown into a necessity for training preachers and lay-workers in the Church. In all of the churches Sunday school teachers and leaders came from Elon; and they are increasing all the time. It is, therefore, not only important, but obligatory, upon the members of the churches composing the Southern Christian Convention, to make contributions in money to pay the faculty for their loyal and faithful service in these times when money did not come in, in sufficient sums, to meet current expenses and unpaid bills. On thing should be kept in mind, that dollars are composed of pennies and dimes, and large sums may be composed of small contributions. No member should feel embarrassed in giving small sums, but keep in mind that "there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing." And Jesus said unto his disciples that, "this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury." (Mark 12:42,43). If church members would keep this teaching of Jesus in mind, it would increase regular giving into the church treasury, and increase special offerings. Duty does not require what we want to do, but what we can do.

To raise fifty thousand dollars looks like a big undertaking; and it is, if only small numbers contribute; but if all take part it will not be such a difficult task. If the members have faith in God, in the Church, and the College, and then they go to work, great results will follow. Any thought of Elon closing indicates weak faith and hesitation in work. "With men (alone) this is impossible; but with God all things are possible." (Matt. 19:26.) "With God nothing shall be impossible." (Luke 1:37.) What the Church needs is to take God in this effort to raise money for Elon College. A few men of the church started Elon College without money but with faith and courage to establish a Christian College; and God crowned their efforts with success; and now a new demand is upon the Church to work it out of debt and increase the efficiency of the Institution and continue its growth and usefulness. Doubt and failure to work never make progress; and faith and courageous work never fail. An army that never marches to battle never wins; but the righteous cause supported by self-surrender and devoted work wins in the end. Jesus gave His life, but the work went on.

HENDERSON.

Tuesday evening, January 4th, following our arrival at the parsonage, a reception for the new pastor and his family was held at the church.

This reception was sponsored by the ladies of the church, with every department of the church and Sunday school participating.

The program was a very delightful one and was held in the main auditorium of the church. Short, but impressive, addresses of welcome were made by those representing every enterprise of our church activities. Included in the program was special music, songs and recitations.

A social hour was an important feature of the occasion. This was held in the auditorium of the Sunday school, where the large congregation of friends and members of the church enjoyed delicious refreshments prepared by the ladies. Everybody seemed to have a good time. The deacons were called upon for "stunts" of various kinds, which amused the audience very much.

As a final act, the pastor was handed a ball of twine and told to follow where the unseen end of it might lead, stating that it might lead to rainbow's end and result in the finding of a pot of gold. Our hostess reminded us that in case we did not find the pot of gold, to take possession of whatever we should find.

Unwilling to travel this alone, we summoned our wife an d requested her to lead the way as we followed, winding the ball of yarn. We set forth upon our unknown journey, thinking we were merely taking part in the program, and were doing a "stunt" for the amusement of the audience. The tiny thread led us into the church auditorium, via the pulpit, again through the Sunday school auditorium and from one room to another until at last we reached one room where we discovered a rainbow, the end of which seemed to rest upon a large table before us. This table was covered and piled high with good things to eat, such as flour, sugar, coffee, lard, eggs, milk, meal potatoes, syrup, canned fruits, preserves and many articles of food.

Words failed us to express the gratitude of heart for such a bountiful blessing when we were asked to speak.

Now, after sitting up until a late hour, going through all the packages and making an inventory of our newly acquired possessions, we are yet unable to command words that will fully express our gratitude and thanks for the generous remembrance of our good people.

Only a few days ago, we said goodbye to dear friends, with whom we had labored in Kingdom service. All of them meant much to us. Many of them, by reason of close contact in the work, seemed to have become a part of our own lives. Their loyalty and devotion will never be forgotten. Turning our faces to a new field of service, our hearts were sad because of the severance of ties most tender. We realized that we were facing a new task and with people, whom as yet, we were unacquainted.

Now, the ice has been broken, and we find in our new location not the strangers we had expected but friends; friends like those we left behind, loyal to the Kingdom, kind indeed to the pastor.

We thank God for such a delightful people, with whom we may labor in the cause of Christ. We face the task with hearts made lighter and more determined by reason of our recent happy experience.

Since we began our work here, the church has taken on new life, congregations increasing in number, with every enterprise of the church launching a campaign for a larger service.

We expect great things from God this year in spite of all hindrances and pray that our Henderson church may prosper and become one of our strong forces for the Master's Kingdom. Pray for us.

A DELIGHTFUL OCCASION.

The Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Gregory was celebrated at their home, West End, Virgilina, Va., on Sunday, December 13, 1931. More than sixty members of the family and friends were present. There were guests from New York, Durham, Zebulun, Pittsboro, Palmer Springs, South Boston and other places. The sons present were: J. M. Gregory, of Pittsboro, N. C.; E. S. Gregory, of New York City; Len Gregory, of Virgilina, Va. The daughters: Mrs. Emerson King, of South Boston, Va.; Mrs. Dixie Davis, of Oxford, N. C.; and Mrs. William Scarboro, of Raleigh, N. C.. There were also present six grandchildren: Charles, Gregory, Thomas, Nell, Paul and Dorothy Davis.

All present declared the occasion to have been a most delightful one. Home seemed happier to Mr. and Mrs. Gregory, and why should it not, after fifty years of companionship in the home from which have gone three noble Christian men, and four daughters to preside over the homes of humble and successful business and professional men.

The home was beautifully decorated with holly, cedar and potted plants. The dinner could not be surpassed, either in quality or the manner in which it was served. No guest had occasion to be happier than the writer, whose delightful privilege it has been to be the pastor of the family for twenty-five years. May God's blessing attend Brother and Sister Gregory in giving them many years of continued usefulness and happiness.

EURE'S.

It is a pleasure to report that we are making splendid progress at Eure's Christian Church, Eure, N. C. Unity prevails among the members and a sweet and delightful fellowship exists between pastor and people.

Our wide-awake pastor, Rev. E. B. White, Windsor, Va., is a man of high character and an excellent preacher, and a capable leader.

He is held in high esteem by the entire community. We have large crowds each preaching day.

The Sunday school, under the able supervision of Mr. T. A. Eure and his loyal helpers, is doing a most splendid work.

The Ladies Aid Society, directed by Mrs. Mary F. Eure, is doing great things for the church in a social and financial way.

Our Christmas entertainment was a great success. It was a pleasure to have our pastor and his fine family with us.

MRS. W. B. ALEXANDER.

POUNDING.

The good people of Pleasant Ridge Christian Church visited their pastor's home on the night of December 23rd, while he was away, and loaded down his table with the largest pounding he ever received—just the things we need each day—flour, sugar, coffee, lard, eggs, sweet and Irish potatoes, pumpkins, apples, peas, several cans of fruit, molasses, rice, pound cakes and a dressed hen for our Christmas dinner.

May the good Lord bless each one for their gift, and may the New Year bring joy and happiness to their lives.

THE FLAG OF THE CROSS.

By H. H. SMITH.

Many of our readers—but perhaps not all—are acquainted with the following naval custom: "There is but one flag, and but one in the world, which can fly above the Stars and Stripes. That is the flag of the Christian Cross—a white cross on a blue field—which is flown every Sabbath morning on shipboard at the hour of divine service. The national standard comes down; the flag of the Cross goes up the halyards, and the Stars and Stripes ascend again to a place just beneath the emblem of worship."

Our sailors and soldiers are taught great veneration for the Stars and Stripes, and this custom of elevating the flag of the Cross above the flag of the country has no doubt impressed them with the incomparable value of the religious truths for which the Cross stands.

The Cross stands for justice and good will toward all mankind, and the daily practice of the golden rule. The observance of these tenets of the Christian faith by all nations would mean the abolishment of war from the earth. The recent trouble in Manchuria has revealed a fine spirit among the Chinese and Japanese Christians of the countries involved. A telegram sent by the Federation of Chinese Churches of Peiping to the National Christian Council of Japan says: "Whole Chinese nation greatly disturbed by present Manchurian situation. Chinese Christians appeal to Christians of Japan to make common cause advocating that their respective governments take peaceful means to settle Chinese-Japanese questions, preserving friendship between two neighboring peoples."

Let China and Japan become thoroughly Christian and war between them would be impossible. The same would be true of every other country. Wars have occurred because even the most moral and religious countries of the world have not always acted toward each other in a thoroughly Christian manner. These Chinese and Japanese Christians give every evidence of being true Christians then, in such a trying crisis, they make an urgent appeal that "peaceful means" be employed to settle the vexing questions. This is the spirit of Christianity.

The flag of the Cross stands for the sacredness of man—every man. A thoughtful writer has said: "Jesus brought the idea of the sacredness of man to the world when He became man; He exalted humanity. Tacitus tells us that because a slave killed his master, 600 innocent slaves were killed. Plutarch says Flaminus put a slave to death for the entertainment of his friend who had never witnessed a death scene, and Pollio, the stoic, fed his fishes with the limbs of his slaves."

Westminster Abbey holds the dust of a man whom England delighted to honor, because he believed in the sacredness of man—even the African savage. It is not solely as an explorer or geographer that England honored David Livingstone. His zeal and sacrificial labors in behalf of the oppressed savages of the Dark Continent, who were hunted like wild beasts and sold into the most barbaric forms of slavery, touched the hearts of his countrymen. In every African native, however vile or degraded in the sight of civilized man, Livingstone saw a brother man. There is no puzzle as to why this man of such eminent talents sacrificed his life for the benighted tribes of Africa. He knew Jesus Christ and all that the Cross stands for. "I am a missionary, heart and soul," he said. "God had an only Son and He was a missionary and physician. A poor, poor imitation of Him I am, or wish to be. In this service I hope to live; in it I wish to die."

Let us pray that "the flag of the Cross may fly above the flags of all nations, and that He whose conquering sign it is, may rule the earth."

NOT A SLACKER.

In order that CHRISTIAN SUN readers may know that I am not a slacker, I am calling their attention to some of the things that I have been prayerfully and unreservedly, trying to do. For sixteen years, I served as principal and superintendent of some of North Carolina's leading high schools and I feel, until this day, that no man ever had a student body, of nearly five thousand, who had higher ideals and more worthy objectives. Hundreds of them are now filling some of the most responsible positions in this and other States; and I thank God for the opportunity that these years afforded me in building Christian character for the Master's use, but it was in these sixteen years, more than elsewhere, that I became deeply conscious of the fact that much of the country's best talent (salt of the earth) was being overlooked and passed by, without a chance; and for some cause God had placed it on my heart to help these deserving boys and girls, who are yearning for a chance to find their way into some Christian institution of learning where they might prepare themselves for the high calling of Christian service. Most assuredly, it is a pleasant work, but try it, then you'll see it's a real job, and one that I am not big enough to fill. However, I have been blessed, year after year, to help a good number to find their way into institutions of learning, places for manual training and into environments where life for the future is more hopeful. At present, I have several that I am trying, by the help of good friends, to tide over these financial straits, but it is keeping me at the end of my wits. My last obligation was to a deserving little Methodist girl in her tenth grade, who had to drop her music in the Fall because of the death of her father, but knowing the staunch friendship that existed between her faithful father and myself, came to me a few weeks ago for some suggestions as to how she might again resume her work in the study of music. I find that the surest way is to trust, and work while we pray.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Blessed Creator, Ruler of the nations, sin is rampant and souls are being tried. At this time when for each of us the New Year embraces a new chance, we pray Thee relieve economic pressure, equalize opportunity to earn, rid men's minds of evil plotting. Thou Who carest for men's needs, give to Thy representatives serious concern for the character of men's deeds. Put more conscience and care into civil leadership. And strengthen, Father, the Christian's purpose and promise to keep close to the path of Jesus' earthly tread—the only path that is safe for salvation. For Jesus' sake. Amen. L.

FROM THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Cagayan, Misamis, P. I.,
November 11, 1931.

Dear Home Folks:

This afternoon I have been getting Christmas packages ready. But somehow it is hard to work up any enthusiasm when the thermometer stays around 85 and everything outside is green and blossoming. But one good thing about Christmas in the tropics, it lasts a long time because we have to get ready two months ahead and then our friends at home, not realizing it takes at least six weeks for mail to reach us, send us belated greeting sometimes even in February.

Dr. White had to make another trip to Manila so baby and I are alone. One of the Americans at the pineapple plantation required a very big operation, which could not be undertaken here for lack of instruments. As the patient was quite ill they wired a specialist in Manila to come by aeroplane, but that could not be done as a typhoon was raging near Manila. And as the regular Sunday boat from Cagayan takes five days to get there they had to get a special boat to stop which would go direct. I certainly hope they reach there before anything happens. One of their men died here this year of a very rare disease, the only case reported in the Philippines. It is doubly hard when things like this happen out here where one is away from home and friends. I sat up all night with the young wife and tried to comfort her. We had a fatal case this week also. A school boy from another province was brought in dying of blood poisoning caused by an abscessed tooth. The strange thing was the brother of the boy who came with him, asked Dr. White if they could have the witch doctor come see the boy. He said, "I do not have faith in witch doctors myself, but our relatives think the boy has been bewitched and I want to try everything." It is still a custom in this province to make "pomohut" (offerings they burn when there is illness in the family, to keep the evil spirits away). However, the witch doctor did not come.

I have a beautiful orchid hanging here in my dining room which is in full bloom. One of our friends here has more than 1,000 plants in a small greenhouse they have made. It is an interesting hobby, collecting orchids, as there are over 800 varieties in the Philippine Islands. Well, there is one thing we have which reminds me of Christmas—the poinsettias in our yard are 15 to 20 feet high and just turning red. We have them on two sides of the hospital also. They will be glorious by Christmas. How I would like to see the shop windows and all the Christmas decorations and the busy shoppers rushing about everywhere. Our hearts turn towards home more at this time and Thanksgiving than any other. We miss the family gatherings and the good things to eat.

May your hearts be full of kind thoughts and good cheer as you approach the glad Christmas season.

Sincerely,
RITA WHITE.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS.

A splendid Thanksgiving program was given at Liberty Spring Church, on the 4th Sunday night in November, 1931, as follows:

Music by orchestra; responsive reading by the women of the Missionary Society; prayer by Mrs. J. L. Byrd; solo by Dr. I. W. Johnson; "A Dramatization of Freedom": Mr. Roy, Mr. I. T. Byrd; Mrs. Roy, Mrs. Nat Byrd; Gopal Roy (their son), Forest Rawles; Nalini Roy (their daughter), Ruby Rawles; Nanda Lal (Nalini's betrothed), James Barnes; Appaji (young friend of Gopal's), Wesley Harrell. This was a story of India's youth and their problems of family, school and nation. Duet, "Follow the Gleam," by Misses Lula Lee Baker and Ursula Eason; reading, by Mrs. I. W. Johnson; prayer by the pastor; quartette, by Messrs. Nat Byrd, Joel Harrell, Edward Harrell and I. W. Johnson; free-will offering—music by the orchestra; benediction by the pastor.

MILD INOCULATION.

A woman missionary was traveling in a bus in Japan. A passenger, Japanese, remarked that she was pretty young to be alone. The young woman informed him that she was well into her thirties. He turned to another traveler and said, "That's the way with the Christians—they are not afraid of death and so they always look young." A prominent, successful Japanese school head asked a Christian teacher why he always looked so unworried and peaceful. "I want facts, not speculation," he said, "I want peace of mind. How can I secure it?" He saw in the face of the poor Christian schoolmaster what he lacked. Some in America, says Miss Edith Curtis of Osaka, believe honestly that offering Christianity to other peoples is an infringement of their racial and national rights. "I wonder," she adds, "if they realize what other religions have done, or have not done, for people and how by degrees non-Christians are seeing the peace and joy that comes into the lives of those who know Jesus." Is America inoculated so thoroughly as E. Stanley Jones says, "with a mild form of Christianity that the real thing won't take?" Some of the missionaries fear the inoculation has proceeded dangerously far.

TOO CROWDED FOR THE COWS.

"Come in!" said a sweet voice, as Rev. Leland W. Mann, of Otaru, Japan, knocked at the door of a granary after ploughing through three miles of four-foot snow and entering a barn where a dozen cows munched placidly. In a little room lived a young married couple and baby. Five years before they had saved, after hard labor, enough to buy land and five cows. Then they built a barn and silo. This they accomplished without going into debt. Debts haunt the Japanese. There was nothing to build a house with so they decided to live in the grain room. Pointing out of the small window to a pile of lumber on the hillside the young wife said proudly, "On Monday we are to have our house-raising and we have not gone into debt at all." Then, as Mr. Mann congratulated her, she added: "We will be happy to move into our new home—it has been so crowded here for the cows!" Such is the spirit of the young Japanese farmer.

SO AFRAID; SHE JUST DIED.

A small girl in the Criminal Tribes School at Sholapur, India, sat weeping quietly by the teacher's side. "My sister has died and they have taken her away," she sobbed. "What caused her death?" asked the teacher. "She was SO afraid, she JUST DIED," came the pitiful answer. Cholera is rampant in spite of the missionaries' efforts to teach the people cleanliness. Fear was everywhere. "When the children come to school they lose some of their fears but when they go back among their elders in the huts they find it hard to persuade themselves that the darkness does not hold some evil personage that will 'get them'," says Miss Ella H. Hoxie. "We are trying to make real the presence of One who can cast out fear for them. The children, bless them, understand better than their parents. However, it is true again and again that the child often pulls the parents along with them."

QUESTIONS SUPREMACY OF ANTI-LIQUOR WOMEN.

Commenting on the charge of Mrs. Charles H. Sabine, the president of the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, that the wet organization has more members than the Women's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, makes the following statement:

"The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform endeavors to magnify its importance by claiming it has enrolled more members in some states than the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Suppose it has. All the dry women are not members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union; but it seems that all the wet women are in one group.

"The Women's Christian Temperance Union is only one of the bona fide organizations committed to the observance and support of the Eighteenth Amendment. We find standing with us the Women's Missionary societies; the Federation of Women's Clubs; the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Women's enforcement organizations. These organizations contain more than 12,000,000 women, who by resolution and conviction are supporting the Eighteenth Amendment.

"In addition, the National Education Association—the large majority of whose members are women—by resolution and conviction favors law enforcement and is conducting an active campaign in support of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform spends huge sums of money. It is reported that as much as a quarter of a million dollars is available for its work in a single Southern State. Yet this organization asks no dues and makes no financial report.

"Where do they get it?

"The Association against Prohibition Amendment, supported mainly by seven millionaires, says it no longer takes money from the brewers and distillers. It denies receiving the money the European liquor interests claim they spend in the United States.

"Can it be that the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform is the beneficiary of these funds, refused by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, but which have been spent so lavishly in the past in opposition to every effort to restrict or curtail the liquor traffic?

"As for women and prohibition, as long as the Nineteenth Amendment stands the Eighteenth Amendment will stand also."

Many organizations now supporting the Eighteenth Amendment were pioneers in the demand for constitutional prohibition, when the wet argument was carried on by the Retail Liquor Dealers Association and the United States Brewers' Association. The church denominations represented by various commissions in the conference of organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment comprise 20,000,000 Americans.

It should be remembered that the Women's Christian Temperance Union is organized in nearly 10,000 local communities, and that its membership today is more than double its membership in the twenty years that Frances Willard achieved her great results. The Women's Christian Temperance Union educational program today is reaching ten times as many students as it ever reached in the height of the saloon era.

In the Hopewell Christian Church there are a number of members of the two local W. C. T. U's, and the report of their work last year was a showing of a vast deal of activity.

Every S. S. Superintendent in Prince George County was reached with helps for his teachers.

Evangelistic work was done in both local jail and Federal prison at Camp Lee.

This county was awarded two banners for excelling in work in the departments of Social Morality and Publicity. Mrs. W. A. Starner of the Hopewell Church is president of the Florence Duke Union, and the church welcomes these temperance workers often for both business meetings and public ones. The last was November 2, 1930, known as Virginia Day, the 15th anniversary of Statewide prohibition in Virginia.

GOSSIP INCORPORATED.

Women have had the credit of being the best news purveyors and with some reason in the past, in that they deserved the credit for the sacred gossip of the Church Sewing Society. They were outdone, however, by the masculine type around the base-burner stove in the country store where leaders of political thought won the blue ribbon for their brand of profane gossip.

Gossip may be defined as tattling or scandal, although the word has a good heritage.

A tidal wave of gossip is now sweeping our country, vast in volume, unreliable in authority, cruel and deadly in attacks on people who stand for the Constitution and the law and are opposed to the return of the legalized liquor traffic. We can insure our lives and our property. Unfortunately we cannot insure character against this sort of gossip.

We are led to look for the sources of this outpouring which has perverted the mind and destroyed the thinking of the American public.

A brilliant journalist in Scribner's has pointed out the source and motive and given the name of the leader in Washington who, for a $25,000 salary, provides the press of the country and the world with supplies of fresh propaganda. It is issued to break down the morale of those courageous enough to stand against the return of the liquor traffic which the Eighteenth Amendment forbids, and is intended to assist the political forces back of this movement. This heavily financed enterprise sends out its packages to the press in this and other lands on a sort of chain-store basis. It is a powerful agency in breaking down respect for law, in increasing crime and in injuring the reputation of this country among other nations.

In the Congressional Record of the Caraway Senate investigation it appeared that the financiers back of this effort, which includes the outlawed brewers eager to regain their traffic, are equally anxious to be rid of their cumbersome income taxes. One of these declared, according to the Record, "If the tax on beer could return the workingmen would gladly pay it and we should be released from our income taxes." Mr. Irene Dupont stated it would remove a ten-million-dollar tax on one of his corporations.

It is interesting to find a certain group of organized Labor naively proposing to cooperate with these capitalists to bring back these taxes which would amount to a billion, three hundred million dollars annually for Labor to pay. In this organization, privileged people are employed at large salaries, those who carry on the business for "gossip incorporated." They give no authority for their statements. There is none for most of them. Yet they have access to the front page of the city press and there is no opportunity to reply effectively to this organized group.

EDDY STIRS UP YOUNG CHINA.

Young China hardly needs stirring up in one sense, but Rev. Sherwood Eddy in his meetings has been creating some new thinking. At Fochow College, Rev. Ralph R. Shrader reports 58 boys who wish to become Christians and 66 who want to study Christianity. Everywhere he made a deep impression. The burden of his message was: "If you want to save China develop character. Either Christianity or Communism is going to capture China. Get rid of corruption in official life and learn to cooperate." Mr. Eddy addressed Government officials as well as students.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

JANUARY AND ONWARD!

By LUCY M. ELDRIDGE.

This column is given for the wide-awake young people's groups who are seeking material for emphasizing the important issues before youth today. Clip it for your future reference. You must choose what to do now and what later, of course, but every item is important and demands your serious consideration and planning.

World Peace.

In less than a month the World Disarmament Conference will be in session. Send to the National Council for Prevention of War, 532 17th Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., for free information about it. For 15c they will send out "Disarmament Poster Program," with four striking posters, and a talk to go with each of them. For 25c they will send a booklet, "The Issues of the General Disarmament Conference." Study the issues. Send your petition to President Hoover. Create peace sentiment.

Prohibition.

What is the "Truth About Prohibition?" Here is a question to challenge your best effort to discover the answer. "The Truth About Prohibition" (5c from Christian Education Department); "Youth Seeks the Truth About the Liquor Problem" (10c); "Prohibition" (25c), will give you information and plans for a number of interesting discussions of this theme. Magazines and newspapers will give further information. Do not be satisfied with less than the truth.

World Friendship.

"Christianity and the Rural Life of the World" is the theme for mission study this year. You will be interested in "The Rural Billion," McConnell (60c) and "God and the Census," by McLean (60c). Or for younger boys and girls (Intermediates) "Treasures in the Earth," Hamlin (75c) and "The Adventures of Mr. Friend," Hunting (75c), are fascinating. "The Church and the World's Farmers," by Mary Jenness (35c), has suggestions for six missionary programs, with discussion, activities, devotional programs and all. "The Envelope Series," (a quarterly at 10c a year), gives splendid program helps. You also need our church papers, "The Missionary Herald" and "The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty," with THE CHRISTIAN SUN to keep you up to the minute.

Leading Up to Easter.

Many churches have an evangelistic emphasis, and it is surely a fine time to help young people to think seriously about what it means to be a Christian and how the church gives you an opportunity to make your life count for Christ and His Kingdom. The Holiday Conference considered this and worked out some practical plans. Send for a copy of the report of this meeting (Lucy M. Eldredge, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, will send it to you). You will also find here helps on other phases of all-around youth program.

Young People's Week.

January 31st to February 7th is known as "Young People's Week," or "Christian Endeavor "Young People's Week" or "Christian Endeavor Week" in many churches. The purpose is to attract the attention of church officers and adults to the younger people, to create new interest in young people's work, and to create enthusiasm for the things you can do in your own church and community while you learn more about young people's work in your denomination. Here are some possibilities for the week for which you should plan well and at once, choosing the program features which will mean most to you and your group.

January 31. Denominational Day. Special church service in charge of young people. Theme: "Christ in and Through Us."

February 1. Meetings of Executive Committee and special committees to consider your young people's program for the next six months. If there is no youth organization in the church, this is an excellent time to get together and talk about it. Send for suggestions for such a meeting.

February 2. Personal consideration of Christian living. Throughout the day let all young people seek to consider how Christ may live through them in work, in school, in the home, or in contacts with their companions. It would be especially helpful if each person tried to go through the entire day saying only good things about people, making only those comments which would be helpful, and saying nothing at all if good could not be spoken. This day should not close without some definite decision being made to let Christ work more fully in some phase of daily living.

If desired the young people may meet in small groups in various homes for reading through some portions of The Gospel According to John, such as chapters 14 to 17; Eph. chapter 4; Col. chapter 2; and for special prayer that the spirit of Christ may be given full opportunity to operate in and through the young people of the church.

February 3 or 4. It is recommended that the young people be given responsibility for the mid-week prayer meeting. An appropriate worship service should be planned and the rest of the time may be given to carrying out the following suggestions:

Arrange to have read the entire Sermon on the Mount, as recorded in Matt., chapters 5 to 7. Use as the theme for this part of the service "What Would Really Happen if Christ Lived and Moved in Us and Through Us?"

Have one young person read Matt., chapter 5, and then pause long enough to consider what the results would be if we tried to carry out the teachings of Jesus found in this chapter. It might be well to list on a blackboard the results suggested. If sufficient time remains have chapters 6 and 7 read, following each with a similar consideration.

February 5. This evening may be given over to a social or a party either for all the young people of the congregation or for both young people and adults.

February 7. Many churches will wish to use the program suggested by the International Society of Christian Endeavor, given in the December 1st issue of The Christian Endeavor World.

Many churches may wish to give a special offering at these youth services for some phase of young people's work or missionary endeavor. If your Congress has a project in which you have a share this is a good time to receive gifts toward it. Summer Schools are coming and a fund may be started here, to help send representatives.

A special offering toward the benevolent apportionment of your church may be received. If you have not contributed to our denominational young people's work through an offering for Christian Education, this may be the time for that. It is well to have a definite purpose for such a gift at this special service, either Sunday, January 31st or February 7th, or both.

"WHAT LEADERSHIP SHALL WE FOLLOW?"

Scripture Reading: Luke 5:1-11; Mark 10:17-22.

All people are followers. Some may develop powers of leadership in some lines and become leaders. But there are some things in which all of us must follow. It is impossible for one person to be a leader in every line of activity. To be able to recognize the rightful and the true leader will be of great help to all of us.

Many influences command our following today. Throngs crowd our theaters, and our theatres are leading—but to what place? There is the urge for and against Prohibition. Some follow the leadership of one side, some the other. "Hard times," they say, have come upon us. Some agree and mourn about it, others refuse to lose their spirit over the things that rightfully come in second place and continue to follow their Leader.

Jesus Christ has been recognized in every age and by every class of people as the greatest and best leader the world has ever known. Why do we follow this humble Man of Galilee? Is it for fear of punishment by the wrath of God if we do not learn to do his will? No! A thousand times, no. We follow Christ because of what He himself was and is today. Napoleon Bonaparte, one of the greatest soldiers the world has known, said of Christ, "Jesus founded his empire upon love, and to this day millions would die for him."

The business man finds in Christ a supreme leader. Did not Christ challenge business men of his day to leave their money tables and shops and go follow him? Some went because they saw in him a great leader. He was able to show them in a few words how great a privilege they had in devoting their business ability to the work of the Kingdom. Christ needs business men today to consecrate their peculiar powers and abilities to do His work. Some will hear and heed the call of this Leader of men.

Sinners find in Christ the leadership that they want and need. This Man of God, though not a sinner, could give comfort and help to the most despised of outcast sinners. He did not do it by any lowering of his own character. It was the outgoing, sacrificial, saving goodness, from the very heart of the Master that gave to the sinner a new hope and made him see anew the spiritual possibilities for his own life.

Even the stern, moral man find Christ a leader having incomparable virtues. Who was more harsh and commanding than John the Baptist in his dealings with sinners? Imagine him taking children in his arms and blessing them. He did not have the ability to be gentle with sinning women. And yet this moral giant and great preacher said of Christ, "He is mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose."

Consider just one more group of those who admired Christ—his enemies. Even the disciple who betrayed him felt the power of his great leadership and recognized that he had chosen the wrong thing to do. Those who brought him to

JESUS AND THE SAMARITAN WOMAN.

LESSON IV.—JANUARY 24, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 4:9-26.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Christ came into the world to save sinners."—I. Tim. 1:15.

Introduction.

In last Sunday's lesson we saw how a well-to-do member of the Jewish Sanhedrin sought Jesus. He came by night, probably to avoid public disapproval. Today we study Jesus as he seeks to bring light and spiritual life to a despised Samaritan woman; the Good Shepherd seeking a lost sheep.

Jew and Samaritan.

According to the New Testament narratives Jesus as a Jew reared at Nazareth in Galilee. He was traveling from Judea to Galilee but "must needs pass through Samaria" (verse 4). Many Jews, we are told, avoided Samaria and despised its population. The Jews regarded themselves to be purer racially and religiously. They thought Samaritans were a mongrel mixture of renegade Jews with inferior foreigners. The Samaritans traced their ancestry to Jacob through the northern tribes of Israel. Jews traced through the tribe of Judah. Jesus went through Samaria. He would help the Samaritans. Acts 1:8 specifies Samaria as a link in the world expanding mission of his church.

Friendly, Helpful Acquaintance.

Would that more Christians had the art of friendly, helpful acquaintance with those we meet. Many souls are hungering for real spiritual friendship. Still they often disguise themselves under a flippant, careless exterior. Jesus knew folks and could be a helpful friend. In the heat of the day Jesus sat by the well at Sychar—Jacob's Well, a spot hallowed with ancient traditions for both Jews and Samaritans. While his disciples went to buy food, Jesus waited at the well. A Samaritan woman came to draw water and carry it to her home. Jesus had the art of helpful friendship. He asked for water. The woman answered, "How is it that thou, being a Jew, asked water of me, who am a Samaritan woman?" In Jesus' act of helpful friendship he violated three conventions of an orthodox Jew. He showed friendship with the despised inferior Samaritan. He lowered his dignity by talking in public with a woman. He talked with a woman of questionable reputation.

The advancing Christian movement has rendered obsolete many of the conventions that have fettered womanhood.

The Woman Found a Prophet.

The Samaritan woman saw in Jesus a prophet—one who really spoke for God. The world does not always heed the prophet. Many never recognize him. There are always those in the world who do not recognize the prophet. This makes it worth while to be a prophet and to speak the words of God to those who discern the prophet's voice.

Jesus Found a Missionary.

Once this woman recognized the voice of God's prophet and caught the inner meaning of his message, she became a messenger to bear the news to others. Verse 39 says that "Many of the Samaritans believed on him because of the word of the woman." Many people were influenced by a gospel that gave such spiritual release and joyous vigor to this woman of Samaria.

Argument or Friendship.

Jesus might have argued many points that were raised by the incidents of this lesson. He took the better course. Friendship is worth more than argumentation in promoting moral and religious values. Few people are ever convinced of the reality of religions by mere argument. But hosts are won by contacts of friendship that mediate the spiritual life from soul to soul.

The Living Water.

This spiritual sustenance is the living water. The Samaritan woman came to the well for water. Jesus asked her for a drink. In the conversation the soul was opened and living water was imparted to the woman of unfortunate life. The living water made her life to sparkle with a quickened spirit and she became a winner of souls.

trial had no charge against him. The only charges ever made by enemies were that he was too liberal; he welcomed outcasts into his fellowship; he was kind and forgiving. Even the worst of sinners were forgiven and those who tried to be his enemies were forgiven by this Christ who understood men better than they understood themselves.

Throughout all the centuries that have passed Christ has remained the same. Can we find a greater leader? Will we try earnestly to follow him?

Topic for Next Week: "Our Church's Service for Christ."

AFTER A BUSY YEAR.

Prof. A. R. Flowers is spending his first Christmas at home since 1927. He closes the year with very encouraging reports. Somehow he has been able to keep well in the field through these hard times, and has helped several deserving boys and girls to find their way into institutions of learning and into places where they could have better homes to make good in life. It must be an inspiration to him to read the many nice letters that he receives from young people of the different states, acknowledging their gratitude for the favors he has been able to show them. His address to the B. Y. P. U. at our church Sunday evening, December 27th, was one of the best we have ever had.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

THE LORD'S DELIGHT IN HIS CHILDREN.

LESSON: Isaiah 42:1-4.

"Behold My servant . . . in whom My soul delighteth." (Verse 1.)

It appears that the Lord loves his children so that he deals with them direct and continues his efforts until he has healed them and completed the work of saving them. And even the most dejected is not without hope, for "a bruised reed shall he not break," so tender is he and so carefully does he take them in his hand. How indulgent, how patient, does he strive with us, until the bruised reed becomes whole and vigorous.

The faith in our hearts should be strong and fearless; but alas, it is fragile and weak, and would fall to pieces at once did not the hand of him who is meekness itself sustain us. He shall not cease his efforts until the victory has been won. "He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he has set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law."

Prayer.—O Lord, we praise thee; we bless thy glorious name; and pray thee for grace to believe in thee, serve thee, and give thee honor forever more. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

LESSON: Psalm 86:11-17.

"Unite my heart to fear thy name." (Verse 11.)

The Lord had delivered David from death by saving him from the hand of Saul. In this he learned more of God's way and was moved to worship God in a song of mingled sentiment—humility, praise and petition for mercy and for strength to continue in his cause. It is the expression of an upright heart who finds himself wholly on the Lord's side and praying for new revelations of grace.

An undivided heart surrenders itself with entire confidence to the Lord. It regards only his word and trusts only in his promises. It is as unmoved when sin rages against it as it is when surrounded by heavenly influences. When threatened by distress or death, it is as courageous as when the outlook is brighter. It rests its case wholly in the mercy and truth of Almighty God.

They whose heart is undivided have but one desire, which expresses itself in all that they think, say or do; one sun, which shines in the soul and which they reflect; one spirit whose influence radiates everywhere; a heart whose best is true in all experiences.

Such a life returns thanks for sorrows as well as joys.

Prayer.—O Lord, bow down thine ear and hear us. We are poor and needy. Teach us thy way. Help us to walk in thy truth. Unite our hearts in the fear of the Lord. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE FEAR OF THE LORD."

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."—Prov. 1:7.

There are a great many uses of the word

"Fear" in God's Word. However, in but few places does it refer to that passion implanted in our nature, that causes flight from approaching danger. We read, for example:

"The fear of the Lord is to hate evil."

"In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence."

"The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life."

"In the fear of the Lord men depart from evil."

In all these and such like there is described a filial fear, a holy affection, whereby one is inclined to obey God's commandments. When David said, "I will teach you the fear of the Lord," he meant, "I will teach you the true and principal way of worshipping and serving God." When he said, "The fear of the Lord is clean," he meant that the law is so called, because it is the "object, the cause and the rule of the grace of God."

Thus, be it remembered that to "fear God," or to know the "fear of the Lord," is to have reverence and respect for Him; it is to "feel with" him, as one would know and feel with a friend; it is to have a deep sense of majesty in the very thought of Him, and to bow down and worship.

If we take it in our relations to one another, it is easily discerned that we cannot be anything to someone else without their respect. Without this reverence and respect, we cannot understand one another. That is what Philip Brooks meant when he said, "The secret of a man is with them that fear him." That is what the Psalmist meant when he said, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him."

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we are glad we do not have to come to thee through fear of punishment; that we can come through love and adoration. Help us to come fully and wholly. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHRISTIANITY OF THE PEOPLE AND BY THE PEOPLE.

"Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. The powers that be are ordained of God."—Rom. 13:1.

Obedience to the government as a result of obedience to God is the teaching of Christ. Willing submission to the ordinances of man is one of the glories of discipleship. Disobedience to authority springs out of disobedience to God. This is the spirit of Satan. Pride, lust for power, clamor for liberty and pleasure bent—these things were the curse of Absalom and will be the curse of any people.

Thus wrote Paul, and we know that the government under which he lived was heathen, unrighteous and cruel, compared to governments of today.

Likewise, Peter said, "abstain from fleshly lusts and submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake."

This is quite contrary to the spirit of our day, not only in regards to the liquor traffic, but in regards to other laws which conflict with ideas of personal liberty. A government of the people and by the people does not by any possibility permit the people freedom of action according to the impulse of their passions in contradiction to their laws for the people. Christians are honorable and Christian bound to obey the law, and administrators of the law are to be respected, esteemed and honored as servants of the law, and thereby servants of God. Anything else is false liberty. False liberty is slavery, and lawlessness begets strife and calamity. On the other hand, subjection for the Lord's sake, being true liberty, gives joy and peace.

Prayer.—Lord teach us to know our unworthiness of the great benefits. Give us humble and submissive spirits, and preserve us from self-will and bitterness. Give us the true liberty of the heart that makes us glad to obey the law and cheerfully renders cooperation to bring righteousness to rule.

We pray thy blessings upon all in authority. Give them righteous hearts, wisdom and strength and may the people be benefited by their lives and service. Drive away, we beseech thee, the evil spirit of discord and lawlessness among our people, and may this country lead in peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

This we ask for Jesus sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

REVOLTERS.

LESSON: Matt. 22:15-22.

"Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." (Verse 21.)

Lucifer was dissatisfied, revolted, and became a devil. Korah, Dathan and Abiram disliked Moses, so they tiraded against the holiness of the people, revolted, and went to perdition. Israel's people listened to the voice of Absalom, became dissatisfied, revolted, and were torn assunder with eternal dissensions. The people of Solomon's Kingdom, after his death, rebelled against their rightful ruler, and they were forced to render the obedience of slaves. In Christ's time, when they discovered that it was not the purpose of Jesus to liberate them from Caesar, and because he was the Kin of true liberty and demanded of them the homage of self-denial, they cried out five days later, "Crucify him; crucify him!" Shortly after this they revolted against the Romans and were destroyed.

Lesson for us: Revolting against truth and righteousness results in self-destruction. Rendering unto our fellowman what belongs to him is a consequence of rendering unto God the things that are His. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall he add unto you."

My first duty is: Bow in humility before God in Heaven; give Him full confidence and love of heart; commit yourself in obedience to his hand; and then we will render unto the government, reverence, obedience and tribute. A good man is the result of obedience to God.

Prayer.—O Lord, give us fear and make us obedient unto thee, following thee in thy heart. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HEAVENLY COMPANIONSHIP.

"For our conversation is in heaven."—Verse 20.

The apostle is talking about persons who "mind earthly things." This is the teaching of Christ—that if earthly things be our treasure, the heart's beat and dearest possessions, we are enemies of the cross of Christ, and our way leads to destruction. It is a terrible charge to be an enemy of the very thing that is our salvation. Such an one will not bear affliction with Him, will not deny themselves, will not "walk in His steps" through dry places—poverty and suffering. Such an one regards riches, and power, and honor, as better than His love, and of greater value than its benefits.

Christ's followers regard Him as the supreme in all things. They walk in His steps, they follow Him in obedience and self-denial until they reach the end of the journey. Our portion is not with the fleeting good things of this world; "our conversation is in heaven." Upward, onward, and homeward in the company of the saints! "He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

"GIVE ME THINE HEART."

A SERMON BY DR. J. A. BRYAN,
Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church,
Birmingham, Ala.

The Scriptures, the Bible, the inspired Word of God describes the heart as the seat of life, and can be the home of eternal life. Again the heart is described as being deceitful and above all things desperately wicked. Of course, that refers to the natural human heart. The natural human heart, scientists say, is about as big as your fist. The regenerated human heart can truthfully be said to be as big as the world.

When you see the human heart deceitful and above all things desperately wicked, you take up the Bible and find that it is indeed as hard as stone. When the human heart is changed you also find in the study of God's Word that it is no longer a hard heart but a tender, loving heart. It is changed by the supernatural power of God, by the Word of God being applied to it by the Holy Spirit. It is then no longer a heart of pride, selfishness, criticism, worldliness, pleasure seeking, greed, hatred, malice, deceit, egotism and other evils of the world. It becomes a heart of love. These fruits are found in that heart of love: peace, joy, meekness, gentleness, humility, faith, forbearance, long-suffering, temperance, patience.

It becomes a heart of trust. Oh, to trust this blessed Christ with the human heart. In Him the heart of trust finds security. To Christ the regenerated heart is a heart of reliance. By that I mean that it is a heart upon which Christ can rely for service. Again the regenerated heart is a heart of gratitude to Christ. Oh, just to have this regenerated, this changed heart today. It all depends upon our decision. We must decide for the regenerated heart or for the hard and stony human heart. Would you not like to have the tender, loving heart of trust? Would you not like to have this loving heart which Christ can trust? Would you not like to have this loving heart upon which this blessed Christ can rely at all times?

Now, if you and I have this stony, this hard heart, Christ comes up to us and says, "My son, give Me thine heart." Then you immediately say, "Lord, what do you want with my heart?" He says, "I want to change it from a heart of stone to a heart of love. I want to cleanse your heart of its filth and loathsomeness. I want to change it from one of ungratefulness to one of gratitude and thanksgiving. I want to change it from a heart of egotism and disregard to one of appreciation." Then you say, "How is my heart to be changed?"

Now, how is my heart changed? Standing here as the sun is stealing from the west into the window at my side, I just wish to say that my heart and your heart must be changed by the Word of God applied to our hearts by the Holy Spirit and a perfect cleansing by the application of the precious blood of Jesus Christ which was shed before the foundation of the world. Jesus Christ says, "Ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." The blood of Jesus Christ is sin-cleansing. It cleanses your heart and my heart from all sin. Oh, to have our filthy bird-cage hearts cleansed by the precious blood of Jesus which was poured out on Calvary, dark Calvary.

Such a heart is no longer one of selfishness, egotism, worldliness. If we walk in the light, as He, Christ, is the light, the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all unrighteousness. No alkali in any drug store, no prescription from any doctor can cleanse the human heart. Nothing but the blood of Jesus applied to the heart by the Holy Spirit by faith in this sin-atonement Christ. If you will read the life of David in the historic books of the Old Testament you will find in the 51st Psalm that David evidently wandered away from God. Really, friends, I would like to see somebody who has not wandered away from God. Yet I humbly look up into His face and say, "Oh, God, forbid that I should turn and walk away from Thee, away from Thy loving care."

Then I have this saying of Christ uppermost in my mind, "Ye shall seek Me, and ye shall find Me when ye search for Me with all your heart." I cannot find God when hatred, malice, greed, selfishness, deceit, and other evils of the world are in my heart. Standing before you this evening, I just come to God crying as did David in the Psalm, "Create within me a clean heart, O God." If ingratitude is reigning in my heart I must have it removed and far from me. I must seek the Lord to place a clean heart in me and renew a right spirit in me. I must seek Him that He cast me not off but restore unto me the joys of salvation. Then I will teach transgressors Thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto Thee. In the second book of Kings we read that Jehu saluted Jehonadab, reached down and took him up into his carriage with these words: "Is thine heart right?" Jehonadab said, "My heart is right."

Friend, is thine heart right? Has it been changed by the Holy Spirit and cleansed by the blood of Jesus? In God's Word we are told that He dwells in our hearts by faith on our part in Him. Just to think that Christ would condescend to come into and dwell in our hearts by faith. Jesus Christ told John on that Aegean Island, the Isle of Patmos. Pardon me, I saw that island on my pilgrimage to the Holy Land. We moved quietly along there on that great ocean liner about 10 o'clock one night. I forgot the way it looked as my thought all turned to the time when Christ came on the Lord's day and told John to write and send unto the seven churches, Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, Loadicea, all things which he saw.

Jesus Christ stands at your heart's door today and knocks, saying: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." He meant that He stands at the door of the human heart and knocks that He may come in and give men and women another heart. He wants to give men and women a devoted, consecrated, more faithful, more compassionate, more trustworthy, more Christ-like heart. "I stand at the door and knock." He stands at the door and knocks. If you have hatred, envy, selfishness in just one corner of your heart, He says, "I want to come into your heart and take full possession of it. I want to make it different, so different that the world cannot know it." Oh, just to have this Christ-cleansed and purified heart. Oh, to have this different heart of love.

Of course, the Christian, the child of God, is different. He stays in the presence of Christ. The child of God is loyal and true. Oh, friend, is thine heart right? Oh, man, oh, woman, if thine heart is not right I beg you to get right with God today. Can you not see Him on that lonely island telling John to write a book and send it unto the seven churches? Can you not hear Him say, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock?" Will you crush the voice of Christ? It is the gentle, the tender, the loving, the pleading, the appealing voice of God's eternal Son.

Oh, is your heart locked to the gentle, pleading knock of Christ? I beg you to open its door and let Jesus Christ be its chief guest. Let Him be the chief guest of your home, on that porch where you sit, or by the bedside of suffering. Let Him place His loving hand on that fevered brow. Let Him put His hand on your troubled soul. Let Him hold you securely, save you, and present you faultless before His presence in great glory and with exceeding great joy. He says, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and sup with him and he with Me." Just think, are you going to let Him stay on the outside knocking, gently knocking? I beg you, let Him in and learn of Him.

"There's a stranger at the door, let Him in. He has been there oft before, let the Saviour in. Let Him in, He is your friend, He your soul will sure defend.

He will keep you to the end. Let the Saviour in."

Prayer—Lord Jesus, teach us to know the grace and power of thy life—of thy Cross; give us the desire to follow in thy steps, and grant that we may be faithful therein unto the end.
Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE CALL OF WISDOM.

LESSON: Proverbs 8:10-17.

"Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold—counsel is mine, and sound wisdom."

Saint James says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Nothing can possibly be desired as of so great importance.

To wish to honor God and benefit man; to wish to walk honestly; to wish to be blessed and be a blessing to others; one must have all the wisdom of the Lord. To wish to do one's whole duty as a father, or mother, or son, or daughter, or child; to wish to render the best service at the job one does; to wish to be the best in any position in which God has placed one, one must consider his need of the wisdom of the Lord; he must take heed to himself in every step of life's way that he walk in the paths of the Lord's making. Add to these things earnest, persistent prayer and a diligent study of His word, neglecting nothing so far as it is humanly possible, and godliness and heavenly wisdom will fill the soul.

Prayer—Help us, O God, to incline our ears unto wisdom, our hearts unto understanding, our ways to the fear of the Lord, and so shall we find knowledge and satisfaction in thee.—Amen.

The great soul prays, "Lord, make me as big as my problems," while the little soul prays, "Lord, let me off easy."

The giant soul asks, "Lord, give me strength sufficient for a hard day," as the small soul begs, "Lord, let me have a lighter load."

The great heart prays, "Lord, let me stand firm when the fight is hardest," the craven heart cries, "Lord, let me escape."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

In this, the beginning of the New Year, we want to thank all our friends for the loyalty and support they gave the Orphanage during the year 1931. While our income was not as large as usual, we feel that our people were faithful. Owing to the year of depression, we rejoice that we had the loyalty and sympathy from our churches and Sunday schools, that we did receive. It was beautiful and brings cheer to us in this work of love and charity. If it was not for the fact that the closing of the bank in which we had our money we would start the year with a cheerful heart. We know you will stand by us during the year 1932. You will not permit these little children to suffer. Remember us in your daily prayers. Remember us with your gifts. The following has been sent in since our last report:

Ladies' Bible Class, Auburn Church, N. C., 1 beautiful comforter.

Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, 2 boxes of books and magazines.

Mrs. J. W. Williams, Franklin, Va., 1 box clothing.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4½ inches x¾ inch
The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller. It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength. One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MARRIAGES

TUCK-WALL.

At the John Randolph hotel, Halifax, Va., December 23, 1931, I united in marriage Mr. Edgar Wellons Tuck and Mrs. Myrtle Tuck Wall. The bride is the daughter of the late J. R. and Mollie Tuck, of Virgilina, Va. She is an excellent christian woman and has a host of friends. Mr. Tuck is engaged in farming at Mayfield, Kentucky. After spending a few days at Virgilina, they will leave by automobile for their home near Mayfield, Ky.

It is a great loss to Virgilina and Union church that Mrs. Tuck is making her home elsewhere. Her husband is to be congratulated on taking back to his home with him such a splendid companion. The writer feels that their marriage is directed of the Lord and happiness and prosperity will attend them.

OBITUARIES.

GARREN.

Miss Bettie Elizabeth Garren, died November 8, 1931, aged 82 years and 3 months. She is survived by three nephews: Charlie, George and Walter Garren; three nieces: Mrs. Mollie Hancock, Mrs. Kate Fysinger, and Miss Rinda Garren. She had made her home with George Garren for the past four years.

Services were held at Tabernacle M. E. Church, of which she was a member, and were conducted by the writer. This family is loyal to the service of the Master. May the call of the Master find these bereaved hearts closer to him, and may they wait patiently for the coming of the Lord.

B. H. LOWDERMILK.

McKINNEY.

On November 12, 1931, while alone at his work at the saw mill, Brother William R. McKinney passed out of this life suddenly. It was a great shock to his family and friends. He was born September 3, 1857. Age 74 years, 2 months and 11 days. He leaves his wife, three children, Misses Russell and Maud McKinney, and Mrs. Lelia Rudd, two brothers and five sisters, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held at Monticello Christian Church of which he was a member. The funeral was attended by a large crowd.

Brother McKinney will not only be missed by his family and many friends, but by his pastor. May God's richest blessing rest upon the bereaved family.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

From the time of its beginning the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., has counted among its most faithful members Miss Tamar Savedge. And when she slipped quietly out and went to her Heavenly Home, it was with deep sorrow and real regret that we acknowledged our loss.

Because of our appreciation of her and our grief at her going, we pass the following resolutions:

FIRST: Be it resolved that in the death of Miss Tamar Savedge, the Ladies' Aid Society and the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., have suffered a loss that is even greater than we know. But as followers of Jesus Christ, we bow in absolute submission to that which has come.

SECOND: Be it further resolved to express to her family and loved ones our deepest sympathy, and promise to ask God that their grief may not be too heavy and that we commend them to Him who knows what is for our own good. And ask Him to bless and care for them so they may see our Father's wisdom in even this sad event.

THIRD: Be it resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Christian Sun for publication, a copy be sent to the family and the resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Woman's Missionary Society.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. C. C. RYAN,

Mrs. W. J. STEPHENSON,

Committee.

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

NOAH.

Burial rites for W. T. Noah, 74, of Elon College, N. C., who died Sunday, November 8, 1931, were held at Shallow Ford Christian Church November 9th, at 3:00 p. m., conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. L. Neese, of Greensboro, N. C. Interment in the church cemetery.

The funeral cortage left Hanes' Funeral Home in Greensboro at 2:00 P. M.

Pallbearers were members of the Men's Bible Class of Shallow Ford Church, which class the deceased taught for many years.

Brother Noah was a man of high aspirations and noble qualities. He was a friend to all and used his abilities to better humanity and inspire faith in the Divine.

He leaves his devoted wife, Mrs. Sophronia Josephine Noah, a loving son, Floyd T. Noah, of Greensboro, N. C., three half-brothers, J. W. Neese, of Haw River, Cicero and Ulysses Neese, of Graham; three half-sisters, Mrs. J. C. Adams, Graham, N. C., Mrs. Jasper Wood and Mrs. Maggie Andrews, of Mebane, N. C.

The flowers for the grave were beautiful, the attendance large and everything tended to show the high respect and love for the deceased entertained by the people. J. W. PATTON.

CATOGNI.

Mrs. Ruby Farmer Catogni died at her home at Richmond, Va., Thursday morning, January 7, 1932. Mrs. Catogni had been a long sufferer, having been sick for more than two years. For the past five or six months she had been confined to her bed.

During her illness, her suffering seemed unbearable, yet she bore it patiently and wore a smile that was cheerful to those who visited her.

Mrs. Catogni professed faith in Jesus Christ when a girl and united with Pleasant Grove Christian Church in Halifax County at which church she held her membership until death. She leaves behind a bereaved husband, four children; Frank, Jr., William, Louise and Elizabeth Ann. Her father, W. O. Farmer, and step-mother, Mrs. W. O. Farmer of News Ferry, Va., a brother, Mr. Howard Farmer of South Boston, Va., a half-sister, Mrs. L. R. Sides of Charlotte, N. C., and a half-brother, Atkinson Farmer of Richmond, Va., also survive.

The funeral service was conducted at the home of her father, Saturday, January 9, 1932 at 12 o'clock, by the writer. The body was laid to rest in Pleasant Grove Cemetery in the presence of her many friends and relatives. The floral tributes were many and beautiful which showed the high esteem in which she was held. JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

ELON CAMPAIGN.—

The Elon College campaign has revealed the fact that the college has strong friends and loyal supporters. Recently this writer was spending the night in the home of a Methodist lady and discussed with her the condition of our college. Next morning before I left for church, she bade me goodbye, saying "Here is all the money I have, but you may have half of it for Elon College." Such interest represents what people outside of our church think about the college. We cannot do less than others in our expression of loyalty to the college. There are many friends in the church who would gladly give to the campaign fund if they had the money. Many have done so and denied themselves their last dollar to do so. Their friendship will live on and when they can they will contribute to the needs of the college, and this spirit is what the college needs among all the people in the church. It is the spirit that ultimately wins.

THE WIDOW'S MITE.—

The other day, while discussing the Elon College campaign with a group of friends, a widow with six children remarked, "I gave two dollars to the canvassing committee for Elon College and since then the bank has closed and shut up all the money I had and now I haven't a penny that I can use." She wasn't complaining but simply relating that if she had not given to Elon, the two dollars which she had contributed would have been lost too. "What we give, we save, what we keep perishes with the using." The richest blessing that many contributors have enjoyed for the use of their money has been the satisfaction that they have done something in a time of great need to help the college.

A BEAUTIFUL EXAMPLE.—

A faithful member of the Christian church the other day sent me a check for the college, including a contribution for every member of his family. In his letter he expressed gratitude for what Elon College had done for his son and two daughters, and said, "If I had money the College would never lack for a dollar." He gave me the names of his three children who had been educated at Elon College and assured me that they would contribute to the campaign fund and asked me to write to them. Along with his donation, he sent me a list of prospective contributors who, he thought, would contribute to the college. This spirit of cooperation will enable us to secure sufficient money to take care of our obligations.

LOYAL DEVOTION.—

An aged minister wrote me the other day about the college campaign and expressed his faith in our new President, devotion and good will to the college, and assured me that he would like to contribute money to the call for funds, but did not have any salary or church and was dependent on relatives for a living, but would do all he could by work, influence and prayer for the college. Many of the laymen whom I have met have expressed their good will and devotion to the college and regret that they were unable to help financially because they simply did not have any means with which to help. Their love and loyalty, their devotion and good will were genuine and will bear fruit when times are better and they are able to do something.

A PART OF HIS LIFE.—

A faithful member of the church who has contributed hundreds of dollars to the college in other days when he was able to do so, and has educated several of his children in Elon College and loves the college as he loves his own life, remarked when we were discussing the needs of the college and the danger of its dying for want of support to meet the demands made on it by its creditors, and said, "If Elon College dies, I shall want to die with it. I shall not want to live if the college is closed." My knowledge of the man and his devotion to the church and the college made me know he would gladly give a thousand dollars on this campaign. Such devotion, such love, such good will, such self-sacrificial spirit is what will save the college more than gifts without love. "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profits me nothing." Such sacrificial love is more precious than gold and when Elon College is thus enshrined in the hearts of all the people of the church, she will be eternally safe.

WE MUST HAVE HELP.—

The college is infinitely rich when it has the love, loyalty, devotion and good will of all our people. Those who cannot give money or provisions for the boarding department can give their prayers, their love, devotion, and assurances of their loyalty, but we must have help in money to pay debts and to meet expenses. Too often the best friends of the college excuse themselves. If many of our friends would make small gifts all these taken together would help that much to meet pressing obligations. While we might not meet all our obligations by the aggregate of these small gifts, we would be able to satisfy our creditors by small payments until times are better when people could give more without much sacrifice. Too many of our people hope that others will give enough to tide us over this crisis, but if too many do this, we shall fail to meet the immediate needs.

CUTTING EXPENSES.—

The President of the College at every possible point, without crippling the college, is cutting expenses. He is using every possible means to save and economize the funds at his command. He has recently added thirty students to the student body from Atlantic University which was forced to close on account of debts. These new students have entered heartily into the student life of the college and will help the college and the college will help them. The entire curriculum will be reconstructed to save expenses wherever it can be done without weakening the institution and many other changes will be made to save wherever possible. Economy, frugality, and saving wherever possible without weakening the college will be practiced and the generous public may be assured that every dollar given will be wisely and economically used for the highest good of the college.

THE CAMPAIGN TO CONTINUE.—

The Campaign Committee, last Saturday, decided to continue the campaign until March 15th, and request every pastor in the conferences in North Carolina to be willing to exchange pulpits with other pastors under the direction of Dr. Smith, president of the Southern Christian Convention, and that all speakers present the needs of the College afresh to the churches of the North Carolina conferences in this manner. The speakers will follow up their plea for the college by taking subscriptions and co-operating with the local committees of the churches as they may think best. This campaign, by the speakers, will not begin until the first Sunday in February, and will continue until March 15th or until all the churches have been visited by the speakers. We crave the hearty co-operation of the pastors and people, both in arranging the appointments and in making contributions. It is hoped that many who could not contribute when the canvass was first begun can save by economy and self-denial so as to make a contribution or to increase their former contribution when this further canvass is made. As the French said when the Germans, during the World War, were about to pass a critical point at Verdun, "They shall not pass," so let us say now of Elon College, "It shall not close." As we practiced war-time saving and were glad to do it to win the war, so let's practice self-denial and Elon-saving economy to gain a glorious victory for Elon College.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. and Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., are rejoicing over the arrival of little Mary Anne, on January 7, 1932. Our felicitations to the happy household.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, Charleston, S. C., was in charge of the morning devotions last week as broadcasted over WCSC, Charleston. He was assisted by Miss Richolda Luden, and a quartette of Charleston people.

C. J. Duke, of Suffolk, a member of the Christian Church of that city, who has been in a Richmond hospital for several weeks, is very much improved and is expecting to be able to return to his home shortly. His many friends will be glad to hear of Mr. Duke's improvement.

One good correspondent, sensitive to the situation that our Church faces, says: "Elon is in sore need and we must save it. Our Mission work calls for help and must have it. Our Orphanage is worthy and makes its pathetic appeal. Surely, our dependence is on God, Who will help us if all of us will do our part."

This comes from a good sister with a donation to Missions: "Surely, God's children will not falter now, and as we give will we be blessed." It is a time of faltering and hesitation on the part of many, because giving now means real self-denial. And yet it is through self-denial that our Lord sees fit to carry on His work in the world.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor, Congregational-Christian Church, LaGrange, Ga., is enjoying his new field of labor and feels much encouraged at the increasing congregations attending the services. He regards last Sunday as the best service thus far held. He furnishes the Sunday sermon for THE SUN this week, and it is worthy of a place in our columns and of wide reading.

New students continue to come to Elon and Dr. Smith has the right to feel greatly encouraged. Everywhere confidence in the president and in the College is being expressed, even if money is slow coming in. A very large per cent of those who would give to the College have recently had every dollar they had locked up in "closed banks." A most trying time, indeed, for Elon, but it has weathered many storms, and will weather this one.

Rev. J. L. Neese, Palm Street, Greensboro, has set the pace and a high standard for other pastors. The way Brother Neese does things is to go and do them. He went around among the good people of his churches—Palm Street, Hines' Chapel and others—and secured donations in money for Elon College, and then brought a large and liberal load of provisions—a whole automobile full of real provisions for the boarding department of Elon College. Such loyalty and devotion to Elon can but stir the hearts of others, as it indicates the spirit that founded and has carried on the institution.

The closing of the First National Bank, Burlington, N. C., December 16th, tied up our Convention Treasurer's funds, some $2,000, of which was on hand, and checks drawn but not sent, to our supernuminate ministers and widows of ministers; also some funds for Elon College, as well as one account of the Christian Orphanage, and all the current funds for Missions. Most of these funds were covered by bond against bank failure, but this will require time, inconvenience and delay for recovery. It is also persistently rumored and believed that the bank will reopen at no far distant date. This bank was managed by Christian gentlemen of unquestioned honesty, integrity and ability, and had the absolute confidence of a constantly and rapidly increasing constituency. It was, at the time of its closing, doing possibly the most thriving business it had ever done, deposits mounting higher daily, and customers increasing. Up to date not a word of censure have we heard of those who were in charge of the bank, and no lack of system or efficiency has been reported. Yet, business for church, religion, industry and enterprise is crippled—an anomalous situation that requires courage, faith and hope to face and conquer. We are fast learning that all human institutions have their limitations, and that the very best that man can do may be swept away.

COMMUNITY SERVICE.

Damascus Christian Church, the Methodist, Baptist and Episcopal churches held a community service in the high school auditorium at Sunbury, N. C., Sunday night, December 27th.

Rev. E. B. White, pastor of Damascus, delivered a most impressive Christmas sermon and spoke words of inspiration for the coming year.

Rev. Edwards, pastor of the Methodist church, read the scripture, and Rev. Taylor, pastor of the Baptist church, led in prayer and made the announcements.

The choir consisted of members of the choirs from the four churches. Miss Ethel Hafley was the pianist. Familiar Christmas songs were used and the following specials were rendered: "Silent Night," by the men's chorus; solo, "Emanuel," by Miss Lydia Nixon; a Christmas carol, "Sing this Blessed Morn," by Mrs. W. B. Crump, Mrs. William Nixon, Miss Margaret Corbitt, Miss Lydia Nixon, Mr. Joe Byrum and Mr. Bedford Brown; a duet, "Christmas," was sung during the collection by Mrs. W. B. Crump and Miss Margaret Corbitt. The collection was taken for the benefit of the Community Charity Fund.

The service was an inspiration to the community as a whole. A splendid congregation was present. The spirit of love and fellowship was made manifest in a most wonderful way in the coming together of the community in this Christmas service.

DETERMINATION.

No amount of learning will get a young person anywhere, unless he has the determination to see his purpose through to the end. Many of my classmates, both in high school and college, who were considered dull, have accomplished a great deal more, through the years, than those who were considered brilliant. The difference was not in the "ability" but in the "stickability." Isaac Newton often said, "I have no genius, but it is patient, concentrated toil that gets me success." A man may be born a genius, but he can trifle it away. The greatness of any task never seemed to inspire them in the undertaking, but it has been unconquerable wills and great hearts, for the most part, that have gotten men ahead in the world; a thing that the youth of our age should be taught more than they are. Demosthenes was not a genius, but he succeeded because of his indomitable will together with patient effort and industry.

It is true that the real value of life and its deeds must be reckoned by its fruits, but it should be remembered that good fruits are the result of honest toil. Things that live on beyond men's breathing and men's heart-throbs have been, by far, more the achievement of unconquerable spirits than of brilliant intellects.

I believe that more real learning and less accepting is one of the needs of the age among our youth. One of the best things about education is a personal discovery of those inherent virtues of life that are accentuated by an unfaltering purpose toward some worthy objective. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling," was the admonition of Paul.

One of my favorite teachers, until this day, used to tell his pupils that "Nothing did work but work." He was right; everlastingly right, and I am tired of this way some people have of developing slackers among some of our young people by making them feel that they must possess genius in order to succeed. Success is just doing your best, and any normal person has that privilege. "F."

SOMETHING MORE NEEDED THAN TECHNICAL TRAINING.

Technical training is not sufficient to fit a man for the responsibilities of life. Life is more than a trade or profession or vocation. It is more than an art. It embraces so many things that the only kind of education that will fit a man fully for living is a liberal education—an education that stimulates the imagination, creates high ideals, beholds great visions. Because much of our present-day education fails to cultivate the creative faculties of the mind we are becoming a nation of imitators, blind followers of a technique, willing slaves to a method. We want to standardize everything in harmony with some engineering scheme. When the formulas we have developed fail to bring results we become perfectly helpless. Witness the paucity of ideas in connection with the depression: As long as everything was proceeding according to accepted business formulas, business flourished, but when the monkey wrench fell into the gears, then business refused to function, and up to the present has lacked any constructive measure to restore it. Bankers, chambers of commerce, heads of financial institutions have lacked constructive imagination in rejuvenating business confidence and prosperity.

To meet the demands of life we need men who are liberally educated—who will see more than their particular vocation in life. Our colleges need stimulation in this respect. They have been running in a rut. Athletic activities have supplanted literary activities, and the stadium has overshadowed the lyceum. In some institutions like New York University, the trend is setting in strongly against the dominance of sports over letters and an effort is making to recapture the literary values of college life. Dr. Bell, head of St. Stephens' College, challenges the colleges of America to a new objective in words that should be heeded by every educator who is building for the future progress of the race:

"America is full of slave-minded people, excellent servants, but next to no masters. We have few true masters of the liberal arts to do our thinking and planning and understanding for us. All the technicians in the world cannot fill the place of men sufficiently educated to think and to direct the common life, social, æsthetic, political. It is high time that the colleges in America simplify their objectives and get down to their real task. We need some legitimate descendants of the great minds of the past."—Methodist Protestant.

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

FRIENDSHIP PARISH, Rev. Alan T. Jones, pastor, enjoyed one of the greatest Christmas seasons of its life. All four churches celebrated. At Friendship Church, Baxely, 175 people were present. This is a wonderful showing and we congratulate all concerned.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is our Church Paper. It is the medium of publicity for the Congregational-Christian Churches of the Southeast and should have the liberal support of Congregational as well as Christian ministers. There is being made a special effort to increase the number of subscribers at this time. Will you help?

PROVIDENCE CHAPEL at Spies, N. C., is another example of what good leadership can do for a church. Located back from the main highway this little house of God harbors many fine people. Under the direction of Miss Gertrude Bryant, a specially appointed extension worker, this church has grown steadily during the past year. It was one of the first to pay in full its apportionment for missions. They celebrated Christmas in a fitting and attractive way and several new members have been added to the church during the year. Happy New Year and good cheer to all.

LAKE HELEN, FLORIDA. This church has suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. Eliza Westlake, at the age of eighty-seven. For forty-five years Mrs. Westlake has lived at Lake Helen, and during those years has been in every way the leading influence in the church. She was honored and beloved not only in the church and community, but also in the Congregational Conference of Florida and by many friends in the north. She had been at times President of the Ladies' Aid Society, Superintendent of the Sunday School and teacher of the Women's Class. She was highly respected, showing a brave undaunted spirit in times of trouble and was always devoted to the church and to the mission work of the denomination.

DR. BLOOM has prepared an article, on this page, which is suitable for use on the fifth Sunday in connection with the regular offering and program for our colleges. This very timely article gives a glimpse of our educational equipment in the Southeast. Some of these schools and colleges are already firmly established in finances; others need our continuing help until they, too, may become established. We cannot and we must not neglect this part of our whole Church program.

For the fifth Sunday of January arrange a program in keeping with the ideals of our Church for "a more intelligent ministry" and lay-people. Pray for our schools. Advertise them. Tell of them. Pray for them. They should represent the best we have been able to do. Our best calls for no apologies.

NIAGARA UNION CHURCH, Niagara, N. C., has shown unusual interest under the leadership of Mr. Jefferson Canoy since Thanksgiving day. This is a small church in the midst of a cluster of homes three miles from our great Southern Pines church, where Rev. Elmer Willis Serl is so successful a pastor. Niagara may one day attract many winter tourists and give them a fine winter home. Just now it is developing and this church is sharing in the service rendered by all in the community. From nothing the audiences under Mr. Canoy's preaching have averaged 46 and the newly organized Sunday school has a membership of 40. But the real power is the increased interest of the people themselves. They are looking forward to a rebuilding of the interior of the basement of the church edifice and the women are organizing, the church also is looking into the business of constitution, by-laws, etc. Niagara is looking up.

APPORTIONMENTS.

It will be too late by the time this is printed. How many of our churches have paid in full their apportionment for our world-wide Missions and gotten the money to the head office so credit may be given for your good work in letting your light shine so that all may see? The writer hopes that he may be furnished with the record of all the Georgia and the Carolina churches (Congregational) by next week. Then the honor roll will be given. Here is hoping that every one will be happy to find his church listed among them. But whether this is possible or not, one thing is certain—we know right now that all the churches have been trying and trying hard, too, to faithfully meet the goal this year. Most of us failed to get our money in by December 15th, but none of us, we trust, failed to make it good by January 10th. And now the great thing to do is to once more set December 15, 1932, as the date and then to begin at once to meet the monthly payments, just like rent. How easy it would become for everybody if we of the Southeast, should set the example. How many will join the December 15, 1932, Christmas Mission Fund Club? Send in your names.

CHURCH BUSINESS.

Our little Columbia church rises to bless many in a great city at Christmas time. "The best Christmas pageant we have ever seen," said they, the visitors and helpers from some large churches. But the greater blessing was for the many families in a needy district, where Rev. Florence Squires, pastor, is doing the impossible and delighting the hearts of all. She works at her job and results are seen in that necessary quality of any business or church, namely, organization. So many churches seemingly almost never hold a business meeting of any kind. Then they wonder why things do not come to pass. Think of a bank never holding business meetings! Yet, even some ministers think they can carry on the King's business just by preaching. It simply can't be done. And the pastor of Columbia church knows it and is laying the foundations of success—"business"—is the way it is spelled. They had a great Christmas time uplift, and every one of the children received a gift of some kind. And now a real annual business meeting is history.

The writer is laying emphasis on this phase of the work because he knows the reason why some churches do not grow and go and glow is just because neither the minister nor the people recognize the need, nay, the absolute necessity, of a church putting business methods into spiritual activity. Paul seems to put business before the emotion of fervency. "Not slothful in business"! after that "Fervent in spirit." And by both these—"Serving the Lord." It is a weak kind of fervency which has no backbone of business to make it stand up like a man. May more of our churches this January of 1932 add to their knowledge of consecration of emotional well-being, the tonic of the iron of consecrated business.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS IN THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

(The following article was prepared by Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Mission Secretary for the Southeast Convention.)

The educational institutions of the United Church in the Southeast Convention are adequate in number and well distributed geographically. They are also outstanding in quality and fit into our varying needs.

Berea College, Kentucky, while not bearing any denominational name, is a great asset to us and its wonderful mission to the mountain young people thrills us.

Pleasant Hill Academy, the one mountain school under the American Missionary Association, is closely linked up with our Community Church Larger Parish, and covers a big territory, reaching into twenty different communities.

In rural Alabama we have Thorsby Institute, the center of a far-reaching program, giving to over one hundred young people each year not only an educational vision, but an insight into definite Christian living.

Southern Union College at Wadley, Alabama, is pioneering in a needy territory, where people are facing the hardest kind of conditions. This school is reaching out in a most sacrificial way.

Down in Florida we have Rollins College at Winter Park, with its splendid buildings and comprehensive study courses, blazing a new trail educationally and strongly international in its student group and world vision.

Then in the same State there is the contrast seen in the unique work of the Latin-American Institute at Tampa, where again the international spirit is in evidence and the week-day instruction is closely connected with the church life.

Reaching Georgia, there is Piedmont College at Demorest, with its mighty "Piedmont spirit," strong educational program, adventurous outlook, life-preparing opportunity. The demands upon this college are so great that in 1930 it turned away over 250 young people when the capacity for the entering class had been received.

In North Carolina is our Country Life Academy at Star, functioning on the Danish Folk School plan and doing foundation work for the educationally underprivileged from rural communities.

Then, at Elon College, North Carolina, we have our "Harvard of the Southeast," with its adequate and attractive permanent buildings and with its classic setting and challenging spirit. Its heavy debt is a credit, for it means that there has been a group big enough to dare to face a great educational need by putting in a splendid material equipment. Its nearly 400 students; its location centering in a large church territory; its note not only for its regular courses, but also for its Christian educational emphasis in a specially equipped building where men and women have the advantages of preparing for definite service; all of these contribute to make it a great school.

From academy and college work the transition for seminary training is now possible in the same general territory through our Atlanta Seminary Foundation affiliation with the Vanderbilt University School of Religion. Here in a university environment, with a total student enrollment of over 5,000, there is an open door for preparation of an attractive and vital character for the ministry of the Gospel.

HARPER*S. C. HARRELL*J. E. McCAULEY*NEWS EDITOR*W. C. WICKER*PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

RELIGION AND LIFE.

There may seem to be a tendency to disregard religion and to lay small emphasis on principles and teachings that were valid in other days. This writer's conviction is that this tendency is accounted for, in a measure, by an effort to translate religion in terms of life. We are at grips with perplexing and distracting problems, but we have not forgotten, and cannot forget, that our surest intuition is for religion and that our deepest instincts are religious. These instincts and intuitions hold us to the fundamental fact of God; that at the base and foundation of things is God, and that He is supreme.

In a recent sermon, Dr. W. G. Sargent, of Providence, R. I., dwelling on Moffatt's translation of Matthew 6:25: 'Surely, life means more than food,' very pertinently declares that "The philosophers of our day who insist upon the validity of intuition and the intuitional process seem to have much in common with Jesus—at least in his manner of approach to truth. He never sought to prove the existence of God. He took it for granted. Ye believe in God; believe also in Me. We do not need to prove that God is; certainly not by logical processes. We know he is because we are what we are. Never would there have been in the human heart a sense of dependence and responsibility, nor yet the unaided urge to worship if God were not. Religion is the native thing. It is the most normal thing in life. As Henry Drummond used to say: 'I like religion, it fits so well into all the folds of man's being.'"

The many who differ in their speculative theories, and even some who indulge their doubts, are nevertheless making a desperate attempt to translate religion in terms of life, so that the every-day attitude and activity of mind, body and soul may reflect the life of God and the love of God in their lives. Back of the disregard of many theories and much preaching, there is a soul seeking the way of life, even the life of Him Who said, "I am the way, the truth and the life."

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan has pointed out the necessity of "practicing the presence of God," the daily and constant desire and effort to make God real, and to make His goodness and His righteousness transparent in our conduct. It may be after all that our age is driving us back to the real fundamentals of human nature and of God, and that as we live and move in Him, we realize the best in our own lives and in the life of God. Quoting Dr. Sargent again:

"And religion is designed to assure us of our great heritage—possibilities of God-likeness. Because we are part and parcel of Him, life's purpose is to realize more and more of the divinity that lures us with its possibility. They who trust and abide in God most, attain the largest inheritance of life's riches. The soul may accept a lower aim than that. It may select lesser values. But any man or woman whose life is dedicated to the service of God knows life at its best."

Knowing, living life at its best—that is religion in terms of reality.

THE "CHALLENGE OF CHANGE."

Let us hope, and believe, that the changes going on throughout the world are for good, and constitute a challenge to the morally inclined and the spiritually minded. These changes are so enormous and frequent that we are no longer appalled, scarcely amazed, by them.

Note a few of these among the nations the past year. How many SUN readers would be able, off-hand, to recall that in 1931 "The British Empire," the most mighty and extensive political organization in the world, changed its name and status, and in its stead there was born and labelled in history "The British Commonwealth of Nations"? This will likely go down in history as one of the epochs of 1931, since it will be erroneous henceforth to speak of the British Empire, and we shall have to say "The British Commonwealth (of Nations)." This means that instead of an "Empire," a Commonwealth of many languages, colors and ideals has come to be.

1931 saw the last great stronghold of Roman Catholicism, nationally speaking, pass out, and the Monarchy of Spain, which it had held for centuries, gave way, and the Republic of Spain came to be. Spain now has a Constitution of the most liberal type and, with her king dethroned, she has a president and a congress, all elected by the people.

The face and situation of the earth in the Orient has been changing. Japan and China coming to grips in Manchuria and the Chinese government, as such, crumbling, in preparation, seemingly, for a unified and centralized government.

Germany, once the strongest of the strong, has been on the brink of financial ruin and disaster, and was only staid therefrom by the strong hand and great help of the United States and other nations—a thing unprecedented in history, that of nations willfully coming together to save another nation from ruin.

Over the year 1931, Italy takes a somersault, and, instead of rattling the sword," becomes the first to propose to the nations a rest from armaments and from further military expenditures.

We little realize the revolution through which Russia is passing, in her vast and unprecedented adventure in communism, and her attempt to build a nation and a people without God. Denying all authority, except such as the community may hold, and the government may represent, a nation undertakes to construct, and carry on, its whole economic and civil system without acknowledging authority in power beyond itself.

These changes throughout the world receive but scant and passing notice from us because of the constant changes in economic outlook and prospects about us. Our own nation, our own people, are undergoing changes so rapidly that we can hardly take note of them. Surely, we are living in a changing world.

But there is One who changeth not, and through these changes He is calling long and loud to us to build on that sure foundation, that faith which cannot be swept away.

We may take courage and counsel with Him and find the way out of our bewilderment by trusting in Him, Who never forsakes and Whose wisdom alone is sufficient for these and all times.

J. O. A.

A REAL BENEFACTOR.

The passing, recently, of Julius Rosenwald, gives new emphasis to the name and achievements of a great soul. Though an orthodox Jew, in the manner born and after the manner brought up, he was one of the most benevolent of our human kind, and gave very wisely of his millions for the uplift of mankind. His donations were, in no measure, limited to Jews, nor even to whites. Under the influence of Booker T. Washington, he became acquainted with the Negro situation in the South, and by working with the States and with the Negroes themselves, he built more than 5,000 schools in the South which accommodated 650,000 children. In addition to this, he gave to Negro institutions of higher education and established a $30,000,000 fund (for the benefit of mankind). Sanitariums, health centers and hospitals, as well as industrial institutions, libraries and schools received his beneficence. In dying, he left an estate valued at $20,000,000, of which amount $9,000,000 goes to members of his family, near and remote, and the other $11,000,000 in benefactions to mankind. It is doubtful if any philanthropist gave his money with more wisdom and intelligence and got larger returns therefrom than did this benevolent Jew. One feels like saying of him as the Master said of Nathaniel, "Behold an Israelite, indeed, in whom there is no guile."

J. O. A.

OBLIGATIONS AND OBLIGORS.

There are two kinds of obligations: one is voluntary in which a promise is made to perform a certain task; and the other, in which self-chosen relations imposes obligations upon individuals. If a purchase is made on credit, that places the debtor under obligation to the creditor. If one resides in a community that has certain laws or rules to control residents that puts the individual under obligation to conform to the law, rule, or custom under which he has chosen to live. Obligations are as numerous as promises and laws. It is plain that a personal promise places an obligation upon the obligor to meet the requirements of that promise.

All unpaid accounts are unfilled obligations; and the world is full of them. This is just as true of corporations and States as it is of individuals. Such unpaid accounts become debts;

The present condition of the financial world is that of debts beyond the capability of obligors to pay. If the debts of the world, of individuals, corporations, cities, States, and nations, could be paid in January, February would usher in good times. The lesson for all to learn is to keep out of debt. The world is not in debt for necessities, but for what was not needed. The nations are in debt for war and not for bread. Many people are in debt for luxuries and not for necessities. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another; for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." (Romans 13:8.) Keeping this law would restore prosperity, and strengthen faith in God, in man, and business.

When one unites with the church it places him under obligation to the church, to attend, to live the Christian life, and to support it. "Lay by in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (I. Cor. 16:2.) And when a law is passed by the State, it puts all citizens under obligation to obey that law. People who buy or use intoxicating liquor, while the Prohibition law exists, are law-breakers as much as bootleggers. If the world would obey law, keep out of debt, and love one another, hard times would be unknown. W. W. S.

THE LOST SENSE OF SIN.

In these days men do not think seriously of sin. With a wave of the hand it is dismissed as a weakness or indiscretion, instead of being viewed as a tragedy. Modern thought has presented God altogether as a Father, and because we have a superficial interpretation of fatherhood, and have failed to show men all that love means in God, man's view of sin is distorted. Love is not simply a sloppy sentimentalism; love can blaze and burn when occasion demands. Sin, to a loving and holy God, is a greater evil than suffering. While modern thought may have quenched the fires of hell, yet God, being what he is, will pass judgment upon sin, and punishment will be meted out.

The modern scientific teaching as to the origin of the world and of man has given to the age a new idea of the question of sin and its origin. We learn from medical science and from physical inquiry that suggestion plays an enormous part in human life. A new idea of sin has sprung into life since the propagation, during the past few decades, of the Darwinian thesis. This idea consists in the conviction that men and women are animals, that animal passions are not only natural and necessary, but superior to moral law; that God is at most an indefinite hypothesis. This idea is spreading rapidly among the multitudes, and out of it has grown a new psychology that man is not morally responsible for the sins he may have committed.

Under such teaching, morality can go but into the melting pot. Already it has carried us so far that many are challenging the authority of moral law. Because of the lost sense of the sovereignty of God in modern thought, people are daring to ask, What right has a holy God to impose moral conditions upon men? What right has God to set up standards of right and wrong for human life, if God is so holy that he has never stood within its conditions and never felt its temptations? The Gospel of the Incarnation alone can answer these questions. God came in the person of Jesus to stand within our conditions, to be tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin, that he might secure for himself the moral leadership of humanity, the full sovereignty of the Redeemer.

We have lost the sense of sin because we are losing the sense of God. When men are in doubt of the reality of a personal God, when they have lost their sense of the presence of God, naturally they lose the sense of sin and do not feel the need of forgiveness of sin. As we minimize the greatness of God we minimize the awfulness of sin. God never makes light of sin. The measure of God's horror against sin is found in the tremendous truth that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." The utilitarian philosophy of life of the twentieth century has produced a tendency to minimize God and exalt man. We are lifting ourselves up so high that we cannot see the Lord high and lifted up. With the loss of the vision of God there comes a corresponding loss of the sense of sin. Much of the new philosophy has reduced God to a mere principle or force or law locked up in nature. God being no longer real, his holiness is not vital.

Because of our enlarged freedom there has been a breaking down of many accepted standards. Multiplicity of material things, has made life so comfortable and has so magnified selfishness that man feels little need of God and salvation in Jesus Christ. The roots of our lives have gone down into soil which is not conducive to a growing conviction of sin. And the Church is not wholly blameless for the conditions that face us, with reference to our lost sense of sin. The Church has been too much concerned with another life; her major concern has been in that direction. As a result the present world was largely left to the shaping of science, with new business and new conditions arising. The new civilization which science is building is without any sense of conscious responsibility to human ideals. It is being built without the aim of satisfying the human ideals of a complete life. The Christian religion has a dynamic in it that transforms life and character here in this present life, and makes life complete, and must be linked with the scientific spirit, if human ideals are preserved and happiness brought to the race. Education alone will not suffice. How obvious is the depravity of many of the educated. Men must be changed in their souls. Science is definitely committed to the spirit of social progress. The bodies of men can be refined by our modern education. But the souls of men cannot be massed, cannot be changed by legislation or altered by a shibboleth of political faith. It is in their souls, not in their bodies, that men are either happy or sad, righteous or sinful. A new strength, a strength from outside us, a supernatural strength, the mystical strength that flows into the soul of man from a union of his will with God's—this is alone that which cleanses the heart and fortifies the soul in virtue.—Nash-vill Christian Advocate.

A COURAGEOUS CHOICE.

President Hoover's appointment of President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke College as a member of the group officially representing the United States at the coming Disarmament Conference, honors an estimable woman and naturally gives pleasure to the religious and educational circles of which Miss Woolley is so distinguished a member. But our satisfaction in the President's action, and our appreciation of all that lies back of it, have much profounder reasons than the fact that Miss Woolley is a fellow-Congregationalist, a former contributing editor of this paper, and an important leader in the field of education for women as it has been associated with the religious atmosphere and influences of New England.

First of all, President Hoover deserves great credit for appointing a woman. Women have suffered above all others from the horror and desolation of war, which in the main has been an institution run and controlled by men, and concerning which women have had little choice—except to provide the chief material, their sons, with which wars have been waged. It is time that women had a voice and a part in the determining councils that make or prevent war.

Second, the President is worthy of high praise for the type and quality of the woman whom he has chosen for this task and responsibility. With the country producing a crop of female politicians-on-the-make, who differ little in general type from the poorest sort of self-seeking and party-serving male politician as we have known him; and with a large number of women of ability, ambitious for public place and preferment, whose ideals are only a slight stage above those of the conventional political type; it means a great deal that the President should choose among all the women in the country, a woman whose distinctive qualifications are moral and spiritual, as well as intellectual, a woman as notable for her fineness and strength of character as for her knowledge of affairs, her breadth of outlook and her political ability. The choice is upon the very highest plane.

And in the third place, one finds in the President's selection of Miss Woolley commendable evidence of his own intense sincerity in this business of disarmament. Whatever the adverse and hostile forces with which President Hoover has to contend in the militaristic jingoism of the country at large, his political foes watching every loophole for attack, and the reactionary influences within his own party, his own aspirations and purposes stand clearly revealed. Integrity of purpose and genuine courage are alike manifested in his decision to send to the disarmament Conference a woman whose alliance with the general movement for international peace, and with the specific agencies in which that movement has found expression, has been as marked as in the case of Miss Woolley. With the possible exception of Jane Addams, no woman of equal prominence in America, judged by her general activities and by her persistent and consistent public utterances, stands more unreservedly committed to the cause of peace and disarmament than does Mary E. Woolley. If disarmament is the real purpose of the conference, and if disarmament is the honest hope and aim of this country in being represented there, it is people like Miss Woolley who ought to be our logical representatives. We congratulate President Hoover upon the spirit he has shown in sending to a peace conference a woman so thoroughly qualified by her devotion to the cause of peace.

To congratulate Miss Woolley upon the honor seems hardly adequate. No one, more than herself, realizes that she has been called to a mission in which outward honor pales before the sense of solemn trust. We congratulate her in terms of sympathy for the heavy burden she is about to bear, and in prayer that God will give her grace, wisdom and strength in the task of representing and expressing, in the place where it will be both most difficult and most needed, the idealism of a Christian woman—an idealism that is inseparable from the true American ideal of a democracy founded upon the essential principle that the welfare of nations and people depends ultimately, not upon might nor strife, but upon liberty and righteousness established in, and establishing, law and order. It is the greatest public and official opportunity a woman has yet had to make her contribution to the goal of bringing world order out of the chaos of international rivalry and distrust.—The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Social life and family life fit in very well with religious life; in fact, they can not be well separated. On Tuesday night, January 12th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Bowen, Brewer Street in Suffolk, a demonstration of this idea was carried out to perfection. Mrs. Bowen, the daughter of Mrs. Carr, the relict of Deacon S. Junius Carr, of the Suffolk Christian Church, invited her mother over to her house.

Mrs. Carr keeps a good boarding house on West Washington Street, only a few doors from Mr. Bowen's residence. The next day was Mrs. Carr's birthday, and it was a scheme, on the part of Mrs. Bowen, her sister, Mrs. Annie Titus, other members of the family and friends to give Mrs. Carr a surprise birthday party the night before that day, and the occasion was not only a surprise, but a joyous time for all who were present.

When the company of 38 entered the Bowen home with many congratulations and many presents, Mrs. Carr was overcome with surprise and thankful feelings. Boarders from her house, led by Rev. E. C. Dean, pastor of West End Baptist Church, relatives and other friends, gathered in a group and seated around a table upon which the presents were piled and remained quiet until the presents were uncovered and cards of good wishes read by Mrs. Titus. Many useful and precious gifts were opened and sweet cards made moments rich with ties of love and good wishes. Many useful articles as well as beautiful ones were exhibited. It was interesting to see Mrs. Carr seated by that table and to note the grateful emotions that filled her heart. The room was full of joy; and the givers seemed to be as happy as the receiver; and the Bible says, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35.) Anyway, it was one happy throng in a religious mood.

After the interesting experience the party was invited into the dining room where delicious delicacies were served and where a cake was in the center of the table lighted with seventy-three candles. Rev. W. W. Staley invoked the divine blessing and Rev. E. C. Dean read the following composed by the daughter, Mrs. Annie Titus:

"On your birthday of seventy-three,
We are here, Mother, as we said we would be:
We are here to frolic, sing and play,
To help make happy, your birthday.
As the years roll by and you older grow,
We love you better as you surely know.
Now, we will ask Dr. Staley to pray,
Thanking God for Mother so lovely and gay."

Raising a family and keeping boarders, when done religiously, does not take all the joy out of life, but adds new occasions for fellowship, love and sweet feelings of family, religious, and social life, all in one rich evening, more thoroughly experienced than successfully described. It was a tribute to Mother that gladdened her heart, enriched her life, and filled all present with a deeper sense of family affection and Christian love.

APPLE'S CHAPEL.

Thinking perhaps many would like to hear through THE SUN, how Apple's Chapel is getting on, I give some briefs from this church.

First, our newly chosen pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, has started off fine by entering the work here in an active and consecrated way.

He comes to us well qualified as a pastor, and with the cooperation of the church, we expect great things to come to pass in honoring the Lord. He is young and energetic and has a happy way of presenting the different enterprises of the Church at large to the local church.

Apple's Chapel is nearly 100 years old, and we are worshiping in the third house—a modern brick building.

Here we have a great many young people and children. These constitute the church's wealth and strength, and this is true of a community as well as a church, especially where they are being given Christian citizenship training.

The Sunday School is open all the year, and is active in all departments.

It would be hard to find a more active and devoted superintendent than Bro. James A. Cook. He is always alert and ready to make the Sunday School more efficient and interesting. He has a splendid corps of teachers, who make their class-work interesting and profitable.

The Sunday School is doing a great and lasting good. In proof of this, is the fact that a large majority of the converts each year in the church come out of the Sunday school.

I wish a prosperous New Year to all.

D. E. MICHAEL.

OUR WASHINGTON WINDOW.

In the twelfth chapter and the second verse of a little volume sometimes referred to as The Book of the Going Forth, these words occur: "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." The writer went on a visitation in his capacity as a minister-at-large, for the first time in the first month of the year to the "Land of the Sky." Often in summer time has he wended his way thither, but for the first time in winter, Robert E. Lee Hall and the other buildings, and the lovely grounds associated with the Blue Ridge Conference, were seen from Black Mountain. For the first time in winter was sighted the sunrise lighting up with golden glow the foliage along the mountain ranges. Then at sunset the eventide coloring in all its beauty, while in between were the daylight hours of the first Sunday of the first month of the New Year.

Three hundred and sixty-five days are to be ours in this New Year. Just what are we going to put into them, and will the extra day enlarge in a special manner our human efforts and our spiritual horizons? Have we, beginning at the midnight hour of yesterday's year, or at the early dawn of what a little while before was tomorrow's year, been getting ready each hour in a bigger way to do real things? The old-time prophet said, "The people that know their God shall be strong and do exploits." Cyrus Hamlin faced the challenge of his own words, "Let me fail in trying to do something rather than to sit still and do nothing." In such a spirit we can face confidently the avenue of human knowledge and service, for we learn by doing.

The work of the man of Nazareth abides, and that which has like meaning in our lives is also eternal. The truth which the years do not make old, is always united with the joy of the life of actual doing. Facing that which counts for most, judging life by its best, standing for something definite, making service the big thing, we shall discover what it really means to know God. Then we shall estimate every life by its best, and with a splendid passion of unselfishness, go after things that need to be done.

The essential Christian message meets human needs. Definite, concrete, sincere, it comprehends that which men live by and work for. It meets the experiences of common circumstances and daily routine. Too often we let trifles trouble us. We permit life's irritations to spoil some of our days. Sometimes we need to examine and challenge our very words. If only we were so made that we had to stop talking when we stopped thinking! Are we getting out of the passing years as much as we should? Are we inefficient a good deal of the time? Have we the faith and hope and cheer we ought to possess? Have we a large share in the open mind, the broad sympathies and kindled hearts that can be ours, and through us become the possession of others?

Facing our World Program for united service, these momentous days of the Eternal, call for a consecration of personal life entering into all forms of Christian activity. Taking the Eternal Spirit into our lives, means putting our lives into the Master's way of life. It is not only a matter of problem and challenge, but of privilege and obligation. Putting ourselves where folks can find us, there will come to us the awakening to self-forgetting service; the utilization of undreamed powers. Whenever we serve in this way, we not only follow Jesus' example, but extend his life.

The opportunity to make religion real is ours, and apart from what religion means, is there anything that is worth while? We need to live up to what has been called "The church of the minimum creed and the maximum deed." The eternal experiences of Jesus are those of the world today. They still give meaning to life. They call for a new emphasis on Christian education and a new standard for stewardship in living and giving. Very early in the year there came to me from one of my associates in service, these words, "I am the New Year, pure and unstained, fresh from the hands of God, with twelve months of soothing rain and sunshine glorious; days for work and rest, nights for peaceful slumber. All that I have to give with love unspoken; all that I ask of you—keep the faith unbroken."

VALLEY LETTER.

The last session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, held at Mt. Olivet (G), in August, was not favored with an invitation for a meeting place next August. Accordingly, the selecting a place for our next August session was left in the hands of the Executive Committee. This committee had a meeting recently at which invitations from Whistler's Chapel and Winchester were considered, the vote being in favor of Winchester.

Selecting the time and place for the mid-year session was also the business of the Executive Committee. An invitation was presented from Palmyra, but the majority of the committee felt that as Bethlehem was more easily reached by the most of our people, it would be better to meet at Bethlehem. The time agreed upon is Thursday, March 10th.

A. W. ANDES.

We have been running several columns of "Obituaries" recently in an effort to catch up. As far as the fitting of copy would allow, these have been published in the order received. The thought comes to us as we pen this, how nice it would be to say some of these good things about our friends while they are here to read them. Why not try it?

YOUTH.

By JOHN ALLEN HUDSON.

Youth has been called the isthmus between two extremes. It is life's unsettled age. It is the time of illusions and dreams—not exclusively so, but predominantly so. It is just a part of the providential scheme of life and is destined to come like the thought of love that Longfellow expressed in these words:

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought,
Love gives itself, but is not bought;
Nor voice, nor sound betrays
Its deep, impassioned gaze.

It comes—the beautiful, the free,
The crown of all humanity—
In silence and alone
To seek the elected one.

It is the sense of expectancy and of destiny that is thus placed in youth that causes it to be the age of expectancy and dreams. While there are other ages of hope, and there comes at last the age of harvest, yet youth is the age of hope more than any other. Many an old man has been able to retain the faculty of the buoyancy of youth, and it is a compliment to any one in later years to be able to retain this power, for it is the spice of life and can make life livable in the midst of grim realities. But while hope is for every age, it is more especially the province of the age of youth.

Hope humbly then; with trembling pinions soar;
Wait the great teacher death, and God adore.
What future bliss, he gives not thee to know;
But gives that hope to be thy blessing now.
Hope springs eternal in the human breast;
Man never is, but always to be blest;
The soul, uneasy and confined from home,
Rests and expatiates in a life to come.

Many, many times youth is extremely impatient and is straining at the leash, undertaking to walk into the portals of the experience of life, and reckless enough, Samsonlike, if delayed, to undertake to pull down the pillars of life forthwith. Not only is it the age of experience and oftentimes of rashness, but it happens to be the age of extreme sensibility. And many a youth is like a story of South American flower, which, if touched, will fold its petals away from the obtruding hand. This sensibility of youth has sometimes been called the "inferiority complex," which is only partly true. The wit who writes the pieces, "Mutter and Mumble," said in a recent piece that an ostrich of his felt so inferior that he would notice nothing larger than a canary. And sometimes an extreme sensibility will cause a youth to circumscribe his powers and make him unequal to the task of meeting the world face to face. A sensitive person of this kind needs to undertake to overcome this peculiarity. Sometimes it is a battle between the need of overcoming this constraint, or so-called "inferiority complex," and the recklessness that would characterize the age of youth. It is this uncertainty in youth that is like the isthmus between two extremes—the trepidation imposed by inability to meet the issues of life (which makes up the sensitive part that is related to childhood) and the recklessness of courage (that is the action of maturity and independence). These are the two features that are joined by the isthmus of youth.

Youth, again, is the age at which either the boy or the girl is undertaking to get feet on the solid ground of experience, and to take the head away from the mists and uncertainties of life; it is, therefore, the time at which the experience is the great teacher. And the sensibility to which I have made allusion is in this adage: "The burnt child fears the fire." Therefore, life has two features: that of dulling sensibilities under the firm philosophy that it must be so for one's own good, and, on the other hand, action at whatever cost, because, after all, action is an undisputed factor of life. As a celebrated playwright, Channing Pollack, said in a recent survey of his most priceless assets, that one of these was the ability to work and to enjoy it, so life comes to that point. The youth realizes that he must act in spite of his tender sensibilities, and to the extent that he is able to overcome the "inferiority complex" he becomes a person of action and, therefore, of success.

Whatever the despair may be or however great, youth is as inevitable as the rise and fall of the tides, as the flowing of the rivers, or as the forces of gravity. The mysterious Hand that fashioned nature on such a vast scale that causes the young bird, untaught, to build her nest by the power of instinct, or that causes sweet song of mating in the time of nidification, has inspired the irresistible longings and ambitions of youth. The underlying force is being driven to the surface through many misgivings; and whatever the doubts and trepidations, it is the old story of independent life aching into the void of personal experience and destiny. Any one, therefore, who views the uncertainties of youth and stops to appreciate the underlying and God-ordered force, ought to be charitable toward the mistakes of youth. It is very much like a noted divine of New England said not long since of his son who was then in university. Some one asked him how his son was getting along, and he replied, with a wink at his foibles, that the young man in question was an agnostic just then. But with his broad tolerance and understanding, he realized that this was but a temporary aberration caused by this age of uncertainty. It is strangely true that this period between late adolescence and early maturity is the age at which doubts are the most apt to creep in. While such might happen at other periods of life, this is the time when faith is the most apt to be upset.

The youth who doubts his own power and has misgivings concerning his own success needs encouragement.

The youth who is inclined to be sluggish and has not a capacity for work needs to be prodded into stern activity.

The youth whose sensibilities are extremely acute needs to acquire the defiance of recklessness.

The youth who dreams and is willing to dream

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Blessed Creator, Ruler of the nations, sin is rampant and souls are being tried. At this time when for each of us the New Year embraces a new chance, we pray Thee relieve economic pressure, equalize opportunity to earn, rid men's minds of evil plotting. Thou Who carest for men's needs, give to Thy representatives serious concern for the character of men's deeds. Put more conscience and care into civil leadership. And strengthen, Father, the Christian's purpose and promise to keep close to the path of Jesus' earthly tread—the only path that is safe for salvation. For Jesus' sake. Amen. L.

MEN AND MISSIONS.

It is anomalous indeed that Missions, the world's greatest task, and Christianity's most unselfish undertaking, are considered by many to be quite "effeminate." If ever there was a man's job, it is that of Missions. It's the most stupendous task undertaken by man, being the one world-wide task which God commissioned man to undertake. And yet we have Women's Missionary Societies and very few Men's Missionary Societies. Why should Missions be relegated to those who many men are pleased to call "the weaker sex"?

These thoughts are brought to mind by a recent leaflet entitled, "Missionary Education Among Men." Commenting on this leaflet, J. R. Scotford, in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, very aptly said:

"Once the word 'missionary society' had as feminine a connotation to the man on the street as does the Martha Washington Hotel to a New Yorker, or the Ladies' Home Journal to the world at large. A mere man may visit the former institution, but he can't take his ease and sleep there, while the 'stronger sex' reads the latter periodical only by stealth. The tides of the time are creating a greater interest in other lands and races on the part of the men. Through the luncheon club and their reading, men are getting a wider notion of the world and its needs. Missions on their part are becoming less sentimental, less theological, but more practical and broadly philosophical. When properly presented, modern missions have a real appeal to modern men."

This writer expects the day when the whole Church will be a Missionary Society. This is the aim for which we should strive and the consummation to which we should look. Until that time arrives, every man should regard Missions as his task, and if he cannot have a part in a Woman's Missionary Society, he can, at least, take the part of membership therein, and in every possible way encourage the world-wide work of Missions. The biggest, as well as the best and most manly Christ-like task on earth, is that Missionary task. J. O. A.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION AMONG MEN.

The above is the title of a pamphlet just published by the Department on Missionary Education and World Friendship of the Congregational Education Society. It was prepared by the secretary of the committee, Rev. John L. Lobingier. This pamphlet recognizes the growing interest among men and aims to suggest methods by which men may cultivate an interest in world friendship or missions. It treats of ten points, as follows: "The World Friendship Institute," or "Church School of Missions," "The Men's Class," "The Men's Clubs or Brotherhoods," "Forums and Round Tables," "The Guest Book—and Guests," "The Every-Member Canvass," "Project Dinners," "Reading," with suggested lists of books for reading, "Vacation Time," with the possibility of attendance at Summer Conferences for adults. Finally, "Local Contacts," with the opportunities offered for personal contact with people of other races or nationalities.

These ten points may indicate that many of the men of our churches are at work in the field of missionary education to a greater extent than they had supposed. These points may also suggest certain new avenues by which men may be led toward missionary-mindedness and in which they may show themselves to be "World-Christians."

Do you know a book that you are willing to put under your head for a pillow when you lie dying? Very well; that is the book you want to study while you are living. There is but one such book in the world.—Joseph Cook.

THE W. C. T. U. AND PROHIBITION.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union today sent letters to senators and representatives discussing the recent charge of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that the W. C. T. U. is inconsistent in opposing resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The W. C. T. U. makes it plain that it has not changed its position relative to the liquor traffic; and says the resubmission idea is not bona fide, but a part of the wet propaganda against the Eighteenth Amendment to obscure the full benefits of prohibition even imperfectly observed and enforced. In place of resubmission the W. C. T. U. asks for better enforcement and observance. The organization also expresses the opinion that the resubmission drive will be accompanied by wet propaganda favoring violation of the law; and says that resubmission will not take prohibition out of politics.

"The real question involved is the liquor traffic," says the W. C. T. U. "It is a vastly different thing to submit to the people a constructive measure for bettering conditions, than to submit a subversive idea fraught with selective anarchy."

The W. C. T. U. letter said that as soon as prohibition was in the constitution:

"Former liquor manufacturers started a drive to modify, cripple, or repeal the national prohibition act. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, supported political and legislative drives for beer. Later, this organization found a way to free itself from the brewers by accepting millionaire financing from Wall Street wets and a wealthy class of society leaders. It spent freely to embarrass the government and drew the enthusiastic support of every scowflaw and liquor law breaker in America.

"The same organizations now proposing resubmission have organized and financed the move to destroy prohibition state by state. Wherever successful this policy has been a boon to illicit liquor dealers. No better proof is needed than the fact that in Illinois the drive to repeal the state enforcement law had one of its strongest supporters in Senator Dan Serritella, one of Scarface Al Capone's political leaders, sealer of weights and measures in William Hale Thompson's ruinous administration in Chicago."

The letter cites the claims of the drys as to the benefits of prohibition and ends with the following.

"Although the place of prohibition in politics is not under discussion, nevertheless, the subject is not far removed from our present consideration. Resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment will not take prohibition out of politics but is likely to keep it there for many years. Prohibition was adopted fairly; it has stood all legal tests; yet its organized opponents continue their opposition. If the question is resubmitted and they lose again we have no assurance they will obey the law. To take prohibition out of politics, enforcement should be strengthened and the government should engage in a campaign of education to promote obedience."

THE BIBLE AND THE WORLD'S NEED.

(A declaration by the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches in America.)

The present state of the world, with its depression and confusion, is a summons calling us back to the Bible to learn its message, and forward with the Bible to make its message regnant in human life. More than ever in times of discouragement and perplexity we need its guidance.

In the Bible we are called to that faith in God and in the possibilities of life which is the deepest of our personal needs. We must gain its spirit of course and trust which can sustain us in even the most anxious and troubled hours. We must lay hold afresh of its unshakable assurance that a Divine purpose of love is at the heart of the universe and gives meaning to our human struggle.

In the Bible we are called to those standards of true living on which any abiding civilization must be built. We are called to place spiritual values above material gain, to care more for inner integrity of character than for external things. In a day when insidious forces encourage a selfish disregard of law and of the welfare of the community and weaken the sense of civic honor and high citizenship we need to catch anew the intense passion of the Bible for righteousness.

In the Bible we are called to the principles on which our social and economic structure must be built if it is most fully to serve the common good and permanently prosper. We must learn, more than we have yet learned, that we are "all members one of another." Those who are strong are to bear the burdens of the weak; those who have enough are to share in generous sympathy with those in need. If we follow the Bible, love and brotherhood and the spirit of cooperation will be made the touchstone of every aspect of organized society and no condition will be tolerated that create an underprivileged class, exploit any group for the advantage of another or magnify profit-seeking above the motive of service.

In the Bible we are called to the new way of life for the nations, for which the world in anguish waits. It teaches us to think of the world as one, since all mankind is the one family of God, and to cultivate a spirit of invincible goodwill toward people. Under its inspiration we dedicate ourselves to the achievement of a day when "nation shall no longer lift up sword against nation nor learn war any more."

All this, and more, indispensable to any real solution of the most crucial problems of our day, we find the Bible as the disclosure of the will of God, made supremely clear to us in its record of life and teaching and spirit of Jesus Christ. Now, as always, the Bible is the Word of God to us, bringing the needed message of personal and social salvation.

A CANADIAN PAPER ANSWERS SOME QUESTIONS.

Mr. Gifford Gordon, of Philadelphia, wrote the editor of The Toronto Globe, Canada, asking as to the operation of so-called government control in the Province of Ontario.

These questions and answers should be found highly interesting to any student of the liquor problem, and to anyone else at present, who reads the papers:

"Q. Is it your opinion that government control makes for real temperance?"

"A. No.

"Q. Does government control decrease or increase the consumption of liquor?"

"A. Liquor consumption has doubled in Ontario in two years.

"Q. Does government control decrease or increase number of drunken drivers of automobiles?"

"A. Drunken drivers have multiplied by ten, while cars doubled.

"Q. Have deaths from accidents due to drunken drivers increased under government control?"

"A. Yes, enormously.

"Q. Have industrial accidents decreased under government control?"

"A. No. Increasing 7 per cent faster than payrolls.

"Q. Has government control eliminated the bootlegger?"

"A. Large bootlegger eliminated. Small bootlegger multiplied.

"Q. Has government control proved any benefit to the young people?"

"A. No! No! No!"

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

HAS C. E. SEEN ITS BEST DAY? NO!

(By K. B. Hook, Director of Religious Education, of Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference.)

Occasionally one meets, in the course of one's everyday life, a few who contend that the world is getting worse and worse. Others are not so emphatic as to the condition of affairs and yet while in their presence one cannot help feeling an atmosphere of pessimism. On the other hand it is not a rare thing to come in contact with men and women who are so full of the joy of living and so very optimistic as to the future that it be in their presence but a short time is an event to be remembered.

In these days of depression one often hears discussions and some times arguments concerning the future of various institutions. Will this bank close? Will that business organization be able to pull through the depression? Will it be possible for small colleges to maintain their existence? Is the church adequately caring for the spiritual needs of its members? And so they come. Some believe that the present-day institutions are inadequate; that it is only a matter of a few years until these present conditions will be so changed as to cause the utter downfall of many of our systems.

Does Christian Endeavor still have a part to play? There have been those who said this great movement was only a fad which would quickly disappear when the novelty of newness wore off. They were proved false prophets just as many who predicted the fall of the Church were false prophets. These would-be destroyers of the Church have died but that greatest of all earthly institutions lives and will continue to live.

But what of Christian Endeavor? Have there been those who believed in the inadequacy of this great organization as a training school in Christian citizenship and Christian service? Yes, some of the great thinkers of the past few years have felt that there must be some organization, an organization that will better meet the needs of modern youth.

Why, let us ask, cannot Christian Endeavor be changed, if it is inadequate, so that it will better meet the needs? Can it not be a general process of evolution rather than a thoughtless revolution? Must it not be a gradual and a thoughtful development that will best serve our young people? We believe that such will be the ultimate result. Things must be thought through before radical steps are taken.

It is very evident that Christian Endeavor is far from being a dead organization. Any organization that adds 2,707 new members; that brings 836 new converts to Jesus Christ; that organizes 117 new societies; that gives $1,250 to denominational missions; that enrolls 416 persons in mission study classes; that trains 164 new C. E. experts; that adds 510 comrades of the Quiet Hour and 209 members to the Tenth Legion; whose officers travel 32,880 miles; make 424 talks; lead 64 conferences; attend 40 denominational conferences; attend 923 Christian Endeavor prayer meetings; attend 183 State, district, county and city executive-committee meetings and write 8,129 letters in one State during a short twelve months, is not yet ready to pass out of existence. These statistics represent the work in Virginia alone during the past C. E. year.

There is certainly something to an organization which interests our modern young people to the degree that they will miss two whole night's rest for the sake of driving to a district week-end conference and return when a hard week's work is ahead of them. A movement which commands the loyalty of modern youth to the extent that it will make great sacrifices of pleasure for a Christian Endeavor meeting is certainly a great movement.

To be specific, a young people's organization within the Church which can sponsor the most wholesome and enjoyable social life, which can compete with the best literary societies of secondary schools in preparing speakers, which can put on the best pageants and plays produced by amateurs, and which can maintain its grip on the hearts of young people as Christian Endeavor has done, is not a little matter to be scoffed at.

Sure, we shall be glad to see Christian Endeavor pass out of the picture when there comes something better to take its place. We want to be progressive but we desire to know that we have secured an organization superior to Christian Endeavor before we shall be willing to give up this great movement for the betterment of youth. Until that better substitute does appear, let us continue to expand the great work of Christian Endeavor not forgetting that its basis rests on the greater teachings of Christ and the Bible.

THE ALLIED FORCES ARE COMING.

Allied Youth, Allied Women, and Allied Men are coming. Since September 8th, leaders of the Allied Campaigners for Prohibition have been in the field. Visits are made in the principal cities in each State. During February and March the Campaigners will be in the South. In North Carolina they will visit Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Charlotte. Meetings are held in each town and an educational program is given. Two days' time is allotted to each city.

Mr. W. Roy Bregg, Southern Secretary of the Christian Endeavor, and known to many Christian and Congregational young people in the South, is acting as Executive Secretary. He will be glad to hear from those who would like further information about this campaign. Write him at 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City, care Allied Force for Prohibition.

TO HOLD CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR RALLY.

Sunday afternoon, January 3, there came together in Strasburg, Va., an efficient group of young people. It was an Executive Committee meeting of the Western District. The chief purpose of this meeting was the final arrangements for a program for the Rally to be held at Harrisonburg, Sunday afternoon, January 31st.

After an hour's discussion of suggestions by the Executive Committee, it was decided to have a rather comprehensive program at the Rally, a program which should include typical C. E. meetings, discussion groups for officers, committees, pastors, and general discussion, special music, and many other worth-while features.

Western District is wide-awake this year under the leadership of Rene Matthews of the Congregational-Christian Church at Winchester.

MT. OLIVET CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Our Christian Endeavor Society held a very profitable meeting on January 10, the subject being "What Shall I Do With My Money?" The following scripture lessons were read:

1. Luke 12:13-21; 15:11-19—Carroll Vernon.
2. Luke 16:19-31—Winona Morris.
3. I. Tim. 6:17-19—Clarice Morris.
4. Matt. 6:19-21—Ethel Vernon.
5. Matt. 6:1-4—Allen Shifflett.
6. Luke 16:1-13—Francis Courtney.
7. I. John 3:17-18—Elphis Morris.
8. Talks by Eugenia Snow and E. S. Morris.
9. Poem by Margaret Morris, "We Keep What We Give Away."

The Christian Endeavor Society, during fifty years of its existence, has become a force for good citizenship, world peace and international fellowship. The results of Christian Endeavor's emphasis on service are already great, young men wearing the Christian Endeavor pin, are coming to the front in legislative bodies for square dealings and honest legislation.

Young business men and women are putting a wholesome type of religion into their work. The hookworm of the soul and sleeping-sickness of the heart are finding their germicide in the doctrine that consecrated activity is Christian Endeavor.

Now in this great work for the future we must give our time, talent, money and prayers that God's kingdom may grow. LOUISE DYE.

NEW CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES ORGANIZED IN THE VALLEY OF VIRGINIA.

In recent weeks there have been at least two Christian Endeavor Societies organized near Timberville and Detrick, Va., respectively.

One of these societies which was organized by K. B. Hood, C. E. World Representative and Publicity Agent for Western District, is in a Reformed Church located on the Shenandoah-Rockingham County line. This society has an enrollment of twenty-eight young people who are very enthusiastic over this new training for Christian citizenship, leadership, and service.

The Detrick Society is a community organization composed of members from the Church of the Brethren and Methodist churches of Detrick and the Brethren and Congregational-Christian Churches of Seven Fountains. Prof. Galen O. Wine, principal of the Detrick high school, is the able president of this new organization.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

JANUARY 31, 1932.

"OUR CHURCH'S SERVICE FOR CHRIST."

For several years now the young people of the Christian Church have been, an organized and somewhat distinct group, accepting certain responsibilities. Several Conference groups of young people have pledged themselves to do certain tasks. Sometimes it has been the support of a missionary at home, sometimes a missionary abroad, sometimes the planning of Summer School courses or activities, sometimes the teaching of classes, or leading and helping in many other ways. Definite goals in relation to our Church papers and Worship and World Friendship have been set. Much more has been accomplished in this way than usually results under other methods. At least there is a check-up to find out just what young people are really doing.

This meeting is a good time to check up on just what the young people of your church know about the activities of the Church at home and in other communities. Christian Church Annuals, Year

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDE.

LESSON V.—JANUARY 31, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 6:1-13, 48-51.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."—John 6:35.

Introduction.

The lesson last Sunday dealt with incidents in Samaria. Jesus touched the springs of spiritual rebirth in the soul of the Samaritan woman. She, in turn, led many to Jesus. He was on his way to Galilee. The incidents of today's lesson take place in Galilee. Jesus' fame had spread until the multitudes sought him. He had taught them, giving those priceless sayings that are recorded in the sermon on the mount. The miracles of healing indicate that many found in Jesus some spiritual power that gave them release of mind and healing of body. He was popular with the people.

Hungry Multitudes.

Far and near the people had heard of Jesus and his disciples. The crowds pressed upon him. Five thousand men besides the women and children. What a crowd. How should they be fed? The popular evaluation of that time counted the men but not the women and children. A more Christian age counts also the women and children, not forgetting the babies. How could this great crowd be fed? Should some one go and purchase food for them? That would take money, and lots of it. The disciples seem not to have had enough money to feed them. Fortunately, there are other things of worth.

"There Is a Lad Here."

This boy was not important enough to count among the multitudes. He was not a man—only a boy. A disciple noticed him and finding that he had a lunch reported it to Jesus. Jesus had time for the children. He could use a boy and his lunch. How many boys there are around the churches and we fail to notice them; we are so busy with the men and women that we fail to see the boys. The Master saw worth in a boy with his lunch.

Feeding the Multitude.

Jesus gave thanks and distributed to the people. All were fed. Many teachers choose to dwell upon the miraculous element of the process. This seems to strengthen their faith. They focus upon the power and act of the divine. Perhaps our love for Jesus leads us to think in terms of too much wonder and mystery at times. At any rate, Jesus fed them. In the process he gave thanks and used the lunch of the lad. Some writers suggest that others had lunches with them. The act of the lad and of Jesus set the example and others shared until all were fed with food that satisfied their needs. This interpretation offers the practical suggestion for our present needs. There are millions of unemployed and hungry in the world today. How are they to be fed? Certainly, we are not going to wait for God to do it in a miraculous way. He has given to the world an abundance. Can the world give thanks and share it?

Man needs to recognize God in the material necessities and comforts of our daily lives. God is the Father of all. It is not his desire that any should perish. Too often man appropriates to himself that which God desires should be shared. We need a spiritual miracle that will enable us to so organize and administer the resources of the world that all may be fed.

Bread of Life.

Christians need the bread of life. If the Christians had more of the purpose of Jesus and spirit of his life, we could feed the multitudes that are now hungry. He shows us the way—he sets us the example. God's resources are abundant to care for all. What lack we? The spirit of sharing. Selfishness still dominates our lives in too many areas. Unselfish sharing is the spirit of Jesus. Can we grasp his larger purpose of brotherhood? There is room for the application of man's greatest talents that the social and economic problems of our complex civilization may come under the practical sway of the Giver of all life. We today may have a part in the glorious task of feeding the multitudes. Let us use the lad, too.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Books, and literature from Mission offices and other Church offices will be of great help to those who are not already well informed on just what our Church has been doing.

It is important that each church do what it can, but too much emphasis on denominational programs and projects may not be for the best in the long run. Especially in our work in other countries denominationalism has proved to be confusing. We should be glad if we have accomplished something in the Kingdom's work, but it should be our resolution from now on to break down as rapidly as possible the barriers of denominationalism.

Interesting leaflets on the work of the Congregational-Christian Church in America may be had by addressing the American Missionary Association, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. These leaflets will reveal more than twenty schools, each with unique histories and each filling a peculiar need in its section. Leaflets on our foreign work may be had from the same address by writing the Commission on Missions. Make this meeting your opportunity to learn about the splendid work that has been carried on in nearly every country of the whole wide world. There are thrilling stories awaiting you!

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

LIFE JUST BEFORE DEATH—WHAT?

LESSON: II. Peter 1:12-18.

"I will not be negligent; yea, I think it meet as long as I am in the tabernacle, to stir you up."

Modern Speech Version.—"I shall always persist—I think it right so long as I remain in the body, to arouse you."

Saint Peter was zealous unto the last for the salvation of the brethren. Years made no difference. He kept on, and the Lord blessed him with a clear mind and a fervent spirit. Even now, just before his death, he is full of fire as he was at Pentecost.

This is as it should be. It is a sad thing when Christians become lukewarm, or let up in effort, or let the inner man grow old with the body; something which frequently happens, especially in case of impulsive zeal in the earlier days.

To this end the transfiguration is important, proving conclusively the glory of God dwelt in Jesus. It is this positive faith which makes Peter so energetic and robust even on the brink of the grave.

Can we emulate Peter? He gives two things which shall surely help us to do this. First, heed God's word. In it we have assurance of victory over sin, divine power and everlasting life. Second, personal endeavor. Strive diligently to lead a life of holiness. He who does this has all the grace, strength and promise of God. So shall we "make our election and calling sure." So live like Peter that those coming after us may have these things in their remembrance also.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, help us to do this. Lead us with thee all the way. Crucify everything in us that is displeasing to thee. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE SALT OF THE WORLD.

LESSON: Matt. 5:13-16.

"Ye are the salt of the earth."

Noah was the salt of the earth in the days of the deluge. Lot was the salt of Sodom. Joseph was the salt of the tribes. Moses was the salt of Israel. David was the salt of the Kingdoms, and the faithful saints were the salt of Jerusalem. As long as the righteous dwell among the ungodly the judgments of God are warded off, but when the saints disappear, then the Bible says, "The eagles gather about the carcass." The proud men of the world do not know that the prayers of God's children are props which sustain the country and nation.

If this is true, how it behoves the faithful to strive the more earnestly for faithfulness and holiness. It has been said that "what the soul is to the body the Christians are to the world." The flesh is often in contradiction to the soul, but it is the soul that prevents the body from giving itself over to ruinous lusts. The world opposes (if not to say, hates) the Christian, but it is the Christianity in the world that saves the world from perdition. A writer is quoted as saying, "The soul is housed in the body, but it sustains the body; the Christians are housed in the world, but they sustain the world."

Prayer—Come, Lord Jesus, and drive away all false pretenses; let the love born of God burn and glow in our hearts; let thy light shine in us that the name of the Lord may be glorified in the world. Help us to radiate thy love and shew forth thy praise forever more. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LESSON: Heb. 12:1-11.

"Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us."

Lay aside every weight which impairs our strength, everything that is a hindrance, purge self of sin constantly tolerating it in no way. If we should be chastised or caused to suffer, that is to be like Christ; without it we are without the kingdom. There is at the end of every suffering a prize. It was thus Jesus became the "Author" of faith and has gone before us as the "finisher" also. What is all our suffering compared with his; and what is our tribulation compared with the glory of "seeing him as he is"?

Prayer—Blessed by thy name, Lord Jesus! Let us truly experience the power of thy resurrection and the fellowship of thy suffering, if by this we shall be like thee. Make us keep our eyes fixed on thee always, even as thou, Faithful Saviour, dost keep me ever in thine eyes and heart. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A VIRGIN SOUL.

LESSON: Rev. 14:1-5.

"For they are virgins."

These are loud songs of heaven. But the songs of heaven, however loud, are as beautiful as the sweet strains of a harp; power and tenderness are united. The "new songs" which they sing are concerning the new things which they see in God.

The word "virgin" here, it is said, refers to purity of mind, the soul's chaste love; to one who does not love the world, but serves God with a single heart; to those who follow the Lamb and are one with him; whose mind and spirit fundamentally differ from the world; to those in whom there is "no guile;" to those without fault before the throne of God." Perhaps they do not reach sinless perfection here on earth, but they strive after it and do not cease before they reach it in the world to come.

Prayer—Help us, dear Lord. Give us the soul's chaste love. Open our ears to heaven's music and heaven's charms, and teach us how to live for the new songs with the angels. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE FAITH SERIES.

LESSON: Heb. 11:8-16.

"Heirs with him of the same promise."

The faithful of the old covenant waited a long time for the coming of Christ and for full salvation; and they thought of the coming of Christ as synonymous with victory over sin and the devil and the perfection of souls in their new home. Time passed and now we live in the midst of that for which they longed. Christ has come, the kingdom is revealed, atonement for sin has been made, justification is an accomplished fact, and the new home, while not realized, is made known to us, and we know how to live in order to obtain it.

However much clearer these things are to us than it was to them, we do not walk by sight; we also walk by faith; for we have God's word for it, and the church with its triumphs and holy means of grace, which bears witness in our hearts, and we are "made to sit down in heavenly places in Christ Jesus."

Prayer—"Blessed be the man, O Lord, who for thy sake disengages himself from everything of the world, and with fervent zeal crucifies the lusts of the flesh, so that the soul with a clear conscience brings to thee its pure offering of prayer, and becomes fit to join the angelic chorus when all earthly things, of the body and of the mind, are shut out." Grant us this mercy, heavenly Father, for Jesus sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LESSON: Rev. 7:13-17.

"These are they which have come up out of great tribulation and have washed their robes."

The transfiguration gives us glory as a preparation for tribulation. The Revelation gives us tribulation as a preparation for glory.

Jacob waited long in tribulation for the salvation of the Lord. Naomi lost both husband and sons; David was given tears to drink; and Jeremiah sang lamentations to remove a stone. But behold these, and all the other saints of old, now before the throne of God clothed in white robes.

Moses is no longer troubled with the stubbornness of the people; Job is no longer poor; Peter rejoices; Paul is rid of his thorn in the flesh; and these are they who have "come up out of great tribulation and have washed their robes." These are the saints of heaven.

The school of affliction here prepares believers to bear the cross of Christ nobly; and the reward for noble living is deliverance from all this, from all sin, and with it all sorrow and death. "With him there is fulness of joy; at the right hand of God are pleasures for evermore." It is said of them: "The lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them into living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

Prayer—O Lord, thou knowest how lukewarm we are; and thou knowest the obstacles that bar our way. Inspire us and strengthen us; and enable us to cast from us everything which may endanger our salvation. Reveal to us so much of thy coming glory that we can see and press on, rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation and continuing instant in prayer. Make us faithful and guide us to the goal. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A SUBLIME DECLARATION.

LESSON: Heb. 13:8.

"Jesus, the same yesterday, today and forever."

This is truly a sublime declaration. Everything changes, but he is ever the same. His power and love continue unchanged; his care for the church and for each child of his is the same as it always was. The pillars of life are shaken and foundations are laid bare; but he lives, and is the same. As he has loved from eternity so does he love now, and so shall he love forever. John, Peter and Paul found him infinitely merciful toward sinners; and so he is toward us also. He it is who hath guided us during the past years. Let us never forget to praise the Lord.

Prayer—The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

WHO IS A FAITHFUL STEWARD?

(By REV. J. H. DOLLAR, La Grange, Ga.)

"If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?" (Luke 16:1-17.)

We come today to study one of the central themes of the Bible—Stewardship.

Before we begin to follow the practice and teaching as we find it in the Bible, let us define what is meant by Stewardship so that we may know of what we speak. Mr. Lovejoy, in his book, "Stewardship for all of Life," says that it is "The recognition of our responsibility to God as stewards of everything we are and have—life, time, talents, possessions and spiritual resources—and a recognition of our responsibility is fundamental to wholesome Christian faith and experience." In other words, we may say that Stewardship is the acknowledgment of God's ownership of all we have and are, and of our trusteeship. God has willed us certain things, whatever we may have—life, time, talents, money, etc., and has trusted us with their care and use to His glory.

Just how Stewardship first came to be taught we do not know, but we do know that it had its beginning in the Garden of Eden. Cain and Abel offered "The first fruits of the ground, the firstlings of he flocks and the fat thereof." (Gen. 4:2-8.) Abraham followed them and gave the first definition of stewardship (Gen. 14:17-20) ever recorded, and recognized "the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth." The real principle of stewardship is thus declared by "the father of the faithful," and as his recognition of that principle, "He gave him the tenth of all." Cain and Abel brought the first fruits of their vines and the first choice of their flocks, but we are not told what part. Abraham brought the tenth!

Jacob, Abraham's grandson, gives us a shining example of his faith in God, and as well his sense of stewardship, when he found himself an outcast, penniless and friendless, and vowed: "If thou wilt be with me and keep me in the way that I go, and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, so that I may come again into my father's house in peace, of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." (Gen. 28:20-22.) Thus we find one of man's first convictions to be that of God's ownership and man's stewardship. This principle, we should remember, was not handed down in writing, but by practice, and in obedience to the voice of God. "Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes and my laws." (Gen. 26:5.) These examples of stewardship came perhaps five hundred years before the writing of the law.

Let us hear the voice of God spoken through Malachi a thousand years after the law was given, and we shall notice two things: First, that the law of the tithe was generally recognized, and second, that Israel had fallen away from its keeping. "Will a man rob God?" He answers the question and says, "Yet ye have robbed me." Then God puts the words of the next question into Israel's mouth to ask, "Wherein have we robbed thee?" The answer is clear when God accuses, "In tithes and offerings." Then God says to Israel, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes; he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall your vine cast its fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts." (Mal. 3:8-12.)

It is an interesting study to compare the emphasis we place upon Sabbath observance and note how seldom and carelessly we observe the law of the tithe. We stress Sabbath observance, but break half the commandment at the same time. We are commanded to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, but we are also commanded to lay aside, upon the first day of the week, as the Lord has prospered us. When we fail to keep the commandment of the tithe we only half keep the Sabbath, no matter how many times we attend church. The law of the tithe is as old as the law of Sabbath observance, and is taught far more generally and mentioned many more times in the Bible. Why have we separated the two? Why do we not keep all the law?

Disregard for the Sabbath is not the sin from which the world is suffering most, but from the disregard of that which is God's. The Sabbath was made for man, but the tenth is the Lord's. These statements are not made in disregard of the Sabbath, but because the sacredness of the Sabbath is so generally recognized, we use it with the hope that we may lift to higher regard the equally important and sacred law of the tithe.

If we had been honest with God, and had paid him that which is commanded, we would not have so hard a time providing food for the family and shoes for their feet. "If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?" That is the way Jesus puts it, but it is a hard saying, and who can hear it?

God is kind, loving and merciful, but he will not withhold his wrath forever. We have tried to be honest with each other and be dishonest with God. We have wanted to pay "our just and honest debts" to each other, but all the time we have been robbing God and now we have come to the place that we are unable to pay each other.

I am not surprised at the want and suffering all over the world. We have just recently felt a great depression in every line of industry, but I am convinced that the first depression was one of the heart because we have been untrue and dishonest with God. Our faith in Him weakened and we ceased to trust Him. Then we began to lose faith in each other. When our faith is renewed and our trust placed in Him, and our vows paid, we will again have faith in each other and be willing to trust others to give us that which is our own. But until we are willing to follow God's plan and work His will, we are as well off as we ever can be.

The primary purpose of the tithe is not to raise money, but to teach and practice honesty and build character. A well-known writer has said that "An ever-present conscious knowledge of God's sovereignty and ownership of all things is the cornerstone of character building and tithing is an expressed acknowledgment of such sovereignty and ownership. It is putting God and not ourselves, first every day, every hour and every moment of life, thereby building dependable Christian character, and is intended to help up both spiritually and temporally."

God does not promise to pay us back in dollars and cents the money we invest in his work, for His kingdom is spiritual, not material or temporal. But as a matter of fact, He does pay us back, and much more! We have the joy of heart from knowing that we have paid the tithe to Him to whom it belongs, and while we endeavor to be honest with Him we become more honest with ourselves; better business men and better providers.

John D. Rockefeller began tithing at the age of eight years, when he was a very poor lad. He has been criticised for his fortune, but he has given away more than a half-billion dollars. Charity and educational interests have shared richly. But, is his fortune more than God has promised him who "Brings all the tithes into the storehouse, that there shall be meat in My house?" Then does God not promise that the "Windows of heaven shall be opened and a blessing poured out that there shall not be room enough to receive it"?

William Colgate, like Jacob, when a poor boy, vowed that he would give a tenth of all that God gave him. He went to work in a soap factory and soon became a trustworthy employee and later an officer in the company. The first dollar he earned he paid the tenth. As he grew richer he increased his giving and finally he gave his entire income to benevolent work, and besides many other monuments to his life, perhaps the greatest is that of Colgate University, which he has caused to be a great force in American education.

"Right giving is a part of right living; the living is not right when the giving is wrong. The giving is wrong when we steal God's portion and spend it on ourselves."

May God grant us faith to walk with Him in the payment of the tithe, and when we shall have come to the end of the way help us truthfully to say: "My foot hath held its step, His way I have kept and not declined, neither have I gone back from the commandments of His lips; I have esteemed the words of His mouth more than my necessary food."

COLLEGE STUDENTS AND THE OLD HOME CHURCH.

Piedmont College students returned to their work Monday, January 4th. The vacation of nearly two weeks had taken them to many homes scattered through Alabama, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, and even as far as Cuba. What this meant to the old home church is more than can be estimated. But it is this very same old home church which is feeding the higher duties of citizenship with rich young life now being trained in our colleges and, to a certain well-defined extent, our Christian Colleges. Men who are paying scholarships to Piedmont, Elon and other colleges are investing in life. It is in just this quality of College opportunity given to the young men and young women by men of means—and some of them of very little means—which opens the way to investments which never fail to return dividends in character and Christian experience that counts. It counts for the one who invests and the one who benefits. Like mercy whose quality is not strained, "it blesses him who gives and him who receives." Piedmont and Elon, indeed, have equal honor gathered from years of untold inspiration and the creation of idealisms in the student life which can never die. For all the old home church must share in the honor and the satisfactions of offerings; for it is the church which must furnish the young people with the springs of ambition and then by its endowment of college with abundant means guarantee the proper development of the investment in life.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

January has been an exceptionally warm month up to this date (January 15th). While the weather is unusually warm for the time of year, it is fine on poor people and orphanages. Last year at this time it was so cold that it was hard for us to keep a supply of coal on hand. This winter we have only bought two carloads and have enough to run us to February. The children's health has been good up to this writing and all putting in full time at school.

We offered a prize of $5.00 in gold to the one who made "A's" on all their studies during the entire year. It now looks as though I will have to call on some of my friends to come to my rescue. Quite a number are making "A's", and I only have one $5.00 gold coin.

Our children are doing nicely in school and making good grades. We will have five to graduate this year. Two want to take training in nursing. Two want to go to college. The other one has not decided. We hope to be able to provide for each one so they can further their education and make useful citizens.

Our friends have been good to us, and the following has been sent in:

Hank's Chapel Christian Endeavor and Sunday School, 12½ bushels wheat, 10 chickens, 8 bushels corn, 2½ bushels potatoes.

Ladies' Aid Society of the Antioch Christian-Congregational Church, 1 box clothing.

W. R. Brown, Asheboro, N. C., 4 pecks meal, 5 gallons molasses, ¼ barrel flour, 6 quarts fruit, 1 bushel wheat.

Bethlehem Christian Church, 14 hens for Christmas.

SPICE FOR MESSAGES: PROVERBS.

The world is choked cold on religion, but it knows but little of an experience of grace. Too many folks have religion like the bullfrog; he sits on the bank and sings bass all the summer; but he dives in the mud and stays all winter; so it is with a great many church-members; they sit in the Amen corner or on front seats in revival time, but they dive in sin and the quagmires of the devil, and the preachers never see them till next revival, unless some of the family dies.

I like the spirit of the tortoise, he makes his way slowly but he gets there after awhile. Then other people have religion like a grasshopper; he leaves the ground like he is going all the way now, but he soon lights. A great many church members get a double-barrel case of enthusiasm at times; if they can not run the church like they want to, they light like the grasshopper. We have enough hoppers in the church but they are not grasshoppers.

We have many Jelly-fish members in the church, where-ever the tide leaves them, the poor fellows stay there and die. If the preacher turns up the quagmire of the devil, and turns the sunlight of God's mercy on it, then the little tadpoles in there say the preacher is hard-boiled.

Some folks are as low-down as alligators, and they are so low-down they drag the ground and their claws down deep into the ground. Some one will say this is too hard; well the morning that I was baptized there were two gaitors about six feet long that lay on top of the water, a few yards from us. They acted with more manners than many of the on-looking spectators.

When that poor sinner is convicted, he is like the iceberg floating across the torrid zone; he feels himself away, in the presence of God, but when he is converted, he is like the glacier sliding down the Rocky Mountains, he is bound for the "Promised Land." Others will come later.

DR. TUCKER'S NEW POST.

Dr. F. F. Tucker, who inadvertently shot a thief in the Williams-Porter Hospital at Techow last summer, has withdrawn from active service with the American Board in North China and joined the staff of the United Methodist Mission (British) at Wutingfu, Shantung. Mrs. Tucker, who is also a physician, has taken up work at their new station; her husband will give several months to work with the National Flood Relief Commission before proceeding to Wutingfu.

Concerning the manifesto on the Techow incident, issued by 27 of his associates, Dr. Tucker writes: "Firearms were not used to protect either person or property. Every excellent opportunity, as the recorded evidence shows, to injure the intruder was waived, and the revolver was fired (wide each time in intent) to summon aid and to caution the robber to surrender." It is unfortunate from many points of view that the American authorities who conducted a thorough investigation of the case have issued no official statements. Such a survey of the evidence would clear up many erroneous ideas concerning the facts in the case.

The sexton had been laying the new carpet on the pulpit platform, and had left a number of tacks scattered on the floor.

"See here, James," said the parson, "what do you suppose would happen if I stepped on one of these tacks right in the middle of my sermon?"

"Well, sir," replied the sexton, "I reckon there would be one point you wouldn't linger on."

OFFICIAL CANADIAN REPORT.

Although proponents of the Canadian systems of government sale of intoxicating liquor argue that the Canadian government and each province selling liquor makes considerable profit and a tax besides, they have failed to tell the country that the latest official government report on the Canadian liquor traffic also shows a rise in drunkenness, an increase in deaths from alcoholism and a rapidly mounting rate of convictions for drunken driving and traffic accidents. The Canadian government issued such a report, obtainable from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, Canada.

YOUTH.

his life away needs to try to attain a practical viewpoint.

And the youth who is too fiery and all expectant needs to flavor his ambitions and desires with the necessary quality of patience.

But, after all, life is an individual experience and an individual adjustment in this world of interdependence. And while youth needs encouragement, it needs most of all, understanding and charity; it needs, too, patience, with not too much upbraiding for its foibles and aberrations from the strict code of conduct.—Gospel Advocate.

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

OBITUARIES.

CROWDER.

Our heavenly Father called home our brother, W. M. Crowder, on November 24, 1931. In his going we keenly feel our loss, but our loss is heaven's gain.

Therefore, Be it Resolved; That we, the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Lowell Christian Church, bow to the will of God and say, "Not our will, but thine be done."

Be it Further Resolved; That we remember his words and deeds to enrich our own souls.

Be it Further Resolved; That we honor his memory and consecrated life by carrying on the work that was so dear to his life.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions he sent to the family, one put on the secretary's book, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

MRS. OTIS CHASE,
MRS. ELTON SMITH,
MR. GLOVER KEEHLE.

ALDRIDGE.

Mrs. Mamie Lea Aldridge, wife of J. N. Aldridge, of Burlington, N. C., passed from labor to reward at her home on December 29, 1931, aged fifty-two years. She is survived by her husband and eleven children, who feel most keenly her death.

Sister Aldridge was a member of Union Christian Church and had been for a number of years. She was a devoted wife and mother, a good neighbor and a trustful follower of Jesus Christ.

The funeral services were conducted from Union Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. J. O. Lankford, and her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Sweet be her sleep till Jesus Christ bids her awake on the resurrection morning. May Jesus the Healer of broken hearts, comfort the bereaved.

Prepare to Enter College.—

Young people should prepare in times like these for better days. Many are unemployed and cannot secure employment during these times of depression, but they can save the time by using it to prepare for better things when times are better. Conditions will soon be better, at least in a few years we shall see more substantial conditions and the young men and women who sacrifice now and secure an education will be leaders when better conditions come. Numbers of young people who are not in college now could enter this spring and make a half-year's preparation for life. They could get credit for all they would do towards graduation, and those who cannot enter college before fall could be making plans to enter in the fall and prepare themselves for useful life.

College Gains.—

Surveying 444 approved colleges and universities, the dean of Swarthmoor College reports that there are, in this year of lean finances, 3,721 more students enrolled than last year and twenty per cent more than in the heyday of prosperity five years ago. It's pointed out, however, that when anybody is kept out of college it is generally the daughter, not the son—for women's enrollment, this year, decreased 2,044. Gains are largest in eastern colleges. In size, the University of California, including Berkley and Los Angeles branches, outranks all others with 18,342 enrolled, with Columbia second, at 15,109, and Minnesota third with 12,539. In Germany there has been an increase of nearly 71 per cent in the number of students attending college in the past eighteen years. In 1913 there were 77,000 college students in Germany, while today there are 132,000.

Lost Tribe?—

Skepticism greeted a tale of Tibet brought to London last week by one Jill Crossley-Blatt, Englishwoman, and a Dr. Irvine Baird, Canadian. But the pair claimed that they had proof of a tribe who live in a cranny of the Himalayas that "are white and appear to belong to the earliest civilization. We were able to identify this race of people by their writings. Their hieroglyphics are the same as those of the old Chaldeans. It is possible that some 2,000 or more years B. C., they moved away from their homes in Mesopotamia and traveled to the lands to the north of India. They live about 110 years, continue to marry at the age of 75 or 80, and are a very hardy people. Their girls are attractive and have good skins and long hair hanging in disorder down their backs. They know nothing of the use of cosmetics or perfumes. They use fats on their hair. They live as naturally as any race now left on earth and although the climate is very cold they go about scantily clad."

Expressions of Loyalty.—

The entire correspondence concerning Elon College with reference to the proposed presidency of Dr. Smith as permanency, has revealed the fact that in the hearts of the membership and friends of the church there is an abiding love for the college and confidence in Dr. Smith as the man who can make the college what the entire church desires. With his frankness, fairness, faithfulness, fondness for folks, daylight policy of administration, honesty of purpose, sterling worth as a man and leader, worthy of the trust of the entire church and the entire public, we can be assured that he shall have the support, love, and loyalty of the entire church and a generous public. His efforts in everything that he has undertaken since he left the cotton-fields of Georgia to this good day, have been a success, and if he becomes the permanent president of the college there can be but one ultimate result and that is success. He will have the love and confidence of the entire church because he merits such an attitude, and the alumni and future graduates will increasingly support him.

Speakers' Bureau.—

All the ministers of the conferences, in North Carolina have been asked to become members of the speakers' bureau for Elon College, and most of them have responded with a hearty approval of the plan to present the needs of the college to the people by exchange of pulpits. There is an enthusiastic interest in the college such as I have not seen for years among the ministers. All seem united in their hearty approval of Dr. L. E. Smith as president and express faith in his ability to lead Elon College to become what she has been designed to be in the minds of her founders—an institution for the preparation of young people for successful leadership both in church and state. Several expressed the hope that Dr. Smith would soon give his unqualified consent to abide with the college as president with the belief that as soon as this is done a greater enthusiasm would result. We regret that his coming to Elon College would deprive the fine church at Norfolk of his services as pastor, but the service that he would render at the college would serve the entire church including Norfolk with all the rest, and the church needs his services here as nowhere else.

Go to Church Sunday.—

Let everyone make an effort to observe "go-to-church-Sunday" during the next six weeks in North Carolina Christian churches, for during that time you may have a new preacher or speaker to speak on the church college. Our people should be informed about the college and its future, and they should be very much concerned about the future of the college. Even if you cannot contribute to the campaign fund at this time, be sure to attend the church service in which the claims of the college will be presented, to show your interest in the college if nothing else. We know that there are thousands in the church that love the college and believe in the president and his administration. They will attend the special services for the college. They will be much in prayer for the success of all the efforts that are being put forth for the college. They will contribute as they are able to meet the present needs and will plan to continue their support as they may prosper and as they may be justified in doing so by the wise administration of the college business. They will use their influence to get others to attend the church service during this month so as to secure a large hearing concerning the college.

Peacemakers?—

The world talks peace and prepares for war. The figures prove it—and nowhere more startlingly than in the United States. Recent studies made by the Foreign Policy Association indicate that in 1930 the expenditures of the six great military powers for land, sea and air armaments were 63 per cent higher than in 1913. And of the six, the United States—in war-maker's zeal—is far in the lead. Our increased military expenditures over 1913 are 197 per cent; Japan's 142 per cent; Great Britain's, 42 per cent; France's, 30 per cent; Italy's, 44 per cent; Russia's, 30 per cent. Alone among the powers, Great Britain, from 1926 to 1930, showed an actual decrease for military outlay—though the amount was only $6,000,000. Meanwhile, as a result of the military spirit engendered by these war preparations, sentiment is gaining headway for a postponement of the world conference on disarmament scheduled to meet in Geneva in February. For seven years the preparation for this conference has been under way. Now, with the time at hand, the statesmen of the world don't dare risk it. If the Geneva Conference is a failure—or even if it is indefinitely postponed—we're likely to find ourselves, before we know it, in another armament competition which, like all armament competitions, will probably prove a prelude to another war.

NOTES-PERSONALS

You need THE CHRISTIAN SUN and THE CHRISTIAN SUN needs your subscription. Why not today?

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of the Richmond church, reports a decided improvement in the attendance at prayer meeting services during the past few weeks.

Jesse F. West, Jr., of Waverly, Va., was in Richmond on business last Saturday. Mr. West is president of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention and an active lay worker in the Christian church.

Mrs. A. N. White, the mother of Rev. E. B. White, pastor of our Windsor parish, passed away on Saturday, January 23, after an illness of long duration. Our sympathies are with Brother White and the family in this time of sorrow.

Rev. J. U. Fogleman pastor Graham-Providence Memorial Church, is soliciting an offering among his people for Elon College, and with hundreds of other Alumni, is saying: "We will do anything we can to save Elon."

Dr. Martyn Summerbell, president, Palmer Institute-Starkey Seminary, Lakemont, N. Y., the energetic octogenarian, deeply interested in every enterprise of the Church, writes: "Dr. Smith seems to be taking hold with vigor and effectiveness in the college work. He is a very able man, and I rejoice in his career."

A consecrated correspondent writes: "I am sending a little donation to Missions which is not a tenth but a third and no more in sight. But I send this gladly, verily believing that I will get a greater blessing for giving one out of three than the rich will get for giving thousands. And, of course, the greater blessing would come if I gave as the 'Mite-Widow' did. I pray God's blessing upon our Mission needs and work."

Rev. Joe French, a former beloved pastor of the Valley Virginia Conference, is pursuing his work leading to the M. A. degree and hopes also to finish this and secure his B. D. degree this summer. He hopes then to enter fully and wholeheartedly into pastoral work, and certainly any church securing his services will have a capable competent and successful pastor. Brother French sends this personal word: "I hear good news from Elon and hope all her difficulties will be settled favorably and that our dear Elon will continue to render her unique service in the field of education."

One generous soul in sending a contribution to Missions, says: "I am glad to deny myself not only of things I want, but of things I need, for my Lord, for he has done so much for me. As long as I live and have my mind, I intend to give to Missions—every other call through the Church appeals to me, even if not so much as Missions. If we really are missionary and mean to do the Mission task, we cannot stop with prayer and effort; we have got to put money in, too, and some times more than we are able, because our Lord is building up his kingdom through the consecration of money in self-denial for Missions."

Deacon J. W. Felton, of Elm Avenue church, writes: "We are still growing at Elm Avenue.

Have had over one hundred to unite with our Sunday school and about fifteen with the church since last May. We will finish paying for our Sunday school room additions next month, and it looks now like we will have to build more rooms soon. We are fond of our pastor, Brother Phillips, and he is doing a splendid work. The good Lord is blessing Elm Avenue, and we are growing. We are taking an offering for Elon and will help some this week." The offerings and donations for Elon from the churches are necessarily small, but there seems to be a growing feeling of confidence and a universal desire and determination to meet the pressing demands of the college, and carry on our beloved institution to greater usefulness and service.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C., Treasurer of the Woman's Mission Board, North Carolina Christian Conference, writing under recent date, says: "I have received for the first quarter of the present conference year, $403.87. This is the smallest amount received in some years, but several of our societies have money tied up in closed banks." Our Mission cause is hit hard by banks closing, as some of the treasurers of societies and treasurers of Sunday schools and churches had deposits to the credit of Missions, which deposits were closed up before the checks reached the treasurer. Also the December collections for Missions were tied up, and though it is hoped and expected that the latter will be collected because of a bond carried by the Mission Secretary covering that feature, there is great embarrassment in meeting present demands. Thus the spiritual task of the Church, and that through which the Church seeks to enlarge its usefulness and numbers in the world, is handicapped and hindered. Surely, every offering made now for kingdom enlargement is through self-denial, since individuals as well as institutions are the victims of circumstances over which they have no control.

Rev. D. B. Atkinson, Dean of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., writes in a personal letter and voices the conviction of thousands in these words:

"I am watching with keen interest the progress of Elon College in her campaign for funds. Elon is vital to the life and success of the churches in the Southern Convention, and has rendered such large and valuable service to the churches that the friends of the college cannot afford to allow the institution to fail. Success now, in these strenuous times, will mean vast spiritual growth for those who support the college and a closeness of sympathy and fellowship for the future that no amount of success in easy times could bring. I pray that abundant success may come to the college.

"Dr. Smith is a noble leader and I hope that he may receive such encouragement now that he will decide to remain with the college, if he has not already made this decision. I am anxiously awaiting news concerning his decision."

Dr. Atkinson is finding his work at Piedmont quite congenial and adds that "our fellowship with the Congregational brethren in this state (Georgia) is quite congenial and inspiring."

MT. AUBURN.

A happy surprise awaited the pastor at his last appointment at Mt. Auburn Church. Our excellent superintendent, J. A. Kimball, will continue the Sunday school throughout the entire year and everybody is rejoiced at the decision. Years ago, after the automobile came into use and the red roads were impassable by car during the winter months, the Sunday school here was discontinued during the first quarter of the year because of the difficulty of travel, but now the roads have been improved and we have a good Sunday school even during the winter and a much better one during the summer.

No church can hope to grow without a Sunday school, and it cripples the church to discontinue the Sunday school simply for one quarter during the winter. If we can attend other places for business in the week during the winter, we certainly can attend Sunday school almost at our door when the roads have been so much improved.

All the churches of the community now have flourishing Sunday schools during the entire winter months and in the summer all the churches unite in a union meeting, with the pastors of the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopal and Christian churches participating. One year the meeting is held in one church, the next year in the next, and all take part in the services as though there were only one congregation. This rule has worked beautifully for more than ten years and all the people of the community enjoy a happy Christian fellowship throughout the year.

W. C. W.

PLEASANT GROVE.

This church is one of the old strong churches of the denomination in Halifax County, Va., and there are many sacred memories that cluster around this church. At present it has an excellent Sunday school under the direction of an Elon graduate as superintendent, Miss Nannie Baker Farmer, who is a teacher in the school in the community at Oak Level, only a few miles away. Under her capable administration, we have had an active Sunday school with excellent, worshipful opening exercises, in which the children and the young people are practiced in real worship. This Sunday school is conducted all the year, regardless of the rain or weather. The people of this community go to school all the winter months and they reason that they can attend church as well as they can attend school, and their logic is sound and their reasoning is bearing fruit. Not only children, but young people and old attend this Sunday school. Of course, during winter, there are people who have a poor way to travel who cannot attend Sunday school at a distance, but the attendance is good and commendable.

The people at all my churches have been generous to their pastor during these strenuous times and have given many valuable things toward the support of the pastor and his family when they could not give money. They have kept their salaries paid up reasonably well, and will meet all their obligations to the pastor when times are better.

W. C. W.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference has been invited to meet with the Liberty Church in Vance County this fall in its annual session, and we wish to express our thanks as President of the Conference for the invitation. I am confident that the Executive Committee will gladly accept the invitation and that the church will, as usual, provide the conference excellent entertainment. This church is one of the largest rural churches in North Carolina, and has the largest Sunday school of fine young people. This church also has an active young pastor in the person of Rev. S. E. Madren, sometime missionary to our mountain work, and now graduate student in the School of Religion at Duke University. He believes in smiling and having the world smile with him, for he is a happy congenial spirit and will make all happy who attend the church of which he is pastor.

W. C. WICKER, President.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

MRS. JOSEPH E. EACH has been obliged to rest for a month, following over-zealous work for the Church.

REV. W. H. CURL has concluded five years as pastor of Friendship Church, Trinity, Alabama. Twenty-three new members were received in this church in 1931.

REV. THOMAS M. HODGON, former pastor at West Hartford, Conn., but now residing at Deland, Fla., is preaching as supply at the Orange City Church.

REV. GEORGE H. BELL succeeded the Rev. C. E. Burkett as pastor of Wesley Chapel, near Goshen, Alabama, on January 1st. Brother Burkett plans to move to another section of Alabama.

UNION CHURCH, MOUNTAIN CREEK, ALABAMA, is developing its Sunday School, and is seeking to establish a Christian Endeavor Society. Rev. and Mrs. George Watson are leading in these activities.

AT THE MOUNT CARMEL CHURCH, Hamilton, Alabama, the Christian Endeavor Society and B. Y. P. U. meet jointly, as do also the Sunday Schools of the Congregational and the Free Will Baptist Churches.

CHRISTIAN AND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES will be reported together in Alabama in the next Year Book. There will probably be an "x" (denoting extra quality) to designate the Christian Churches.

IN SPITE OF THE DEPRESSION, Barton Chapel, to which the Rev. and Mrs. George L. Day minister, has raised its apportionment and has discharged local obligations to the bank and to the Church Building Society.

REV. JOSEPH P. BEAN is rejoiced at the progress of Christian Endeavor Societies at Wesley Chapel, near Delta, Alabama, and Bethel Church, near Millersville. The latter organization has 33 members and sixty in attendance.

REV. W. H. TILLMAN of Crestview, Florida, pushes his work at Crestview and outlying points. At Christmas time he went to Thorsby Institute for six students from his area, and took the same bunch back to school at the close of vacation.

REV. THOMAS H. DERRICK, of Orange City, is now at the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at Lake City, where he is improving in health, but expects to have to remain for some weeks. He will be cheered by letters from his friends in the southeast, all of whom wish for him an early recovery.

MISS DORA BRACKIN, who suffered a break-down on account of too much zeal for her work and application to it, has recovered from her illness, and seems to be in better health than ever. She is at her home, near Headland, Alabama, and is able to take part in the regular local activities.

ENIGMA CHRISTIAN CHURCH, Enigma, Georgia, will entertain the Georgia Christian Life Conference the fifth Sunday, January 31, 1932. Miss Annie Campbell and Rev. C. W. Carpenter are in charge of this conference, and it will be one of the movements which is making our Georgia churches grow.

FLORIDA APPORTIONMENT receipts for 1931 amounted to $6,922.23. This does not include the "undesignated" or "unbudgeted" gifts which will increase the total quite considerably. The gifts from the churches exceeded those of 1930 by $1.23, a close margin, but we are glad it was an increase and not a decrease.

MR. W. C. BONHAM, of the Birmingham Congregational Community Church is the last trustee to be elected by the Thorsby Institute. This school was reported out of debt at the regular quarterly meeting of the Trustee Board held in January. It has all the pupils that can be accommodated in its boarding department.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY, having discovered that it has, unknowingly, been doing business contrary to the charter for twenty years has, under the direction of able attorneys, recently gone through the process of correction and reorganization. This seems to put the Academy on quite a different basis, and a new program is possible.

REV. RICHARD A. MCKAY has been pastor of Mount Olive Church, Tallassee, Alabama, one of the strongest rural Congregational Churches of Alabama, for five years. He is now succeeded by Rev. H. M. Gray, a Christian Church pastor. The Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches will be held at this church in November.

THE MID-WINTER MEETINGS, in a modified form, were held in New York at the Congregational Headquarters, January 19-23. Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent of Florida, attended as a member of the Cooperative Council, and also attended the meeting of State Superintendents. He also visited at his old home in Hartford, Conn.

WHITE GIFTS TO THE KING were made by the Stearns, Kentucky, Church, this year and were more liberal than usual. Rev. Almon O. Stevens, of Stearns, is the chairman of the local Red Cross, and so is able to minister to many of the distressed people of the community. He has helped to establish a Sunday School at Barron Fork, near Stearns.

"THE TOWN AND COUNTRY QUARTERLY," the first of its kind to be issued by our Press, and which has just appeared, is written by Hermon Eldredge, of Dayton, Ohio. It is being warmly approved by many Alabama pastors. Such a Quarterly has long been needed by the rural churches. It is written by a man who knows the Bible, country people, and human nature.

REV. J. M. TROSPER is working faithfully at Evarts, Kentucky. The mines of this section lost many of the orders of the season on account of the industrial conflict. There is much destitution among the miners, both because food is not raised in the mountains, and because there is almost no employment for the people. The miners are agitated by the court trials of their representatives.

LAKE HELEN, FLORIDA. The pastor, Rev. Arthur G. Lyon, D. D., is conducting a very interesting Young People's Study Class, taking up such practical subjects as "The Power of Imagination." He also has organized a Junior C. E. Society. On a recent Sunday evening he gave a drama sermon to a crowded church. As this work for young people is new, it is an indication of vital progress in the church.

REV. MARION L. THRASHER is having a Fifth Sunday Rally of his five churches at Antioch Church, near Andalusia, Alabama, on January 31st. This church put up a fine lot of canned fruits and vegetables for the benefit of missions this last summer. The women also made a quilt to sell for the World Work. Brother Thrasher became pastor of Liberty Church, near Brantley, on January 1st, succeeding Rev. C. E. Burkett.

A WEDDING. Prof. H. R. Maddox, Assistant Principal of Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Alabama, and Miss Odie Lee Arthur, Head of the Commercial Department of the Institute, were married just before the Christmas vacation, and spent their vacation in points in South Alabama, and in the home of the bride's mother, near Midland City. The Thorsby people were delighted that these two fine young people decided to spend their lives together.

LETTERS TO PASTORS. This is the kind of letter which a pastor likes to receive. More such letters would cheer the faithful shepherds of the flock:

"Robbins, Tenn., Dec. 23, 1931.

"Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Day:

"Certainly want to thank you for what you have done for Robbins people during the year, and wish you and yours a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

"Very truly yours,

"B. M. MCCARTY AND FAMILY."

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. New officers were elected and the report of the minister, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, was given a rising vote of indorsement and confidence at the annual meeting of the Pilgrim Congregational Church Friday night. The business session followed a dinner served by the Northside Circle. Reports of the church and allied organizations, showed that all bills for current expenses have been paid and that there is money in the treasuries of the various units. The denominational apportionment of benevolences was slightly increased. A net gain of eight in the church's membership was reported.

REV. FREDERICK G. AYLEMORE, formerly pastor of Union Church, Niagara, N. C., recently passed to his reward. He has been in ill health for many months but struggled on with hope and the help of his wonderfully devoted and sympathetic wife. Mr. Aylemore was ordained in 1908, and was called to the pastorate of Union Church in 1928. He served it in declining health with the love of the people always with him, till a little more than a year ago, when he felt he could go no farther. Particulars of his last days, and funeral have not yet reached us, but the sympathy of the Conference of the Carolinas goes out to the aged wife in this hour of her sorrow.

IMPORTANT ANNUAL REPORTS from all church clerks must come in if churches are to be properly listed in the Year Book. Pastors, will you look into this matter for your church? And if your report has not yet been sent, will you be sure to answer every question? Some clerks and some pastors fail to answer fully the very simple question of present membership. Yet, it is very important that this item should be accurately given and printed. Look at Table II.—and answer clear through to the bottom of the page. Be sure you are right. This is brought especially to your attention because so many are making faulty reports which have to be sent back for corrections, in some cases a second time. The time is short. Let us help one another in this as in other things. Send in your reports promptly, today!

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

DEMOCRACY AND PROHIBITION.

The United States is on trial before the whole world. Our experiment of government through democracy has stood the test since the adoption of our Constitution—"The noblest document ever struck off by the mind of man," we are told. We have passed through vicissitudes, international and civil wars, but we have thus far survived and have been able, through a "government of the people, for the people and by the people," to conquer in every conflict and come out stronger than before. Our democratic form of government now faces a situation, and a threat never before experienced, and this threat comes from a minority element of our citizenship, who declare that our organic law shall not obtain, and our nation-wide statute law shall be annulled.

The Eighteenth Amendment to our Constitution was adopted and ratified with more universal popular approval than either the Constitution itself or any other Amendment thereof. On December 22, 1917, our National Congress submitted the Eighteenth Amendment to the approval or disapproval of the States, giving them seven years in which to ratify or reject, according to the decision of each. Within fourteen months from the date on which this Amendment was submitted, forty-five out of our forty-eight States had ratified by the most overwhelming majorities ever accorded any action of our national body. In 1922, New Jersey ratified, this making forty-six out of forty-eight States of the union voting for this Amendment. Connecticut and Rhode Island are the only States of the Union not ratifying. It may be borne in mind that over 2,000 attempts had been made to amend the Constitution of the United States, but only seventeen out of this number had been successful, the Constitutional Prohibition being the eighteenth. The National Prohibition Act, known as the Volstead Law, an instrument to enforce Prohibition passed both houses of the Congress in 1919. If the people ever spoke unitedly on any question ever submitted to, and approved by the National Government, surely that question is Prohibition.

The question before us is, "Shall the few, originally the saloon-keepers, brewers and bootleggers, led by a few millionaires interested in the manufacture of alcohol and wishing to escape their share of taxation, be allowed to break down the morale of our nation; or shall our democracy assert its power of governmental and organized control?" We are told that "law is the organized virtue of the State." This organized virtue of the State, this crystalized public opinion, called Constitutional Prohibition was and is in behalf of an ideal "that relates itself to the moral, social and economic welfare of the whole group." It required the experimentation, and the efforts, of a hundred years to deal with the liquor problem, the greatest menace to the public welfare. Reduced to its last analysis, it is just this: Shall self-interest and private privilege prevail, or shall the welfare of the whole group win out? We wonder if many of us who are indifferent to Prohibition, or maybe favor the repeal of the law, have considered well this deeper question. From the day that Prohibition was enacted till now, the under-world of bootleggers and those who made personal gain by pillaging and profiteering at the expense of public good, have fought the issue and have never let up in spending vast sums to carry on their propaganda. This from the Federal Council Bulletin of January faces up with the deeper question that now confronts us:

"If the number of those who are willing to support the bootleggers and gangsters continue to increase to such an extent as to annul the law, then it seems to me we will have no other recourse than its repeal. Before we reach that point, however, let us face the terrible significance of such an acknowledgement. It will be nothing less than an absolute surrender of our government to the under-world. It will be a confession of the defeat of democracy. And what shall be said of that multitude of citizens who, while enjoying all the protection and privileges of democracy, are in alliance with bootleggers and gangsters to destroy the authority of our government? It is pure and simple rebellion. It is a lawless attempt to make what is unlawful, legal." J. O. A.

THE CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE.

Measured by results, soundness of doctrine, the power to move men and women and his influence in his native land, as well as throughout the world, possibly the outstanding Christian character and leader of our day, is Dr. Toyohiko Kawaga. He is the father and founder of the Kingdom of God movement in Japan and is stirring his nation as no other man has ever stirred it with the message of Jesus the Christ and Him crucified. If Japanese Missions had done nothing else than reach this marvelous man and sent him on his way, the flaming evangel that he is for God and the truth, they would have been well worth-while and worth all they have cost. Though Dr. Kagawa is a scholar of culture and depth, a pulpit orator and preacher of marvelous power, reaching the ear and attention of the highest as well as the lowest of society of his native land, he realizes and declares that "by reaching the least we reach the masses, and by changing the masses we change society. A notable characteristic of Jesus Christ was his eagerness to reach the least of men." Dr. Kagawa realizes that only Christ can save Japan, and surely Christ is leading this wonderful man in his crusade known as "The Kingdom of God Movement." Some of the words and messages with which this man is reaching his people and stirring them to strange new depths are these: "The redemption of Jesus is a hundred per cent redemption—spiritual, physical, economic, political and social." And then this paragraph recently from his pen:

"Though we study love, we forget it in practice. Indeed, we are too cowardly to practice it. Let us have a revival of love. A revival of faith is not enough. Let us take the cross, which is the symbol of love, on our backs; for the cross has two meanings: it is both individual and social, a deliverance from sin and a willingness on our part to give our lives for others as Christ did. With the cross on our backs let us be adventurers in life.

"Perhaps our most urgent need now, in order that we may attain this spirit of love, is prayer; for without prayer and meditation we cannot develop a full Christian life. We especially need prayer and quiet meditation in the whirl of our modern giant cities."

We need such preaching in our own land, and it may be yet that some mighty man of God will have come out of Japan or China or India to teach us the prayer and the need of prayer and quiet meditation "in the whirl of our modern giant cities—and our rush for material gain."

THE CHURCH COMING TO GRIPS.

Elsewhere in our columns this week is published by an anonymous writer, signed "Ecclesiasticus," a brief but pointed article to "Dear Howard." That article presents not only a problem of all preachers, but a message that all in the church who are spiritually inclined may profit by. Among the many resounding bombs hurled from the hand of "Ecclesiasticus" is this one:

"It is the church coming to grips with the reality of sin and selfishness in the world of men. It is the embodiment in human form of the divine vision of a world redeemed. No cost is too great, no struggle too fierce, no time too long to devote to this supreme concern of heaven and earth."—Missions.

When the shell explodes but one sound comes forth—Missions, the Missionary enterprise. This declares the writer, "is the advance guard of the Kingdom of God." If the pastor and the spiritually inclined could get the vision that the writer is trying to give to "Dear Howard," this Christian Church of ours would tell a different story in 1932 from the story of the past. God is surely building His Kingdom on earth. It comes with steadfastness, but with power, and the church is one spiritual body through which He builds that kingdom, and the one task to which the Church is called, and the one enterprise which the Church alone of all institutions on earth undertakes is the missionary task and enterprise. Unless and until the Church does the missionary work—the work of giving the Gospel to the world of men and women who are dying without it—it will never be done. The Church, a spiritual body, stands alone among the institutions of the earth in doing missionary work. No wonder "Ecclesiasticus" says, "Missions is the church coming to grips with the reality of sin and selfishness in the world of sin".

RULES FOR HEALTH.

Much has been written and much has been done to improve the present life of the individual man; but it is not too late to study the question and try to help in this wide field of need. Nothing is more important, apart from the spiritual life and virtuous character, than physical health. No matter what other blessings may be enjoyed, good health equals them all. Fortune, without health of body, and of mind, is worth but little to man. What man needs most for this life is good health and good character, and they are vitally related to each other. It is hard to build good character on a broken life; because good character needs good health through which to manifest its virtues and its service. A sickly person is worth but little in any field of endeavor because he is lacking in the vitality necessary to render service for others; and human value is measured by what we do for others. The value of Jesus is measured by what he has done, and is doing, for mankind. In his human relation he made nothing for himself. He had "not where to lay his head." (Matt. 8:20.) It is what men are, not what they have, that determines their value.

There are three simple rules that will add to health and therefore, to life and usefulness among men.

1. Moderate or temperate eating. Many people eat too much. Over-eating is a species of intemperance, and intemperance in anything is wrong. Eat but little is a good rule to follow for health.

2. Plenty of sleep. Nothing is more refreshing to a tired body or mind than a good quiet sleep. Rest is as essential to success as work. Some have said eight hours for sleep, eight hours for work, and eight hours for recreation. No matter what men may say, a plenty of good sleep is essential to health.

3. Keep busy at work. Nothing is more depressing than doing nothing; and it is not only depressing but tiresome. I have often said, "I would rather work for nothing than to do nothing for pay."

These three rules, then, are good rules to follow for health and useful service: (a) Eat little. (b) Sleep much. (c) Keep busy. And the best work, after all, is to work for the Lord by working to save others; and in that field one can always get work. W. W. S.

KEEP OUR COLLEGES CHRISTIAN.

By E. M. WAITS.

I believe that the Christian College, in spite of its faults, is our best American institution. I am frequently asked, "Is the college a safe place for our American youth?" I don't know that it is. The only really safe place for young men, or old, is the grave. But a college is a good place to grow, and growth implies danger, since it means the possibility of growing worse as well as better. Perhaps one of the most difficult things in our American life is to be moral and yet not be narrow-minded. It is this that our college graduates achieve. It is not strange, therefore, if men should love a college mother who bequeaths helpful traditions, and that they love to revisit the old campus and fix their eyes on the things that do not pass away.

The Christian college came into being through the generosity and prayers and sacrifice of devoted Christian men and women, in order that youth might have higher education amid the most Christian surroundings and in order that the church might have an educated leadership. Each student represents an investment of $25,000. The church has a right to expect that the boys and girls who study in the college she has built shall have a religious education and that they will come back into churches and communities with a Christian philosophy of life and an ability to help Christianize community life. Unless the church college has a specific contribution like this to make, why should she exist?

The education offered in our colleges should be Christian without apology or hesitation or intimidation. In motive, in personnel, in atmosphere, in discipline and in character, it should be Christian. There is no apparent reason why the church should build, maintain and endow a college or a university if it does the same character of work done at the state or private school, and no more. In order to keep faith with our history and with pledges made to the living and the dead, we are bound to maintain institutions whose educational standards are high and whose deliberate motive shall be Christian. It should be impossible for any student to attend any class in one of our Christian colleges without discovering that there abides in the heart of the teacher reverence for divine things and a sincere motive to build Christian character.

Our colleges have been nourished by the affection and shaped by the judgment of manifold personalities and we honor greatly their service and their ideals. They believe that education should be illuminated by faith and ennobled by obligation, that the resources of our institutions should be dedicated to excellence. These are noble sentiments. Only faith can redeem human thought. Only faith can give a sense of the true meaning of life. Only faith can give life a spiritual impulse. Only faith will send men and women out dominated by a sense of brotherhood. Only faith can give men a capacity for God and make them his worthy servants to our fellow-men.

Our whole contention is: That the voice of dearest and most radiant moral and spiritual idealism must be frankly heard in our colleges. The quest for God must be limited to any narrow path. But this quest must be the most defining quest of all and in full candor must the masterful sternness of the Man of Galilee be met. It is less than honest to deprive the truth seeker of the most favorable access to these sanctions or fail to meet him in an attitude most favorable to their most vital expression. The college must put men and women where there is air, food and sunlight if there is to be real growth. The Christian college must be the creator of efficiency, the exponent of the scientific mind, the trainer of the technical scholar, the teacher of sound principles for the life of social relations, an interpreter of a world order where civilization and the church can thrive and grow. It must bring its students to that mountain height where they can find that reality of realities, the God of truth and beauty, the Master of life and Lord of righteousness, the source of all vitality and the giver of redemptive love. —World Call.

I BELIEVE IN GIVING.

I believe in giving because I believe that the law of Giving has been written into the book of Life as indelibly as other natural laws. I cannot study the world about me and the people in it without observing that well-being—whether physical, mental or spiritual—depends quite as much upon what is given out as upon what is taken in.

I believe in Giving because much has been given me. I dare not think how meager my life would be without the countless ones who have given to make it rich and full.

I believe in Giving because I believe that Life's good things were meant for all. I know that others covet for their loved ones the same comforts that I covet for mine. Yet for many, these things are impossible save as I, and others like me, give.

I believe in Giving because only so can I be my greatest possible self. But if my life is to count in only that little realm which I may touch personally, I am indeed small and insignificant in such a big world. When I touch someone by Giving, and that one touches another, and so on and on, I reach out and touch hands with all mankind.

Finally, I believe in Giving because now and then I have caught the reflection of that radiant sort of joy for which my very soul cries out—and always it has been in the eyes of someone for whom living is giving. Therefore I would Give.

A PROBLEM OF ALL PREACHERS.

An Open Letter to a Pastor.

Dear Howard:

I do not wonder that you are puzzled about "preaching missions." There is so much at stake in the matter that I am venturing to write you about it. Theodore L. Cuyler, famous as a pastor of an earlier day, said that a man's fitness for the ministry was indicated by the manner in which he led his church in its benevolences. Few of us know that when we decide to be preachers.

The ministry is not altogether dramatic. It is essentially a teaching process, slow and silent. A look at the ministry as a whole from this point of view will make it not only normal but inevitable to preach missions.

Let us note two things. The ministry is not purely a personal matter and the missionary enterprise is not merely taking up a collection. Two rather common-place statements, but let us examine them.

A young man contemplates becoming a minister because of the impression of a personality, usually of some evangelist or pastor. He thinks of himself transformed into a similar personality engaged in activities such as those which impressed him. But that is not the ministry; it is only the more public functions of the preacher.

The ministry is not primarily nor to any great extent a matter of prominence or thrills to the individual minister. It is a service rendered toward the making of a better world. The man who takes up the ministry is committed to the building of a new humanity. This will be labor, strenuous, trying, taxing, with manifold more of drudgery than of dramatics. It takes all there is of a man—grit, energy and devotion. That for the ministry.

Now, for missions. This is not simply the bland and commonplace placing of a few easy coins in the basket; and no more is it an energetic bustling to meet the "apportionment" given by insistent secretaries. It would be a pity to lower the idealism of the missionary vision to the drab mechanics of financial conformity or clubby ecclesiastical responsibility.

The missionary enterprise is the advance guard of the Kingdom of God. It is the church coming to grips with the reality of sin and selfishness in the world of men. It is the embodiment in human form of the divine vision of a world redeemed. No cost is too great, no struggle too fierce, no time too long to devote to this supreme concern of heaven and earth. So then the ministry and missions are inseparably bound. Theodore L. Cuyler, the prince of pastors, was right.

It is high time the world builder were at his job with might and main. You ask how a man can present the subject to the men of this efficient machine age. Well, try this on them. This Christian enterprise, whether abroad or at home, has for its objective the raising up of men in whom the ideals of good will, righteousness and reverence may find dominance. Do missions contribute to this end? History has but one answer. YES.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There is, in Suffolk, a Ministerial Association, composed of the ministers of Suffolk and Nansemond County. This Association holds monthly meetings and cooperates in all the interests of the church and the community. There is in this organization a spirit of fellowship that is remarkable for its sincerity, unity, and Christian loyalty to the common interests of the city and county.

In addition to monthly meetings, they hold an annual meeting to which the wives of the ministers are invited and a dinner is served. In addition to the dinner, a program is rendered in which all take part. The meeting this year was held at the Elliott Hotel on Friday night, January 22nd. The attendance was fourteen ministers and thirteen ladies, making a happy company of twenty-seven. Rev. J. T. Allen's wife was absent on account of an accident from which she had not fully recovered. All fully enjoyed the dinner and especially the women, who did not have to prepare it. One of the burdens of women is preparing three meals a day for a whole lifetime; but God made them for this great service, and they do it gladly, but it is a sort of vacation to attend a dinner.

The program this year was prepared and conducted by Dr. H. J. Goodwin, pastor of the First Baptist Church. The program was built on social, literary, and Biblical questions. All the way through it was of a spirit that maintained the religious tone. It is a fine study to contrast Christian meetings and that class of worldly meetings that leave out the Christian ideals and high social standards. When measured by standards of enjoyment, all meetings of Christian people in the interest of social enjoyment, surpass worldly meetings. Missionary society meetings, benevolent society meetings, Sunday school meetings, and ministerial association meetings furnish enjoyment of the very highest type. Rev. H. N. Tucker, President of the Association, presided.

The close of the meeting was a musical period led by Rev. S. K. Emuiare at the piano. He is an interesting performer, plays and leads one song and then another in which all are supposed to take part. This feature of the meeting makes a real musical concert. All the way through the evening variety and intelligent movements kept the attention and interest high and inspiring to the end. Special stunts of a comic nature were interspersed among the more serious performances of the evening.

Such meetings furnish recreation and enjoyment to ministers whose daily tasks put them in touch with people in trouble, in sickness, funerals, and regular preparation for the pulpit. A minister's work keeps him busily employed all the time and an evening like this, once a year, is a source of real personal enjoyment with friends. This meeting was one of the best and there is no city in which pastors are in more accord than in this good city of Suffolk and Nansemond County. The harmony among the ministers inspires the same spirit among the people and the churches are in working harmony and Christian fellowship. What Protestantism needs is the abolition of theological differences so far as feelings and attitudes, go, and the cultivation of spiritual unity in purpose and practice.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE LETTER.

The first semester of the present college year at Piedmont is coming to a close. Final examinations are being held this week. The enrollment has been about the same as last year. In view of financial conditions this is quite encouraging. The students have been doing satisfactory work and a fine spirit of cooperation runs through the entire institution.

President Newell who has been giving the major part of his time to financial interests has been at the college for several weeks. His presence has been very much appreciated. He has spoken at chapel and also at the vesper services on Sunday evening. This week he left to take up his field work again.

A very delightful recital in violin and piano was recently given by Mrs. Bertha Thalley Motz of the school of music. The program presented a good variety of music from such well known composers as De Beriot, Chopin, Rachmaninoff, Schubert-Wilhelmj, and Liszt. Mrs. Motz was assisted by Miss Agnes Swindell.

The Union Church in Demarest very appropriately emphasizes the spirit of Christian unity. The college students attend the morning service and they represent various religious denominations. The bulletin carries this announcement: "This Church is composed of a group of Christian people from various denominations banded together to work and worship. We are in fellowship with the Congregational-Christian Conference of Georgia." The pastor, Rev. Henry B. Mowbray, is preaching a series of sermons on "Lessons of Four Hebrew Prophets for American People."

Piedmont College has a fine field for educational activities in North Georgia and it is a needy field. Competition from other educational institutions is scarcely felt. The field is open. The problem is not one of finding students who are anxious to attend the College but one of providing for those who wish to come. These young people are anxious for an education. Their financial resources are limited and for this reason the college expenses must be kept down to the minimum. However, the development of a fine class of native Americans is dependent upon providing educational advantages for these young people. The health, physical vigor, intellectual caliber, and spiritual growth of the people in this section will depend upon the training which the young people receive.

We have a fair representation of the young people from Congregational and Christian churches but we should have a larger number. The college is in no sense sectarian. Young people of all denominations find a home and a welcome here. The College is somewhat isolated from the sections where most of the Christian churches are located but we shall be pleased to welcome any Christian ministers who may find it possible to visit the College.

D. B. ATKINSON.

WINDSOR VIRGINIA.

If there is one thing in which our generation is making a grave and fatal mistake, it is in not realizing that this great country is not permanent, if it departs from God. For if it forgets God it is doomed to destruction. It is a fact that Almighty God blesses righteous nations and blights those that forget Him and are sinful. I am confident that the story of the great flood, and the history of Israel and the annals of all peoples, illustrate the blessing of obedience, or the displeasure that God, the righteous Judge, shows at disobedience.

It does seem to me that we are living, we are dwelling, in a complex, swift, reckless, godless, critical age. This is an hour when many people live high and fast, without the fear of God or consideration of aught but the indulgence of a worldly life. More speed, more wealth, more pleasure, more power and fame seem to be the great objectives which many are seeking with feverish excitement to attain. Entirely too many people are chasing the illusive phantoms of things temporal, to the neglect of things eternal. That is why so many vain and empty lives abound. No wonder spiritual barrenness is evident in all sections of our great Republic. We seem to have forgotten that "Man's chief end is to glorify God." As long as a man continues an instrument of God's glory, so long his title to life, happiness and prosperity stands sure, and no longer. It is a fact that we dishonor God—the Almighty, Universal Father—when we allow the atmosphere of materialism, cynicism, selfishness, greed, dishonesty, skepticism and distrust to penetrate our lives.

I am confident that the reason for the present unemployment, bankruptcy, suffering, failure, suspicion and tragedy is that men have forgotten God. We have been following our own ways, rather than God's ways. No people can thus forget God, our Benefactor and loving Father, and turn away from His ways of life and continue to be happy, successful and prosperous. Why are we in grave peril? Because the love of luxury, speculation, greed, graft, lawlessness, crime, irreligion and other outstanding sins are on the increase. The trouble is that we refuse to let the light of the world shine in upon us; we doubt and we have our reward in blight and ruin—economic depression, the world over. No wonder "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin"—"weighed in the balances and found wanting," is written on the walls of the world today.

The world today is looking for direction out of its chaotic condition, and the way out is to follow Jesus. He can show the way out, because He is the Light of the World. The time has come for all to live the Jesus' way. It is the only safe and sure way out of the present state of universal bewilderment. Simple living, the re-establishment of unselfishness, good-will and consecration are the supreme needs of the hour. There remains but one thing to be done—restore the spirit of the blessed Christ—the Divine Emancipator—into the affairs of the world.

In these "perilous" times we need a new discovery of God in the vastness of His unlimited wisdom, power, grace and love, and a new obedience and loyalty to Him. We must re-enthroned the Redeemer—Jesus Christ. He only can satisfy the immortal soul. The Blessed Jesus will inspire with new ideals, holy desires, and unselfish and sympathetic helpfulness. Remember that all the problems of life become simplified when we apply to them the simple and universal rule of love which our blessed Saviour laid down. His Sermon on the Mount is the only sure foundation upon which civilization can rest.

Beloved brethren, years of greed and money lust have ended with this awful lesson; that wealth soon evaporates and leaves men with stark and naked hearts. But those who trust in the God of the Universe are never brought to shame. The whole of our lives belong to God—the Everlasting Father—and we ought to dedicate them to His blessed service. Our daily lives should tell for the divine glory of the sacred Godhead. We need hearts large enough and sincere enough to feel every brother's sorrow; hands strong enough to aid, and words kind enough to inspire the weakest child of our loving Heavenly Father in life's battles. Let us labor to be like Jesus, who, in His matchless life, was the true likeness of our Heavenly Father. E. B. WHITE.

LIBERTY (VANCE).

We are glad to report that our new pastor, Rev. S. E. Madren and family, is now located in the parsonage here. Bro. Madren came to us in November as a stranger and we are glad to say made a good impression upon the community as being a real pastor. He advanced the spirit of love and cooperation with other churches of the community. As a good pastor, we feel that he will be able to lead us into pastures green and bring us into closer fellowship one with the other. By so doing, we will be enabled to do a greater service for Christ.

On the third Saturday and Sunday in December, Dr. W. C. Wicker, President of Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference, was with us in the interest of Elon College. At each service, Dr. Wicker presented the college with all of its beauty and power and great possibilities for training leaders for the Church. Then he presented the college in its present distressing need, and outlined a plan whereby every member of the Christian Church can contribute something to the support of the college. We must say that Dr. Wicker made the strongest and most pathetic appeal we ever heard to save our college, showing his true devotion to the college. If our Southern Christian Convention, as a body, was half as interested in old Elon as Dr. Wicker, there would no more need of worry, because Elon could and would be saved. He spoke in words of the highest praise of Dr. Smith, the president, as one worthy in every respect of the important trust to which he has been called, and expressed full confidence that Dr. Smith, with the support of the Church, can and will save Elon. May we rally to the call that comes today, to help save our college while we may.

We wonder if our people could realize what it would mean to lose our denominational college, if they would not be willing to make some sacrifice to help save it? We should remember that it is the cheerful giver that God honors, and may we recall this incident: A long time ago there was a lad who had five loaves and two fishes, but he gave them freely to the Master, who blessed them, and multiplied them to feed five thousand with plenty to spare. Just so God can take our small gifts, accompanied by our love and prayers, and do great things for our college. May we do our best for our college, and to keep Dr. Smith as our beloved and efficient president.

A Happy New Year in His service to all our readers. MRS. R. J. N.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE FOR RELIGION.

Unless men of intelligence and Christian impulse assert the supremacy of mind over things we are lost, all of us lost, in common vulgarity and insignificance," Dr. William Louis Poteat, for 22 years president of Wake Forest College and now its president emeritus, told an audience of 150 men last night. Dr. Poteat, as principal speaker of the 21st annual membership meeting of the Y. M. C. A., answered to the entire satisfaction of his audience the question, "What's the Difference for Religion?" He was presented by Dr. Charles F. Myers, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

After referring to the whole imaginative creed of the universe as being different from ancient times, and tracing some of the effects of scientific knowledge and invention, Dr. Poteat asked, "How much does it signify this difference? Isn't it in externals instead of in life? The difference is in the tools, the machinery, and not the man who handles them. Don't we have the same fundamental needs, wants, and aspirations? The world has changed but we haven't."

Material Things Not Needed.

The speaker mentioned a number of specific items, the fountain pen, the automobile, the radio, the telescope and microscope, and inquired whether man could get along without them.

"Well, I did once," he continued. "Many men did without them. Plato and Socrates didn't have them, nor Aristotle either. Jesus didn't, Dante didn't, George Washington didn't. What do I want with a fountain pen except to trace the intimate symbols of friendship? What do I want with an automobile except to get home the sooner? What do I want with a radio except to hear the rustlings of beauty sweeping the world? What do I want with a microscope except to extend the horizon of my soul?"

As for religion and its definition, Dr. Poteat declared that love is its essence, its foundation, and its expression. Christ gave two commandments, love God and love your neighbor, really reducible to one, as the summary of divine requirements, and he is willing to say with St. Augustine, "Love God and do what you please." The man who loves God can do what he pleases, think what he likes, and lock within himself and find a standard of conduct.—Greensboro Daily News.

GRAHAM CHURCH.

The Graham Christian Church is doing a fine service in the Sunday school under the direction of Mrs. M. R. Rieves as superintendent. There are not many members compared with some other churches, but they are doing real service in the community by preparing the children and young people for service in the future. The attendance at church service is supplemented by people of other churches who attend our service. There is no more faithful band of church workers to be found in the denomination than that at the Graham Church. W. C. W.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Blessed Creator, Ruler of the nations, sin is rampant and souls are being tried. At this time when for each of us the New Year embraces a new chance, we pray Thee relieve economic pressure, equalize opportunity to earn, rid men's minds of evil plotting. Thou Who carest for men's needs, give to Thy representatives serious concern for the character of men's deeds. Put more conscience and care into civil leadership. And strengthen, Father, the Christian's purpose and promise to keep close to the path of Jesus' earthly tread—the only path that is safe for salvation. For Jesus' sake. Amen. L.

DEVOTIONAL STUDY FOR MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

FEBRUARY—"Immortal Money."

SONG—"I Gave My Life for Thee."

SCRIPTURE—"The Parable of the Rich Fool. Luke 12:16-21.

SONG—"My Saviour, I Love Thee."

Jesus has sketched in this story in one sentence the essential features of a portrait of a fool—"He layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

Someone has estimated that nearly one-half of the sayings of Jesus have to do with the getting and spending of wealth. As we observe how great a force in making character and how severe a test of character is the getting and spending of money, we understand why he gave right principles in relationship to possessions such a prominent place in his teaching.

It almost seems as if this parable was written for our busy, active, successful American people with our tremendous wealth and prosperity. The rich man portrayed was the sort of man we disciples of today call wise, kind-hearted, thrifty, energetic and efficient. We praise and honor him and delight to call him a typical American. But we cannot forget how Jesus one day looked at this man that we call eminently successful, and said of him—"Thou fool!"

The parable is not a denunciation of wealth or thrift but seems to be rather a plea for greater thrift, a warning against the danger of spiritual poverty. All the value that money has is due to the amount of life that it stands for. Life consisteth not in things, but things may become instruments for enlarging life.

Earthly treasure rightly used may help us to gain heavenly riches. Jay Stocking says, "Whether a person takes his money with him or not depends upon the things for which he has exchanged it. An American traveler, let us say, in a strange land, has a pocket full of American money but he cannot buy a newspaper or a breakfast roll. His American money must be exchanged for the coin of the realm. Likewise, a man cannot carry his American money with him to the better country! It will not pass current there. But he may exchange it for the coin of the spiritual realm."

Money that is invested in the welfare of immortal lives becomes immortal. "The money that has been invested in the training of boys and girls, white or black, brown or yellow, who are today making good as forces for righteousness in the communities in which they reside, is immortal money. There is, therefore, no reason why a man must leave his money behind him. The aspiring man plans to take it with him and to make it as immortal as his soul."

The world was never in more desperate need of the things that money can furnish. When one even for a moment contemplates the handicapped unfortunates of the earth, he realizes how often the deep needs of humanity can be reckoned in terms of money. "Money is a very awesome thing. The bill you hold in your hand may be the admission price of some child into life and some life into immortality." How serious then becomes the spending of the margin which we may spend selfishly or to make possible opportunities of life for some of earth's less fortunate ones. Whoever uses his wealth, whether, great or small, to make homes brighter, to make hearts happier, to make lives better, is investing not for time but for eternity. If we are not rich toward God the folly is in us, not in our circumstances. We may find openings for spiritual investment at every hand and we can have some share in exchanging earthly coin into immortal riches.

SONG—"Saviour, Thy Dying Love."

PRAYER—"Lord and Saviour, free us from the love of money; reveal unto us the utter worthlessness of earthly prosperity, earthly fame, earthly dignity. In view of thine eternal realities, strip us of all earthly treasure, however precious and adored, which sunders us from thee and hinders us from living unto thy glory alone. Give us a high and invincible poverty of spirit, content with a bare sufficiency of worldly goods; restless and ill at ease, if more is given, until it be lost again in sharing with our brethren."—Lela E. Taylor, in World Call.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

The annual World Day of Prayer will be observed this year the first Friday in Lent, which happens to fall on February 12th, Lincoln's birthday. This being a holiday, it is suggested that groups finding it difficult to have their service on this day, may observe February 11th. A call to prayer goes out to all lands in the words of the theme, "Hold Fast in Prayer."

"Ask" for a life of deeper spirituality that there may come a world-wide Pentecost.

"Seek" for a life of world-service as church members, "that the world may believe."

"Seek" for a life of cooperation and unity among churches that the work of the Kingdom may go forward.

"Knock" that the world's door may be opened—the Gospel spread—the Kingdom established.

This call to prayer was prepared by Sra. Elisa de Pascoe, of Mexico, and we are urged to continue its use at the Sunset Hour each Sabbath, until the World Day of Prayer, March 3, 1933.

The World Day of Prayer will be observed in nearly fifty countries and by thousands of groups gathered together using the same program which has been translated into many languages. The program this year was written by Miss Helen Tupper, of Lucknow, India, an Indian girl who was graduated from Isabella Thoburn College, and took graduate work in America, and who is now teaching in Isabella Thoburn College. She has incorporated into the program the deep devotional spirit of the Indian Christian. The hymn which she uses: "In the Secret of His Presence," was written by Ellen Lakshmi-Gareh, an Indian girl whose mother died when she was three months old, and who was taken to England by friends and educated there. Narayan Vaman Tilak is one of the best known poets of India. Miss Tupper has made a great contribution in sharing these friends with us. Plan a service for the young people and also one for the children, if possible, on this day, thus linking them up with the youth—around the world.

Supplies for the observance of this day may be obtained by addressing the Commission on Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., as follows:

"A Call to Prayer"—free.

"A Call to Prayer for Young People"—free. Program, "Hold Fast in Prayer"—2c each.

Poster (very attractive)—10c.

A service of consecration, "Looking Unto Jesus," for preliminary service, or for one session in the observance of the day where an all-day service is held—10c.

Seals—for letters and envelopes—25c per 100.

PROGRAM III.

THE STATE CONFERENCE AND ASSOCIATIONS—THE BACKBONE.

Worship Helps.

Hymn—"Open My Eyes that I May See."

Leader—When I was a little girl I knew an invalid. She was beautiful to look at, with lustrous dark eyes and a wealth of lovely black hair. She had beautiful hands always busy with some pretty trifle or holding a book, not too heavy, for she was condemned to spend her remaining years flat on her back. I couldn't understand why one so interesting in all life's activities lay in bed all the time, until my mother explained to me that years before, a terrible accident had paralyzed her spine and she could neither walk, nor hold up her head, or make any member of her body, except her hands, do her will. Then I understood what an important thing a spine is. Perhaps Paul had something like this in mind when he wrote:

Scripture Reading—Romans 12:1-16.

Prayer—That we may know the joy of brotherhood, remembering that in Christian service we must be "all for each and each for all."

Hymn—"Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

First Speaker—"The State Conference."

Second Speaker—"The Association."

(A map of the State should be provided with Congregational and Christian churches, aided churches, foreign speaking and Negro churches, schools and any other State activity indicated.)

Business session.

Mispah benediction.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Topic—"God and the Census."

Theme—"Follow Me."

I. Study Period, Chapter V. "A Sound Body."

1. The work of Dr. Jane Harris in Porto Rico.
2. Health Conditions on the Island, pp. 62-65—a member.
3. The Work of the Nurses in San Domingo.

The leader may close with the thought that it is a part of the missionary's work to develop a sound body in which the mind and soul may function, bearing in mind the command of Jesus to the disciples, "Heal the sick."

III. Worship Period.

1. Call to worship—"For the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."
2. Hymn—"Lead On, O King Eternal!"
3. Scripture.
4. Prayer.
5. Hymn—"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

6. Responsive Reading—Selected.

7. Offertory.

8. Benediction.

WILLING WORKERS OR JUNIORS.

Topic—"Open Windows."

Theme—"My Neighbor in China."

I. Worship Period.

1. Song—"The World Children for Jesus."
2. Memory Verse—"Love Thy Neighbor."
3. Prayer—Leader.
4. Song—"I Love to Tell the Story."
5. Offertory.

II. Story Period.

1. Chapter IV—"Open Windows."
(Have two children dressed as Chinese tell the two parts in this chapter. If possible, have pictures of Chinese life. This will help to interest the children, and serve to teach.)
2. Song—"Praise Him, Praise Him."
3. Benediction.

Poster IV. Use sheet of colored card-board and cut pictures from study book, pages 40, 44, 52, and paste on. Around each draw a window frame. Write on poster, above picture, "We Look at Africa", and below, "God is the Father of Us All."

COMMISSIONS FOR SERVICE.

By MRS. J. F. BROWN.

Read before the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala.

As we have for our Mission study this afternoon, "Commissioners for Service," I would like to mention there are two kinds of missions. We meet so many people that don't believe in Foreign Missions. When you talk Missions to them, they readily say we have all the Missions that we can look after right here at home. That's true, so we have, and a lot more than we have ever seen, but these are different Missions.

When our Lord said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself," He did not pronounce a penalty. He promised a blessing. The real joy in this life is not getting, but giving. This is why He founded His kingdom on self-denial. He wanted His followers to be blessed while they built.

He inspired His followers to undertake the greatest task the mind of man or the wisdom of God ever conceived, that of giving the Gospel to every creature. He commanded His followers to go preach. It is not the abundance we give, but the sacrifice we make in order to give, that counts most in His sight.

When we obey the teaching of our Lord, we are only obeying the voice of our conscience. Jesus said His kingdom was not of this world. If it had been, He would have built it on self-getting. If we are to have a part in building up His kingdom, we shall have to do as our Lord did—deny ourselves.

It is for the glory of God, not the praise of man, that, through self-denial, we give to Missions. There are thousands of churches and tens of thousands of men and women in Mission fields today, dedicated to the service of winning souls to Christ. How came one church out there or one missionary? They are there for the glory of God, sent there and supported through self-denial by those who are seeking to build up a spiritual kingdom on the earth.

If we are willing, in benevolence and charity, to give our means to help feed a hungry body or an individual, starving for material bread, how much more willing should we be to help send the Gospel message to the millions who are starving for the knowledge of Him who said, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Through Missions, we deny ourselves, that our Lord may be glorified.

What does this little society of the Christian Church mean to each of us as individuals? Let's work together and make this year of service the best year that we have had, by our efforts, with the help of God, send the Light where there is darkness and glorify His name together.

PROHIBITION A FAILURE?

In the 90's there were in the United States over 350 "Institutes" for the cure of inebriates. Many thousands of drunkards were treated by them every year. The Keeley Institute, at Dwight, Ill., alone turned out 50,000 "graduates" annually. But as dry sentiment grew, and the states began to abolish the saloons, the "jag hospitals" began to lose business. As states would go dry, the liquor cures would go broke. A recent investigation showed only thirty of them remaining out of a former total of 350. The big Keeley hospital at Dwight has been sold for a Veterans' hospital and under prohibition the number of drink cures has been reduced 90 per cent. Has a law failed which can do this? The wets will tell you that it is a failure because it has not made the country bone-dry, when they want it 100 per cent wet. Let the good work of prohibition continue and the valuable service in education for its support engage the attention of all good people.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

MT. OLIVET CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

The Christian Endeavor Society at Mt. Olivet held a most interesting meeting on Sunday, January 17th, the subject being, "The Land Where Jesus Lived." The meeting was lead by the president, and the following members took part: Clark Vernon, Omie and Morris, Ione, Eunice and Ruth Snow, and W. R. Shifflet. Short talks were given by Louise Dye and Marguerite Morris.

Louise Dye said, in part, "The land where Jesus lived is almost all hills and valleys. As one travels about among these, more than five hundred varieties of beautiful wild flowers may be seen, among them the lilies that Jesus mentioned in Matt. 6:28. These are a beautiful red and very abundant. Frequently one will see spots on the mountain side that look like shadowy white clouds. These are sheep grazing. This land of lilies and lambs gave Jesus materials for his sermons."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

"HOW OUR SOCIETY MEETS YOUNG PEOPLES' NEEDS."

Hebrews 10:23-35; Colossians 3:12-17.

In planning for this program it will be necessary for the leader to adapt this topic to the individual Christian Endeavor Society. No two societies will be meeting exactly the same needs of young people, in exactly the same way. Select some needs that your own society, as a group and as individual members, have. Base your program on these ideas, using at the conclusion a short discussion on other needs that it should endeavor to meet.

Some needs of young people in general are listed below. These needs may apply to every group of young people. And there may be still other needs that young people have and that your society should try to meet. Let this discussion program be a time to search out these needs.

Needs of Youth.

1. Companionship.
2. Devotion to a great cause.
3. Fun and recreation.
4. Respect for authority.
5. Sense of responsibility.
6. Leadership development.
7. The Beautiful things in life.
8. A philosophy of life.
9. Religious anchorage.
10. Christ.

Youth needs companionship. It seeks the companionship of maturity, and it seeks especially the companionship of other youth. The feeling of "fellowship with others" can go a long way in the stimulation of youth to make life count for the most. It is not a blind following of the crowd, but it is the "feeling out after" the needs and ideals of others that sets youth in the path that he believes is what he is seeking.

Youth is eager to serve, but there must be something that he believes is worthy of supreme devotion and eager sacrifice. Devotion to some great cause calls forth great power and unceasing energy. It is such consecration as youth gives that performs the miracles in accomplishment that are written in history for us.

Youth is happy, joyous, alive, interesting. Healthful fun and recreation do much toward keeping him fit for the more serious duties of life. Neglect in providing for wholesome recreation is the serious charge that can be brought against many communities, families and churches.

Youth has opinions of its own. It has learned a few things, and sometimes, perhaps, feels too secure in its knowledge. But youth should be eager to learn, conservative in its estimation of its own knowledge, and very respectful of other knowledge and authority. This lesson is hard for youth to learn, but until it is learned there is little unity or satisfaction. Youth is part of a great whole and as such it must take its place. Everyone was once young, and so far the world has not been turned upside down by ambitious youth. Youth has its own place to fill in each generation; and it may be in most of them it is to prevent everything from settling into a nice rut!

Youth must feel a sense of responsibility. Power is in its hand; it must find the right use for this power. It has a responsibility to use the power that it possesses. Youth must also have a chance for development in the use of its power, in the leadership ability. Your society may be able to awaken youth to the sense of responsibility and provide opportunity for leaders to develop.

This is a work-a-day world. And yet, there is time for enjoyment of the beautiful things in life if we only try to find it. We need more than just the bread for which we work. We should be able to enjoy the roses that we see, and the songs that we hear, and even, at times, to grow roses or to sing songs. Literature, art, music, are for all who will use them.

Youth needs a philosophy of life. He also needs a religious faith that will help him to interpret all of life in such a way that there is a constant deepening of the spiritual life. Every experience in life should make him stronger. Youth also needs Christ. Christ can supply every need of youth. He only can challenge great tasks; give companionship when all others fail; and He can supply all our other needs "through the riches of God in Christ Jesus."

Daily Readings.

Monday—Ephesians 2:1-7.
 Tuesday—Psalm 95:1-7.
 Wednesday—Hebrews 4:12-14 and 6:1-3.
 Thursday—I. Samuel 3:1-10.
 Friday—I. John 1:1-10.
 Saturday—John 21:1-8.

ANNUAL MEETING AT WEST TAMPA.

The annual meeting of the trustees of the West Tampa Institute was held on January 7th, at the home of the pastor of the Pilgrim Church, Rev. Carl H. Corwin. All were especially pleased with the presence of Rev. Fred P. Ensminger, D. D., who was the founder of the Mission, and who is President of the Board of Directors. There were fine reports of all phases of the mission work, and the officers of the Institution were re-elected. There has been an increase in the membership of the Cuban Church and a successful series of evangelistic meetings has recently been held. Aside from the pastor and his wife, there have been working in the Mission, and the school connected with it, five young people. The son of the pastor has been a teacher and worker with boys. Miss Gladys V. Hall has been devoting her whole time to the club, social and visitation work connected with the Mission. Miss Hall is a graduate of Wheaton College, and has had much teaching experience in a school for Mexican girls at El Paso, Texas. She has been conducting a Girls' Club for young ladies, a Woman's Club, and has been sharing in the other activities of the Mission. The other teachers in the Mission have been Miss Lona A. Ward and Miss Naomi Jordan, graduates of the Nyack Training Institution; and Miss Mattie Lou Davis, who spent four years at Brown College, Siloam Springs, Ark., one year at Wheaton College, and one year at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn. These teachers have assisted in the various Christian Endeavor groups and Sunday School and other phases of the Mission work, including a Girl Reserve Troop, a club for smaller girls and a Rhythm Band. These teachers receive very small compensation for their work, and manifest a very sacrificial and missionary spirit, as do all the workers in the West Tampa Mission.

CHURCH EFFICIENCY.

Promotion of church efficiency is being sought by means of quarterly rallies in Central Alabama. The following program is one for the second Fifth Sunday Rally of the Clinton, Eclectic and Central Alabama Congregational Churches, with Mount Olive Church, near Tallassee, Alabama, of which Rev. H. M. Gray is the pastor.

PROGRAM FOR JANUARY 31, 1932.

MORNING.

- 9:45—Sunday School (Church School.)
 Praise service led by the Mountain Springs young people.
 Study of the lesson, as usual.
 A missionary story—Miss Marian Fairbank.
 Choice of chairman for the Rally and appointment of committee.
- 11:00—Morning worship.
 Opening worship led by the East View young people.
 Sermon by the Rev. George D. Hunt, Roanoke, Alabama.
 Closing hymn.
 Benediction.

AFTERNOON.

THE SLAVERY OF SIN.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 7, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 8:31-36.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Every one that committeth sin is the bondservant of sin."—John 8:34.

Introduction.

This is a temperance lesson. Parents and teachers should value these lessons as a great opportunity to give practical temperance instruction to our pupils. The passage of the Eighteenth Amendment is not a complete solution of the problem. America needs a citizenship that intelligently wants to be temperate. Our children need wise and persistent instruction. Let us have less indifference, less contention, less ranting and more facts, more information, more sympathetic guidance and we can save the young from the bondage of intemperance.

Abide in My Word.

The master wants his disciples to continue in his word. It is well to start. But one must abide to be a disciple. The evils of intoxication are plainly seen in the Old Testament. The Nazirite vow (Numbers 6:1-21) and the prohibition enjoined upon priests after the death of Nadab and Abihu (Leviticus 10:8-11) are examples of early Hebrew temperance legislation. Careful study of the Bible offers little encouragement to those who wish to become drunken. It offers much earnest counsel for sobriety and temperance. To abide in Jesus' word makes us truly his disciples.

"Ye Shall Know the Truth."

Truth is the foe of evil and the promoter of good. The Christian religion is a truth-seeking religion. Jesus is referred to as the truth—the way, the truth and the life. Truth is what is needed in the temperance fight against all forms of intemperance. Temperance people should seek the truth and use it freely. We have no need for lies or half-truths. Use the truth.

"The Truth Shall Make You Free."

Truth promotes freedom. Misrepresentation, deceit and lying entangle mankind in detrimental bondage. Let us thank God for a religion that ever seeks the truth. Truth makes free. There is much talk about "personal liberty" these days. Some people want freedom to do as they please, regardless of the social consequences. Let the truth of the consequence be realized and the individual would seek a higher level of freedom. There is a brand of "personal liberty" enthusiasts who take freedom from others and endanger the welfare of all. They need the clear truth of the results of their action to be burned through to their conscience. Christian freedom is freedom on the level of a high social responsibility.

Abraham's Seed.

The Jews had a racial pride and a spiritual freedom. As a race they had been in political bondage repeatedly. Nevertheless, their proud spirits felt the freedom of an ennobling faith. Jesus seemed to be prouder of his spiritual heritage than his physical. He said on one occasion that God could raise up of the stones children to Abraham. He was more interested in men becoming heirs of righteousness and faith than he was in commending those who thought they had a superior ancestry,

Slavery of Sin.

"Every one that committeth sin is the bondsman of sin." The world needs a quickened conscience of sin. We do not hear much about sin in our churches today. Perhaps our congregations have become mutual congratulatory societies. Nice services, pleasant sermons, beautiful music. We need a very practical realization of sin. Sin is any kind of conduct that hinders good living. The world still has plenty of sin. We need to become aroused so that we realize the terrible bondage of sin.

Free Indeed.

"If, therefore, the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." The souls of men yearn for peace and freedom. Fear, deceit, jealousy, hate and ignorance still hold men in bondage. The world needs the quickening power of Christ. Grant us, O God, the freedom of thy love and trust and faith.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

WILD GUSHERS.

LESSON: I. Thess. 4:1-12.

"Study to be quiet."

Now and then—it has just happened in Oklahoma and Texas as we write—some well in one of the great oil fields becomes a wild gusher. Thousands of barrels of oil are hurled into the air. Sometimes the inflammable spray catches fire, and the well becomes a roaring volcano. Hundreds of thousands of barrels of oil have thus been wasted in a single well.

"Study to be quiet," Paul advised the Christians of Thessalonica. Some people think they are accomplishing nothing if they are not making a big noise. The real workers are known by their quietness, their methodical persistence. In a day they will accomplish as much as the blustering workers in a month. How quietly the Upholder of all things conducts His universe! How His silent ways rebuke our human clamor, even as His vast achievements dwarf the mightiest works of man!

Prayer—Give us, O God, our measure of Thy perfect power. Admit us to the secret of Thy steadiness. Thou who dost work in stillness, may we work in Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SHUT THE DOOR.

LESSON: Matt. 6:1-6.

"Having shut thy door, pray."

The athletic coach of one of our universities sent this year to each member of the squad a New Year card bearing these arresting words: "Shut the door." By that he meant that success lies in concentration on the best things. "The world is too much with us." The student must shut the door of his study. If he keeps it open, in will rush a horde of frivolous pleasures, and they will throw his books out of the window.

Is not that what Christ meant when he bade us, in praying, enter our closet and close the door behind us? Unending firmness alone can achieve the great results. But it is gloriously worthwhile. For when we shut our door, shutting out the unworthy and trivial, we shut in with us the grand, the enduring. We win for our constant companions a nobility which only is fruitful of greatness and power and joy.

Prayer—Thou standest knocking at our door, Lord Jesus. Enter, and abide. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A SURGICAL EYE.

LESSON: I. Cor. 2:6-12.

"The Spirit searcheth all things."

The bronchoscope is a scientific instrument which may be inserted in the lung or in other parts of the body where the presence of disease is suspected, and it will report conditions as accurately as if the parts were laid open to the day. Thus, the beginnings of that dread enemy, cancer, for instance, may be signaled to the physician and surgeon, and by the same means the curative radium may be introduced. Thus, without harm to an animal or man, researches of the greatest value may be conducted, and the warfare against lurking death may be carried into the farthest hiding places.

All this is of God, even as were the healing miracles of the Great Physician. And all this is indicative of the way in which God's Holy Spirit "searcheth all things." Admit Him to your soul, and He will disclose there the focal points of secret sin, the initiation of sorrow, shame and ruin.

Why wait for spiritual cancers to eat their horrible way to the surface? Why tolerate their presence for an hour? Here is healing, ready, eager, puissant. We have only to accept it, and it is ours. We have only to receive, and it conquers.

Prayer—Holy Spirit of the God of life, quicken our spirits. Convict us of our sins. Purify our hearts. Pierce us with Thy healing rays. and dwell in us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHERRY-TREE AMBASSADORS.

LESSON: Prov. 18:10-16.

"A man's gift maketh room for him."

The Japanese Education Association has done a beautiful thing in presenting to Boston, in honor of its tercentenary held this year, three hundred Japanese cherry-trees. When these trees are in blossom, and indeed through the year, they will be continual ambassadors of good-will from the great nation across the Pacific to our own country.

Verily, "A man's gift maketh room for him," and a country's gift also. Those three hundred cherry-trees are incomparably more potent emissaries than three hundred battleships would be. And if we go through the world scattering gifts fragrant with love and laden with fruitfulness, our path will be straight and clear to the hearts of all men.

A battleship costs from twenty million dollars "up." A cherry-tree costs two or three dollars. We need not be Rockefellerers to go forth giving gifts. That is what Mr. Rockefeller means as he distributes his daily dimes—he who has given such vast sums to the world. A smile costs nothing, and every smile is a cherry-tree in full bloom. And what is less expensive than a cheery word—or more precious?

Prayer—Lord Jesus, we would walk in Thy ways of blessed kindness. Give us the giving heart, we pray Thee, that beauty and fruitfulness may line our paths. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FLYING AT SEVENTY-SIX.

LESSON: Psalm 92:1-15.

"They shall still bring forth fruit in old age, they shall be full of sap and green."

The newspapers have been telling about a retired publisher, named W. H. Gannett. He is seventy-six years old, and his exhilarating hobby is aviation. He has just flown around South America, returning stronger and fresher than ever. In the days before the airplane he was a balloonist, and he has journeyed by air some hundred thousand miles. Now he is thinking of Alaska.

Mr. Gannett believes that the absolute purity of the upper air invigorates the body, and there is every reason why it should be so. There is every reason why a man's spirit should be strengthened by communion with elevated thoughts, by dwelling persistently among pure and exalted ideals.

We can all become thus "air-minded." Airplanes are costly, but this spiritual aviation costs nothing. Nothing, that is, that can be paid for in gold or silver, but everything that can be measured in alertness, determination, and faith.

Prayer—Lift our souls, O Lord, into the higher places! Speed us on the wings of the morning to our desired havens. In Thy name, O ascended Lord! Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE PROTECTING BANNER.

LESSON: Prov. 18:1-10.

"The name of Jehovah is a strong tower, the righteous runneth into it, and is safe."

There is a resourceful woman out in Iowa. She was fond of an old maple tree which some road-builders were about to cut down. She did what she could by earnest pleas, but they fell on deaf ears. Finally, she had a United States flag fastened to the top of that tree, and defied the wood-choppers. "This tree," she said, "has now become a flagstaff, and if you cut it down, you are desecrating your country's flag. That is against the law." Now those road-builders are looking up the law, and that valiant woman has at least won respite for her aged, leafy friend.

Many times a flag thrown over an assailed man has saved him, but never before, probably, has a tree been thus rescued. The episode is a striking parable of what happens in the spiritual realm every day.

For God is a mighty refuge, a strong tower. God's children flee to Him in every trouble, and are safe. God's banner ever is love, and love is invincible. Ours is a conquering life if it has learned this truth and puts it constantly into effect.

Prayer—We come to Thee for protection, O God. We hasten to Thee when the fiends assail us, and with Thee we always find peace. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OUTSIDE THEIR JOBS.

LESSON: Ezra 1:1-6.

"Let the men of his place help him."

Two Vail medals have just been awarded to two New England telephone workers. One of the workers gave intelligent first aid to a boy whose hand was injured when a musket exploded, and rushed him to a hospital, thus saving the boy's life. The other workman, doing a job in an apartment house, smelled escaping gas, traced it, found a woman unconscious on the floor, applied artificial respiration, saving her life. Both were installation and repair men, and such activities were far outside their jobs. But the telephone company honored them for their resourcefulness and humanity.

"Many so focus their minds upon their own work that they do not see the crowding opportunities for helpfulness, or, seeing, pay no attention to them. But we are to be men first, and then workmen. Aiding those in need is a part of our job."

Prayer—Our Saviour, we know that no one ever called on Thee in vain. Grant that our helpfulness also may never fail, as we receive our strength from Thee. Amen.

"The heavy mortality of brewery employees is sufficient evidence that beer, so far as its effect on masses of men is concerned, is not a hygienic drink."—The late Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, formerly medical director, Life Extension Institute.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

TRANSFORMED, NOT CONFORMED.

By REV. ELWOOD W. JONES
Pastor Franklin Christian Church.

"Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed."

Paul, the apostle, first brings out the negative that he may stress the positive. What not to be and do is given first, then what to be and do. What not to be and do is important for it clears the way for what we shall be and do.

I. This world sets no standards or customs for Christian people to follow.

Even the loftiest standards of the world are not sufficient for Christians to adopt.

Honesty, truthfulness, fair dealing are the highest of worldly standards. These are not Christian objectives though it goes without saying, that the Christian should be honest, truthful, and fair in his relationship with his fellows. But these are not distinctively Christian standards. The Christian is not to be limited by these standards. Worldly objectives are much lower than Christian objectives, and worldly customs are decidedly out of line with Christian teachings. The tendency of the Christian is to lower his standards to that of the world, but this is against Biblical teaching. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world, for all that is in the world, the best of the flesh, the best of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world."

II. The tendency of people is to conform.

The plea of Israel was for a man king. "Give us a king," said the Israelites to Samuel the Prophet, "that we may be like other nations." This tendency to conform to the ways of other nations had gripped Israel. This tendency to conform has gripped the nations of our day in the matter of armament. Despite the teaching of history that preparation for war surely leads to war, and despite the crushing burden which past wars have laid upon the people of our day, still armed preparation goes on now on a greater scale than before the World War. Why? Because other nations do it.

Convention binds us down to the point of insane dread of what others may say or think. We should not fall in with others' way of doing simply because they are doing it, but we should be ourselves, real human beings whom God loves and notices.

This is no plea for stubbornness, to take the opposite side of every question in order to start an argument, but a plea to look into everything proposed, and to refuse to conform, if you find it is wrong, even though others approve it.

"Be not conformed to the world," said Paul.

Jesus' strong plea was for non-conformity. "Be not overcome of evil," said the Master.

Speaking of Scribes and Pharisees, Jesus said: "Do not ye after their works." "Beware of the Scribes which love to go in long clothing and love salutations in the market places, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts, which devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers."

III. The tendency to conform has brought disorder in the past.

Christianity has at times lowered its standards and conformed to an easy going philosophy of life. Wars and strife resulted. The middle ages dropped down to a low standard of morals and religion because the Church gave way to influences about it. A century and a half ago moral and religious standards were low because the Church had again conformed to the world and was chiefly concerned about formalism and earthly ease. The French revolution and general moral confusion were the results. The emphasis of our day religiously has tended toward lower levels. The world war came and in its way the Russian revolution. There is a vast deal of moral and religious confusion about today as a result of the failure of the church to keep close to God.

IV. The challenge of God's word is to be transformed.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things are passed away; behold all things are become new." "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed." Repression is removed, the track is clear, the stimulus is brought to bear to be something. There is no stimulus in the negative, leaving a vital place though it has. The Christian feels no stirring within when thinking in terms of what not to do.

Paul's plea to Timothy was, "Thou, therefore, endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good," said Jesus. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God," said Paul.

These are days for the Christian leadership in community, state and nation. These are days to show forth our faith, our love for God, and for our fellowman, to manifest a concern for the souls and bodies of our fellows. The challenge of our day is to reality and sincerity in religion. The challenge is to test to the full the realities of our religion. Let us examine ourselves to see whether we are in the flesh. Have you conformed to this world? Jeremiah says, "Thus saith the Lord, 'Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your soul.'"

Family religion was good for our fathers, it is good for us. Let your children hear your voice in prayer for the family circle. Let us rally around the institutions that make for community welfare, home, church, and school. Let us seek to make the church a place of life and power where, by the grace of God, people shall feel an uplift toward God and better things. Let us make mighty use of the power of prayer that we may be a people whom God can bless and wonderfully use for His glory. Let us win back the erring, lift up the fallen, and help people to God.

NEWS FROM BELEW CREEK.

For three years I have been pastor of this church, and have enjoyed the fellowship and service with the people. It was our purpose to erect a church building here, but bank failures and reverses in economic conditions, which are general, have affected people here as they have in other parts of our work, and it has not been wise to begin such an undertaking, but as soon as conditions grow better it is our purpose to launch the building a new house of worship. In the meantime, we shall endeavor to keep the congregation active in religious service and character-building. The young people here are very active in both church and Sunday school work, and there are no finer young people in church service in any country church than here. The young people of the church are the real present and future leaders, and here, as at Mt. Auburn, they render a large service in Sunday school and other church activities.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It must be a real pleasure to those who have been richly blessed in this world's goods to help meet the needs of helpless humanity. We have often wondered what people who have piled up millions think they will do with it when they shall say goodbye to the world and all there is in it, when they know they have thought only of heaping up a great fortune and have denied all calls for charity. They cannot realize the joy and the pleasure they would get out of helping others, who are helpless and dependent. Even if they can store up millions of gold dollars and turn a deaf ear to the real needs of humanity, I am afraid that when the death angel knocks at their door and they find that money cannot buy or prolong life, that their millions will be like the old woman's dream. She dreamed that a fairy carried her to a large pile of gold and gave her a cart and shovel and told her to help herself. She shoveled till she was tired and had the cart almost full and she thought she was vastly rich, but as she was taking up the last shovel-full, she awoke and found it was all a dream.

I wonder if some people whom the good Lord has richly blessed in this world's goods and who have kept it and used it for their own selfish purposes, and denied the appeals of helpless humanity will not, in the end, find that it was a dream, and in the hour of death it was of no assistance.

We are happy that all wealthy people don't take that view of life or wealth. Our good friend, Mr. Edwin Gould, of New York, gets pleasure out of his wealth by helping the helpless and needy and especially the dependent children. He loves little children and they appeal to his tender heart-strings. He noticed in the Christian Orphanage report some time ago that sixty of our children slept in double beds. He asked if we would allow him to make a donation of sixty beds, sixty mattresses and sixty pillows, so every child might have its own bed. We could not refuse such a generous offer, and this week we received the beds, mattresses and pillows. The children are tickled very much over the splendid gift. The first night a little boy was down on his knees, saying his evening prayers, and had his head up against his new bed. The bed was easy to roll, and it rolled away from him and he fell over on the floor, but he finished his prayer.

We feel sure that he asked God to bless Mr. Gould, who had been so kind to him and gave him such a nice little new bed, all his own, in which to sleep.

FLORIDA CHAIN OF MISSIONARY ASSEMBLIES.

These assemblies are interdenominational in character and have grown out of a very successful missionary assembly held for several years at St. Petersburg. The movement is under the leadership of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, well known for her activities in missionary lines and also in law enforcement. This year the assemblies are being held in Miami, West Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Clearwater, Orlando, Deland and Jacksonville. A splendid list of missionary speakers has been announced, among them being Dr. Robert E. Spear, former moderator and present secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and Rev. Lee Vrooman, missionary under the American Boards and Dean of the International College at Izmir, Turkey. Dr. Vrooman represents our Congregational constituency and is an able and interesting speaker. He will speak in the Congregational churches in the cities where the assemblies are held.

CHAPTER 23.
THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance. In size, 3 3/4 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronounced text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

4102P. Black Silk Finished Cloth, gold titles, round corners, red burnished edges, with Psalms. $.90

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2 1/2 x 3 1/4 inches x 3/8 inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller. It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2 1/2 x 3 1/4 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

ACTIVITIES OF A GREAT MAN.

Recently the church of which he is a member, Lakemont Christian Temple, Lakemont, N. Y., celebrated the 84th birthday anniversary of Dr. Martyn Summerbell well-known and well-loved by THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers. The Chronicle-Express (Daily), gave the following items in this notable minister's splendid career:

"Rev. Martyn Summerbell, D. D., Ph. D., is the 15th head of Starkey Seminary in order of succession and is the first president of Palmer Institute-Starkey Seminary. Several new and improved buildings, including the recently erected Corwith gymnasium, and an increase of over $100,000 to the school's endowment fund form a small portion of his contribution to the institution.

"Dr. Summerbell is a native of Naples, Ontario County, the son of Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Ferris Summerbell, a distinguished minister of the Christian Church, one of a family that has provided many able workers to the ministry. He was born in 1847. At the age of 18 years he began to preach, taking his first charge, a Brooklyn church, when 19 years old, and serving this church for 14 years. While at this church he attended the College of the City of New York and was graduated in 1871, at the age of 24, receiving his A. B. degree. Later he received his A. M. degree. For eight years after 1872 he served as vice-principal of Friends' Seminary in New York City.

"After planning and erecting a new church edifice for his Brooklyn congregation, he resigned to accept a call to the Franklin Street Christian Church at Fall River for six years. From there he went to New York City again, this time as pastor of the St. Paul's Evangelical Church. Here he became acquainted with Hon. Francis A. Palmer, who was instrumental later on in directing him towards the leadership of Starkey Seminary. In 1888 the trustees of Bates College, Lewiston, Maine, elected him pastor of the college church, which position he was filling when called to Lakemont, Yates County.

Other Activities.

"During the years while serving as pastor he was active along many other lines. He was an instructor in the City of New York, and in 1874, was elected a non-resident professor in the Christian Biblical Institute at Stanfordville, which position he held for 24 years, until coming to Starkey Seminary. He also served as secretary of the board of trustees of the Institute. His alma mater gave him his Ph. D. in 1889, and Union Christian College awarded him a D. D. the same year, while Elon College, North Carolina, awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Law in 1909.

"Upon going to Lewiston, Maine, Dr. Summerbell was elected president of a correspondence course of instruction organized by the Christian Church. After five years as head of this work, the Free Baptist denomination elected him president of a similar school.

"Dr. Summerbell was secretary of New York State association of his denomination for eight years and president of the New York Eastern Christian Conference for two terms. Along with other activities and positions of leadership came the presidency of the Christian Camp Meeting Association at Craigville, Cape Cod. During the half century of this flourishing association camp, Dr. Summerbell has been upon the program nearly every year. While at its head he planned and erected the large tabernacle on the grounds. He has been popular for two years as a lecturer and as the author of several useful books.

"As a Mason he served the Grand Lodge of Maine as grand chaplain for five years and the Grand Chapter for five years.

"In 1902 he was made secretary of the State Federation of Churches, upon its establishment. He has been prominently connected with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America for years."

"I give this as my personal testimony. I have lived under many liquor laws; I have visited many states and foreign lands over which different liquor laws were in operation; I have never observed a liquor law that was enforced; I have never known a liquor law that was liked by the people. Personally, I believe in prohibition because it is a better law and is better enforced than any other liquor law I have observed. I shall continue to think it is the best law for this land until a better law appears. No such law has come as yet."—Carrie Chapman Catt.

In his speech accepting the nomination for President, Mr. Hoover said, "I do not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. I stand for the efficient enforcement of the laws enacted thereunder."

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

Chapel township, near Salem Chapel Christian Church, April 4, 1864. At the age of 27 he went to Oklahoma and settled at Norman, where he remained until last May when he returned to his old home.

While Brother Haizlip was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Oklahoma he loved Salem Chapel Church, where as a boy he professed his faith in Jesus Christ, and was much interested in the work of that Church.

Surviving are his two daughters, Mrs. Gilbert Smith, of Norman, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Ralph Andrews, of Tulsa, Oklahoma; one son, James G. Haizlip, of St. Louis; four sisters, Mrs. J. W. Marshall and Mrs. J. G. Flynt of Winston-Salem; Mrs. L. C. Huffines of Guilford College, and Mrs. H. A. Smithwick, of Eustis, Fla; and four brothers, Dr. John Haizlip of Neederland, Texas, R. F. Haizlip of Idabel, Oklahoma, Dr. N. A. Haizlip of Galveston, Texas, and R. V. Haizlip of Winston-Salem, N. C. His wife, who was Miss Minnie Hall of Little Rock, Ark., passed away five years ago.

The funeral service was conducted from Salem Chapel on Sunday, December 13th, by the writer and assisted by Rev. Thomas C. Keeton of Winston-Salem.

A great assembly of friends and loved ones gathered to pay a final tribute to one who lived a long and good life as a humble follower of Jesus Christ.

NUMBER 5.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

BY DR. W. C. WICKER.

Dr. Athern, Head of Butler University.—

Dr. John H. Finley, of the New York Times, and Dean C. W. Gilkey, of the University of Chicago, will be speakers at the inauguration of Dr. Walter S. Athern, as president of Butler University, Indianapolis, February 6th and 7th. Dr. Athern was for some time professor of religious education at Boston University and is authority on religious education. He has written several valuable books on religious education, which are used as text-books by the colleges and universities of the country.

Remedies for Depression.—

The Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Church, through its social service commission, prepared a statement on the present economic crisis in response to an appeal of the Philadelphia ministers' meeting. The statement calls for the outlawry of war, the establishment of a thoroughly organized department of labor in each State, the five-day working week, a more equitable distribution of the rewards of industry, old-age pensions, and unemployment insurance. The statement was unanimously adopted by the ministers' meeting. Dr. Gladstone Helm is chairman of the social service commission.

Mexican Returning to Mexico.—

During the past year at least 175,000 Mexicans from Texas alone have gone back home, 25,000 at one time from the little town of Karnes City. The main explanation is economic distress. Mexico, too, is showing much concern in caring for its own, waiving customs regulations and providing free transportation to the interior. Something must also be attributed to the stabilizing of political conditions in our neighboring republic. Religiously, however, Mexico is still upset, the new law limiting the number of priests to one for a population of 50,000 in Mexico City being firmly resisted by the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church. This condition will interest the workers in the missionary activities in Mexico.

Elon College Campaign.—

The campaign for funds for Elon College will continue until all the churches have either responded or until all churches have had a chance to contribute to the Elon College fund. There will be an exchange of pulpits in the North Carolina churches during the month of February, and the needs of the college will be presented to all the churches. In some the work has not been completed, in some very little has been done, in some the people have not been urged to give other things than money, which may be used in the boarding department of the college. Every loyal member of the Christian churches will make some kind of gift or send some kind of expression of good will and loyalty to the president.

"The Old Gospel in a New Day."—

The third annual convocation of ministers of Illinois will be held at Springfield, February 1-3. The general theme for discussion will be, "The Old Gospel in a New Day." Among the speakers scheduled are Gov. Louis Emmerson, Bishop Paul Jones, Dr. Luther W. Smith, Dr. Frank W. Bible, Dr. Silas Evans, Dr. Harris Jenkins, Dr. Arthur E. Holt, Dr. Bromley Oxnam, Hon. Frank J. Loesch, and Hon. Patrick Callahan. The final contest of the series of "Prince of Peace Declamation Contests," which have been conducted by the Illinois council among high school people of the State will be held on February 2nd, in connection with the convocation. The convocation has chosen a timely subject for its general theme especially in the light of the modern trend away from the old gospel toward modernism, which minimizes the supernatural element in the Sacred Scriptures.

Philanthropies of Religion.—

According to a tabulation made following the death of Julius Rosenwald, his lifetime gifts to charitable and educational causes totaled more than $60,000,000. Among his more noteworthy contributions were the following: Rosenwald fund, $30,000,000; contributions to 4,400 rural Negro schools in the South, $3,660,000; establishment of twenty-five Y. M. C. A.'s and three Y. W. C. A.'s for Negroes, $625,000; Negro housing project in Chicago, $2,700,000; Jewish colonization, $6,000,000; Industrial Museum, Chicago, $5,000,000; gifts to University of Chicago, $5,000,000; Jewish Theological Seminary, $5,000,000; American-Jewish joint agricultural cooperation, $5,000,000. To these sums is to be added $11,000,000, which Mr. Rosenwald, in his will, turned over to the Rosenwald Family Association, with the provision that at least $5,000,000 be used as endowment for the Industrial Museum.

Increase of Divorce.—

Apparently divorces are growing at an alarming rate in Texas. For example, in Dallas County, since 1927, there have been issued 16,832 marriage licenses, while for the same period 13,280 divorce suits have been filed—81 per cent of the marriages. The decrease in marriage licenses in Texas during the past year is accounted for in large part by the number of couples going across the Red River into Oklahoma where advance notices of intention to wed and medical examination are not required. The same condition exists between North Carolina and Virginia. Many couples from North Carolina go to Virginia to be married because of less cost and less red tape in the marriage arrangements. There should be more stringent laws enacted concerning divorce and greater care about the marriage contract to prevent the necessity for divorce. We are tending toward companionate marriage by the laxity of the divorce laws.

Students' Interest in Religion.—

A college pastor ministering to Baylor University students and faculty during the past seventeen years, and beginning the eighteenth year in this capacity, says: "I may be allowed to testify to what seems to me not only a sustained but, if possible, a growing interest among college folk in the subject of vital religion. A few weeks ago I witnessed 3,000 young churchmen, many from the colleges, assemble in Baylor Chapel for a State convention in which training for Christian service was the theme. In no convention which I have attended have I seen more evidence of deep seriousness in the thoughtful consideration of religious matters." Young people are intensely religious, as a rule, and are ready to be guided either in the right direction in religious matters, or as easily misled in the wrong direction. This emphasizes the great importance of correct teaching in religious matters. Of all the teachers in a Christian college, the teachers of religion should be most carefully chosen, for none other can do more harm or good to the religious life of our young people.

Bishop Gore Passes.—

Bishop Charles Gore, outstanding scholar and theologian of the Church of England, died January 17th, at his home in London, his death being due to pneumonia. He was 78 years of age. Educated at Harrow and Balliol, Dr. Gore early established his reputation as a scholar. He received honorary degrees from many universities. In 1893, Dr. Gore—who never married—established the celibate order of student and mission clergy known as the Community of the Resurrection. He early became librarian of the Pusey Library at Oxford. While bishop of Worcester, in 1902-4, he decided that his real work lay, not in the old cathedral city of Worcester, but in the center of Birmingham, where he took plain lodgings in the section best suited to his purpose. He urged the formation of a separate diocese of Birmingham, and in 1905 was transferred there as its first bishop, having been nominated by Arthur Balfour, then prime minister. In 1911, Bishop Gore went to Oxford, and in 1919 resigned, to devote his time to writing. Many books came from his pen, and he was editor-in-chief of "A New Commentary on the Holy Scriptures." This ranks with "The Abingdon Commentary," as one of the best single volumes of commentaries in the English language.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. C. Wicker is filling the editor's place during the latter's stay in Florida.

Dr. J. E. McCauley, Richmond, Va., reports that his evening services have been attended by larger crowds recently.

Dr. L. E. Smith reports that he expects the enrollment at Elon College to run above the three hundred mark this spring. This is an excellent showing under the present financial conditions. Dr. Smith is giving his very best to Elon and deserves greater support in this work.

Miss Nina Black, of Hopewell (Va.) Congregational Church, has been awarded the second prize in an essay contest recently conducted by the Virginia State Christian Endeavor Union. Her subject was, "Why I Believe in Upholding the Eighteenth Amendment." Miss Black is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Black, of Hopewell, Va. The first prize was won by Miss Phyllis Brown, of Richmond, Va.

W. C. T. U. NOTES,

As a part of its nation-wide celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the Eighteenth Amendment, January 16, 1932, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union started the enrollment of at least five million Americans opposed to drink. Pledges were distributed to the public through the ten thousand local W. C. T. U. organizations. The pledges read:

"I hereby declare my purpose to abstain from alcoholic liquor as a beverage."

In the fifty-eight years of our existence it is estimated that more than 50,000,000 persons have enrolled themselves as total abstainers through the W. C. T. U.

During the week ending January 16th, meetings under W. C. T. U. auspices were held in more than a thousand communities stressing the scientific facts of the effects of alcohol on the human system and the growing conviction that intoxicating drink has no place in this age.

At every meeting the following was read:

"We challenge the wets to solve the liquor problem with anything better than total abstinence; we challenge the wets to produce a better educational program than the facts concerning alcohol as divulged by science; we challenge the wets to substitute something better than law observance. We challenge them to produce a program of liquor regulation which liquor men will obey and which can be guaranteed as a remedy for drunkenness, vice, lawlessness, corruption, and waste. For twelve years the wets have sneered at prohibition. What have they to offer?"

ROSEMONT CHURCH.

Rosemont Christian Church is to celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of the new church on February 14th. In addition to the home folks who are to speak on that day at the various services, we are expecting to have Mr. J. M. Darden, as the special guest of the Sunday School, and Mr. A. S. Jones, a member of the community, but not a member of the Rosemont Church, as special visitor at the morning service. The Young People's Societies will have as their special speaker, at 6:45 P. M. Dr. Carl S. Frischkorn, of Norfolk, and at the regular evening service, at 7:30, Dr. W. I. Johnson, of Suffolk, Va., will be the preacher. Rosemont is delighted to have all these friends come to see us, and extends to every one of them a most cordial welcome. We are looking forward to a day of great blessings, and hours of most delightful fellowship.

J. F. MORGAN.

GLIMPSES OF A BUSY SPRING AND SUMMER.

Following is a review of the extension work of Pleasant Hill Community Church, Pleasant Hill, Tenn., for the year 1931:

Twenty-one vacation Bible schools enrolled 730 boys and girls for religious education through stories, hymns, worship, handwork and play. We held such a school in every place shown on the little sketch map, except Crossville (which has its own churches and its own vacation school), and in two farther places. The average attendance of the schools totaled 521. In four places night sessions were held for young people and adults. 36 young people joined with the regular extension workers in carrying on these schools. A training conference at Pleasant Hill, with able leaders, had helped prepare a large proportion of them for this work.

Six potato clubs for boys and girls centered in Pleasant Hill, Browntown, Flatrock, Toddtown, Ridgedale, and Neverfail. More than 70 members undertook to grow a quarter acre each, under the direction of one of the extension workers and the Pleasant Hill Academy teacher of agriculture. It was a bad potato year but two little club members took first and second places over all comers at the Pleasant Hill Community Fair and then won second and third prizes in the boys' competition at the State Fair. Two "pig chains" were started to enable the boys to raise full-blooded Hampshire hogs. The first two pigs went to boys far off in "The Gulf," eager to raise stock.

One extension worker spent most of her time in club work with women and girls, directed by the county home demonstration agent. Many boxes of Red Cross garden seed were distributed. Everything was done to encourage the growing of more food, and a greater variety, and the canning and storing of food for winter. A large quantity of fine seed and fertilizer was purchased through the county agent and distributed so that farmers could get them at reasonable prices. The Community House became a warehouse and we seemed to be in the trucking business.

Six Chautauquas drew crowds at Browntown, Flatrock, Toddtown, Burgesstown, Lost Creek, and Big Lick. Demonstrations of home nursing and care of the sick; discussions on eating for health, on better farming, and in the value of an education; entertainment; music; and inspirational talks made these week-end programs helpful.

Boy Scout activities were carried on at Ravenscroft, Eastland, and Ridgedale, and occasional work with boys in other places. One worker specialized in boys' work.

Religious services were held regularly at DeRossett, Eastland, Mobrey, and Flatrock, in addition to Pleasant Hill. (Sunday School, morning worship, and Christian Endeavor meeting constitutes the Sunday program at Pleasant Hill the year around.) Two weeks of special services at DeRossett led into a weekly Bible study and prayer hour. Sunday School was maintained at Browntown. All these services continue this winter, with the addition of two more preaching places—Toddtown and Clifty.

The Community House at Pleasant Hill, though unfinished, served as church building for the summer and was the scene, also, of many enjoyable gatherings, notably the monthly fellowship suppers and the annual Community Fair, which drew a great crowd from a wide area. As in previous summers, an active social program was carried on by and for the young people of Pleasant Hill.

Years of effort and a most generous cooperation made this extension work possible. A larger group of workers than in any previous year—nine young people—gave full-time service on what was practically a volunteer basis. The staffs of the Pleasant Hill Academy and Uplands Sanatorium, academy students, and community folk joined in the planning and the work. Friends far and near contributed more than ever before and enabled long-dreamed-of projects to take shape—though the expenses are by no means covered as yet. We hope that the work here reported is but a suggestion of what will be done the year around before long.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Church hymn books may or may not be an index to the general character of a church. That is, in some churches the hymn books are not cared for properly. They are left scattered about during the week just where they were left last Sunday. They are liable to get dirty and worn and are not pleasant to handle next Sunday. Then, too, they get eaten by bugs of one kind and another, and they look bad. Many times people dislike to handle them. All in all, the hymn book is a mighty important item in a church worship program.

What can be done to remedy all this? First of all there should be a janitor who has enough interest in his job to gather up the books and put them away safely. Boxes may be used if there are not shelves or closets. Books may be shel-lacked with poison stirred into it and that will keep the bugs away. If the books are torn the leaves may be mended with transparent gummed paper, such as banks use in repairing torn currency. If bindings are broken use sticky tape such as is used in modern stores to do up packages instead of string. It comes in large rolls.

And then the contents of the book itself. There are so many paper-covered hymn books now that one may expect to find most any kind of book in use among the churches, Sunday Schools and Young People's meetings. We realize that there are several reasons for selecting a book, as for example, its quality of music, its type of poetry and its evangelical character. The matter of cost has much to do with it, of course. However, we feel that everything possible should be done to raise the standard of music in our churches and Sunday Schools. There is often too much swinging jazz to the tunes and too little sense to the poetry. A hymn that goes with a grand swing and a catching tune may convey a lot of religious nonsense in the words of the hymn. After considerable sad experience along these lines we finally adopted Augustine Smith's "Hymns for American Youth." We do not wish to recommend any special church hymnal, because there are so many splendid ones. When a new book is to be chosen there should be a committee appointed with good musicians among them, and the pastor of the church should be included. Let him study the poetry, the orders of service and the responsive readings, and see if they agree with his preaching and the general theological convictions of his people. In other words, a hymn book records the faith of the universal Church and it is interdenominational and cooperative. A modern hymn book ought to have some social service hymns in it and ought to have some practical suggestions about living on this earth.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

UNION GROVE CHURCH, Haleyville, Alabama, is prospering under the leadership of Rev. A. Calvin Nelson. The church did well for Missions this year.

AT THORSBY, ALABAMA, the United Protestant (Congregational) and Baptist Churches hold union prayer meetings once a month. Members of the congregations visit each other's church freely.

REV. ABRAM NIGHTINGALE, Crossville, Tenn., estimates that he has calls for relief from three destitute families each day. It is sad to think that fine young people are developing T. B. for lack of a little care and extra nourishment. This pastor, like many others, is waging a valiant fight to save humanity here and now.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN desires the active support of Congregational ministers in the South, especially at this time. It is essential that the ministers themselves should keep informed as to the activities of the United Church. There is no other medium through which they can obtain this information, and the four cents a week it costs is certainly little enough.

REV. SAMUEL LONG owned an acre of ground in the rear of the flower garden of the Christian Hill Church, near Midland City, Alabama. He has given this tract to the church, which will make it into a pecan grove, the harvest of which will go to the support of Missions. The children of the church will take care of the grove. Rev. N. A. Long, son of the donor, is pastor of the church.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA. The Sunday School of this church is conducting a George Washington Contest. The members of the school have been divided into three groups, designated as Patriots, Soldiers and Statesmen. The object is to increase membership in the school. The group which holds the lowest score will serve the others with a George Washington banquet on February 22nd. The pastor of the church is Rev. H. Samuel Fritsch, D. D.

HOLLY HILL, FLORIDA. The city of Holly Hill has purchased several large lots adjoining the Union Church at Holly Hill, of which Rev. Lewis H. Keller, D. D., is pastor. The lots run from the church to the canal and are being converted into a beautiful park and playground. In the rear of the church and adjoining it on the other side are the Grammar School and the High School of Holly Hill, with large playgrounds. Across from it is the City Hall, which gives the church a fine setting.

THE BIRMINGHAM CHURCH has rented a store-room on Fourth Avenue which, in addition to the theater used for the main church and Sunday School, and the theater used for the Crusader's Bible Class, and for the meeting of the Young People's Chalice Club, and the suite of church offices in the Comer Building, makes a total of four down-town quarters in the use of the church. The church is more active than ever and is steadily going forward. Its people rejoice in their free fellowship, great program, and able leadership.

SALISBURY UNITED recently put on a special financial campaign to secure funds for the payment of a new roof. For the first time in years it went outside its own membership for money, and was cordially received by all. Of course, the members themselves, who had previously subscribed liberally once more added to their pledges to the point of sacrifice. It is just that sort of thing which gains respect of people on the outside, and courage and hope to those on the inside of any church. February 1st will probably find the United Church with all bills paid and a small balance in the treasury. William T. Scott is the pastor.

MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA. The Women's Association of the Community Congregational Church recently served a chicken dinner, the event being the opening of the new Social Hall built by the association for its own use and for the use of the church. The building consists of a dining hall and modern kitchen. It is connected with the church building and with the Beginners' House, making the latter a screened porch. On Sundays the building will be used for the ever-growing Primary Department of the Sunday School. Nothing has been done in recent years more valuable in the expanding program of this church than the erection of this building.

DR. TREVOR MORDECAI of Birmingham, at his usual night service of January 10th, addressed 1,500 people in a house that has a capacity for 1,150, and from which 300 or 400 were turned away. Dr. Mordecai spoke on the inhumanity of flogging in an Alabama prison. A young ex-soldier, who had inadvertently cut some timber over his own line on the land of a company, had gone to prison for this offense, and was flogged when he remained in bed one of two days while he was sick. At a mass meeting in Birmingham, Dr. Mordecai, Mrs. Louise O. Charlton, United States Commissioner; and Mr. Lewey Robinson, State Representative, and an editor of the Post, protested the flogging.

REV. JAMES E. PARKER, pastor of the Palm City (Florida) Church, in his quarterly report, says: "For the first time since the church was organized it has had a deficit at the end of the year. The Sunday School attendance has averaged 66 per cent of the enrollment, and the church attendance 56 per cent of the resident membership. I find the average distance of each family from the church is three and one-half miles. Only seven families in the parish live less than one-half mile from the church. From my diary I find that on December 8th, I drove twenty miles and made two calls; on December 10th, drove twelve miles and made three calls; and on December 20th took a load of women to the missionary meeting and drove twenty miles. This meeting was held at the home of the family living farthest from the church."

VOLUNTEER WORKERS of East View Church, near Clanton, Alabama, are building a parsonage for their pastor on a lot across from this church, which is on a nice elevation. The lumber for the house comes from the Stony Point Church, near Deatsville. This organization has been dormant for two or three years, and decided to disband. At the final service held on January 13th, Rev. E. W. Butler, former State Superintendent, and Mr. Sereno E. Norton, recalled the work of former days, and two pastors, Rev. Joseph E. Each and Rev. A. Calvin Nelson made addresses. Mr. J. B. Ross, leading layman of the church, made a glowing tribute to the work of a veteran pastor, who served the church for eighteen years, and said that he could see evidences of the work of this great soul in the characters of his sons, and in the lives of many others in that community.

ANTIOCH CHURCH, Bristol, Georgia, under the leadership of Rev. Alan Jones, is happy with fine Sunday services, a great Sunday School and Friday night "Social and Sing-Song," with more than a hundred present, mostly young people. This church is located in a fine farming section of Georgia, and here is where are made the "Sills of the Republic." It is here, too, that Mr. Jones is leading a fine people into a fuller and happier Christian experience, the experience of careful organization and enthusiasm in the fruitful fields of accurate records. And it also should be mentioned that in the management of the finances, the members are going ahead with pride and satisfaction. It is good for a young minister to have the opportunities of such a field and good for the church that it has a minister with vision, tact and energy. It takes plenty of work to bring good things to pass in any church. What must a man do who has four churches to look after, to serve and to love. Congratulations to a man who dares.

THE CHURCH OF WIDE FELLOWSHIP, Southern Pines, is strong in its Sunday morning services, Rev. Elmer Willis Serl, preacher, and unusually happy in its evening services, or "Platform Hour," as it is called. A lecture, a high-grade concert, an interesting picture of the progress of radium, or the China of old and of the future, all with musical preludes by accomplished artists, make life more than worth living in Southern Pines. Our own North Carolina University Glee Club will appear February 7th. Dr. Luther Gable, scientist, will tell "The Astounding Story of Radium" on March 6th. "They come for miles to see and hear." Surely, this church is going about doing good. But the story of it goes further: Two Christian Endeavor Societies every Sunday at the vesper hour. And a Sunday School with Rev. Smith Sargent leading, and "community sings," directed by Mr. J. B. Gifford, on occasional Wednesday nights, beginning January 20th. There is also the well-directed Woman's Society programs offered every second and third Thursdays. Surely, this is a great church happily meeting the needs of hundreds of people sojourning in this beautiful little city, as well as caring for many permanent residents.

THE CHRISTMAS FUND.

An emergency relief fund of $73,513 has been contributed for aged and disabled ministers as a result of the annual Christmas appeal of the Ministerial Boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches, it is announced by the Rev. Lewis T. Reed, D. D., general secretary.

The response to the appeal was 10.9 per cent less than last year, when $82,470, the highest amount in the history of the Christmas fund, was given. In view of the depression, however, the generosity of the donors this year is very heartening, Dr. Reed stated. The number of individuals or churches contributing was 6,742.

The regular pensioners for whom the fund is largely used to meet emergency needs arising from sickness and for an annual Christmas check, number 850, representing with their dependents, about 2,000 persons. The 850 pensions of the Ministerial Boards are being granted upon a basis of a total of more than 21,000 years of active service in the ministry, which was distributed in all States of the Union.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN FLORIDA.

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 30, 1932.

I did not come to Florida this time from preference, but from pressure; nor from the novelty, but from the need of it. No, not sick; but to keep from getting sick; not an invalid, but to prevent being one. One may learn Latin and Greek and Hebrew, and the differential calculus with comparative ease, and real pleasure, but to learn how to live, to conserve one's strength, to stay strong and vigorous, especially if one has once lost one's grip on strength and vitality, that is a different and far more difficult proposition. How prodigal, indeed, we are of health and strength, until we have lost our grip on it, and then with what pains and pursuits and price we regain that which we have trifled away.

But weakness has its worth, and poor health its profit. The fact is, says Emerson, every condition and circumstance of life has its compensation. Maybe, after all, hospital and hospitality are very close kin, as are sanitarium and sanity, nurse and nourishment, worry and worship.

At any rate, it is good to be housed in this Florida sanitarium, where they feed you on fruits, vegetables, milk, honey, mush and sunshine, but never a morsel of fish, flesh or fowl, nor a sip of tea or coffee, nor a sprinkle of pepper, vinegar or spices. And this food is palatable, plentiful, potential, wholesome, healing. The physicians are efficient, the attendants are attentive and courteous, the surroundings are comfortable and cheerful, and the Florida sunshine, with its fragrant fresh air, is a restorative that cannot be resisted. One just has to grow strong and well here.

There are not so many visitors in Florida as heretofore. The hotels are having hard sledding, many of the best and most expensive ones having but few guests, and many others in the hands of receivers. Even this sanitarium feels the effects of depression, and sick are curing at home, or not curing at all, as the case may be. But Florida flowers, fragrance, oranges, grapefruit, sunshine, are just as abundant and wholesome as ever, and it is good and glorious to enjoy them; even if one is driven to the necessity of it by a weak body and over-wrought nerves.

We are still living in a world of wonder, amazement and mystery. Science, knowledge, invention and discovery are not eliminating mysteries, nor removing wonders; they are multiplying them, and hardly a new day comes that the world does not find itself confronted with another and deeper mystery. This writer stood on the street recently, with hundreds of other curious onlookers, and saw a "phantom automobile" pass along, blowing its own horn and turning street corners and dodging other cars and pedestrians "at will." It had no chauffeur, visible or invisible, and no human hand guided or controlled it. It was equipped with a radio set, and another car trailing it a few feet in the rear, but in no wise connected with it, had also a radio, and the man on the second car, with his radio, controlled the "phantom car" solely and only through the operation or agency of the radio. So we now have the radio-driven automobile. And if one with a radio in one car can drive and direct and control perfectly another automobile occupied only by a radio, with the two several yards apart, why may not one soon control a car radio-equipped, several rods or miles apart? Are we soon to have radio-driven cars, buses and trucks running along our streets and highways, and under perfect control? It would now seem so. The radio has not cleared up any mystery, nor abolished any wonder; it has increased and intensified both. And yet, when students of theology and religion speak of mysteries they cannot fathom and wonders they cannot comprehend, a doubting, skeptical world cries out, "Oh, give us facts that we can comprehend and truths we can understand." As if there were any facts in this world whose origin or end did not lead to mystery, wonder, amazement.

How this Florida sunshine gives hope and health is a mystery to me, but praise God for it.

J. O. A.

PESSIMISM AND OPTIMISM.

These two words express opposite views that are usually exaggerations. They both work harm in human society. Pessimism represents bad conditions as worse than they are; and discourages activity and faith in God, in man, and conditions. There is nothing gained by talking "hard times" and reducing effort and contributions. The duller the times the more energetic people ought to be; and they ought to learn lessons of economy that would last through times that boom. What the world needs is great faith in dark times and great energy in dull times. Pessimism is the measure of men rather than the measure of conditions. Present conditions may be necessary to teach people the value of faith and economy.

Optimism is just the opposite of pessimism. It is an exaggerated view of conditions that men regard as prosperous times. In times of prosperity people run wild and go beyond the exercise of intelligent faith. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11:1.) Faith is based on evidence. Evidence implies facts that prove. A court would not accept an opinion as evidence. Optimism goes beyond reason and facts, and leads men into investments that end in failure. Times of prosperity are more dangerous than times of adversity. Men lose under the influence of optimism and fail to employ their energy under pessimism. Speculation is not business; it is an effort to make profit without adequate service.

Of the two, more progress is made out of depression, hard times, pessimism, than out of wild prosperous times; optimism that has no foundation in facts. Real faith is based on substance and evidence. What this present time needs is faith. Stocks and bonds are often built on plans, theories, imaginations, that all vanish when hard times come. Now is the time to lay the foundation for prosperity, in religion, in government, in business, and in domestic life. Banish pessimism, optimism, doubt, overconfidence and believe in God, yourself, and others.

BEWARE OF FALSE DOCTRINE.

"Much that is being written and said today has implications which need to be considered carefully by those who are interested in guiding youth to the truth about life. Certain fallacies are readily accepted by the mass as true without critical examination.

"One of these is that the bad is more alluring than the good. Newspapers depend upon what is bad for news. A boy stands up for the highest ideals of sportsmanship in an athletic game, but that is not news; if he gets drunk after the game, that is news. Is it impossible for church leaders to change the situation? A recent traveller in Europe remarks that young people are very conversant about the leading literary productions of the day. When he asked for the reason, he was told that the daily newspapers carry extended reviews of modern literature and a discussion of timely topics. It is almost impossible to find a daily newspaper in our country which gives extended discussion of world affairs. A few do, to be sure. As church leaders, we have a right to demand such treatment by our own daily paper.

"Another fallacy which should give us concern, is that happiness can be secured without a price. So much of life is lived on a superficial level that young people may readily get the idea that they can acquire anything they want without having to pay for it. True experience, however, tells us that the vestibule to happiness is suffering. One never gets happiness by going after it; happiness is always a by-product. We go after something else and after we achieve it, we find happiness. Is it not unfortunate that young people often miss the secret of this truth. Parents and others make it easy for them with the result that they are not given an opportunity to develop their creative powers. This situation may well give us concern.

"A third misconception young people are getting by inference from the way we look at life is that the measure of greatness is the amount of money a man has been able to acquire. Poor men seldom get a write-up in the paper when they die. The length of the obituary is too often determined by the size of the bank account. A man's success is determined by his money, not by the richness of his life and the extent to which he made life bright and more worthwhile for his fellow-men.

"These attributes of our modern life need to be corrected by helping young people to build a Christian philosophy of life."—An Editorial in "The International Journal of Religious Education," March, 1931.

PROHIBITION SPEAKERS SWING SOUTH.

With more than 160 cities already behind them on their nation-wide tour, speakers for the Allied Forces for Prohibition now are turning to the South for a long series of meetings in support of the Eighteenth Amendment. All February and March the six nationally-known speakers, who are making the tour, will spend in the Southern States, sweeping across the whole tier of States from Virginia and the Carolinas to Texas.

The meetings have attracted large crowds, even in the Eastern cities where anti-prohibition sentiment is strongest, and leaders of the campaign are looking forward with interest to the meetings through the South, which always has been a stronghold for the prohibition forces.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the Allied Forces for Prohibition, and director of the campaigners, announced before the speakers began their Southern swing, that more than 250,000 persons have been enrolled as supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment since the campaign began last September.

The campaigners have a double objective. They are seeking to spread broadcast the truth about prohibition. The meetings accomplish much in that direction. But the campaigners do not stop there. In every community they visit, they enroll the names of citizens who wish to see the Eighteenth Amendment upheld and present a plan for continuing this enrollment after the speakers leave.

Dr. Poling and the others who are making the tour believe that the great majority of American people are in favor of prohibition, but they also believe that the cause is in jeopardy unless friends of the Eighteenth Amendment organize to meet the attacks that are being made upon it. Plans are outlined at the meetings whereby each community can carry on and extend this work of organization.

Judging from the progress that has been made thus far, Dr. Poling says, more than two million persons will be enrolled as supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment before the tour ends. The campaigners are to visit more than 500 cities.

The movement is non-sectarian and non-partisan. Among its national sponsors are such men and women as Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago; Josephus Daniels, Senator Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Jean Rushmore Patterson, of Washington; Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas; Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, of Chicago; William G. McAdoo, Senator Arthur Capper, President Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke College, and Governor Gifford Pinchot. Thomas A. Edison was chairman of the board of sponsors until his death.

Those making the tour with Dr. Poling include Colonel Raymond Robins, noted social economist; Oliver W. Stewart, vice-chairman of the Allied Forces; Dr. Ira Landrith, noted lecturer and publicist; Miss Norma C. Brown, secretary of the Allied Forces; and Robert C. Ropp, chairman of Allied Youth, a young people's organization sponsored by the Allied Forces.

Beginning in West Virginia early in February, the Allied Campaigners go to Virginia for a series of meetings and then swing south through North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and into Florida before the month ends. During March, meetings will be held in some of the Florida cities, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma. Meetings will be held in nearly 100 cities and towns in these States.

Liquor, over whatever kind of a counter or under whatever conditions it may be sold, has proved that it is a personal and social liability. The liquor business cannot abide by law. It serves no useful purpose. All efforts to regulate it have failed. The only solution of the liquor problem is to destroy the liquor business.—Frank E. Gannett.

THE POWER OF GENTLENESS.

By REV. B. F. VAUGHAN.

It is no easy task to paint the most beautiful scenery in the natural world, and not overdo or underrate Nature's own richest colors and rarest beauty. So in painting one of the finest flowers of human character, it requires skill to keep in proper balance the relationships of other almost equally valuable qualities. No one characteristic however beautiful it may be in itself, can form a well-rounded portrait of human life. It must have other traits which, when combined together in one personality, will make up a beautiful character. If sincerity, truthfulness, unselfishness, and other qualities of noble type are found blended with gentleness, we may expect a personality which may be admired, trusted and loved.

Some persons have some very excellent qualities in their nature, but a few ugly traits may mar the beauty of the whole picture.

The beauty of the gentle life is so attractive that we cannot resist or fail to be touched by its influence. It is never obtrusive, or self-seeking. It "seeketh not its own." It "dwelleth in a cottage of gentility," and walketh in the way of uprightness. Its admirers are the companions of a lifetime, and not the pleasure seekers of a day's journey. Its friends are won through the power of inward rather than outward attractions. It breathes the atmosphere of peace, truth, love, and kindness, and so wins confidence, esteem and lasting friendship. A true gentleman combines in his nature the spirit of gentleness blended with that of courage and constancy, also.

A little book which lies before me as I write bears the title, "The First True Gentleman," with the sub-title, "A Study of the Human Nature of Our Lord," in which the author borrows his title from some lines of the Elizabethan poet, Dekker, who declared Jesus to be "the first gentleman that ever breathed." The passage is worth quoting:

"Patience! Why, 'tis the soul of peace,
Of all the virtues nearest-kin to Heaven;
It makes men look like gods; the best of men,
That e'er wore earth about him was a sufferer,
A meek, patient, humble tranquil spirit—
The first true gentleman that ever breathed."

Jesus made manifest in his life all those finer qualities which so adorn and beautify character. In him dwelt the soul of honor, truth, sincerity, gentleness, meekness and simplicity, yet the milder qualities were combined with courage, firmness, integrity, fidelity in doing his Father's will, and divine conviction in favor of right and justice.

He could be as gentle as a mother, yet firm and unyielding as the most courageous manhood could manifest, when truth and honor were at stake.

His gentle manner won for him the lasting friendship of his truest disciples, and the unwavering faith of the few faithful women who remained his friends through the last trying ordeal of his suffering, crucifixion and burial, until the dawn of that triumphant morning when he arose, a victor over death and the grave.

Some may regard gentleness as a sign of weakness. Yet its apparent weakness is the real secret of its power. Its victories are more sure and lasting than violence, and its triumphs more enduring than severity or force. It wins through the quiet, mild well-poised exercise of that spirit which subdues all its foes, and wields its power over the nobler and finer qualities of those who willingly become its friends. I once knew a mother, whose quiet manner and soft, gentle words wielded such an influence over the four boys and the one daughter in the family that they were so held under the sweet control and the gentle touch of the mother's love and devotion that they could not do that which would wound her heart, or grieve her spirit. The sons are all living yet, the daughter and mother long ago passed to the Home Unseen, but the boys have never forgotten mother's loving words and sweet, gentle ways.

The poet, Wordsworth, has given us these beautiful lines:

"The best portion of a good man's life—
His little nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love."

We apprehend that our philosophy of life, as judged by men of the world, will be regarded by such as weak and impractical, if not scoffed at as idle, weak, and foolish. But such critics are harsh and severe, or proud and imperious, selfish, self-seeking, and ambitious.

The soul's true inheritance and power is in the realm of the spirit, of the inner life, of character which shrinks from outward show, and contents itself with the imperishable wealth of love and truth.

"Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again,
The eternal years of God are her's."

The prayer of the unselfish one is:

"And oh, for a man to arise in me,
That the man I am may cease to be."

CIGARETTE ADVERTISEMENTS NOT WANTED.

The superintendent of schools who canceled the school subscription to a popular magazine because it advertised cigarettes as being devoid of harmful effects upon youth, had the courage of his convictions and will be given the approval of all friends of school children. The cigarette advertisements in the magazine and over the radio constantly harp on the idea that certain brands are "kind to your throat" and have other harmless qualities. This schoolman spoke plainly to the publishers when he charged that such advertisements are "willful and deliberate misrepresentations of the truth." The letter added that cigarette manufacturers "would never suggest that there is overwhelming evidence to support the fact that the habitual use of cigarettes by the growing boy stunts the body, impairs the intellect, weakens the will, and breaks down the moral fiber." Neither do the advertisements emphasize the fact that cigarettes are largely responsible for truancy and retardation in the schools and the cause of much delinquency. Not satisfied with the millions of men who are addicted to the use of cigarettes, and the increasing number of women who are taking up the habit, the manufacturers are reaching down into the schools to secure new victims for their greed.

This school official should have many allies; too long the public has complacently endured the seductive advertisements of the cigarette makers. These should not be placed before the school children, and magazines using them should be barred from the schools. Radio programs featuring cigarettes should be excluded from homes where there are children to be corrupted by them. It has been said, but cannot be said too often, that cigarette manufacturers are making the same stupid blunders made by the liquor dealers in the past; they cannot recognize that the children of the nation should be permitted to develop without the contamination of the cigarette habit. If they decide to smoke cigarettes after they reach maturity, it will be their own affair. But the truth is that many thousands of them, is they are protected in their youth, will not yield to the habit when they are grown. And this fact spurs the corrupting cigarette sellers to establish the habit in youth as early as possible.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

At one o'clock in the afternoon, January 27, 1932, in the Senate Chamber, Richmond, Va., occurred an event of interest and historic importance. Col. Junius E. West of Suffolk, was honored by the presentation of his portrait to the State Senate by a formal occasion.

Col. West had served as a member of the House for two years, and as a member of the Senate for ten years; and as Lieutenant Governor for eight years; and presided over the Senate during that eight years. On January 15, 1930, Col. West retired from public position in which he had rendered splendid service; but he continues as a successful teacher of the Philathea Class in the Suffolk Christian Church, and in his private business.

At the last session of the General Assembly Senator John A. Lesner, of Norfolk, was appointed as chairman of a committee to have painted a portrait of Lieutenant-Governor West, to place among the portraits of distinguished Virginia citizens. Miss Glenna M. Latimer, of Norfolk, was chosen by Senator Lesner as the artist.

When one o'clock came, the Senate adjourned for the presentation exercises. Lieutenant-Governor James H. Price, presided. Senator Lesner presented Senator E. E. Holland, of Suffolk, on behalf of the committee, who presented the portrait to Lieutenant-Governor James H. Price, who accepted the same on behalf of the Senate. In presenting the portrait, Senator E. E. Holland delivered a brief address reciting the fine qualities of Col. West and the high esteem in which he was held by his constituency and his home city of Suffolk. He said: "I can attest that in Suffolk he is considered a model citizen, and is a leader in all religious, civic, social and political activities. He has been eminently successful, is progressive yet conservative, and is always alert and ready to strive for the best interests of Virginia and her citizens."

Lieutenant-Governor James H. Price, accepting the portrait on behalf of the Senate, said: "It is a great privilege to pay my respects to his worth and character. I feel the Senate and the General Assembly have been made better and more useful by reason of the fact that Senator West, and Lieutenant-Governor West, has served with them." Lieutenant-Governor Price then presented Col. West, who expressed, in fitting language, his appreciation of the honor paid him in this generous and beautiful fashion.

As the interesting ceremony was near the close, Senator Lesner presented Miss Latimer, the artist who painted the portrait. Miss Latimer stood for a moment, and the great audience applauded. It was the climax of a great occasion in honor of a great citizen.

The presence of the Senate, other distinguished citizens, among whom was Col. R. L. Brewer of the House, who is also from Suffolk; and personal relatives and special friends, made an audience sympathetic with all the honor and the personnel of the occasion. The only unfortunate thing of the day was that Mrs. West was indisposed and could not attend this impressive ceremony, which she would have so much enjoyed; but two of her sisters, Mrs. Robert West, of Waverly, and Miss Effie Beale, of Suffolk, were present and enjoyed all that was said, as the audience listened and gazed upon the portrait.

W. W. STALEY.

THE NEARNESS OF GOD.

By H. H. SMITH.

Hardly anything would do more good for the present generation, perhaps, than to cause it to realize the presence of God in the world. To multitudes today, both professing Christians and those known as irreligious, God seems to be far away. In many cases, their belief in God is such a vague thing that it can hardly be called faith. Faith is far more than mere assent of the mind; it is belief with such strong convictions that it leads to action. "And what shall I say more? For the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Solomon, and of Samson, and of Jephtha; of David also, and of Samuel, and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kings, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

That is what the inspired writer of Hebrews tells us faith in God will do. To those heroes of faith God was "closer than breathing and nearer than hands or feet." Luther said, "If you knock on my breast and ask, 'Who dwells there?' I will not say, 'Martin Luther', but 'Jesus Christ'."

In Dr. Branscomb's fine book, "The Teachings of Jesus," there is a paragraph showing how Jesus regarded the presence of God in the world: "But in the actual concrete world Jesus saw God everywhere. He walked at home in a universe which a heavenly Father has fashioned for His children. Consider the lilies dotting the fields with color and bordering the dusty road in their purity—their garments came from the hands of God! The birds that never sow nor reap nor gather into barns are nourished by the daily care of God. In the natural processes of the heavens He saw God's constant activity. He makes each sun to shine. The fresh rain is his spirit to good and bad alike. Jesus never relegated God's activity to simply one long past divine act of creation. He gave thanks to his Father at the beginning of each meal. He told his disciples to pray, 'Give us this day our daily bread.' He saw in all those natural processes which we call physical laws simply the direct expression of God's active will."

What Jesus tells us about the nearness of God is not mere speculation, but the teachings of the Son of God, who came to "show us the Father." Let us realize that God is here, right here now—closer to the writer than the person sitting nearby; closer to the reader of these words than the nearest person in the room. Paul believed in the nearness of God with all his heart—and see what it made of him! "Though He be not far from every one of us; for in Him we live, and move, and have our being."

REORGANIZATION OF INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF Y. M. C. A.

The very recent reorganization of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations is an event of interest for all the churches as this largest of Christian lay organizations of North America enters a new period of service to the boys and young men of the world.

In August the Y. M. C. A. National Council of the United States had requested the International Committee to resume financial and administrative responsibility for its foreign or missionary program of cooperation with more than thirty brother movements in as many lands, the purpose being to reinforce the democratic strength of the National Council with the leadership and support of such a lay body as the International Committee could enlist among other laymen having national and international affiliations and experience. The Executive Board of Canada concurring, the transfer took place January 19th, at a meeting in the Union League Club, New York City.

Dr. John R. Mott, unable to resume the large accession of executive duties which the change brought to the general secretaryship of the International Committee, asked to be relieved of the office and to nominate his successor. He presented Francis S. Harmon, Mississippi newspaper man and lawyer, whose election unanimously followed. Coincident was the selection of Wilfred W. Fry, of Philadelphia, as chairman of the International Committee to succeed James M. Speers, of New York, who has served in that capacity for the last ten years. Mr. Fry is president of N. W. Ayer and Son, Incorporated, advertising agency, and for many years active in Y. M. C. A. work as a member of the International Committee of the two National Councils. He is a prominent Baptist layman on the Foreign Mission Board of his church, and on the governing boards of Brown University, Colgate University and Rochester Theological Seminary.

Vice-chairmen were elected as follows: Colonel Gerald W. Birks, of the firm of Henry Birks and Sons, of Montreal; Cleveland E. Dodge, vice-president of Phelps-Dodge Corporation, and the fourth member of the Dodge family in direct line to be president of the New York City Young Men's Christian Association; Charles P. Taft, II, of Cincinnati, attorney, son of former President Taft; Roger H. Williams, of Estabrook & Company, New York. Bertram H. Fancher, of New York, was re-elected treasurer.

Mr. Harmon, who takes up the post vacated by Dr. Mott, is already in New York, and begins his duties immediately. He is thirty-seven years old and has been active in the Association's affairs since his high-school days. Born in Paulding, Miss., the son of a Methodist minister, he moved from place to place in the South during his youth. He paid his own way through the University of Virginia, from which he received both his B. A. and M. A. degrees in four years and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Entering war service as a private in the regular army, he was later commissioned as an officer, and saw action at San Mihiel and in the Meuse-Argonne. Returning after the war, he studied law at Harvard, graduating in 1922. Later he served two years as Assistant Attorney General of Mississippi, following which, in association with his younger brother, he entered the newspaper field as editor of the Mattiesburg (Miss.) American.

Mr. Harmon completed in 1931 two years' service as president of the Y. M. C. A. National Council (U. S.), being the youngest man ever elected to that post. He accepted the position vacated by Dr. Mott in response to pledges of support from all sections of North America. It is noted that he is only the third General Secretary, the first being Richard C. Morse, who began his service in 1869, and continued until 1915, when Dr. Mott assumed that office.

In his statement of acceptance, Mr. Harmon paid a deserved tribute to the administration of Dr. Mott and his associates of the International Committee, and recognized that heavy responsibilities rest upon the present Committee to measure up to their record of achievement. The International Committee was organized in 1867. In assuming its chairmanship, Mr. Fry fills a position held by a line of notable laymen. The first chairman was Cephas Brainerd, distinguished New York attorney, who served twenty-five years. He was followed in succession by Elbert B. Monroe, Dr. Lucien C. Warner, Alfred E. Marling, and James M. Speers. It was during the administration of Dr. Warner and Mr. Marling, spanning the period from 1894 to 1922, that the North American Association extended its service throughout the world. Dr. Mott has been elected to membership on the International Committee, and continues as president of the World's Alliance of Y. M. C. A. His responsibilities continue as chairman of the International Missionary Council.

The International Committee adopted a budget for 1932-33-34 totalling for the three-year period the sum of $3,000,000, thus arresting the reduction trend of the most recent years and stabilizing the program around the world. The Committee is fortunate to have at hand the results of the three-year survey, independently financed and conducted, which has just been completed.

The members of the Committee responsible for the study were: Prof. Daniel J. Fleming of Union Theological Seminary, chairman; Dean William F. Russell of Teachers College, Columbia University, vice-chairman; William M. Kinksley, president of the United States Trust Company, treasurer; Mrs. John H. Finley, of New York, secretary; Prof. Clara C. Benson, of Toronto University, Mrs. Harry Emerson Fosdick, of New York; Prof. Rufus Jones, of Haverford College; Prof. William H. Kilpatrick, of Teachers College, Columbia University; Judge Adrian Lyon, of New Jersey, and President Florence M. Read, of Spelman College, Atlanta. The funds were furnished by one of the large foundations.

The surveyors faithfully registered both commendations and criticisms. They presented important constructive recommendations, alongside this general validation:

"The declared aim of the Associations in North America in launching the foreign work was to assist in founding 'self-supporting, self-directing and self-propagating national movements.' This aim, which has been pursued with fidelity, is as valid today as when the work was started. An evaluation of the work itself is rendered difficult because the Associations in the various countries present many contrasts in respect to form and content of program, financial strength, indigenous development, and quality of leadership. But on the whole, it is fair to say that the work being carried on abroad with the aid of the North American Associations has a marked degree of vitality, shows a large measure of resourcefulness, has courageous and sacrificial leadership, has a recognized genius for discovering social needs and mobilizing resources for meeting them, has a superior strategy in dealing with the interracial, international and interreligious problems, and is, at its best, in line with the major world trends of the present day. The enterprise as a whole is well worth the support of the Associations' constituency in North America."

Without engaging in advance to subscribe to all of the philosophy, data, findings or recommendations set down in the Survey Report, the responsible administrators of the International Committee will be employing the most thorough-going processes to appropriate every recognized value of the painstaking, objective and sympathetic study. Indeed, they certify that large appropriations already have been made.

GIRLS AND CIGARETTES, A PROTEST.

One church, at least, according to the daily press has entered its protest against the permit allowing the young women of Greensboro College for Women the privilege of smoking in their rooms and on the campus. The following is of interest and significance from the Burlington Daily Times:

The practice of cigarette smoking among girls in the colleges, and its sanction by officials, is condemned in a resolution of the Laura Montgomery Bible Class, afterwards favored by unanimous adoption by the congregation of Providence Memorial Christian church, of Graham.

Mrs. Jos. S. Holt, as secretary, handed the resolution to Col. Junius H. Harden, publicity chairman, with the request that it be given state-wide notice. The full text of the resolution is quoted:

"It is noted in the state papers that the authorities of Greensboro College for Women have issued a statement permitting the young women of the school to smoke cigarettes in their rooms or on the campus. We feel this is a step in the wrong direction, and one which does violence to the moral sense of the supports and constituents of the College."

"Admitting, as we do, that there are girls in colleges who smoke, we do not believe that our colleges should give a stamp of their approval to this insidious habit, a habit which undermines health, poisons the system, depletes mental energy and blunts, where it does not paralyze, the moral sensibilities. Our conviction is that the church should enter a protest against this innovation which can be fraught only with evil and for which there seems to us not the first or the faintest valid excuse.

"There is every argument against and not one argument in favor of such a practice among the girls of our colleges, and we feel that an institution goes far out of its bounds in giving stamp, even of its passive approval, of such a nefarious practice."

Did it ever occur to you that Elon College is the keystone around which the Christian Church in the South has been built? If the Church should lose Elon, we predict it would only be a matter of time before its other institutions would also be lost.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Lord teach us to pray. Teach us the language of prayer, but more, Jesus' spirit of prayer; his compassion, his love for a world that is blackened and sickened by selfishness and sedition. Show us the world's helplessness, its hopelessness, unless prayer shall completely cleanse and cure. All barriers burned away, daily bring us, O Lord, our Saviour, our Guide to the garden of prayer, prostrate, surrendered, forgetful of all else but God, possessed of Him, beseeching Him to empower the church and to lift from millions the pall of impending eternal darkness. All for Jesus sake. Amen. L.

OUR MISSION FACES CHINA'S POVERTY.

By Helping the Farmer to Help Himself.

By FRANK GARRETT.

True followers of Jesus must show an active interest in the poor. This the China Mission of Disciples of Christ has always done. In Connection therewith we have emphasized education. We were one of the three Missions founding the University of Nanking. We have given all aid possible to its development until it now stands as one of the leading universities of China. To aid the poor in China, food supply and the rural population must have first attention. The University of Nanking is widely praised in China for its aid to farmers. Sixteen mission colleges and universities have formed a Council of Higher Education to promote Christian education in China, and in their correlated program say of the University of Nanking, "The College of Agriculture and Forestry should be the national center of the training of agricultural experts, and its work should be related to all other projects dealing with rural life through a national committee."

Much attention is given to plant breeding. Through many years of expert application of scientific methods the quality and yield have been much improved in cotton, rice, corn, wheat, millet, beans and gaoliang. This last is a type of grain sorghum, not saccharine. The stalk is much used for animal food and fuel, while the grain is food for man and beast. Foreign seed of all kinds deteriorates and is more uncertain so it is usually best to develop native seed.

Because of the widely varied conditions under which crops must grow in various parts of China, these expert developing stations are widely scattered. Recently the management of the agricultural department of the Yenching University in Peiping was taken over by the University of Nanking.

A great work is being done in testing silkworms and putting on the market disease-free eggs of high quality. A very large per cent of the eggs on the Chinese market are from diseased moths and produce worms that die before reaching maturity. In our sericulture department 1,550,000 moths in 1928 and 1929, and 1,450,000 moths in 1930, were tested under the microscope and found disease free. Their layings were carefully preserved and sold. This is the capacity of our plant at present. The demand is much greater than the supply.

Millions of good trees have been sold from our forestry department, not only trees for feeding the silkworms, but trees for reforesting the denuded hills, shade and ornamental trees, and fruit trees for the home.

Crop enemies have received the attention of our experts. Rust, smut, insect pests of many kinds are dealt with. Our university introduced a copper carbonate dust cure for smut. This disease is present wherever wheat, barley, millet or gaoliang is raised, and causes a loss of from 5 per cent to 30 per cent in many places. This new remedy has proved so successful that the government is cooperating with our university in ordering it from America.

Cornell University cooperates with our university in plant breeding and in Summer Institutes. In 1926 Dr. Myer started the Summer Institutes which have grown until this year ninety-one picked men were in attendance from government agencies and mission stations. They came from Canton, Peiping, and far-west Szechuen. Nearly every province was represented. Three weeks are given to an intensive study of Manner of Crop Improvement, Plant Breeding, Methods of Testing, Disease and Pest Control, Land Utilization, and Rural Economics. Dr. Myer and Dr. Love from Cornell were both in the Institute this year rendering valuable service.

The results of the work of the expert must be carried to the farmer. The representatives of the extension department put on free theatricals in market towns, drawing large open-air crowds. The play carries the message. At night they show moving pictures of the new methods and crops. They establish district fairs for competition and prizes for best crop results. They show improved farming implements, irrigation pumps, etc., and make demonstration trips far and wide.

MISSION STUDY CLASS.

The women of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference will have a day of mission study with the women of the Reidsville Church on Thursday, February 18th. The book to be studied is "The Challenge of Change," and Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Elon College, is the teacher. Each one is to take a sandwich lunch and the Reidsville women will furnish coffee. We had such a splendid day at Burlington last year that our women will be looking forward to another. We wish there could be representatives from each church in the Conference. Remember the date—February 18th, at 10:30 A. M.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

PROGRAM III.

THE STATE CONFERENCE AND ASSOCIATIONS—
THE BACKBONE.

Worship Helps.

Hymn—"Open My Eyes that I May See."
Leader—When I was a little girl I knew an invalid. She was beautiful to look at, with lustrous dark eyes and a wealth of lovely black hair. She had beautiful hands always busy with some pretty trifle or holding a book, not too heavy, for she was condemned to spend her remaining years flat on her back. I couldn't understand why one so interesting in all life's activities lay in bed all the time, until my mother explained to me that years before, a terrible accident had paralyzed her spine and she could neither walk, nor hold up her head, or make any member of her body, except her hands, do her will. Then I understood what an important thing a spine is. Perhaps Paul had something like this in mind when he wrote:

Scripture Reading—Romans 12:1-16.
Prayer—That we may know the joy of brotherhood, remembering that in Christian service we must be "all for each and each for all."

Hymn—"Blest Be the Tie that Binds."
First Speaker—"The State Conference."
Second Speaker—"The Association."
(A map of the State should be provided with Congregational and Christian churches, aided churches, foreign speaking and Negro churches, schools and any other State activity indicated.)
Business session.
Mispah benediction.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Topic—"God and the Census."
Theme—"Follow Me."
I. Study Period, Chapter V. "A Sound Body."
1. The work of Dr. Jane Harris in Porto Rico.
2. Health Conditions on the Island, pp. 62-65—a member.
3. The Work of the Nurses in San Domingo.
The leader may close with the thought that it is a part of the missionary's work to develop a sound body in which the mind and soul may function, bearing in mind the command of Jesus to the disciples, "Heal the sick."

III. Worship Period.
1. Call to worship—"For the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."
2. Hymn—"Lead On, O King Eternal!"
3. Scripture.

Worry is not only a sin against God, it is a sin against ourselves. Thousands have shortened their lives by it, and millions have made their lives bitter by dropping this gall into their souls every day. Honest work very seldom hurts us; it is worry that kills. I have a perfect right to ask God for strength equal to the day, but I have no right to ask Him for one extra ounce of strength for tomorrow's burden. When tomorrow comes grace will come with it, and sufficient for the tasks, the trials, or the troubles. God never has built a Christian strong enough to stand the strain of present duties and all the tons of tomorrow's duties and sufferings piled upon the top of them.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

WORSHIP PROGRAM FOR CHRISTIAN MEETING.

Theme—"Christlike Faithfulness."

Music (played softly)—"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Leader—"Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, and who shall stand in his holy place?"

Response—"He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, who hath not lifted up his soul unto falsehood * * * He shall receive the blessing from the Lord * * * This is the generation of them that seek him, that seek thy face, O God of Jacob."

Unison—"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

The Lord's Prayer.

Response—"My Faith Looks Up to Thee" (1st verse sung softly).

The Story of the Talents—Read carefully or told as a story (Matt. 25:14-29).

Solo—"O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

Meditation—"Christian Faithfulness."

Meditation—"Christian Faithfulness."

A short talk telling how people have been faithful to Christ at any cost, and the need today for men and women, young and old, who will seek to learn what he taught, and be willing to follow faithfully the teachings which they discover.

"O Jesus, I Have Promised."

Close with this hymn telling how John Bode wrote it on the day when his third son was ordained as a minister. He remembered three other ordination services, his own and the ones of the two elder boys. He remembered gratefully the opportunities to serve which followed those impressive hours, but he remembered also the times of trial and temptation and difficulty. For the boy to be ordained to the Christian ministry that day his prayer was "O give me grace to follow, my Master and my Friend," and he made the prayer a personal one for all of us in this loved hymn. Sing it prayerfully.

Silent prayer.

Solo—"Something for Jesus," sung softly.

"Give me a faithful heart,

Likeness to thee,

That each departing day

Henceforth may see;

Some work of love begun,

Some deed of kindness done

Some wand'rer sought and won—

Something for thee."

Benediction.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

"WHAT JESUS TEACHES ABOUT FAITHFULNESS."
Matt. 25:14-29.

Have some pencils and paper and Bibles ready and begin this meeting when the first people arrive. Form three or four small groups, assigning members to a group as soon as they come. One group may be asked to list incidents in Jesus' life which reveal his attitude toward faithfulness and unfaithfulness. A second group may gather together all the teachings which they can find which give counsel regarding faithfulness. Let a third group seek to discover what Paul, the great follower of Jesus in the first century, had to say about faithfulness. And a fourth may contribute to starting the discussion by listing situations today which test one's faithfulness to Christ, or places in our modern life where it is most difficult to be faithful.

The society may meet in these groups before the meeting hour and for ten or fifteen minutes of the period. Call them together by announcing a stirring song like "Loyalty to Christ" or "Who is On the Lord's Side?" After a brief prayer, ask for the reports of the groups, allowing the members of the entire group to add anything they can think of to the reports of the first three, and conducting a general discussion on the points brought out in the last report. Allow ten minutes for the closing worship service.

Starters for the Groups—Incidents in the Life of Jesus.

From the time when, as a boy, "he went down with them . . . and was subject unto them" until he remembered his mother's loneliness at the time of his crucifixion, Jesus was faithful to his home, even though he was misunderstood. What was Jesus' attitude toward his disciples? What was Jesus' attitude toward his Father in Heaven? Would Jesus desert a friend? Why? Why not? How far did his personal considerations keep Jesus from doing his duty? Jesus was faithful to truth as well as to persons. When the time came to speak, he spoke fearlessly, whether it was a loving reminder to worried Martha or a stinging rebuke to sellers in the temple. How many incidents in his life give you a picture of his own faithfulness?

Teachings of Jesus.

The parable of the talents is a classic utterance on faithfulness. Was the man with ten talents praised because he was especially gifted? Why? (Matt. 25:14-29.) Read Matthew 24:26-45. Many sermons have been preached to tell men that they must be faithful because death may come at any time. Is this the strongest reason Jesus would give for being faithful? (Luke 12:32, 43.) Read Luke 16:10. What did Jesus mean here? Jesus taught his disciples to be faithful as he in turn was loyal to his Heavenly Father (John 3:29). Matthew 10:16-22. How far should one be faithful if the teaching of Jesus is heeded?

Teachings of Paul.

Paul lived so soon after the close of the earthly ministry of Jesus that his teachings would naturally reflect the note of his Master. It will be profitable to spend a little time studying what the Apostle taught. A concordance will help you to find his outstanding words. "God is faithful" (1 Cor. 1:9). "Moreover it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful," etc. (1 Cor. 4:2; Thess. 5:24; Col. 2:6; Phil. 4:13; Rom. 12:9.)

Faithfulness Today.

How is this teaching to be applied today? What situations are especially trying and discourage continued effort? List those which are most difficult for you. It has been claimed that prosperity causes people to forget religious duties. Others today are forgetting God because of their hardships which they are willing to blame on anyone but themselves. Is there a special need for faithfulness to the right and noble today? People who are busy forget God. Is "business" a handicap to faithfulness? Youth seeks fun, and the temptations of a "good time" overcome good resolutions sometimes. Scorn deters others, and a youth prefers to compromise rather than to be called "old-fashioned" or "goody-goody." Scientific teaching has confused others. Which of these situations really put our faithfulness to a test? What others are more powerful?

DO WE?

We can worship God in our home Sundays. Do we?

We can worship God in the woods and in the fields. Do we?

We can worship God on the road in the auto. Do we?

We can worship God in our lodge and neglect the church. Do we?

We can worship God by sending the children to Sunday School and staying at home. Do we?

We can worship God by going to church and taking the children with us. Do we?

A LITTLE FROM ALL.

How to meet the deficits which have been incurred as a result of the decline of 16 per cent in our apportionment giving during 1931 was one of the major problems which confronted the abbreviated mid-winter meeting of boards and administrative officers in New York on January 19-21.

Future economies can hardly be expected to cover past deficits—yet to allow these deficits to continue to mount up is almost suicidal. Although large gifts cannot be sought and "high-pressure" campaigns are decidedly out of order at such a time as this it is thought that the general disposition of the people of our churches toward their missionary and benevolent enterprises is decidedly favorable. The problem is to devise a scheme within the financial ability of our constituency by which they can give expression to this good-will.

After much discussion what is known as the "Dollar Plan" was finally adopted. The idea is to ask every member and friend of our churches who is able to make a special contribution of one dollar to be used to wipe out the deficits of 1931 and to diminish those of 1932.

A simple plan is to be followed. By the first of March the Commission on Missions will have ready for distribution to the churches through the State offices coin folders with spaces for ten dimes. These are to be given out before Easter and to be collected just before the meeting of the State conference in all states having such gatherings in the spring. The proceeds are to be divided between the State Conference, the Home Boards, and the American Board, in accordance with the accepted percentages, but are not to be counted in the regular apportionment.

The thought is to make this a widespread, popular, widespread, emergency appeal to meet a definite and pressing situation. Its success will depend upon the whole-hearted cooperation of everybody.

Despite all the accidents and the homicides of which we hear so much, the death-rate of the United States is 11.4 per 1,000, compared with a death-rate for Britain of 12.3. A man has a better chance of life in this country with her bandits, than he has in Britain with her brewers. In France, with her wines, the death-rate is 16.5 or 44 per cent higher than in the United States. In Italy, with her light wines, the death-rate is 15.7 or nearly 40 per cent higher than in this country.—Evangeline Booth in Vanguard (N. Z.)

JESUS AND THE MAN BORN BLIND.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 14, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 9:1-11. 30-38.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life."—John 8-12.

Introduction.

It would be well for Sunday School pupils and teachers to approach this lesson with the same practical human interest that Jesus shows in its incidents. Jesus and his disciples pass a blind man, a man blind from birth. It seemed that his case was well known. It was generally agreed that he had been blind from birth.

Fact and Interpretation.

The fact was admitted by all but there seemed to be a variety of interpretations as to the cause. There was the popular belief that the misfortune was due to sin. Some one had sinned, therefore, the result, a man blind from birth. There was also more than one procedure in dealing with the case. Some would do nothing about it, some would pity, some would theorize and argue as to the course and possible procedure, others would help the unfortunate man in any way they could.

A Significant Question.

The disciples raised a significant question, "Babbi, who sinned; this man, or his parents?" There is a place for the question. It would be well to raise it in the modern clinic. Science does well to trace all possible relations of cause and effect. Knowledge is a great aid to mankind. The world would have many more blind men in it today were it not for the work of scientific men, who have raised such questions and solved them. There is a place for the honest question. The world gains much from sincere inquiry. It may lead to the most valuable practical results.

Practical Aid.

Jesus seemed more interested in administering practical aid to the man than in a mere theoretical discussion of the cause of his trouble. Whatever the causes of his misfortune may be, the immediate human interest should be to give practical aid to those in need. Jesus saw, first of all, a practical opportunity to relieve one in a pitiable condition. "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." Jesus' kindly heart prompted him to help the man at once. So he healed him. Today there are hundreds of medical and surgical discoveries available for human relief and cure because doctors and surgeons have carefully and persistently sought to understand human ills and to find ways of prevention and cure. Jesus' healing has been a spirited stimulus to men to discover God's laws of health and his ways of cure.

The Results.

The man was able to see. This was the valuable human interest that Jesus sought. A man, being deprived of his eyesight was enabled to see. The man and his friends could rejoice in his cure. But there were other results. The Sabbath had been violated in the judgment of many, for the transaction occurred on the Sabbath. Questions arose as to the nature of his healing and the healer. Again theoretical questions were to the front. If the healing took place on the Sabbath, it was proof that it was not from God. If the man were actually blind from birth, then no one but God could restore his sight.

Investigation.

This called for investigation. Both the man and his parents were questioned. This was not an investigation to ascertain the facts of the case. It was a partial investigation to vindicate, if possible, the position of leaders with vested interests. How often, from ancient times to the present, have investigations been conducted to prove a protected party innocent rather than to find out the whole truth in the matter.

The man's evidence did not fit well into the theory of the investigating committee, so they rejected his testimony and threw him out of the assembly of the faithful.

Jesus Sought Him Again.

How like Jesus to seek this man again. The religious leaders had cast him out, but Jesus found him. As a result the man was enabled to see Jesus as the Son of God. Verses 39-41 of the chapter indicate that Jesus was more interested in the figurative blindness of spiritual sight. He was supremely interested in enabling men to see the truth and to believe it. This Jesus, who sought the blind twice, can give us inspiration both to help remove the spiritual blindness of our times and to discover and apply the remedies for prevention, relief and cure of physical blindness.

ELM AVENUE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Elm Avenue Christian Sunday School, of Portsmouth Va., held a combined rally and missionary program on January 17th, with all the classes taking part. The program opened with the teacher of the Ladies' Bible Class reading the Scripture lesson, and one of the members leading in prayer. Other classes took part as follows:

Boys' Intermediate—A talk, "Why Send Missionaries to China?"

Beginners—Two recitations and one song on missions.

Young People's—Duet, "Dear to the Heart of a Shepherd."

Primary—Two recitations, "The Foreign Missionary."

Juniors—Duet, "Rescue the Perishing," Instrumental solo, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Girls' Intermediate—Four recitations, "Tithing."

Song by School—"Tithing"; tune, "More About Jesus."

Talk—"A Missionary Church," Rev. S. W. Phillips.

After the program, church services followed, and a splendid sermon on "The Number Twelve," was delivered by the pastor.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

By DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

DISCORDANT MUSIC.

"Praise Him with psaltery and harp."—Read Psalm 150:1-6.

There lies before us a newspaper account of an election fight in a federation of music clubs between representatives of the Chromatic Club and the McDowell Club. One would think that harmony should prevail among music clubs, if nowhere else, but it does not seem so. Church choirs, and other musical organizations, are also noted for rather frequent rows.

Music may be in the fingers and in the voice, without being in the heart. David himself is a conspicuous proof of the fact that the most glorious poetical strains may come from a great sinner—and also may be used to express deep and true repentance of the sin. We may not be great musicians, but we may all produce heavenly harmony. We may all be in tune with the angels.

Prayer—O Thou who hast established the music of the spheres, plant music in our lives. Keep all discord out of them. Be in us the principle of harmony, which is the principle of love. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LOVE THAT TELLS.

"Many waters cannot quench love, neither can floods drown it."—Read Solomon's Song, 8:6-7.

A dog was brought before a New York judge, claimed by two separate persons, one a Jewish boy, the other a negro. The dog was let loose, and the Jewish boy was told to call it. At once the dog flew to the boy, jumped on him, and wagged his tail as fast as tail could wag. Then the negro called the dog, who at once went to him and licked his hands, but only wagged his tail a little. The judge awarded the dog to the Jewish boy for whom it seemed to have more affection, shown by the vigorous wagging of its tail.

A homely story, but full of meaning for all lovers of dogs. A dog does not coldly conceal his affection. His is the love that speaks out, love that is proclaimed to all beholders. And it would be well if we were not so chary of our love to our heavenly Master. How His love overflows upon us! How abundant is His grace! But how quickly we come to an end of our gratitude!

Prayer—Forgive us, our Saviour, for our indifference. Pardon the meanness of our thanksgiving, the shallowness of our love, the parsimony of our praise. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FIRE AND FUN.

"As a madman who casteth firebrands, arrows, and death, so is the man that deceiveth his neighbor, and saith, Am not I in sport?" Read Proverbs 26:14-19.

A five-year-old boy in Massachusetts was eager to "play fireman," and so set fire to his own house. He was able to do it because his parents were away from home and he was left in charge of his grandmother who lived in another house; but he ran away from her, fired his home, remained in the house to exult in the blaze, and was rescued only with difficulty.

We need not point the finger of scorn at that little boy and his silly sport. Are not we grown-ups incessantly playing with fire? Do we not often seek to burn down our own houses of life over our heads? Are we not constantly using the devil's tools to our own undoing and calling it amusement? Do we not frequently set fires for fun?

The fire of passion. The fire of intemperance. The fire of gambling. The fire of licentiousness. There are many kinds of fire, as many as there are matches in a box. And all of them can burn down our houses of life.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, teach us the true joy. Instruct us in the exhilaration that means lasting pleasure. And forbid that we should go to the fires of hell to find our fun. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A BUTCHER SHOP DE LUXE.

"My heart rejoiced because of all my labor." Read Ecclesiastes 2:4-10.

The newspaper gives us the exhilarating news that a New York City butcher shop is to have rugs on the floor instead of sawdust. It is to have the appearance of "a swell jewelry store," as its proud proprietor asserts. It is to be a "shoppe" instead of a shop. The selling of meat is to become a fine art.

Why should not all such places as groceries, meat shops, and hardware shops be made beautiful? Cleanliness would be promoted thereby. Life would be made more joyous. Labor would be elevated. Trade would be promoted. There would be no loss but an enormous gain.

Daintiness and delicacy, loveliness and light, pleasure and perfection—the world can not have too much of these. Especially should these be made to minister to the essentials of life, to those parts of life that some mistakenly call lower—food, shelter, warmth, clothing. Our cellars should be as radiant as our parlors, as clean and sweet and charming. Butcher "shoppes" with rugs are distinct contributions to the progress of civilization.

Prayer—Thou, O God, art altogether lovely, and Thou hast formed Thy creatures for loveliness. Help us to put all ugliness far from us. Aid us to reach the purity and the beauty which mean power and peace. We ask it in Thy glorious name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ENSEMBLES.

"The whole body shall be full of light." Read Matthew 6:19-24.

The world of fashion is now captured by "the ensemble idea." All articles of a woman's attire must be of the same color, must harmonize perfectly. The woman must be a unity to the eye, a perfect ensemble.

Fantastic as is the notion when carried to an extreme, it is well grounded in the rules of art, which are the rules of harmony, and affords a hint for the spiritual world, where perfect harmony should always prevail. "Thy whole body shall be full of light," said the Lord; the Christian is not to be half light and half darkness, but is to be a complete and shining whole. The ensemble of the immortal soul is surely far more important than even the most artistic ensemble of perishable earthly costumes.

Prayer—Lord of all beauty, make us beautiful within. Fashion us in entire loveliness. Make us impatient with any trace of ugliness, any hint of discord. Be Thou our perfection, now and evermore. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RADIO NEWSPAPERS.

"His word runneth very swiftly." Read Psalm 147:7-15.

The latest marvel in the world of invention is the sending of a complete page of a newspaper two thousand five hundred miles by radio. This means that some day—perhaps very soon—the news of the world will be collected in a single city, pictures and all, and distributed simultaneously to all the world, pictures and all. Nothing that ever happened in the physical realm will equal this new invention.

But in the spiritual realm infinitely more marvelous things are happening every day. Our God sits at the center of the universe, of all universes. To Him run all lines of communication, from Him extend all lines of influence. His will is radiated to every heart. His good news, His gospel, is published in every land. Though we flee to the East or the West, though we travel North or South, His word outruns us. His personality is there before us.

May we never attempt to escape the Lord of light! Rather may we run to Him and dwell with Him at the center. For there only is peace, and there only is blessedness.

Prayer—God of all wisdom, the little deeds of little men seem large to us until we think of Thee. Shall the created value himself above the Creator? Grant us humility, O God, and at the top of human accomplishment may we know how great Thou art, how infinitely great. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PARTICEPS CRIMINIS.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" Read Genesis 4:1-13.

The United States is seeking to establish the point that the purchaser of bootleg liquor is equally criminal with the bootlegger. It is perfectly clear that if there were no seller and no manufacturer of liquor there would be no purchaser. The purchaser is particeps criminis, according to the rule of common sense, and it remains to be seen whether the law will agree with common sense or not.

The principle—and the difficulty—enters into every phase of life. There would be no slander if slanderers were everywhere repulsed and condemned. There would be no obscene literature if people ceased to read it. There would be no bad plays if men kept away from them.

We are our brother's keeper. We are his partner in crime if we partake of the fruit of the crime. The law of man may absolve us, but we are not absolved by the law of God.

Prayer—Hold us to our responsibility, Divine Judge. Compel us to see that we are a part of all evil from which we do not keep ourselves apart. Amen.

The habit of using ardent spirits by men in office has occasioned more injury to the public and more trouble to me than all other sources. And were I to commence my administration again, the first question I would ask respecting a candidate for office would be, "Does he use ardent spirits?"—Thomas Jefferson. (Sixth Annual Report of the American Temperance Society, May 1833, page 11.)

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

"THE GOOD OLD DAYS! WHEN?"

By R. C. HELFENSTEIN, Minister
People's Congregational-Christian Church, Dover, Delaware.

We have all heard so much and many of us have talked so much about "the depression" that one would conclude that the present day is the most gloomy we have ever experienced.

None of us have escaped the pangs of the depression. At least, no true men and women have. For those whose incomes have not been cut have gladly accepted the increased responsibility of helping others. Where incomes have been decreased for some, the "outgo" has been increased for others so that all can be brothers in sympathy. But thousands can talk of nothing else but "the terrible mess we are in."

"Material values have kept receding—many to the vanishing point. Prices on what one has to sell have dropped so low that property holdings in many instances have become a liability. Prosperity has passed from the land. And all men weep for its return. Thus people talk, as they long for "THE GOOD OLD DAYS."

But what days do they refer to? Are high prices all humanity needs to insure peace of mind and satisfaction of soul? Perhaps if we would only stop to think, we might realize that despite all the economic unrest and the industrial uncertainty; that in spite of all the so-called depression which is indeed occasion for real anxiety and which is punishing us all in some way or other, but that in spite of the depression which is terrible, conditions today have far more of inspiration and satisfaction than had conditions in many other days, that all of us have experienced.

Who would want to exchange the present state of conditions with all its perplexities for conditions during the World War, when instead of men merely being out of work, young men with great futures before them, and with salaries most satisfying, were taken from their offices and other positions and compelled to go to war as bullet meat for a dollar a day? And think of the horror of their experience, constantly facing possible tragic death, and daily experiencing deprivations and exposures about which only those who thus suffered know. Even the unemployed ex-soldier would not wish to exchange conditions today for the war conditions. Nor would those who stayed at home wish to make such exchange. The anxiety experienced in watching the casualty list, the restrictions on the kinds and amounts of foods one could purchase, these and countless other memories of the War days remind us of how much our nation today at peace has for which to be thankful.

Who would care to exchange the depression of today for War time prosperity, including in the exchange the concomitant experiences of that prosperity? Oh yes, prices were high in those days but human life was cheap. The army of unemployed today is occasion for real concern, but certainly of not so great consequence as the army engaged in war. No individual had the power to change conditions for those in the war army, but every employed person has the opportunity to help change conditions for those in the army of the unemployed.

"The Good Old Days!" When? Perhaps we mean the conditions that obtained during "the Flu Epidemic" when that dread contagion stalked through every community, and the shadow of its fear fell upon every home. Just the mention of the word is enough to bring back the memories of those conditions, and the anxiety associated with those days.

Though prices were high and prosperity abounding, who is it whose materialistic propensities would make him willing to exchange our present depression for conditions of those days?

When we are tempted to scound our lamentations because of the present conditions, we need instead to go to our knees in thanksgiving to God that conditions are no worse. Instead of longing for "the good old days" we should thank God we are not having to experience now the anxiety of those days that were not good, but evil. When discouraged because of the problems of unemployment, we should be encouraged by the possibility of some day changing a profit based social order to a service based social order, and rejoice in the opportunities of personally making a worthy contribution in ameliorating the present conditions, and of having a worthy part in helping to rebuild a more equitable and more stable industrial, economic and social regime.

Christian men and women, though deploring conditions as they are, should rejoice in the larger opportunity for service the present conditions afford.

Nor should we forget that the prosperity of the pre-depression days was not real. It was only make-believe. Fictitious values deceived the people. The so-called financial crash simply let them know the truth with a possibility of understatement of fact. The pseudo-prosperity made many people hysteric in their speculations and wild in their extravagances. All principles of thrift were thrown to the wind.

There was also an army of unemployed in the pre-depression days—the army of men and women who had abandoned work and honest effort in following the will-o'-the-wisp of margin speculation. And society was just as surely supporting that army of unemployed as it is now supporting the present army of the unemployed. The personnel of the army has simply shifted. Whether it has enlarged or not, nobody is able to state authoritatively. For more people had been caught in the meshes of false hopes of the prosperity of those pre-depression days than we will ever know.

And let us not forget that the depression is not without its compensations. It has sobered the living of millions. It has banished from the commercial world that growing arrogance of independence which often expressed itself in the attitude if not in the words—"Let the public be d . . . d." "Take it or leave it." "Why should I worry," etc., etc. The tragedy is that so many of the innocent have had to suffer with the guilty. But even these innocent victims upon sober thought would not ask for "the good old days?" of the War, the Flu Epidemic, the legalized liquor traffic, and of other evils that characterized periods of the past.

"The Good Old Days!" When? It is not ours to long for "the good old days," but to work for "The Better New Days." It is ours to appreciate the good in conditions as they are, and to play a man's part in helping to make conditions what they ought to be. It is ours to realize that there never has been or never can be any "clash" in spiritual values, and that the only security which is bound to increase in value with the passing of the years is spiritual security. It is ours to realize that morality and religion are after the greatest and only final protection to the individual, the home and society.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

If the different churches could but realize how much they could help us and how easy it would be, I believe all our churches would lend us a helping hand.

Our good friends of Catawba Springs and Wntworth Churches sent us a truck-load of corn, wheat, peas, chickens, sausage, potatoes, canned goods, preserves, quarter of beef, and many other good things to eat.

Piney Plains Church sent us wheat, corn, meal and 8 chickens. Suppose all our churches would come to our rescue like these churches, we could make ends meet so much easier. One orphanage in North Carolina received for Thanksgiving more than one hundred truck-loads of foodstuff. Think of it—one hundred truck-loads. Does that denomination love its orphan children more than we Christians? They may not, but they are showing their love by their works.

The Woman's Missionary Society, Roanoke, Ala., sent us one box of clothing, towels, etc.

J. D. and L. B. Whitted, caps, underwear, gloves, dress goods, hose and thread.

Edwin Gould, of New York City, 60 beds, 60 springs, 60 mattresses, 60 pillows.

Missionary Society, Palm Street Church, of Greensboro, N. C., coat, bloomers, 6 dresses, 26 yards dress material, cutting, etc. sugar, flour, corn, fruit, preserves.

Ladies' Bible Class, Holland Christian Church, Va., 1 box clothing, dresses, shoes, coat.

We are grateful for kind friends.

We appreciate their loyalty and support.

We truly hope and pray that the churches and Sunday Schools will stand by us in these days of discouragement, while our friends are tied up in a closed bank. If we ever needed your love, your loyalty and your help, we need it now.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

THE EASTERN ORTHODOX CHURCH, by Stefan Zankov. Student Christian Movement Press. $1.25.

The well-known Bulgarian has interpreted his church, and does it fairly. The reader who would understand the church that regards itself as the original Christian organization, will do well to study this volume. The characteristic resentment of Protestant missions to Greek orthodox lands is here reflected, and it is naive on the author's part to regard all Protestants as Anglican or Lutheran in doctrine. Despite its betrayal of insufficient acquaintance with our Western churches, the book is valuable as revealing the Eastern church to those who wish to know its genius and outlook.

CAN I TEACH MY CHILD RELIGION? By George Stewart. Student Christian Movement Press. 75c.

This book approaches religion from the standpoint of ordinary daily experience in the realm of practical living, and concludes that religion can be effectively taught in such situations. The anxious parent, and forward-looking teacher alike, will find this little volume by this singularly independent thinker a rich mine of suggestion.

TAMING OUR MACHINES, by Flanders. Published by Richard R. Smith, Inc. $2.50. 244 pages.

"Taming Our Machines is an exposition of the effect of machines on life today, treated from the interesting and comprehensive vantage point of experience combined with keen observation, and affording delightful reading for every man, showing that none is exempt or immune from these effects.

It is a development of the progress of western civilization with a comparison of the human value and the machine value, in terms of the thinking of today. It is a barometer of human emotions in a changing world, and worth reading.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

Humanity has made great advances in material and scientific progress. But what is the value of it all, if it lags behind morally and spiritually? Humanity has progressed materially at rapid pace these past fifty years. It is true now for humanity to catch up morally and spiritually.

What is the benefit of being able to cover distance more quickly, if we do not know how to conduct ourselves better when we arrive? What is the use of being able to throw our voices farther, if we do not have something more worthwhile to say? What is the use of labor and time saving devices, if we do not profitably use our leisure time? What is the benefit of any advancement if it does not advance us nearer to the mind and heart of God?

The depression may be a challenge from God for us to put first things first, a challenge to think more about God than about gain, more about moral and spiritual progress than about material and physical progress, more about the world as it ought to be than about the world as it "used to be."

Let's look to God and the future. The best days for humanity are ahead.

CHAPTER 23.
THEN spake Je'sus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3 3/4 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches x 3/4 inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2 1/4 x 4 1/4 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MARRIAGES

SEEKFORD-STROUPE.

On December 31, 1931, Mr. Lee Seekford and Miss Edna Stroupe from Newport and Leaksville, came to my home, and were united in matrimony. It was a quiet wedding, there being only a few intimate friends present.

The groom is the son of Mr. William Seekford of Leaksville, and the bride a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stroupe of Leaksville. The best wishes of their many friends in general, and of their pastor in particular, will follow them on their happy journey through life.

A. W. ANDES.

SELDON-JOHNSON.

A pleasant surprise awaited me on January 8, 1932, when in response to a phone call, I went to the home of Bro. and Sister N. H. Hasler in Harrisonburg, and there found Mr. Melvin Seldon and Miss Edith Johnson waiting to be married. They had made the journey from their homes near Timber Ridge in Hampshire County, W. Va., ostensibly for the purpose of visiting the bride's father who was temporarily confined to the Hasler home by illness. A second purpose in their coming was that they might have their pastor marry them—not a bad idea it seems to me. These young people are active in the work of the church at Timber Ridge, and their wedded lives will doubtless be useful as well as happy.

A. W. ANDES.

OBITUARIES.

LONG.

Mrs. Janet Bonie Long was born March 16, 1837, and died January 2, 1932, aged 94 years, 9 months and 17 days. She was married November 15, 1859 to Capt. W. J. Long, who died June 24, 1909. They were both charter members of Pleasant Union Christian Church near Lillington, Harnette Co., N. C. Mrs. Long was the last of the charter members. She was faithful and loyal to her church all her church life and seemed to always look forward with a great deal of joy for her regular preaching Sundays, and the Saturday services as well. I am sure but few people ever attended as many church services as did she.

For several years (some 4 or 5), before her death, her health was such that she could not attend services, but she was still very much interested and always inquired concerning same.

She leaves behind to miss her, several children, most of whom are among the faithful members of the old home church. Her youngest child was the wife of the late Dr. L. F. Johnson.

The body was laid to rest in Pleasant Union cemetery and services conducted by the writer. May God's richest blessings rest upon those that are left to miss her and be prepared, through faith in the Crucified One, for a great reunion.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

FOSTER.

Miss Lizzie Foster fell asleep in death January 21, 1932, aged 66 years, 1 month and 11 days. She is survived by two sisters and three brothers. She united with Union Christian Church some years ago and attended its services as opportunity afforded.

The funeral services were conducted from Union Christian Church by the writer and her body laid to rest in the church cemetery. May Jesus who went about doing good, comfort the bereaved.

P. H. FLEMING.

ISLEY.

Mrs. Angeline Bradshaw Isley was born June 29, 1853, died December 11, 1931, aged 78 years, 5 months and 11 days.

She leaves to mourn her departure her husband, Edward Allison Isley, several step-children, other relatives and many friends.

She was a good woman and much loved by all her friends, especially by her step-children.

Burial service was conducted at Pleasant Hill Church by the pastor and writer, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing friends, and many pretty flowers were placed upon her grave.

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

HICKMAN.

Whereas, it has pleased the Almighty to remove from our midst, by death, our esteemed friend and co-laborer, Mrs. Nell Green Hickman, who since coming into our midst has been a faithful and loyal member of The Hart Bible Class, The Ladies' Aid Society, and the Woman's Missionary Society. We bow in humble submission to His will. Her friends were impressed with her knowledge and deep love for God's work, her loyalty to home and friends, her fine co-operative spirit and her abiding faith in prayer.

Therefore, resolved: That in the death of Mrs. Hickman we have sustained the loss of a friend whose friendship it was an honor and pleasure to enjoy; that we bear willing testimony to her many virtues, to her unquestioned consecration and pure life; that we offer to her bereaved family and sorrowing friends, our heartfelt condolence, and pray that God may bring speedy relief to their burdened hearts and inspire them with the consolation that faith in God gives even in the shadow of the tomb.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of our deceased friend, a copy sent to the local papers, a copy of The Christian Sun, and a copy kept on file by the Hart Bible Class, the Ladies' Aid Society, and the Woman's Missionary Society.

Elon Campaign.—

The campaign for Elon College has not closed and will not close until every church in the Southern Christian Convention has contributed something, or has had a chance to contribute, to the college. The college needs your help in this financial crisis that is trying not only Elon, but all the colleges of the State. Many churches have given money to help pay urgent debts and this is very important. There are some obligations that must be paid and the creditors are clamoring for settlement. These obligations should be paid. The many who could not give money because they did not have it, gave provisions to be used in the boarding department, thus saving the money paid for board to be used in paying debts. The churches and local committees are urged to continue the campaign, soliciting corn, meat, flour, canned fruit, chickens, beans, peas, potatoes, anything that can be used in the boarding department and send it to the college. But secure all the money you can, for this is needed more than anything else now. If the loyal people of the church continue to help until the crisis is over, we shall not only save our college, but we shall have a great institution some day. Our president is saving all he can—cutting expenses at every possible point—and will continue to do so without weakening the college. He has enrolled about forty new students this spring, and everyone is happy to know that he is growing rapidly in the hearts of the people. All the ministers are enthusiastic for the college, and the alumni are responding to the call for help and there will be a growing interest in the college among them until we shall have the united support of the graduates and old students of the college. When all the former students unite to promote the interest of the college, its future will be assured.

Reports from the Field.—

At two meetings of the ministers, one at the President's office at Elon College, February 1st, and one at Raleigh, February 2nd, reports were made by all the ministers present, and the interest, not only among the ministers, but among the members of our churches, is fine. Many of the churches have made the canvass for the college and others will do so. Some of the churches have made fine reports, considering the conditions now existing in the country. There are some churches that have not made the canvass, but will do so later, and will send what they collect to the college. The college has insufficient help to send out to the churches to bring what may be collected in provisions to the college, but the churches can ask those who contribute to bring their contributions to one central point, and some member of the church with a truck can usually be found who will take the provisions to the college. Let the work continue and things at the college will continue to improve.

Speakers' Bureau.—

A Speakers' Bureau for the campaign has been organized. Many of our ministers and laymen have consented to help carry forward the campaign. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C., has been appointed to arrange the speakers for different churches, and pastors who want speakers can confer with and secure a speaker at any time that the pastors wish. We want every church to do its part and help us overcome the present situation. If we will all do our best we shall win out in the end. Every friend of the college should begin now to send in names of prospective students for next fall. We want to increase the enrollment of the college as fast as we can, for we are able to take care of six hundred students with our excellent equipment and buildings. No other college in the State or in the South has a better equipment or buildings for the work of a small college than Elon, and we should use the college equipment to the limit. Here is where we can earn the greater part of our income, and do the largest service. Use the speakers, continue the campaign, and send all the help you can until all churches have done their duty.

Alumni Can Help.—

If ever there was a time, or ever shall come a time, when the Alumni of Elon College should rally to the needs of the institution, this is the time, above all, for help. When times are better it will be much easier, but help now when all institutions are suffering, when banks are closing in every city and town, when people are hard pressed to meet their obligations, when depression is general, when we can hardly afford help, and when the college is passing through the greatest crisis that it has ever known, is to show our loyalty, our faith in the leadership, our devotion to the college, our self-sacrificing spirit and gratitude to the institution that made it possible for us to be what we are in life or in business. This is our Alma Mater, our foster mother, and there is nothing finer than to show love for our mother when all is well. But how much greater when there is suffering and deep need. Every loyal son and daughter of Elon College will come to her help at this time. They will not wait for some one to solicit help. They will send it without solicitation on the part of any representative of the church or college. When requested to help, they will not begin to rationalize and find excuses. All can find excuses that want them, but this is a time to find help and show our loyalty to the limit.

Borrow the Money and Help.—

There is no more beautiful example of genuine loyalty, love, devotion and sacrifice than that shown by Dr. Staley at the Extraordinary Session of the Southern Christian Convention. He knew the needs of the college, and realized that mere talk would not pay debts and satisfy our creditors. He said, "I will go home and borrow a thousand dollars from the bank, and give it to the college in this time of need." He did what he said he would do—borrowed a thousand dollars and gave it to the college. This is not all, for during a period of forty years he has been a member of the Board of Trustees of the college, and has attended every meeting of the Board, paying his own expenses to the meetings. He sent all his children to the college, and although entitled to free tuition, as all church colleges and many State institutions give free tuition to ministers' children, he paid all tuition fees for his daughters' education at Elon. He was President of the college for eleven years and served without salary all this time, and now comes to the relief of Elon at a time of need, even though he had already given liberally to the college time and again when calls were made. This represents only part of the service he has rendered, but when the need is most urgent, he comes again to its aid, although not an alumnus of Elon, and borrows one thousand dollars, which he will have to repay to the bank, and gives it to the college in its great hour of need. We need hundreds of such loyal souls among the members of the Christian Church to help NOW, in this time of need. If you cannot give as much, you can be as loyal and as liberal by giving not only what you have, but by using your influence to give what you can get to the college and pay later. The college needs your help! The Kingdom of God is represented in preparing young people for leadership in the college. You can help. All can help. It can be done, if we will. It is God's will that it shall be done, and it is our duty to meet the needs of the college. With such a man as we have in Dr. Smith, we have a brilliant example of what Elon has done and can do for the church. With his leadership, every dollar that is donated will be saved to the best advantage for the college. He is practicing economy at every possible point, and yet is not weakening the effectiveness of the work. He is cutting expenses wherever possible. This will continue and our obligations will be met as fast as the means can be secured. Dr. Smith's plan is to reduce the debts as rapidly as the resources at his command will make this possible, and at the same time improve the work of the college with reduced, rather than increased, expenses.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Sunday School orchestra of the First Church, Richmond, played at the City Auditorium for the Prohibition mass meeting last night. The speaker was Col. Raymond Robins, well-known authority on social and economic problems. Dr. Poling will speak in the Auditorium tonight.

The following comes from Miss Nina Black, secretary of our Hopewell (Va.), Sunday School: "The Hopewell Christian Church is progressing very well. Since Rev. T. N. Lowe, formerly pastor at the Elm Avenue Christian Church, at Portsmouth, Va., accepted the pastorate of this church some four months ago thirty-three new members have been added to the church. Rev. Lowe is doing a good work at Hopewell. The Sunday School also is steadily growing and taking care of its own expenses. We are looking forward to greater things in the future under the leadership of Rev. Lowe."

More than half of the foreign-born population of the United States is concentrated in the Middle Atlantic and North Central divisions of the country, according to statistics issued by the Census Bureau recently. The number of persons of foreign birth in the United States on April 1, 1930, was found to be 14,204,149, as compared with 13,920,692 in 1920 an increase of 283,457, or 2 per cent. New York State alone has 3,262,278, or 23 per cent of the foreign-born, while Illinois, California and Massachusetts each have more than a million. South Carolina, North Carolina and Mississippi each have less than 10,000 persons of foreign birth. More than half the foreign-born Negroes are in New York. As compared with 1920, there has been an increase of 1,428,557 in the number of naturalized citizens. These formed 55.8 per cent of the total number of foreign-born in 1930, as compared with 46.6 per cent in 1920. There has been a slight increase in the number having first papers, and a material decrease in the number returned as "alien" and "unknown." Of the foreign-born population in 1930, there were 7,647,090 males and 6,557,059 females. There were 13,366,407 whites, 98,620 Negroes and 739,122 of other races.

LOVE'S WAY.

Love looks beneath the stains of sin,
And sees the yearning heart within;
There is no man 'twixt pole and pole
But Love has mercy on his soul;
She sees God's image in the worst
Whom sin hath blighted, wounded, curst,
And stoops to save—whate'er the price—
The slaves of unbelief and vice;
Her garments, fair, are never soiled
By contact with the sin despoiled,
Her glorious luster never dimmed
By mingling with the souls who've sinned.
The Pharisee may shake his head
And gossip 'midst the living dead
But Love goes on the Master's way,
Purer in heart and mind than they;
She cares not what their verdict be,
For Christ, who died on Calvary,
Regards the service of her hands,
And motives man misunderstands,
Love's purpose, deeds and every prayer
Are known on high and written there.

AN EDITOR'S CALL TO THE CHURCH.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Note.—Mr. Ellis is author of the Ellis Sunday School Lesson, which has appeared weekly in more than one hundred daily newspapers for above a quarter of a century.

This is not an essay but a bit of reporting. I am not responsible for the sentiments expressed although I share them. They are all up to an editor friend, who fairly drove me to this little task of carrying his message to the preachers. I took no notes, so his sentiments are a bit paraphrased—but the views are accurately his.

It happens that I am looked upon by many daily newspaper editors as representing the Christian Church; and many an intense hour I have spent in editorial offices defending her. At the same time, quite a few churchmen regard me as representing the press, for journalism is my calling. So I am regularly kept warm by two fires.

On this occasion, the editor of a daily newspaper, upon whom I was paying a social call, had barely greeted me before he began to challenge the Church in the present crisis. He is an old-school editor, blunt, forthright, a crusader with a strong sense of infallibility. His desk is a heaped-up clutteration that would make an orderly housewife or an efficiency expert despair. He works in his shirt-sleeves, and looks like a farmer—is, indeed, a dirt farmer, out of office hours. This time he had scarcely a word to say about his wonderful crop of grapes; he wanted to know what the Church is doing in this period of depression and emergency.

Pointing an indicting finger at me, he demanded, "Doesn't the Church know that it is all up to her? She should be the rallying center of all real relief. She has the Word that will make things right. Every preacher in the land ought to be hot about his own business these days, which is preaching a Gospel for the people. This thing that has happened is all within the Church's province. It is her business to help people see straight and hold steady. And if she doesn't care for hurt human hearts now, she'll never get a chance to do so later."

I steered my friend on to the subject of the plight of the press in these times. In a few minutes, though, he was off again on his "concern." "Every Church ought to be a relief center. The churches are closest to the people, and know their real needs. The very genius of religion is brotherliness and helpfulness. People instinctively turn to the Church when in trouble. This is your chance; this is your chance; look out that you don't miss it."

We were interrupted by the arrival of other newspaper workers. After introductions and general talk, I arose to take my leave. The old editor followed me to the door. He laid his hand upon my arm, and looking into my face with eager, earnest eyes, he insisted, "Don't forget! Tell the churches that is their hour. Every church should rally to the job. The most important aspect of this depression is the need that people should get back to God, and to all the essentials of real religion. Nobody but the Church can make plain the will of God to the people; who need comfort and guidance and inspiration. Mark what I say: this is the Church's chance. You tell them so."

So I have done as directed.

ELON AND HER FUTURE.

"It is a small college, but there are those who love it."

Elon is the very heart of our Church. Every creditor of the institution must be satisfied. Repudiation of a single debt is unthinkable. If present conditions have caused a waning of interest and loyalty on the part of our people this must be remedied.

Let running expenses be reduced to a minimum and all the friends of the institution come together at some stated place and time in a grand rally, and provide for current expenses over a period of at least five years, so as to avoid too frequent appeals for financial aid. Let us go to the very limit in sacrificial loyalty. God help us.

COST OF CRIME.

The Wickersham Commission on Crime presents a vast body of carefully compiled statistics regarding the cost of crime and crime prevention. The cost of crime and efforts to prevent and punish it by federal and state and local agencies, is considerably above one billion dollars a year, or $2,740,000 a day, or $114,000 an hour! But the greatest cost of crime and its most horrible results is not its cost in dollars but the injury that it does to its perpetrators its victims, and to society as a whole.

For a Christian the cause and the cure are not complex but simple, not obscure but clear:

Cause—Sin. This is revealed in selfishness, a lust for gold and an ignorance of God and disregard for His laws. This applies to both rich and poor, high and low, native and foreign, white and colored, capitalists and manual labor.

Cure—Faith in God and obedience to His laws of life as made known through Jesus Christ. This includes self-sacrifice a love for our fellowmen of every race and station; plain living, faithful and energetic use of whatever talents and opportunities we have; recognition of the sovereignty of God and seeking first His righteous rule over every department of life—personal, industrial, political and religious.—Exchange.

A LITTLE—FROM ALL.

How to meet the deficits which have been incurred as a result of the decline of 16 per cent in our apportionment giving during 1931 was one of the major problems which confronted the abbreviated mid-winter meeting of boards and administrative officers in New York on January 19th to 21st.

Future economies can not be expected to cover past deficits—yet to allow these deficits to continue to mount up is almost suicidal. Although large gifts cannot be sought and "high pressure campaigns" are decidedly out of order at such a time as this, it is thought that the general disposition of the people of our churches towards their missionary and benevolent enterprises is decidedly favorable.

After much discussion what is known as the "Dollar Plan" was finally adopted. The idea is to ask every member and friend of our churches who is able to make a special contribution of one dollar to be used to wipe out the deficits of 1931 and to diminish those of 1932.

A simple plan is to be followed. By the first of March the Commission on Missions will have ready for distribution to the churches through the State offices, coin folders with spaces for ten dimes. These are to be given out before Easter and are to be collected just before the meeting of the State Conference in the spring. The proceeds are to be divided between the State Conference, the Home Boards, and the American Board in accordance with the accepted percentages, but are not to be counted on regular apportionments.

The thought is to make this a widespread, popular, emergency appeal to meet a definite and pressing situation. It does not lay a heavy burden upon anyone. Its success will depend upon the whole-hearted cooperation of everybody.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

POMONA, FLORIDA. This church will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on the 28th of February. It is consequently one of the oldest churches in the State. The pastor of the church is Rev. R. Esten Newton, who has served the church since 1924.

THE CAROLINA CHURCHES all paid something on their apportionments, but since we did not promise to print their honor roll we shall not do so unless by request. But it is significant that not a single church failed to do something and many of them paid their full quota. Among them are Asheville, Chapel Hill, Salisbury, Sophia Community, Tryon, Erskine Memorial and Charleston, Circular.

OUR EXTENSION WORKERS, Miss Priscilla Chase, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Miss Marguerite Davison, are in Chicago attending a meeting of Congregational-Christian Educational and Young People's Workers, called by Secretary Gates. This meeting was held from February 3rd to 5th. Following that was held a meeting of the National Religious Education Association, which our representatives also attended. This is a fine opportunity for our workers and we are glad they are attending these important sessions.

THE UNITED CHURCH, Raleigh, is one of the first to send in an annual meeting report of its splendid work of 1931. With joy they have paid off $10,000 of the building debt—something over which to rejoice. And there was a net gain of 24 new members—which is worth another ten thousand. They also paid amounts voted by the church for missions, and in 1932 they expect to do the same thing. The church is happily looking forward to 1932 with expectancy and courage, and they think they will have as good a year as they had in 1931; and that is one reason why they will. When a hard task is before a church let it greet its work with "fierce joy."

PER CAPITA TAX. Ever hear of it? Well, now is the time to make it good. A number of churches did not pay it in 1931. Unless they prepare for it soon, they will get behind still further in 1932. That is the reason why we call attention to it now. This is the time to plan to pay. Put it in the budget. Remember, it is ten cents per member (this is written for Georgia and the Carolinas). How would it do for every pastor, church clerk and treasurer to ask each and every member to pay his or her ten cents right now and send it in to the registrar-treasurer. That is a worth-while suggestion. I thank Mr. B. for making it. If this succeeds, and if some churches will pay up for last year, why, we will certainly be out of debt next autumn. Is it not worth it? Let's go!

GEORGIA WOMEN organized at the annual State Conference at Fredonia Church last October. They elected Mrs. William A. Davis, of Atlanta, president; Miss Ruth Lott, Brazelton, secretary; Miss Antoinette Colquit, Thomaston, secretary of literature. These officers have been busily at work getting in touch with the women of all our churches, including the Christian Churches, and establishing local organizations as fast as they can. A questionnaire has been sent out to each church. If you received it, kindly fill it out at once (if you have not already done so), and send it to the president or secretary, at your earliest convenience. If you have not received this questionnaire, write to Miss Ruth

Lott for it, and she will do the rest. This organization is expected to become a strong factor in all our Georgia work. When the State Conference meets next October in Atlanta, it is planned to give them plenty of room on the program. The wheels are already going around!

OUR HONOR ROLL. The writer promised some time ago to give our readers inside facts concerning the honor roll of Georgia churches, which made good their apportionment before January 10, 1932. Here it is: Highest honors go to Fredonia Church, Barnesville, Rev. Lawrence Stanley, minister. This church exceeded its apportionment. The following churches paid the full amount apportioned to them: Bowman, Liberty, Rev. T. L. Leverett, pastor; Doerun, New Light, Rev. C. W. Carpenter, pastor; Gaillards, Pleasant Hill, Mr. Crawford Moncrief pastor; Hampton, County Line, Rev. Carl Parker, pastor; LaGrange, First (now United), Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor; Oxford, Sardis, Rev. T. L. Leverett, pastor; The Rock, Bethany, Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley, pastor; Whitehall Community, Rev. Allan Jones, pastor. Some of the following churches came very close to paying the full quota; all of them paid something: Atlanta, Central, and Atlanta, United (recently merged), Rev. W. T. McElveen, pastor; Atlanta Center, Rev. Carl Parker, pastor; Baxley, Friendship, Rev. Allan Jones, pastor; Buford, Duncan's Creek, Rev. Carl Parker, pastor; Cochran Pleasant Hill, no pastor; Demorest, Union, Rev. Henry C. Mowbray pastor (this church paid the largest amount of any church, but did not quite reach the full apportionment); Hoschton, Macedonia, Rev. T. L. Leverette, pastor; Meansville, Rev. L. L. Stanley, pastor; Pearson, Union Hill, Rev. Allan Jones, pastor; Roberta, Walker's Chapel, Mr. Crawford Moncrief, pastor; Lawrenceville, New Trinity, Rev. T. L. Leverette, pastor. There were four active churches which failed to make any payment on their apportionment. But let us believe they will be among the first next year. And remember, we are going to try to have the full payment made by December 15th this year. By the way, has any church paid for January, 1932, yet? Let us all keep in mind that the depth of the spiritual life of a church is often reflected in its cooperation with others in meeting benevolent obligations. The deeply spiritual man seeks to share with others. That is the good news. We must also remember that the payment of apportionments is largely a matter of organization and pastoral leadership. The printing of this honor roll, we trust, will give some satisfaction to those who came through with a good record and furnish some inspiration to all churches to do their best in 1932. "God loves a cheerful giver." And so does everyone else.

DR. BLOOM TO VISIT FLORIDA.

Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Secretary of Missions, Eastern Division, will be present at the dedication of the Fort Myers Church on February 14th. He will deliver the dedication sermon.

Following the dedication there will be held in four different centers of the State group meetings for the discussion of problems of church and missionary giving. The situation with our Mission Boards and the promotion of the "Dollar Plan" and the missionary program of the churches, will be discussed with pastors and church officials and leaders. It is planned to hold these group meetings at Miami, West Palm Beach, Daytona Beach and Winter Park. The party attending these conferences will consist not only of Dr. Bloom, but also of the Superintendent, E. C. Gillette, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Miss Miriam Woodbury, Associate Director of Missions for the Extension Boards. Miss Woodbury will be returning from the Caribbean Tour conducted by Secretary Hubert Herring, and will be spending a few days in Florida.

AN APPEAL FOR MISSIONS.

A dollar appeal is to be made in Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the country for an extra gift fund to prevent the recurrence of the deficit incurred for missions last year and to check the decrease in regular missionary contributions which is being faced this year. The total membership of the churches is 1,041,275.

The appeal is voted by the united denomination's commission on missions at its annual meeting which has brought together in New York City this week leaders in the missionary cause from all parts of the country. The "dollar gift" plan was presented by Rev. Walter H. Rollins, D. D., state superintendent for New York and was unanimously adopted. It is suggested that the extra dollar gifts be brought by delegates from churches to the annual meetings of the State Conference, which will be held in April or May.

The decrease in regular missionary contributions during 1931, as compared with 1930, was reported by the Rev. Charles C. Merrill, D. D., secretary of the promotion for the commission on missions, to be $453,112, or 16.1 per cent. In commenting upon the effect of the depression, Dr. Merrill said:

"A judgment day has come for the world and no less for those who are entrusted with some responsibility for leadership in the Church of Christ. Let us pray that this depression shall not end until a new world has been born."

Reductions ranging from fifteen to twenty per cent in administrative and promotional expenses were reported by the mission boards and were made by the commission of missions in its budget for 1932. A cut of five per cent was made in all salaries of the staff of the commission and corresponding cuts, it was reported, had been made by the mission boards. Members of the staffs, it was also stated, were making special contributions to "loyalty funds."

The Rev. Jay T. Stocking, D. D., pastor of Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, Mo., and formerly pastor of the Union Church, Upper Montclair, N. J., was re-elected chairman of the commission on missions. Other officers re-elected included: the Rev. Horace F. Holton, pastor, Porter Church, Brockton, Mass., vice-chairman; Mrs. Elbert A. Harvey, Chestnut Hills, Mass., recording secretary; William T. Boulton, New York, N. Y., treasurer.

The executive staff of the commission re-elected, included: the Rev. Charles C. Merrill, D. D.; Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., and Mary Preston, secretaries of promotion; the Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, assistant secretary; the Rev. John R. Scotford, editorial secretary; the Rev. Herbert D. Bugg, publicity secretary; the Rev. Howell D. Davies, D. D., and the Rev. Mrs. Helen Street Ranney, secretary and associate secretary for the mid-west regional offices, Chicago, Ill.; the Rev. Knighton W. Bloom, D. D., southeast regional secretary, Washington, D. C.; the Rev. Judson L. Cross, New England regional secretary, Boston, Mass.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN FLORIDA.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 6, 1932.

The dollar in your pocket has little or no intrinsic value, or inherent worth. And the same may be said of other property and possessions. The value of material possessions depends on how much other people desire them. If others do not desire them, there is little or no value in them. The dollar, then, is of value not because it has a hundred cents in it, but because a hundred people want it, and are willing to give other possessions for it. If you don't believe it, come to Florida. I saw a vacant city lot today that they say was valued at a million dollars, and possibly was sold for that during the "boom period." You had better not offer ten thousand for it today, unless you differ from other people, and really want it. The lot has the same soil, location, depths and length it had ten years ago. But no one wants it very much today. The lot isn't worth much now, although as much occupied as ever, because nobody is very anxious for it.

All human values are simply measures of human desires. The worth of the dollar you have depends solely on the desire of others to possess it. I saw two days ago a beautifully and, in fact, a very elaborately appointed hotel. In "boom" days the value was six hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Now it is offered for twenty-five thousand without a bidder. The value of that magnificent structure does not inhere in the beautiful and costly material that went into it, but in the desire—now, the lack of it—to own and operate it. There are times and conditions in which all the Vanderbilt millions would not be worth—would not have the value of—a snap of the finger; for instance, on a sinking ship at sea when all were going down with it—and there was more desire and demand for a board to float on than for gold to sink with. Too many wanted Florida real estate, and wanted it too bad. Now, too few, and values have vanished.

This is why our Saviour likened the Kingdom of Heaven to a merchantman seeking goodly pearls, who, when he found one of great price, sold all that he had and bought that one pearl. It was more desirable—had more value and worth to him than all belongings besides. If the Kingdom of Heaven isn't the most desirable possession then it hasn't the greatest value for us, and we pursue other things instead. What God wants and must have of us is the first place in our affections and desires, because this determines the real value for us of the Kingdom.

I am writing this seated by a very placid, restful, unrippled lake. Its waters are beautifully blue and beckoning, reflecting the graceful outline of pine and palm and orange tree that frieze, surround and guard it. Birds are singing, the sun is beaming the warmth of life and light, the mild breeze is unusually balmy, and nature is in perfect harmony and accord. What a lake! What a scene! What a day! One can almost see the smile of God in the glorious, gleaming sunshine; hear the voice of God in the song of bird and the muffled murmur of pine and palm, and touch the richness and benevolence of God in the abundance of oranges and grapefruit. surely, "Nature is divine and only man is vile."

It was a joy two days ago to ride with a friend through the rich garden lands of this tropical climate and see men busy cutting and shipping cabbages, celery, cauliflower, and hear the women and children singing as they picked and crated strawberries, radishes, beets, and watch the great trucks tug at their tasks of carrying fresh vegetables out to all parts of our country; some stopping at railway stations to unload and return; others rushing on to open markets in the Carolinas, Virginia and neighboring markets. Florida has abolished the closed season on fresh vegetables in our Southern and Eastern markets, and people in Raleigh, Richmond, New York, Boston, may and do have beans and squash and berries as fresh in January as in May. The world grows smaller as science develops new means of traffic, and the way of life grows happier and better as we learn more of Him Who is the Way, the Truth, the Life. J. O. A.

THE CHURCH AND THE COLLEGE.

There seems to be a tendency to underrate the Church College and to place the emphasis of education on the Public School and the State Institutions of higher learning; and the denominations are beginning to feel that it is too much of a burden upon the church to maintain Church Schools in competition with State Schools.

But if the church will keep in mind that the Church founded schools in this country before the state founded schools, it will appear that Church Schools now are needed to maintain Christian religion as much as they were needed then to maintain common intelligence. There never was a greater need for Christian Colleges than in the present time. State Schools are common for intellectual training, and that without the moral and spiritual training would carry the age away from the Bible and Christian Character. It is an unconscious tendency, but it is a tendency just the same.

The church is the heart of Christianity, so far as man has charge, and the church College is the mind of Christianity, so far as man has charge. It takes both to maintain the cause of righteousness and Christian civilization. The burden of carrying the weight of college expenses is a privilege and an obligation upon the members of the church, the followers of Christ Jesus. What would the Government do without the support of the church? What would education do without the support of the Church College? There is no competition between the church and the state; They are co-workers; there is no competition between the Church College and the State Schools; They are co-workers in the full education of mankind. It is just as important for members of the church to contribute to the support of Elon College as it is to pay their taxes; and they would have no schools, no good roads, no protection for person, home, and property, if they did not support the state by obedience to the law and the payment of taxes. It is equally important to pay for the support of the church and college.

W. W. S.

MID-WINTER MEETINGS.

This year the so-called midwinter meetings were not as largely attended as in the past, as only executive committees and the Cooperative Council were called, the purpose of this being to reduce expense. The meetings were held at the headquarters, 247 Fourth Avenue, New York City. The first meeting was held on Tuesday, January 19th, and was a meeting of the Directors of the Home Boards with the Administrative Committees of the various boards also meeting. On the following day there was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Commissions on Missions, to which were admitted all others who were in attendance. On Thursday the Cooperative Council met, this council being a combination group from the Promotional Council and the Committee on Missionary Education Materials and Methods. There were also group meetings of such superintendents as were in attendance. These meetings were presided over by Superintendent Gill who came from California for these meetings. Those attending these meetings from the Southeast were Miss Priscilla Chase, who is secretary of the Committee on Educational Materials and Methods, and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, who was elected vice-president of the Cooperative Council. Others who were in attendance, who largely represented us of the Southeast, were Secretaries Bloom, Minton and Sparks.

Very important matters were considered, especially the problems arising from the very large deficits in the giving during the past year. These deficits are now placed at $459,138, the American Board deficit is placed at $169,455, the Home Boards' at $185,467, and the State Conferences, which maintain their own missionary service, $104,216. The budget of the Commission on Missions was seriously reduced, as were also the budgets for other boards.

An important action taken was the adoption of a plan for preventing further deficits, which is known as "The Dollar Plan," an account of which will be separately given. In spite of the serious conditions facing the boards, there was only the spirit of courage and determination manifested.

A dollar bill bearing this typewritten notation, "the last of a $100,000 fortune spent on wine, women and song," was found recently in the tills of the Durant National Bank, Durant Oklahoma. And what a tragic tale that dollar bill might tell if it could speak.

CAMPAIGN FOR ELON COLLEGE.

On October 19th, the Southern Christian Convention, in Extraordinary Session at Burlington, N. C., authorized a campaign for $50,000 for Elon College. In this period of depression the college found itself in financial straits. The Convention wished the needs of the college to be carried direct to the individual and to the churches. In accordance with the request of the Convention, the Executive Committee set itself to the task of forming an organization that would carry the appeal to the churches in behalf of the college.

We all realized that the time for such a campaign was inopportune, but the need was so great and so pressing that we were all willing and ready to dedicate our best efforts to such an undertaking. The response of the ministers and laymen has been unusually good; not for many years have so many among us been so concerned or manifested such real interest in our own college as in recent days. The results in contributions have not been so gratifying, but considering the serious financial depression throughout the country, the number of offerings made to the college is encouraging. If the people were able, they would give. There are some, however, among our number, who are able, but who have not given. I am appealing to everyone who has not contributed to please take this matter to heart and make your contributions—join hands and gifts with others that the college may continue its work for the church and the kingdom, honorably and with credit. We all have a responsibility, and may no one fail in this hour of opportunity. Your gifts now for Elon College will mean more than at any time in our history.

A number of churches and individuals have responded, some giving money, others giving provisions. Of course, we need money, and a lot of it, but we can also use more provisions than we now have. We can use wheat flour, meat, vegetables—anything that you have to contribute that could be used for the table. One good friend sent us a whole hog last week, weighing about 200 pounds. A number have sent chickens, and we have to have eggs every day. If you have articles of food that you can spare, they are the same as money to us.

I am taking this occasion to thank everyone who has made a contribution of any kind to the college, and sincerely trust that all who have given and those who have not, may remember us in your prayers and send us additional contributions as you may be able.

We publish below a list of the churches and individuals who have made contributions and donations:

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE W. C. T. U. DURING 1931.

The year 1931 may be credited with twelve major advances in prohibition sentiment, strength or enforcement. Despite the tremendous drive of the pro-liquor forces against temperance, total abstinence and law observance, 1931 is a high-water mark for prohibition so far.

1. Wet legislation to impede, repeal, or modify prohibition enforcement defeated wherever found in the 44 State legislatures meeting 1930-31.

2. Demonstration by the federal government that Uncle Sam is bigger than the bootlegger. Ask Al Capone.

3. Lesson in constitutional law handed Judge Clark, of New Jersey, by the Supreme Court of the United States.

4. Exposure of Augustus Busch as the brewer behind the guns of the wet's modification program.

5. President Hoover receives personally from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union a million names of Americans between 14 and 30 years of age, pledging total abstinence and law observance.

6. Exposure of the fact that there is enough of a wet slush fund to permit the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform to offer one woman a quarter of a million dollars for the work of undermining the constitution in a single Southern State.

7. General Federation of Women's Clubs (12 million women), reaffirming through its national Executive Council its support of the Eighteenth Amendment.

8. National Grange (a million farmers in 34 States), reaffirms for the eleventh time its support of prohibition and its repudiation of city-bred wet claims about beer and farm distress.

9. Parent-Teacher National Convention reaffirms support of prohibition.

10. National Education Association (200,000 school teachers), reaffirms its active support of prohibition and continues with its educational program.

11. Fifteen thousand mass meetings for prohibition planned by the thirty-one national organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment.

12. President's Commission on Law Observance and Law Enforcement declared, with but one dissenting vote, for maintenance and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Despite dissenting views, this report denied practically all of the main wet contentions.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One of the problems of the church of this day is to discover how to secure a better attendance of the Sunday School at the regular church services. This difficulty is much greater in the city than in the country. In the country all of the family go to Sunday School and remain for the church service. That is, those who attend. It is too far from home for part of the family to go home and the rest remain at church. As a rule, all must attend both Sunday School and church, or not attend either. In the city one part of the family can go to Sunday School and another part attend church.

Two historic facts have increased the difficulty of solving this problem. The organized adult classes and the addition of departments and classrooms. It is history that the organized men's classes attend their class lecture and then go home, and not more than twenty-five per cent attend church. That is considered a liberal estimate of church attendance from the men's classes throughout the country. The attendance from the women's classes is a larger percentage than that of the men's classes.

Another factor is the Departmental Sunday School, with departments, with superintendents and classrooms for separate teachers and classes. Each department is a little Sunday School in itself, and the whole does not get together. When these departments close their work, they go to their homes and many of them fail to attend church. The result is that there is an increase in attendance at Sunday School and a decrease in attendance at the regular church service. When the church building had only one room and the preaching service followed immediately after the close of the Sunday School, then the Sunday School remained for the preaching service. That was a time, also, when the family pew figured largely in the worship. The family, when separated, loses its family characteristic value as an institution; and the church is God's spiritual family in the world. It can never be made its best by separate groups no matter how intelligent, how practical, how intellectual, and how liberal such groups may be. There is something in a congregation composed of all ages, all grades, and all positions, that creates an atmosphere more spiritual than can be produced in any other way. Even preaching is at its best before a mixed audience. The experience of age, the aspiration of youth, the faith of children, all combined, make a condition that opens the way for the gospel to human hearts. When a soul is born in a congregation of all ages and conditions it makes the house of prayer a place of joy for all who are present. What this generation needs is the attendance of the Sunday School at church. No doubt if the Sunday School superintendents, superintendents of departments, and teachers of classes would all attend the church, they could get the members of the classes to attend regularly. The Sunday School that reaches this goal will be the banner Sunday School, and it will increase the number of conversions and the number of additions to the church membership. It would do another thing which is very much needed; and that is, it would improve the preaching of the gospel. A sermon is never at its best when addressed to one class of men and women; for the sermon is derived from the congregation as well as from the library.

LOWELL CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

For four years I have been pastor of this church, and have enjoyed the fellowship and service with the people. It has been our purpose to build a church here, but bank failures and depressing conditions have so affected our people here, as they have in other parts of our work, that we have decided it would not be wise to begin such a task, but as soon as conditions get better, it is our intention to launch the building of a new house of worship. In the meantime, we shall endeavor to keep the congregation actively engaged in religious service. Our young people are very active in both church and Sunday School work. We have both Womens' and Young People's Missionary Societies and Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies.

The spiritual and financial interest in the church is real encouraging. The church has adopted the budget system, and I feel that we are going to be better able to help the church's cause.

REVIVAL AT ROANOKE, AIA.

On the second Sunday in January, we began a revival at Lowell Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala., with Rev. J. D. Dollar in charge. He has preached every sermon, except one, which was preached by Rev. L. P. Martin, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, and was a fine sermon.

Each sermon and service seemed to get better, and I don't recall better interest in a revival in all my experience in revival work. We closed the following Friday night.

We did not try to gather in a great number of new members, but we did try our best, in the name of Christ, to convert the old members, and the majority of them have taken on new life and spirit. I thank God for the revival, and to my mind it was the greatest meeting in which I have taken part at Lowell. The time seemed to have had a great deal to do with its success. We received two members by letter, and they are real church workers.

We are planning a fifteen-day revival, beginning February 14th, when Dr. Cole, of California, will do the preaching.

INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL.

By H. H. SMITH.

If prohibition is to win out in the face of the insidious propaganda of the liquor interests and the wets, we must teach the youth of today the disastrous effects of alcoholic liquor as a beverage. Those who lived in the days of the open saloon have a sorrowful recollection of the physical and mental wrecks caused by John Barleycorn. And some of J. B.'s victims of the old days are with us yet. Many of the alcoholic addicts of today were patrons of the saloon and acquired the habit under the license system. That is one of the great evils of the liquor habit—its far-reaching effects. Several years ago McClure's magazine published a remarkable article entitled, "The Story of an Alcohol Slave as Told by Himself." This victim of the drink habit made the following confession: "During thirty years as a hard drinker he spent $17,000 for liquor; influenced twenty of his friends to drink—five of whom became slaves like himself; was discharged from twenty-four jobs in nineteen years; was once imprisoned for drunkenness, and he estimated the total cost of his slavery to alcohol at $60,000." And this is the traffic that some would promote under the plea of personal liberty!

The old theory that liquor promotes physical efficiency has been long exploded, but there are some today who still labor under the old delusion. Military leaders do not call for alcoholic stimulants for their soldiers, and athletes put themselves on a total abstinence pledge when they enlist for the games. An eminent surgeon of the British army, observing the soldiers after a very severe test of forced marches, said: "The first who dropped out were not the tall men, nor the short men, nor the big men, nor the little men—but the drinkers. And they dropped out as clearly as if they had been labeled with a big letter on their backs."

Scientific tests have shown that the use of alcohol retards the intellectual processes, and brain workers are better off without liquor. Theodore Roosevelt was right when he said that there is not a single thought in a hogshead of beer. Where is the man who would claim that drink has been the making of his career? But neither tongue nor pen can tell of the bright minds that have been wrecked and ruined by rum. Several years ago Dr. Lorenz, an eminent Austrian surgeon, visited this country and attended a banquet given in his honor. Many of the guests drank liquor as it was passed around the table, but the principal guest pushed his wine aside and asked the waiter to bring him a cup of tea. When someone asked him if he was a teetotaler, he replied: "I cannot say that I am a temperance agitator, but I am a surgeon. My success depends upon my brain being clear, my muscles firm, and nerves steady. No man can take alcoholic liquor without blunting these physical powers which I must keep on edge. As a surgeon, I must not drink."

John Barleycorn is the world's greatest outlaw, for not a single word can be uttered in his behalf.

TOBACCO AND AUTOMOBILES.

Tax returns, state and federal, show falling off of revenue from all sources except from tobacco and gasoline. The revenues for these show an increase. Nearly everybody has a cigarette in his mouth—or her mouth—and nearly everybody rides. It takes more than a depression to discourage smokers and riders. The result is that though fewer automobiles are bought more gasoline is burned and our State profits thereby. Likewise the federal collector of Internal revenue is collecting more taxes on manufactured tobacco than ever before. It seems that North Carolina will still occupy high place in payment of internal revenue and be second only to New York. We will try to be proud of the fact. But there is one thing that disconcerts us; with the increased price of cigarettes the manufacturers are now getting fifteen cents more a pound for the tobacco in them while they are not paying our farmers all told fifteen cents a pound for their tobacco.—Biblical Recorder.

ODDS FAVOR COMMUNISM.

Will China, in sheer desperation, be forced to choose a radical course? "It may be a choice between Christianity and Communism, and the odds are now in favor of the latter," says Rev. Lewis L. Gilbert, of Lintsing, North China. "We need your help. Pray for us in this work; pray for Japan and China," adds Rev. George M. Newell of Foochow. "Pray for the League of Nations—if she fails in her effort to bring justice China may (some times I feel like saying 'will') turn to Russia."

SILENCE.

Man is a great noise maker; God moves with silent tread. The creature's engines shriek like angry demons; the Creator's sunrises and sunsets occur without the blast of trumpets. Man's world is filled with sounds nerve-racking and discordant. When will man read on to the end of the forty-sixth Psalm, beyond the clash of armies and the roar of storms, and with reverent silence read, "Be still, and know that I am God." Noise is a positively wicked thing. It distracts attention, it confuses, and it murders holy silences. An almost forgotten poet, Hageman, was pleading for silence when he wrote:

"Greatness lies insphered in silence, littleness to sound is stirred,
All the grandest things in nature never have been seen or heard;
Proving down by printless logic all the science of the school,
Silence is the law of being, sound the breaking of the rule."

Man enters his laboratory on a mission of death, and his high-powered bombs go crashing and screaming toward their devilish ends. No sooner had the world a little quiet from a terrible war than the lovers of noise and thunder seek again to end the silence that might enable man to hear the "still small voice." Hageman speaks again:

"Voice of silence, thou art speaking in the ministry of men,
On the Nebo of remora, prophet to an endless plan;
And by silent testimony, and by influence unheard,
Doth he move for God or devil, than he doth by war or word."

Maybe we need to go back again to what was back of the good old Quaker's worship. Maybe we have not listened enough. God has spoken many times, but man's ears were stopped. Not so long ago we had a service in which there was little talking. Only fine and matchless passages from the Word of God were heard. Take time to be holy was observed. The silence of the service was eloquent. It was the "eloquence of Christian experience." I am wondering what might be the total effect of one "Sabbath of Silence"—millions listening only for some clear Voice within the soul.

Not many days ago I was called to a house of mourning. By the side of one in great grief I only sat for a while. Then I recalled:

"What shall sorrow say to sorrow like to tears that fall unsaid?
For as life is to the living, so is death unto the dead.
Sympathy shall sit before thee seven days mute-ly on the ground;
Sorrow is a voice too tender to be drowned by ruder sound."

—John W. Pearson in Nashville Christian Advocate.

LOOKING TOWARD WORLD PEACE.

At the Defiance Conference of Young People held this past Christmas season a Committee on "Truth" prepared a very suggestive and interesting report. Youth throughout the Congregational-Christian Church will be following the plans presented in this report during the year 1932. Some of the proposals of this committee are given here that youth in the South may join heartily in this program.

1. We recommend that all young people's groups secure disarmament petitions which should be signed and sent to President Hoover.

2. We recommend that following the disarmament discussion the following questions be asked to set the young people thinking: (a) Would you refuse to support in any way any war in which the United States might become involved? (b) Would you give aid in money, time, or talents, without actually enlisting? (c) Would you go to war regardless of its purpose?

3. We recommend that each group secure as much literature as possible before planning a program. Literature may be obtained from the National Council for the Prevention of War, 532 17th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

4. We recommend for study groups "National Defense," by Kirby Page. Write Dr. C. L. Fisk, 1006 Hippodrome Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio, for pamphlets on the book.

5. We recommend that groups study the world peace questions at regular intervals rather than being satisfied with any spectacular move which may be forgotten easily. World Peace may be studied quarterly, viz., in February, July 4th, Labor Day and Armistice Day.

6. We recommend Christian Life topics for February 7th, 14, and 21st, June 19th and 26th, and July 3rd, particularly because of their emphasis on this subject.

7. We recommend that wherever possible an outside speaker or the pastor of the church furnish material for the regular meetings.

8. We look with disfavor upon compulsory military training in schools. Materials regarding this may be secured from Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.

Amos R. Wells, in the Christian Endeavor World, points out the interesting fact that a millionaire, in the eyes of the Government, is a person having an annual income of $50,000, which is five per cent on a million dollars. There were 43,184 such persons in the United States in 1928, but only 19,688 today. Which is one evidence of the well-known "depression."

"What the 'image and superscription' gives to the piece of metal in the Mint, the Holy Spirit imparts to truly repentant and believing souls. Thereby they become currency of the kingdom."

A PRAYER.

Lord teach us to pray. Teach us the language of prayer, but more, Jesus' spirit of prayer; his compassion, his love for a world that is blackened and sickened by selfishness and sedition. Show us the world's helplessness, its hopelessness, unless prayer shall completely cleanse and cure. All barriers burned away, daily bring us, O Lord, our Saviour, our Guide to the garden of prayer, prostrate, surrendered, forgetful of all else but God, possessed of Him, beseeching Him to empower the church and to lift from millions the pall of impending eternal darkness. All for Jesus sake. Amen. L.

EVANGELIZING THE FILIPINOS.

By NORMAN H. CAMP.

The Philippine Islands afford at present a wide and effectual door for the distribution of evangelical Christian literature in the English language. For many years, until 1930, Spanish was the official language in the Islands, but now the English language is taught in all the public schools, and is read or understood by nearly one-half of the population.

The younger generation, especially the student class, read and speak English and are anxious to secure suitable reading matter in that language. "In 1928 there were 1,111,509 pupils in the 7,311 public schools, with 293 American and 25,958 Filipino teachers. There were 655 private schools with 84,685 pupils and 2,823 teachers. The state-supported University of the Philippines in 1928-29 had 5,698 students.

A missionary of the Student Center in Iloilo tells of the difficulty in finding suitable books for the young people to read. She writes: "I have been more and more impressed as time goes on with the need of building up a library at the Student Center, and I am convinced that this is one definite way we can serve this great student community. I long to put worth-while books into the hands of these thousands of students and teachers who are guiding their thoughts. The people who have been to school all use English. They learn to read, but they have no place to borrow or even buy books."

Another missionary writes: "English is being spoken by a rapidly increasing number of people in the Philippines. The majority of the younger generation speak it now, and it is the best means of communication in the Islands. I think that the printed page is one of the best ways for our disposal of spreading the Gospel message."

In view of this "Open Door" and "Golden Opportunity," the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded by D. L. Moody in 1894, for the purpose of publishing and distributing evangelical Christian literature, is undertaking to supply the large demand for books, tracts and Scripture portions in the English language. One native worker writes from Manila to ask "if there is any fund for the supplying of books from the Moody Colportage Library free for English-speaking students in the foreign fields," and then he tells of the great need there. Another writes: "We do so want to scatter the Word in printed form where we cannot penetrate in person." Still another says: "Thank God for the books that you have furnished me. These and the tracts have opened the minds of the people about the truth and the saving grace of our Lord Jesus Christ." Such expressions come from native Christians, who are anxious to distribute wholesome evangelical literature, and thus be a help to their own people. Shall we not give them the "Bread of Life" ere they perish?

While there is a growing demand for such Christian reading matter in the English language, such as is published by the Association, there is also a growing tendency among the Filipinos toward materialism. These are perilous days for them. Many have revolted against the ecclesiastical domination and tyranny that has prevailed in the islands for the past three centuries, but have not yet heard or believed the Gospel of Christ, which alone is "the power of God unto salvation." Free thought, theosophy, spiritism, atheism and skepticism are winning many of the intelligentsia and supplanting the power of the Church. One observer sees the present critical situation as a challenge to Christians. "There are those," he writes, "who are catching the vision, and all are open-minded and willing to see and listen. I know of no place where people, particularly young people, are so eager to know, and so persistent and pertinent with their inquiries."

(Those desiring to cooperate with the Association may forward contributions to A. F. Gaylord, Treasurer of the D. L. Moody Missionary Book Funds, 843 North Wells St., Chicago.)

NEED FOR MISSIONARY PASSION.

The Allgemeine Missionszeitschrift, which Dr. Julius Richter edits, contains an informing article on missionary opportunities and difficulties faced by American mission boards. He does full justice to the splendid way in which these boards have been carrying on but sees great difficulties in raising funds and securing missionaries. In some respects the picture is nearly as dark as the conditions faced by European societies.

Dr. Richter asks the pertinent question as to whether our Christianity has a message of such compelling power that it will be able to rise above the bogs of religious neglect and despair and enter upon a new way. He says, "If we will be honest, we must perhaps acknowledge that there is among men today only one enthusiasm that carries along a hundred million human beings in its intoxication, namely, Russian communism, which promises to build up a new civilization on the foundation of a logical altruism. Behind this communistic movement stands a fiery enthusiasm which sees the daybreak of a new day after the night of a decadent capitalism. It is a very serious question whether Christianity today is capable of kindling a similar or even more glowing enthusiasm in the hearts of its hundreds of millions of sated and self-satisfied adherents, who might be willing to give a few crumbs from their rich board to the despairing Lazaruses at their doors.

Does Christianity have this message? I mention five points which appear to me to have incomparable worth for all of the human race, especially in the present crisis: (1) The message of God, the sovereign Ruler of the universe, who lays unlimited claim upon the unconditional obedience of every man; (2) The reality of redemption through the Only Begotten Son of God, the atonement through His cross and life through His resurrection; (3) The ethical impulses from the reality of the Holy God, the only possible moral backbone for the world that is seriously ill with moral ailments; (4) The message of a universal judgment of the living and the dead, which guarantees everlasting righteousness as the fundamental law of this world; (5) The message of the Kingdom of God as the real purpose of God in and with this cosmos, contents and goal of the development of the human family.

"Might it not be possible to penetrate the Christian treasures of salvation with such a missionary glow that they would set the churches aflame?"—Missionary Review.

MISSION STUDY CLASS.

The women of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference will have a day of mission study with the women of the Reidsville Church on Thursday, February 18th. The book to be studied is "The Challenge of Change," and Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Elon College, is the teacher. Each one is to take a sandwich lunch and the Reidsville women will furnish coffee. We had such a splendid day at Burlington last year that our women will be looking forward to another. We wish there could be representatives from each church in the Conference. Remember the date—February 18th, at 10:30 A. M.

NO SIDE-STEPPING HERE.

The only permanent way of reclamation is the way that leads to full Christian citizenship, says a British officer in charge of the Criminal Tribes work, Sholapur, India. "These people need what you and the Christian religion can do for them," declares the practical English judge, after visiting the Boys' Reformatory School in Sholapur Industrial Settlement. A non-Christian instructor arose in a staff conference with representatives from all over the Presidency and said: "The Scout and Guide movements are good so far as they go, but they do not go far enough. These people need something more vital than moral training. They need religion." Afterward, some one said to him, "But it was the Hindu religion for which you were pleading, was it not?" And he replied, "No, these people (Criminal Tribes), need a way of life that will teach them to live together in love. The Mohammedan religion does not teach us that; nor does the Hindu religion. I mean the Christian religion."

CHINESE AND JAPANESE CHRISTIANS
CALL FOR OUR PRAYERS.

In a circular letter, dated October 24th, Dr. C. Y. Cheng, of the National Christian Council of China, wrote:

"The future is very uncertain and very doubtful, and it seems that brutal force is still trying to have the upper hand in international affairs. The future is unknown to us, but we are happy to say that it is not unknown to Him whom we love and trust. We believe God will rule and overrule human affairs. We pray that the love-principle of Jesus Christ may prevail at such a time of international disagreement and strained relationship. I would appeal to you to remember us in your prayers, first on behalf of the countries of both China and Japan that they may seek a better and more Christian way of solving their problems, and secondly, for the Christian peoples of these two countries that they may show forth in word and deed the principle of Jesus Christ, which is essentially love. Of course, you realize that neither the Japanese churches nor the Chinese have much influence over the countries, nevertheless, let us shine forth as the light of the world which, in time, will change the human heart from hate to love."

At the annual meeting of the National Christian Council of Japan on November 11th, the following resolution was adopted:

"On this eleventh day of November, which commemorates the consummation of world peace, the National Christian Council of Japan in its Ninth Annual Session deeply regretting the occurrence of the Manchurian incident expresses itself in the following resolution, and feels that it is its natural duty and responsibility to appeal to Christians both within and without Japan.

"In view of the Manchurian incident we cannot but feel a deep sense of self-reproach that the spirit of world peace based on brotherly love which we constantly advocate, does not, as yet, pervade the world's life.

"At this time we pledge ourselves to new endeavor in behalf of peace in the Orient and throughout the world.

"May the conception of justice, friendship and love be deep-going and rule the hearts of all who are concerned with this problem, and lead to an early solution of this situation, thus eradicating the roots of the difficulties between Japan and China, and helping to foster the peace of the world.

"In accordance with this resolution we will exert ourselves to the uttermost. At the same time we earnestly desire the prayers and cooperation of our brethren in Christ and peace organizations everywhere."

COMMUNISTS LEAVE DEAD MEN.

When the Communists left Kienning they departed from a scene of smashed windows, torn plastering, wrecked floors, furniture and houses. Pastor Liao returned to view heartbrokenly the results and to find that the safe had been opened. "He put the deeds and valuables of others in the safe," says Rev. George W. Shepherd of Ingtau, "and I believe he is grieving more over the losses of his friends than over his own, and he lost a great deal." The Communists ruined the little bungalow which the Shepherds had lived in and then, upon leaving, buried three dead men in the center of the lawn.

THE SECOND MILE.

Twenty years ago, a struggling little independent church in Tottori, Japan, numbering about 30 members, met in a dark dingy room. The pastor's salary was $10 a month—when he got it. But faith and works have produced a beautiful church debt-free, supporting a pastor at $50 a month, six home mission centers, and making contributions to work in Korea and the South Seas. "Today we may hear many skeptical remarks as to whether missions are needed," says Miss Estelle Coe, "but no one who visits Tottori can go away without a new vision of what missions mean and without a sense of rebuke for our little faith when we see how many mountains even our tiny mustard seed has moved in two short decades."

THE YOUNGER GENERATION AT WORK.

Many young Christians in Angola, West Central Africa, have refused positions that would mean to them comparative wealth in order to continue teaching under conditions little short of poverty, reports Dr. Henry S. Hollenbeck, of Sachikela. Tested and tried they have dedicated their lives to their work. They govern not only the school activities but evangelistic efforts. They find a growing desire for the Christian message in unoccupied villages. "They teach on meagre allowances," declares Dr. Hollenbeck, "and one young man refused a position as carpenter for a prosperous company even after considerable pressure was brought to bear upon him and he was told that he might name his own salary."

UNION CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING.

The Three-S Christian Endeavor meeting was held in the Wakefield Christian Church, Sunday afternoon, January 31, 1932. This was the second mass meeting since the Union was organized, and was well attended.

Each Society gave a very helpful and inspiring item on the program. Among them was the devotionals led by Mrs. M. T. Clements, of the Salem Society. She had as her program, hymns and Scripture and beautifully explained the topic of the Sunday evening program. Another beautiful feature was a pantomime given by the Wakefield Society.

Miss Irene Cotten, of the Dendron Society, gave a wonderful talk on "Loyalty," at which time she told a way of Christian life, using each letter in the word as a guide for her talk.

A round-table discussion was conducted, at which time ideas were exchanged concerning several phases of Christian Endeavor work.

Musical selections were rendered by other Societies, and the program was very helpful and interesting.

The Union adopted the following goals for which each Society will strive between now and the Fifth Sunday meeting in May:

Five points for each monthly business meeting and social held.

Two points for each pre-prayer service held before the meetings.

Ten points for each special program conducted by your Society.

Ten points for continuous meetings throughout the quarter.

Five points for each social held for other groups.

Ten points for each Christian Endeavor Study Class held.

Two points for each new member obtained since January 31, 1932.

Two points for each officer attending official executive meeting of Three-S Christian Endeavor Union.

A banner has been awarded at each mass meeting for attendance. The first time it was given to the Oak Grove Society for having the largest attendance present. At the recent meeting it was given to the Waverly (Young People's) Society for having eighty-six per cent of their members present.

The meeting adjourned to meet again May 29, 1932, at three o'clock, in the Waverly Christian Church.

OBSERVING CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK.

The Three-S Christian Endeavor Union is observing each night during this week the celebration of the founding of Christian Endeavor by Dr. Franses E. Clark, February 2, 1881.

The programs in the various Societies are as follows:

Waverly—Topic, "Disarmament Day."

Oak Grove—Topic, "Christian Endeavor's Birthday."

Dendron—Topic, "Church Cooperation Day."

Claremont—Topic, "Unemployment Day."

Salem—Topic, "Christian Endeavor Union Day."

Reports indicate that the meetings are successful and very well attended.

EARLY BIRDS.

The beautiful and singularly lovable bluebird divides with the robin the grateful mission of bringing to its northern human friends the welcoming news that spring is at hand. Like the robin, the bluebird shows a decided fondness for human society. Orchards are favorite, natural resorts of the bird, and furnish plenty of homesites in the shape of hollow stumps or limbs of trees, for the bird always prefers a cavity of some kind wherein to place its nest. The wise owner will do well to encourage the bluebirds. If he will scatter through his orchards a goodly supply of hollow limbs, covered at the top and bottom, and with auger-hole doorways, he will soon have plenty of bluebird tenants, who will pay their rent many times over by destroying injurious insects and worms.

The robin's wide distribution, its lovely plumage, its reputation as a harbinger of spring make it one of the best-known birds in America. Robins are sometimes rightfully accused of in-

WASHINGTON.

O, Noble Brow, so wise in thought!
O Heart, so true! O Soul, besought!
O Eye, so keen to pierce the night
And guide the "Ship of State" aright!
O Life, so simple, grand and free,
The humblest still may turn to thee.
O, King uncrowned; O, Prince of men!
When shall we see thy like again?
The century just passed away,
Has felt the impress of thy sway;
While youthful hearts have stronger grown
And made thy patriot zeal their own.
In marble hall or lowly cot,
Thy name has never been forgot.
The world, itself, is richer, far
For the clear shining of a star.
And loyal hearts in years to run
Shall turn to thee, O Washington.

MARY WINGATE.

juring small fruit, especially cherries and berries; but they also destroy enormous quantities of noxious insects. It should be remembered, too, that the robin prefers wild fruit and its raids upon the cultivated are due largely to the destruction by man of the wild cherries and berries. Gradually, if there is not abundant wild fruit, a few fruit-bearing shrubs and vines will serve for ornament and provide food for the birds. The Russian mulberry is a vigorous grower and a profuse bearer, ripening at the same time as the cherry, and, most birds seem to prefer its fruit to any other kind. It is believed that a number of these trees planted around the garden or orchard would fully protect the more valuable fruits.

Here is an unusual story of a robin that built her nest in the south end of a rude shed that covered a railroad turntable. When her end of the shed was turned to the north she built another nest in the temporary south end, and, as the reversal of the shed ends continued from day to day, she soon had two nests and two sets of eggs. When I last heard from her, she was constantly sitting on that particular nest which happened to be for the time being in the end of the shed facing the south. The bewildered bird evidently had had no experience with the tricks of turntables.

Many boys and girls form bird clubs. They learn much about the coloring of different birds, what their various calls and cries mean, and they learn, too, which birds are useful to have around. They enjoy very much making birdhouses, and birds are finding children real friends.—Adapted from Birds of America.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

FEBRUARY 21, 1932.

"DESIRABLE QUALITIES IN NATIONAL LEADERS."

Scripture: John 1:6-9 and Isaiah 11:1-9.

"New occasions teach new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth."

Lowell.

During the month of February our attention is always called to the lives of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. From February 22nd to Thanksgiving, this year, special attention will be given to the celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

Washington left a message for today in his words: "Observe good faith and justice with all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all." The American ideal as it has come down to us from the fathers, is a lofty one. Washington, Franklin, Samuel Adams, set the standard of unflinching service for others. Courage in the face of difficulties, loyalty to truth, sympathy and courtesy, industry and reverence to God, and to one's fellowmen—these have been American ideals since the time when the solitary "Mayflower" crossed the sea.

The entire world faces a crisis in this decade. There are two ways in which national leaders may attempt to meet crises. One is by defending "things as they are"; the other is by the use of creative leadership—a leadership dedicated to things as they ought to be."

Today we need a new leader, who will free us from economic slavery. The "machine age" has created a major crisis in the world's history. During this winter millions of people, unwilling victims of unemployment, are being fed and clothed out of relief funds. A leader is needed who can and will meet the crisis that our country faces.

Devotion to the ideal of world peace and the creation of good will between races and nations should also characterize our leaders of today.

"This is no day to think of me and mine;
No day for vauntings of our native land,
For flags defiant and the mailed hand;
The Rio Grande, Channel, and the Rhine.
"This is no day to think of me and mine;
For threatening and bluster and command;
For little fears by mean suspicion fanned;
For punishment well-earned and shame condign.
This is the day for largeness of the soul,
For pity, for assistance, for release;
Heroic, self-forgetting, self-control,
When we decline that others may increase,
In thought of Him who rode the ass's foal,
And wore the sacrificial gown of peace."

Amos R. Wells.

JESUS, THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 21, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 10:1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want."—Psalm 23:1.

Introduction.

This wonderful lesson will be better understood and will mean more if three other passages of Scripture are read in connection with the text from John. All Christians are familiar with the Shepherd Psalm. This 23rd Psalm is closely related to Jesus' idea here expressed. Jeremiah 23:1-4 and Ezekiel 34:1-16 are noted passages which show the contrast of selfish shepherds and the true shepherds.

Shepherd Life.

The Oriental shepherd was very intimate in his relations with his sheep. The method of care in Palestine called for individual attention of the shepherd. American methods of sheep husbandry do not carry the meanings that Oriental methods convey. We have large fields or extensive ranges and run the sheep in great flocks of several hundred or thousand. Where our flocks are small, they are handled as a side line along with diversified farming. The Palestinian shepherd spent much of his time with the sheep. They came to know him and he came to know them individually.

Symbol of Care and Protection.

The literature of antiquity often refers to kings and religious leaders under the symbol of shepherd. The early Hebrews were nomads with flocks and herds. It was but natural that the shepherd should be a symbol of protecting care and devotion to the best interests of the flock. Thus the people are the flock and the king, priest or prophet is the shepherd.

Hirelings and Robbers.

The sheep were sometimes victims of selfish shepherds, who sought their own personal gain, and not the welfare of the flock. Throughout the history of mankind there has been the urge to personal gain at the expense of others. We see it in government, in business, in society and in the church. Israel had seen it in her royal rulers and in her priests. Those who sought personal gain at the expense of the flock's welfare were thought of as hirelings. Then there were thieves and robbers who stole sheep from the fold of the owner. Such were a menace to both flock and owner.

The Good Shepherd.

The Hebrews thought of God as the Good Shepherd of the nation. Their seers of vision longed that the heavenly Shepherd would give them true shepherds as princes, rules and spiritual leaders. In our lesson Jesus uses the figures of shepherd life. "I am the door of the sheep," said Jesus. Their way to peace and protection was through the door. Thieves came in some other way, but not for the welfare of the sheep. "I am the Good Shepherd." Truly no other, who has ever walked among men, could so truthfully say this. "I lay down my life for the sheep." This is the supreme test. The noblest social and religious service is performed by those who love with such absorbing devotion that sacrifice seems a natural part of their free devotion.

Abundant Life.

The duty of the shepherd was to provide for the full life needs of his flock. Jesus said, "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." He was interested in the abundant life of the people of his day and time. He is still interested that men shall find in him the way of abundant life. Life has been enriched in countless ways by the power of Jesus' life and truth. There are yet many areas of life that can be enriched by the discovery and practice of Jesus' way of living.

Other Sheep.

Verse 16 is very rich in its significance. The Master does not limit his ministry to any nation. As long as there are "other sheep which are not of this fold," Jesus desires that they shall "hear his voice" and "they shall become one flock, one shepherd." When we preachers and Sunday School teachers get the heart-longing of the Good Shepherd, there will be other sheep coming into the fold. Are we seeking the other sheep? Are we searching for the lost sheep? Jesus is the Good Shepherd. He wants us to become more like him.

CHRISTIANITY PUTS BROTHELS OUT OF BUSINESS.

"What with the Christians against us and the hard times, I might as well go out of business," said a Japanese brothel keeper, when he lost in his effort to make a Korean prostitute return to his establishment. The girl, a scarred soul in a scarred body, had been taken ill from licensed quarters in Seoul, Korea, to the hospital. When she learned from the Christian missionary doctor that she need not return to her owner, she grew stronger. She went to the police station and registered, declaring her desire to live differently. "We were all amazed at the docility with which the police took this information," says Mrs. William P. Woodard, "but the visit of the League of Nations Vice Committee last spring has produced fruit in a law prohibiting police from putting pressure on a girl if she wants to get out." The owners threaten to take the case to court. The Christians hope they will for then they will see just how the new law is going to hold up. "If this case comes through successfully," says Mrs. Woodard, "other girls will have courage to take the step."

"SHE NEEDS IT MORE."

With a handful of grain, carefully tied up in the rags of their scanty clothes, and taken from a meagre daily supply, children from Ahmednagar's alleys and lanes come to share with others at the Neighborhood House. Who shall receive today's grain? One poor little chap piped up, nudging a thin child near him, "This boy, he's from the poorest family in the city." The child indicated hesitated then grinned feebly, shook his head and replied, "No, I know of an old woman who needs it more than we do."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

HE DOES NOT DRIVE.

"He leadeth me in paths of righteousness."
Psalm 23:3.

The shepherd goes before his sheep and clears the way, making it free from dangers, and safe for the sheep.

Jesus says, "I am the Good Shepherd." "I am the Way, follow Me." He has gone before us in everything. He went before us in temptation and showed the way to overcome. He taught the Kingdom of God come to man and then showed the way to fulfil it. He has gone before us both in precept and example, in love, in prayer, in Sabbath observance, in church attendance, in dealing with all men, in feeling and impulse, in suffering and life. In this, He has shown us the way to pass in safety to Heaven. He does not drive. He leads.

Prayer—Dear Lord Jesus, be our Shepherd this day. Give us Thy grace in forgiveness and the power to follow thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE CREATION ENCOURAGEMENTS.

"All things work together for good - - - while we look not at the things which are seen; for the things which are - - - not seen are eternal."—Romans 8:28; 2nd Cor. 4:18.

As we turn the pages of Genesis, reading the story of the creation and its marvelous unfoldings, three special truths inspire us. First, the material world originated from the Spiritual, and that it is the Spiritual forces that now give shape and form to the things that are. The unseen rules and dominates the seen. Yet, it would seem that all force is, in the last analysis, spiritual, and has its seat and origin in God. So St. Paul must have spoken a mighty truth, and Rachel Taylor has put our soul's response to it in poetic thought:

When that my soul too far from God,

In earthly furrows crowded about,
An insect on a dusty clod

Wandering wingless and out.

At deepest dusk, I looked about,
And saw a million worlds alight,
That burnt the mortal veils of Love
And left it shining infinite:

I gazed and gazed with lifted head
Until I found my heart had wings,
And now my soul has ceased to dread
The weary dust of earthly things.

Prayer—Dear Father, as we think along, enable us to think aright, guide our every impulse and lift us to thoughts of Thee in everything this day. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GOD'S CREATION LESSON.

"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead."—Rom. 1:20.

Paul again is talking. How much this apostle embraces God's world in his own life and teachings!

It has been pointed out that the law of gravitation pervades the whole material creation and binds it into one vast glorious system—that law is an expression of God's will for the whole creation and his infinite provision for man. Moral law reigns. How real are the invisible to eternal things! Truth is truth everywhere. God is the same throughout all time. "Where sin doth abound, grace doth much more abound." In the presence of misery and murk, the white beam of purity is never broken and the eternal call of the spotless white is heard. While there are those who look upon the worse there are, there are others who see and know the unfailing, glorious, unmovable, ever loving powerful God. Evil may exist, but good exists too, and good will triumph at last. That is our call.

Prayer—Ever loving and merciful, we confess our weaknesses and sins to see the material, become life with these and beyond it doubt Thee. God forbid and forgive. Help us to live in Thee today. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ANOTHER CREATION REVERIE.

"The Lamb slain from the foundations of the world." Rev. 13:8.

Throughout all the ages an unceasing Divine purpose runs. Up to a certain point, scientific research has shown us that everything has proceeded from the lower to the higher, even ascending unto richer amplitude and meaning. Such is the testimony of the rocks and the bosom of the earth. From a certain point we find that God is revealed, and a Divine purpose becomes the theme in it all, later centering in Jesus Christ, who is called the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

Thus creation has its redemption plan. Man as created is not the ultimate purpose of God, but man as redeemed and glorified. This is why it is written, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together waiting . . . for the redemptions of the body." At the beginning of the Bible we see all things proceeding from God, at the end we see all things returning to him. It is rightly said that the divine mystery of creation is the transmutation of the thought and the herat of man into matter.

This is our call. It implies a clear vision of what we ought to do and be every day. It implies a career amidst all of life's duties and appearances. The presence of God assures us that we shall, in Christ, awaken more and more until we shall arise gloriously in Him, conscious that God is Love, and that we are inseparable from the Divine source.

Only matter's dense opaqueness

Checks God's light from shining through it,
And our senses, such their weakness,
Cannot help our souls to view it.

Till love lends the world translucent,

Then we see God clear in all things.

Love's the new sense, Love's the true sense,

Which teaches us how we should view things.

Prayer—O God, shine on us. Give us spiritual eyes to see. Transfix our unworthy souls and make us Thine. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LIGHT IN THE PLAN.

"And God said, 'Let there be light.'"—Gen. 1:2, 3.

In speaking of the unfolding of the Divine plan in the life of men, there comes, if not a time a realization that He has said to man as much as He has said to creation, "Let there be light;" and that light awakens man to a consciousness of God; and a consciousness of God reveals to him His Divine perfection. By that perfection, we mean that God is just, and true, and loving, or rather that He is Justice, and Truth, and Love. And the reason we have not seen Him before, or perhaps, if so be, we do not see Him now, is because we have mistakenly sought Him apart from ourselves and from life, instead of in us and in life. We have sought for Him away from nature instead of in nature. "Let there be light" in us, in life, in nature! By this light, we shall become united to Him only by finding Him in us. Consciously or unconsciously, we must possess justice, truth and love ourselves which he himself is. Life, then, is our call. Everyday life and duty, joys and sorrows, successes and failures, all make life; all make us, and make us what we ought to be, if Jesus is our guide.

Wadsworth gave expression to the following sentiment:

"I have learned to look on nature, not as in the hour of thoughtless youth, but as the source of elevated thoughts, as giving a sense of the sublime, a motion and a spirit that impels all thinking things through all things upward to His home. This is why I love the gardens, the meadows, the woods, the rivers and the mountains."

Prayer—Dear Lord, our Father, we realize that it is a beautiful world we live in. If we can make it more beautiful, show us. Give us the light. We will follow. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RADIO EVIL.

"Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?" Read Corinthians 5:1-8.

Over in France there was a clinic where X-rays were constantly in use, and two persons who lived opposite became very nervous. They had heard that X-rays cause cancer, and they asked the court to remove the establishment, claiming that the X-rays there generated passed through the patients, through the walls of the building, through their walls, and were injuriously affecting them. The case was heard, physicians and scientists declared that the fears of the petitioners were absurd, and the case was dismissed.

But, though no such charge can be laid at the door of the useful X-rays, there is no question that human wickedness radiates its mischief through an entire community. Indeed, there is no end to it. Unseen, it is nevertheless potent. Starting with an individual, it contaminates millions.

The Bible often compares wickedness to leaven. And unleavened bread is a symbol of cleanness and purity. That is the symbol for our lives. Keep evil out of the radio.

Prayer—Holy Spirit of the Living God, grant us the priceless gift of Thy holiness! Purify us, and we shall be clean. Nor can we otherwise be safe and sound. Amen.—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

MONEY WELL LOST.

"A time to seek, and a time to lose." Read Ecclesiastes 3:1-8.

A girl in Boston lost $2,000 the other day, and it was the most profitable experience of her life. She had spent ten cents for a lottery ticket. (Query: Why is such barefaced gambling allowed?) Her ticket bore the lucky number and won the prize of $2,000. But, luckily for her, she sent the ticket to the laundry, in her apron

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher

"HURDLES."

By ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

Hebrews 12:1.

Paul's analogy of life as a race has become a favorite description. We, too, have unconsciously come to think and speak of life as a race. We are all participants in that race, and I take it for granted that since we must run the race of life as best we can, we will welcome any truth or advice which may help us.

It has been my privilege many times to sit on the bleachers and see the men come forth to run. Now there, they are coming, all thinly clad to facilitate easy and quick movement. Then I glance at the race track and notice that the way has been prepared, the cinder path is smooth—all projections removed, and all the sunken places filled. Now there is nothing to fear, no stumps to avoid, no snags to trip, no occasion for stumbling, and nothing to do but run.

But, my friends, that does not represent to me the race that we are called upon to run, or rather it is by no means the race that I have faced. I do not know how your race has been. It may be that you have been called upon to run over a smooth, well prepared way, yea, a track bedecked with beautiful flowers, shaded with majestic trees, and peopled by enthusiastic supporters. It may be that the clouds of sorrow and hardship never crossed your way. But it has not been so with me.

My race has not been over a smooth track. In fact, very often there seems to have been no track, no well marked trail, which I might follow, the footprints on the sands of time had been covered by the dust of ages. I have often come to the parting of the ways, not knowing but that one might be the high road and the other a low road. These roads were not well mapped, there were no signs and the path itself was ill defined. At times the right has been of dazzling brightness, at others, the right has been dim, and as I groped my way 'mid encircling gloom, there was frequent occasion for tumbling.

So life is a race, but a special kind of race. It seems to me that the best analogy is the hurdle race. This is a race in which certain fence-like obstructions are placed at intervals along the track and the person must jump over the hurdle. Likewise in the race of life we find certain obstructions over which we must hurl ourselves if we would run successfully.

What are some of the Hurdles?

1. The first hurdle is ignorance. We are born without knowledge, and ignorance is something to be overcome. As Paul sat at the feet of Gamaliel he made his first great hurdle.

2. Another hurdle is hatred. Mistrust and criticism on the part of other people. Paul was hated and mistrusted. But he hurled himself over it. He demonstrated that he was above it, and worthy of respect and honor. Christ was hated and criticised, but he knew it was a hurdle, something to go over. Some try to, but back like a billy goat—but Christ lived above it and over it.

3. Discouragement and failure are also hurdles. The average young man must have one or two real failures in life in order to become sober. A few people never get over a failure. There are others who trip over a hurdle, fall, bruise their shins, and do not go off whining and crying, but rise with the determination to run faster and jump harder.

Discouragement has tripped many a good runner. Discouragement is usually the result of partial, complete or anticipated failures. And it is hard. But we must realize that discouragement too is a hurdle. Discouraged and quit? Why, determination should be made of sterner stuff! Some think and remark that I never have any trouble. There has never been a preacher, I dare say, really interested in his work, who didn't have disappointment and discouragement. Things do not always go as I would like for them to go. I try to get people to do things they could do and ought to do, and fail. I am refused. What shall I do? Hang my head in disappointment and grief, or smile like Maurice Chevaire and walk off like the Prince of Wales? Which is the better policy? I have never had the trouble some people have had, and, God being my helper, I never will. A kind Providence, has also delivered me from trouble which might have come to me and yet I have seen trouble. I often think that I have had enough trouble to make a brass monkey turn gray. But it doesn't pay. Discouragement and trouble will wreck the life of anyone if they fail to make a hurdle of it.

4. Suffering is another hurdle. It does not affect all people alike. It may make humble or it may make vicious, it may develop obedience or disobedience, loyalty or disloyalty. Some stumble over that hurdle, curse God and die. Others make of it a hurdle and soon find themselves on the other side, which is the heavenly side, traveling the highway that leads to glory and to God. Only those who see through, over and above suffering and hurl themselves over finally come to know Him through the fellowship of His suffering. Paul had the thorn in the flesh, prayed thrice that it might be removed, but nay, it was left as a hurdle over which he went to follow his crucified Lord. Have you made a hurdle of suffering?

My friend, are you surprised to find this hurdle? The Master was not, "and the servant shall not be above the Master."

5. The last hurdle is death. Now there is significance in running—it gives speed and momentum. Jesus set his face "steadfastly toward Jerusalem"—nothing could stop him. No, not even a Cross! The Cross was a hurdle. Thank God, he did not go under it or around it. He went over it, and gained momentum to conquer death, hell and the grave. Death is a snare to the unrighteous. But to the righteous it is merely the last earthly hurdle. And it is possible, by the grace of God, to get up enough spiritual momentum in this world to hurl yourself over the snare of death, and land safely on the shores of Eternity.

pocket, and it could not be found. If she had gained all that money for ten cents, she might have become a confirmed gambler. As it is, she has had a lesson in the folly of chance. But what about those gamblers who do not receive such lessons?

Gains that come from God are blessed indeed, and truly enrich us. Gains that come from Satan only make us infinitely poorer. From such gains we may well pray to be delivered.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I happen to know a little boy, less than ten years of age, who is the most thoughtful child of others that I have ever known. He seems not to think of himself at all; but his whole soul is wrapped up in the welfare of others. As much as little boys like to go to the "movies," if he had an opportunity to go, and he had to leave his mother at home alone, he would not go. He would sacrifice the joy of the "movie" to stay with his mother. If his mother was giving out apples and she did not have one left for herself, he would not take one. Mother would have to have one, too, if he had to do without. It seems to be the joy and happiness of his little life to consider others.

We cannot buy happiness. Money will not buy it. It does not come from without. It comes from within. It comes from service to human kind. Did you ever help some one in need and feel that abiding joy that filled your heart? If a tramp comes to your door and asks for bread, it really gives you a peculiar joy when you see him eat and satisfy his hunger. He may not be any good. He may be just an ordinary tramp, but he is a human being—his soul is precious in the sight of God. You get a real joy out of the service. It is so easy to render service—you get so much joy out of serving.

I dare say that the good women who have been making and sending to the Christian Orphanage Easter dresses for a number of years, have gotten every year a real joy out of the service. I often look the little dresses over, and study the care and pains that have been taken in the making of them and in my imagination I can see a joyful smile playing on the face of the one who made it, as she thinks of the joy that it is going to bring to the little motherless girl who gets it; because she has no mother to bestow upon her the love and affection that only a mother can give. No mother to make her pretty little dresses for Easter and send her off to Sunday School as happy as can be. And Easter will soon be here again. And we need new Easter dresses.

Our good women of our Burlington Church get lots of real joy out of rendering a real service. Last week, Circle No. 1, Mrs. John R. Foster, leader, came to see us, and brought us sixteen beautiful bedspreads for our new beds—something we really needed. Thirteen of the spreads were furnished by the Circle, and three by three women who are not members. We could not help but notice the smile of joy on their faces as they presented them. I believe they were just as happy in the giving as we were in receiving and we were some happy.

May God bless all who help us in this work of service.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, Editor.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

PATHS TO THE PRESENCE OF GOD, by Albert W. Palmer. The Pilgrim Press. 105 pp. $1.00.

The distinguished president of the Chicago Theological Seminary gave the five lectures constituting this thoughtful volume at the Seattle Council of Congregational-Christian Churches. The auditorium was packed at each recurrent hour set for Dr. Palmer's address, because he was not presenting a series of academic discussions, but baring his own life experiences. Here was a man who had travelled to the presence of God by the ways of nature, or science, of humanity, of worship, and of Jesus, the consummate and all-satisfying Revelation. Personal testimony never fails to grip the heart nor to elicit continuous attention. The atmosphere of this book is spiritually exhilarating and vitally tonic.

THE APPROACH TO RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by Basil A. Zeoxlee. Student Christian Movement Press. 75c.

Dr. Zeoxlee does not see how education and religion can be separated, since religious education is essentially an attitude toward life and all its experiences. He writes from the English standpoint, but has produced a book that will exert a wide influence on our side of the Atlantic, too. It is regrettable that names of some of the authorities cited are improperly spelled.

"WHEREFORE LIFT UP THE HANDS THAT HANG DOWN."—Hebrews 12:12.

A young woman called upon a friend who had been bereaved and whom she desired to comfort, yet the words she spoke seemed to have no effect for the bereaved one turned away speaking almost fiercely, "You don't know anything about it." The young woman realized that she did not know that particular grief although she herself had suffered bereavement in a different way; but how she did long to comfort the sad and sorrowing.

The years came and went bringing with them trials, heartaches and sorrows deeper than the grave, yet through them all there came the words, "Go bury thy sorrow, the world has its share; go tell it to Jesus, and all will be right." The words hushed her complaining for she realized that there was a purpose to be worked out in her life to glorify God and to bless her fellow-men.

Among the many things which Jesus told his disciples at the close of his earthly ministry, he said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." He knew that our lives as his disciples would not be all sunshine so he gave us that warning; yet he also promised us victory if we abide in him. Living the victorious life in the face of all that would defeat us and letting those around us know that the victory only comes because of the abiding Christ brings glory to his name and also gives comfort to those around us. Asking the question, "Why must this trial come?" does not bring a sense of peace but rather causes self-pity. If it is permitted to come it is for a purpose: (1) to draw us into closer walk with God; (2) that through our sorrow we may be able to comfort one another. Someone has said that trouble makes the world akin. It is only as we suffer and gain the victory through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ that we can in any way comfort those around us who are suffering. Much suffering comes through the wrath of man; but the Psalmist says: "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee." So may we not complain because of our trials but may we look up and praise God because, "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Do we love him? Are we willing for his will to be worked out in our lives according to his purpose? If his purpose means that through our suffering some one else may be comforted and strengthened, are we willing that it should be so? Oh, how the world needs our love and sympathy if we are truly following in the footsteps of Jesus.

"If any little love of mine
May make a life the sweeter;
If any little care of mine
May make a friend's the fleeter;
If any lift of mine may ease
The burden of another;
God give me love, and care, and strength,
To help my toiling brother."

THE POPE'S INVITATION.

The Pope seems never to weary of inviting the Christian bodies to join the Roman Catholic Church. He has been so often given the reasons why this cannot happen that he should understand by this time the futility and preposterousness of his remarks. Present-day Romanism is vastly different from the Church, as it existed before divisions came. One can hardly think of a branch of the Church which has departed farther from the Church of the early fathers than has the Church of the Vatican. The adoration of sacred relics, the use of images, Mariolatry, and Papal infallibility are just a few of the things the Romanists have added, all of them repugnant to non-Romanists. If there were the least consideration by the Pope of anything except his own claims, if there were any agreement that Protestants are brethren and entitled to a place in the family of God's people, if the Pope would participate at all with other Christians in work and plans for the propagation of the Gospel, there would be good grounds for Protestants to stand on while they conversed with the Pope; but while only anathemas from the Vatican are cast at all Protestants there can be no way of approach.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

WHAT PRICE WIVES?

It was Mr. Shepherd who exclaimed: "How they have suffered!"—these Kienning Christians. "The Communists remained in control of the area for two months, and it was difficult for whole families to remain concealed so long. They sent some of their women back to the old homes to look after things and the Communists held them for ransom. It is only within recent years that women have been valuable enough to capture. Two Christians have written that they paid $700 each to get their wives back. The preacher, who was not quite so wealthy, got his wife back for $100."

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

OBITUARIES.

PIKE.

Moses Gilmer Pike passed to his reward January 12, 1932 at the age of 72 years, 2 months and 24 days.

He leaves to mourn his departure, one son, Charles B. Pike, Snow Camp, N. C., with whom he was living at the time of his death, seven grand-children, and many other relatives.

He was quiet and reserved, true to his profession and faithful to his church.

He had been a member of Pleasant Hill Church for many years where his body was placed awaiting the resurrection. Services were by pastor and writer, assisted by Rev. J. N. Fogleman and Rev. Virgil Pike. The attendance was large and floral offering pretty.

T. J. GREEN.

MITCHELL.

Emily Knight was born September 2, 1856, in Randolph County, Ala. Married to W. D. Mitchell, February 14, 1875, who preceded her to the Spirit world 11 years ago. She was the mother of fourteen children, eleven remaining to mourn their loss—eight boys and three girls. She gave her life to Christ in early womanhood and united with the New Harmony Christian Church where she remained true and faithful till the Christian Church was built at Cragford, where she removed her membership, and remained true and loyal till the end of her long life. The great desire of her life was to help others. Her going reminded us of the statement of the ancient servant of God who said, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints." She moved out of this old house of clay Sunday morning, January 24, to take up her abode in a house not made with hands. We realize her going makes her church and community poorer, but we feel that she is made richer, therefore, we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved.

Funeral services were conducted from Cragford Christian Church by her pastor, this writer, assisted by Rev. G. D. Hunt,

Dr. Soper Heads Association.—

Dr. Edmond D. Soper, sometime head of the department of religious education at Duke University, now president of Wesleyan University, was elected head of the Methodist Educational Association at its annual meeting held in Cincinnati last month. He was chosen as chairman of the resolution committee, which is the policy-forming group of the Liberal Arts College movement, an organization of institutions of higher education. He has visited Elon College on several occasions and rendered good service to the students by his inspiring messages and his position as head of the Association will mean much to the cause of education in the church.

Dr. Bacon Passes.—

Dr. Benjamin Misner Bacon, professor of New Testament Criticism and Exegesis at Yale Divinity School from 1897 until his resignation five years ago, died February 1st, at his home in New Haven, in his seventy-second year. He had been in failing health for the past two years. Prof. Bacon had held the emeritus position since his retirement from active work. Ordained in the Congregational ministry, Prof. Bacon soon entered the teaching field, and gave much time to the writing of books, most of them on Biblical subjects. In the year 1905-6, he was director of the American School of Archaeology in Jerusalem. A number of students from Elon College at Yale during the past thirty years will remember Dr. Bacon and regret to learn of his going, for he was a great scholar and a versatile writer in his field.

Our College.—

Elon College has done great things for the Christian Church in the Southern Christian Convention. Without the work it has done for the ministry in the church, we could never have done the work of the past forty years. Today we have a large percentage of our ministers have college degrees, and a considerable number have university or seminary degrees and are well prepared to compete with ministers of the other churches against the forces of evil. Many other ministers have received a higher education and better preparation because of the stimulus of the college. And while a college degree is essential to good preaching, yet it is also a mark of degree in preparation in academic and ecclesiastical training which, other things being equal, means better service. Those who love the church, love missions, love the Orphanage, love the local church, or love any of the church institutions, should love and support the college, for all our leaders need just such preparation as the college has given and can give in the future.

Allied Forces in the Californias.—

With more than 160 cities already behind them on their nationwide tour, speaking for the Allied Forces of Prohibition, they are now turning toward the South and West, and already are at work in the Carolinas. As they go from city to city, these leaders are enrolling the names of persons wishing to see the Eighteenth Amendment upheld. More than 250,000 have already enrolled. The campaigners have yet to visit more than 500 cities. The meetings, Dr. Daniel Poling reports, have attracted large crowds even in the Eastern cities, where anti-prohibition sentiment is strongest. Completing their work in Chicago, the Allied Forces went to Virginia, from which State they have entered the Carolinas, and will continue through Georgia into Florida. During March, meetings will be held in Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma. From Texas the campaigners will move to the Far West and Northwest, then return to the Middle West and to the East for their final meetings.

Friends Multiplying.—

One of the greatest needs of any college is a large number of true and loyal friends. Without the loyalty and love followed by the liberality and support flowing out of their friendship, no college, and especially a church college, can live and render the service for which it is established. Elon College is no exception to this rule. If all the members of the Christian Church were just as loyal and devoted to the college as is their duty, and as should be reasonably expected, the problem of its future would be solved. We are strong enough and rich enough to maintain and support our college adequately if we cooperate, contribute and support the college as we can. This task should be recognized as the task of the whole church and the whole church should respond to the obligation. We have every reason and reasonable challenge to call forth our consecrated, devoted and sacrificial support. Our president merits all we can do to help put the college upon a solid foundation as early as possible. The future of the college is assured if the church will do its duty. The president cannot be expected to carry the load by himself, and we should not make it necessary for him to wrest unwilling contributions from the constituency of the church to meet the urgent needs of the college.

Why a Church College?—

Churches have led the way in education through the centuries because they felt the need for educating their leaders. They also felt the need and duty to protect their constituencies from the false teachings of secular institutions, and the obligation not only to prepare ministers and laymen for leadership in the church, but to safeguard the constituency of the church from heretical and indoctrination which would be detrimental to the cause of Christ. Elon College was founded for the direct and express purpose of giving a distinctive kind of education to our people which they could not secure from any other kind of an institution. The purpose of its founders was to give all the advantages of distinctively Christian training under a distinctively Christian environment. Every classroom, every recitation, every meeting, every organization, and every function of the college should be conducted by Christian people in a Christian manner. We should not think of Christianity at Elon or anywhere else as a part of life, or apart from life, but as normal life permeated by a Christian spirit. One of the first qualifications for teachers and officers of the college is that they be men and women who are followers of Christ; second, other things being equal, they should be members of the Christian Church; third, they should be true to the teachings, traditions and purposes of the founders of the college. If they cannot meet these qualifications, there is only one logical thing for them to do.

New Students for the New Year.—

Every parent, every friend of the Elon College, every alumnus, every friend of Christian education, should cooperate with the president and registrar of the college for a great student body next year. Depression does not militate against college education, for statistics show that there are more students in colleges and universities at the present time than there were during the time of prosperity. When people cannot earn much, when unemployment hinders people from using their time in helpful pursuits, they can better afford to use their time in better preparation for service when conditions become better. It is especially urgent that every friend of Elon College use his best influence to increase the patronage of the college for the next year. The college can easily provide for six hundred students with little increased cost and with double the income which is received from three hundred. Our equipment, buildings, laboratories and faculty are sufficient to give as good educational advantages as can be found in any college whose capacity is limited to six hundred, and our plant and physical equipment cannot be surpassed by many of our larger institutions. One can, with all good conscience, recommend Elon strongly to their friends. Our president is planning a number of improvements in the organization of the college for economy without loss to any department, but real gain in that the income of the college will be used to better advantage of the student body. The spirit of the present student body is enthusiastic for the new president. Friends of the college are multiplying fast in the field.

NOTES-PERSONALS

A man is poor, indeed, when he is so rich that he doesn't have a want.

One lawbreaker in the community will do more toward its corruption than all the original sin in town.

The wets want two things: Money and liquor. The brewers want the money, and the drinkers want the liquor.

Could you weight the least sin in the scales of eternity, you would fly from it as you would from a serpent. Look upon all sin as that which crucified the Saviour, and you will see it to be "exceedingly sinful."—Spiritual Life.

The Associate Editors are requested to make editorial contributions each week during Dr. Atkinson's absence. We need to keep the paper full of new material from our own people. The people enjoy reading the fine contributions of Dr. Staley, Rev. McCauley, Rev. Stanley Harrell, and others.

Ministers of the church will please report their work to the Acting Editor while Dr. Atkinson is recuperating in Florida. You will help the SUN, help your field, help the Acting Editor, and help the church-at-large. Don't be too modest. You are writing for others, and not to display yourselves. "Let your light so shine."

The pastors' notes are always read with interest because there is a human and personal touch which always creates interest. Give the church paper the interesting things that take place within your field of labor and make personal mention of the good things that any of the people of your church accomplish. Such reports make intensely interesting reading matter.

From a German source, The Deutsche Zeitung of Berlin, comes the report that the Soviet government has ordered all persons in Russia to hand over their Bibles and Prayer Books, to be converted into paper for journals and newspapers, owing to the crisis in the paper industry. Persons who retain Bibles will be punished for anti-revolutionary activity.—Exchange.

Contributions continue to come in for the college. Some send money, which is needed to meet debts that were made some time ago, but provisions for the boarding department of the college help to save money that can be applied to debts. If ministers would like to have a speaker for their churches to discuss the needs of the college, write to the president, and a speaker will be sent. Sometimes an outside speaker will create renewed interest. We must keep the college before the people in an instructive manner and by a conservative, sane presentation of the facts about the college, we shall prepare our people for a more liberal support as the need may arise.

Making the Constitution impotent by refusing appropriations to enforce Prohibition, as proposed by Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, in a radio address January 25th, is a revolutionary doctrine which we do not believe the responsible type of men and women who make up this Congress, or who make up any future Congress, will ever indorse. Nor do we believe that any President, or any man who can be elected President, ever would tolerate such nullification of the Constitution. Mr. Beck's theory could be applied to any Federal law to which any serious objection is raised, and if a precedent were established of killing prohibition by such a method there would be an end of Constitutional government. Mr. Beck is enthusiastically described by his wet associates as "a great constitutional lawyer." We confidently believe that neither the Congress nor the country will follow a leadership that proposes to "scrap" an integral part of the Federal Constitution because elements in our national citizenship who fought its adoption object to its enforcement.

ORPHANAGE GIRL WINNER IN CONTEST.

The following item appeared recently in the Suffolk locals of one of the Eastern Virginia dailies:

"J. M. Darden, of this city, one of the strong supporters of Elon College Orphanage, has been notified of the success attained by Miss Ethel Boone, orphan girl, who has won in the American Legion contest in declaiming and debating over the students of the high school, and in the county contest. She will now compete in the district and if successful will be in line for State honors.

"The subject of the declamation is 'George Washington.' Miss Boone is a member of the Elon College singing class, and was heard in the songs and musical numbers given in Suffolk and vicinity recently.

"The Elon Orphanage is located in Alamance County, N. C. Numbers of Suffolk people, members of the Christian Church, are interested in it."

ALUMNI TO MEET.

The Elon College Alumni Club Banquet of Eastern Virginia, will meet Friday night, February 26, at 8:00 o'clock, in Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church.

Dr. J. E. Rawles, of Suffolk, Va., is president. Letters have been sent out by the secretary, but it is impossible to secure the names and addresses of all.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, will be the speaker of the evening. Miss Mary Lee Williams, of Franklin, Va., will be toast-mistress, and there will be toasts and college songs and other features on the program.

THANKS!

I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to the members of the Holy Neck Sunday School, who were so kind in remembering by subscription to the SUN. I enjoy reading the SUN, and it is a great inspiration and comfort to me. During my eighteen years of affliction, I have found no other religious paper that I enjoy reading more, and may it continue to grow better and more far-reaching, until it finds its way into every home. I want to ask that these good people continue to pray for me.

J. T. Cross.

WORRY!

By RONALD G. MACINTYRE,

St. Andrew's College, The University, Sydney.

Jesus Christ is a Saviour to every part of life, and a Healer to every disease of the mind. If He had nothing to say to the careworn and anxious, a great field of human life would be an expanse of rank weeds. Will Christ pass on the sunny side of the road while you go slowly by in the deep shade? Impossible! He will stop and speak to you. Now what has He got to say?

Before listening to His cheery words, let us look at the crowds who walk in the gloom. One is anxious and worrying himself into sickness. Another is depressed about business and unfitting himself to discharge it. Another is fretting about want of recognition. Another is worrying not over the things of today, but the possibilities of the morrow. And all this care and worry is not the monopoly of one class of society. The black-winged birds of care build on castle turrets as on thatched cottages. I have seen the lines of care write themselves deeper in the social circle of the manor than in the keeper's lodge.

Christ deals with worry in two ways: (1) He points out the uselessness of it. (2) He tells us how to escape it. It is useless. "Who, by taking thought, can add one cubit to his stature?" We are filled with foreboding about tomorrow. But we may not see tomorrow; and if we do, it may be a very different tomorrow from that which we so gloomily painted. The things we dread are more and worse than the things that happen. We never get strength for tomorrow's burdens. "As thy days so shall thy strength be." A wise man has said, "Our earliest duty is to cultivate the habit of not looking round the corner."

While we may speak of and gain assent to the uselessness and folly of worry, the advice, after all, does not amount to more than the vain counsel, "Don't worry." That is negative advice, good so far as it goes, but it does not carry us very far. Jesus is always positive. "Your Father who is in heaven careth for you." And God's care is not that of the nurse who dandles the child in her arms, or wheels it in a perambulator. I know we would like that, but we are not babes. God cares for us by giving us duties to discharge and kindness to do. That at least is how he has comforted me. We are all more or less egotists, and it is a subtle form of that disease to be self-centered in our sorrow. It was the saintly Keble who said, "When you find yourself overpressed by melancholy, the best way is to go out and find something kind to do to somebody else." That same advice was picturesquely put by another good man who said, "When I dig a man out of trouble, the hole which is left behind is the grave where I bury my own sorrow."

And, further, Jesus cures worry by changing the atmosphere in which life is lived. Indeed, that is the only complete cure. There are two atmospheres in which we can exist—the atmosphere of worry and the atmosphere of trust. Now Jesus cures care by changing the poisonous gas of worry to the free, bracing air of trust. The only thorough cure is unflinching faith in God—I had almost said a defiant faith in God, the faith that refuses to be beaten down whatsoever the adverse circumstances be. A faith that beats along the ground like a bird with a broken wing is no good in the crises of life. We must trust God in the darkness as in the light, in death as in life, with a perfect abandon of faith. Is that asking too much. Surely not if it is faith in God. If we cannot cast the anchor of our hope within the veil there is nowhere else to fix it, for all else is changeable. It is God or nothing. It is no use telling me that I don't understand. I do. I have faced the darkness and stumbled through the gloom, but the anchor held.

I sorrowed that the golden day was dead,
Its light no more the countryside adorning.
But whilst I grieved, behold the east was red
With morning.

I mourned because the daffodils were killed
By burning skies that burned my early posies.
But while for these I pined my hands were filled With roses.

Half heart-broken, I bewailed the end
Of friendship than which none had once
Seemed nearer.
But while I wept, I found a closer friend
And dearer.

Thus I learned old pleasures are estranged
Only that something better may be given.
Until at last we find this earth exchanged
For heaven.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

PILGRIM CHURCH, Chattanooga, Tenn., Rev. C. Rexford Raymond, D. D., pastor, reports over $750 contributed on apportionment and a total of $1,156 for all local church and missionary benevolences.

REV. THOMAS H. DERRICK, formerly pastor at Orange City, Florida, has had a very serious operation at the Veterans' Hospital at Lake City, Florida. As we write, the report is that he is doing as well as could be expected. We are sure that he will be comforted and pleased to hear from his many friends as he has a long period of recuperation before him.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA. The annual meeting of this church was a largely attended affair and the reports indicated progress through the year. It was especially interesting to hear that during 1931 all bills were paid and the contributions for benevolences were larger than in recent years. The Sunday School enrollment has increased from 155 to 280. Other reports indicated activity in all departments. The pastor is Dr. H. Samuel Fritsch.

THE ANNUITY FUND. Dr. Lewis T. Reed, secretary of the Annuity Fund, reports that the Fund has come through the year 1931 not only with unshaken strength, but also with largely increased assets and gratifying increase in membership and an ability to continue crediting interest earnings to our members at 5 per cent and allotting $95 to the Expanded Plan members January 1, 1932, as a full share in the Pilgrim Memorial Fund Income.

REV. FREDERICK SHANNON, D. D., is another outstanding minister who has recently visited Florida. He is pastor of Central Church, Chicago, where he is in the succession of Dr. Gunsaulus and Newell Dwight Hillis. Dr. Gunsaulus preached the Baccalaureate sermon for the mid-year Commencement at the University of Florida. He visited other places, among them being West Palm Beach, where he called upon our pastor, Rev. Frank Atkinson.

REV. LEE VROOMAN, missionary of the American Board and Dean of International College, Smyrna, Turkey, made a tour of Florida, speaking in the Chain of Missionary Assemblies and also in several Congregational Churches of the State. Mr. Vrooman also attended two religious "House Parties" which were held at Gainesville for college students and resident of Gainesville, under the auspices of the First Century Christian Fellowship. This movement is one which originated in Oxford, England.

WEST PALM BEACH, Rev. Frank Atkinson, pastor, announces a class for the instruction of those children who desire to come into membership of the church. The announcement reads: "It is hoped to lead the children of our homes into fellowship with the church as the society of the friends of Jesus." This method of educational evangelism is highly recommended. At an evening service recently there were two addresses: "World Disarmament—An Impractical Dream," by Earnest Metcalf, and "World Disarmament—A Step in the Direction of Civilization," by Rabbi Carl Herman.

DR. S. PARKS CADMAN, pastor of Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, our largest church in this country, made a recent visit to Miami and Miami Beach. He delivered a lecture under the auspices of the Lions Club in the latter city and also spoke at a meeting of the ministers and their wives for the Miami District. Dr. King reports that he gave "A tremendous lecture, popular, witty, serious, in the interest of good will and peace." In addition to his regular preaching and lecturing, Dr. Cadman preaches over the radio every Sunday and furnishes the press with two thousand words a day. He is a busy man.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, FLORIDA. This little church was built by the same pastor who built the Little Brown Church in the Wildwood. The people of this church have suffered under present conditions and haven't much to contribute. The pastor, Rev. George K. Goodwin, reports that when he read a letter from the superintendent expressing the hope for further contribution on the apportionment, one man said that after selling what he had to sell and paying all his bills for the year, he had $2.00 left, and: "I will give that to show my appreciation to the superintendent who sent us our preacher." Of course, the superintendent was just the agent for the Extension Boards to make it possible for this church to have the preaching of a devoted Christian minister.

WINTER PARK, FLORIDA. The annual dinner and meeting of the First Congregational Church was held recently. One hundred and fifty were present and in some ways the meeting was the most significant held in years. The ladies of the church and congregation furnished the dinner. The tables were beautifully decorated and the food was abundant. The pastor presided and brief written reports of the year's work were made by the clerk, treasurer, trustees, Woman's Union, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, music committee and organ committee. $7,134.92 was raised for church expenses, and $1,976.93 for benevolences. Total $9,111.85. The Woman's Union raised over $900.00. The Bible School is growing in spirit and numbers and the Christian Endeavor Society had a most encouraging report. Thirty-two new members were received into the church during the year—sixteen on confession.

ANNUAL MEETING AT DEMOREST.

On Wednesday, January 20th, there gathered in the parlors of the Demorest Union Church, a group of some eighty people, for the regular annual meeting. After the enjoyment of a corn-beef hash and bean supper, with all its fellowship, the annual meeting was called to order by the chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Frank Morgan, who turned it over to the pastor. Mr. and Mrs. McClellan Hurd, of the Federated Auroro, Ohio, and Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Conference Superintendent of Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama, were introduced as visiting Congregationalists. Dr. Daniel B. Atkinson, who was Associate Moderator of the General Council, and who presided so effectively over the deliberations which led to the consummation of the union between the Christians and Congregationalists, is happily no longer a visitor, but an honored member of the church. After prayer by Rev. C. Lisle Percy, associate pastor of the church, Mrs. Saford, only remaining charter member, was introduced.

Letters were then read from Rev. C. N. Queen, a former pastor, and Mrs. W. O. Phillips, a former pastor's wife. Then followed reports from Prof. E. C. Burrage, clerk; Mrs. D. B. Atkinson, Sunday School superintendent; Mrs. F. P. Ensminger, treasurer of the Ladies' Benevolent Society; Miss Ina Adams, president of the Y. P. S. C. E.; Miss Ethel Carpenter, superintendent of the Junior Y. P. S. C. E. Careful figures of church attendance, so careful that they have been forwarded by a national member of the committee on church attendance, to Roger W. Babson, show an increase of nearly one-third over the highest average of former years. From a financial point of view, it was deduced from the reports that the church, though far from being wildly prosperous, was not in debt in any large way, and was in a hopeful condition to go forward with sharpened scythe to the mowing of that which should feed the hopper for the new year's grinding. The spiritual overtone was that of activity—a low, pervasive harmony of life and health throughout the whole spiritual body.

The high point of the evening was reached with the "History of the Church for 1931," by Mrs. C. Lisle Percy, professor of Latin in Piedmont. This summary of the outstanding events of the year must have been of great interest.

EARLY GIVING.

The Church at Winter Park recently sent to the State Office a check for $300.00 on the apportionment for 1932, having given their full apportionment of $1,500.00 for the year 1931. This is a wonderful beginning and if more churches would start early and remit regularly, their apportionment giving would be happier and more generous. In addition it would greatly reduce the necessary borrowing of our Missionary Boards, thus saving them great expense in interest payments. We heartily commend this church and every church which begins its giving early in the year.

SAVED BY A SPIDER.

Little things sometimes accomplish great results. History furnishes many examples of this.

In one of his fables Aesop tells how a mouse once saved the life of a lion.

More wonderful still, and no fable, were the results of the work of one little spider.

A prince who had been defeated in battle, fled, and hid in a cave in the woods.

That night a spider wove its web across the mouth of the cave.

In the morning two soldiers from the enemy's camp, searching for the prince, passed the cave where the prince was hiding.

"Look," said one, "there is a cave. Perhaps the prince is in there."

"No, he cannot be," said the other, "for if he had gone in there, he would have brushed away the spider's web," and they went on their way.

So the spider saved the prince.—Wings and Paws.

THE LOVE OF CHRIST.

All that Jesus did for His Church was but the expansion and unfolding of His love. Traveling to Bethlehem, I see Love incarnate. Tracking His steps as He went about doing good, I see Love laboring. Visiting the houses of Bethany, I see Love sympathizing. Standing by the grave of Lazarus, I see Love weeping. At Gethsemane, I see Love sorrowing. Passing on to Calvary, I see Love suffering, bleeding, and dying. The whole scene of His life was but an unfolding of the deep, wonderful, and precious mystery of "Redeeming Love."—McChylene.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN FLORIDA.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 13, 1932.

The Associated Press carried this, a first paragraph, of a sad and tragic story:

"Paul Ellis, city editor of the Daytona Beach News-Journal, and former North Carolina newspaperman, wrote a story of his own suicide with meticulous care, left a note saying where his body would be found and then shot himself to death amid the lonely sand dunes near here."

The same account relates that the body was found where the note stated it would be, and furthermore, the same note stated that the suicide attributed his deed to ill health, "the futility of life," and he wished his body cremated. One wonders if the whole secret of this tragic, self-inflicted death is not told in the simple statement that "he was an atheist." If one believes that this life is all of it, and that there is no mind, superior to that of man, creating, guiding and ruling over all, why is life not futile, and all our human efforts vain and meaningless? If this life ends it all, then why should not one end all life when an ill-wind blows, or difficulties arise? Surely, the Bible is right and justified in saying "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." Can anyone, but a fool, one who has fooled himself about all that is most potent and real and vital, say and believe such an absurd and unreasonable thing? As our old Harvard philosopher used to say, "Gentlemen, either you must believe that there is an intelligent Creator of this marvellous, mysterious, and majestic universe, or, that this intricate, well-balanced, wonderfully poised universe created, and now controls, itself. No one but a fool, in the presence of such an alternative, would or could accept the latter." Which reminds one that one of your (so-called) religious weeklies is running a symposium on the topic, "Is There a God?" Some affirming, others denying. Now, isn't that a nice dish to put before the king? Or its readers? That question was forever settled, and in the finest and most convincing manner, in the opening verse of the first chapter of Genesis. "In the beginning God." That is sufficient. Otherwise, there isn't any significance in anything. You can't argue it. There is no logic or language sufficient to prove it. For the simple reason that it is stronger, more positive, more fixed and steadfast than any logic or language known to man. In the beginning, God. Postulate that undelying and undebatable fact, and you get somewhere. Without that, neither logic nor language nor learning can carry one to any firm footing or standing ground. That fact undergirds the universe, and all safe, sound reasoning—life, labor, love, conduct, in this universe. Destroy that, and belief in that fundamental truth, and your universe of belief, life, love, labor—it all becomes futile. With a firm, fixed faith in God as the Intelligent and Beneficent Creator and Ruler of this universe one has a foundation to stand and build on, and without such a foundation one is on sand indeed, and life has no content.

Some things are fundamental and essential to human well-being. An unshaken belief in God, a faith whose foundation is in Him, is one of them.

Speaking of essentials, a recent writer points out that we Americans are not very discriminating in the matter of essentials and non-essentials. He says that the automobile is not an essential of life, but it seems to be, and maybe it is, to American life. For we have more automobiles than we have bathrooms; every day more of us use a car than use a toothbrush; that there are more automobiles than telephones; that the most beautiful, as well as the most expensive thing many of us possess, is an automobile. Which reminds one of a story Hon. A. J. Maxwell, candidate for Governor of North Carolina, is telling. A man from "Down East" (the speaker was relating this in the West), was telling recently of the pitiable financial plight in which he was. "I have placed my children in an orphanage, and since I was unable to support her, I have carried my wife back to her father's. If matters get any worse with me, my next move will be to get rid of my automobile." That man is not alone in his thinking, even if he is in his social and financial planning.

Florida feels that it is coming in for more than its share of hard times. There are not as many tourists here as in previous years, and so not as many automobiles, and so not as much gasoline is being consumed. A drop off in revenue from that source, Florida has a 7-cent gasoline tax on gas. And then the hotels are by no means full—some of them empty. The chief industry of Florida, if memory of figures serves me correctly, is the tourist industry. If the folks don't come here in winter, even if the winter is mild elsewhere, well, that is just too bad. Then, we believe, the citrus fruit industry comes second. And old man "General Depression" has almost squeezed the life, and all the juice, out of grapefruit and oranges—grapefruit in particular. By the way, you can buy grapefruit per dozen or per hundred dozen here much cheaper than we can buy the same number of oranges. I saw on a fancy, high-priced fruit stand here "Oranges, 10 for 25c; grapefruit, 13 for 25c." Maybe people have found out that there is more strength and nourishment in an orange, though small, than in a grapefruit, though large.

The past week has been unusually warm here, the temperature hanging on to 80 and above. So to do the unusual, and undesirable, this writer, from over-sunning, or over-eating, or under-exercising, either all three or neither, "caught" a deep cold, and enjoyed the comfort of his bed, quiet of his room, and solitary meals for a day or two.

Dr. Jno. R. Mott, world figure and Christian leader, is here at the Sanatorium, resting, recuperating, nursing tired nerves back to normalcy. Being told, on his inquiry, about our great strain and need for Elon and our missionary work: "Every very worthy work and institution, the best and most worthy, seems to have come to a time of testing and trial," said he. Our very souls seem to be on trial. But after all, the soul of a man is his chief asset, and not what we may possess, or think we possess. Ex-President Coolidge, in a recent paragraph, said: "The development of the real character of men and women can go on in bad times as well as in good times. After all, that is the important thing." If these hard times try and test our souls and we show the stuff that is in us by remaining true to God, and to that which is best and noblest in life, then these bad times will turn out to be, after all, our best times.

ALCOHOL.

Dr. J. E. Rawls, President of Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., and a prominent and useful man in the medical profession and the church, as a deacon and Sunday School teacher, spoke, by request, to adult classes in the First Baptist Church last Sunday, on "The Use of Alcohol." I am taking the liberty to quote some parts of that address for this editorial. Dr. Rawls said:

"It has only three uses in the medical profession—as a preservative agent of pharmaceutical products, in patent medicines and in vegetable medical products. Alcohol is added to these, because alcohol preserves the vegetable products as salt preserves meat.

"The second use is an antiseptic. The surgeon sterilizes his hands, which are swarming with living organisms, with alcohol, before an operation, to kill these organisms.

"The third use is to preserve pathological, or dead, specimens.

"Alcohol is a life destroyer and a habit-forming poison.

"It is as deceptive as sin, and a person who argues for alcohol is to be pitied rather than rebuked, for he is deceived."

Alcohol is lawless—we know that from our wide experience, and the headlines in the papers. Law and alcohol are incompatible. As "the wages of sin is death," so the use of alcohol is death. He recited some of the evil effects upon the human body, and said that its effect upon the mind was worse. "There should be no compromise with alcohol."

I have given extracts from Dr. Rawl's address because it contains facts which all church members should know. What this present age needs is the simple truth about alcohol as a real basis for a sound Christian judgment for an opinion upon the Eighteenth Amendment as the correct expression of Prohibition. Temperance in all things is scriptural and should be understood and obeyed by all true church members. Much that is spoken and written on the subject of temperance and Prohibition is ignorance expressing appetite and greed.

"IF."

The word "If" covers a great deal. It is a mighty word in the field of excuses. It is a help in time of need. Just at this time it can be one of the greatest forces to help American people of any word in the English language.

If any citizen in America is in doubt about the prohibition conditions, let him avail himself of the opportunity of hearing the group of speakers who are campaigning the United States under the auspices of the Allied Forces for Prohibition. If anyone doubts the conditions of the present as compared with the old saloon days, let him hear them.

If any man think there are justifiable grounds for abolishing the Eighteenth Amendment, let him hear Col. Raymond Robbins on the subject: "Shall the Eighteenth Amendment be Repealed?"

If anyone doubts the comparison of the economical conditions now as to what they were before the Eighteenth Amendment was passed, let him hear Dr. Daniel A. Poling.

If anyone has been persuaded by the wet press that conditions among the young people are worse as to drinking, than they were formerly, let him listen to the facts of Dr. Poling's address.

If any man, regardless of how wet or how smart he may be, thinks he can show justifiable reasons for wanting the open saloon, let him produce his arguments in an open and square manner.

If you have not already heard these speakers and learned at first-hand what the facts are, you should do so. They are going to the strategic points in every State throughout the Union. In fact, they are going to put on this campaign in 261 cities in the United States, thereby making it accessible to most of the citizens of the United States. Hear ye them.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

(Some Personal Characteristics.)

By H. H. SMITH.

It is said that the sight of Phillips Brooks on the streets of Boston dispelled the gloom of a dark, dreary morning. When Stanley found Livingstone, who had been lost to the outside world for two or three years, he tells us that he instinctively removed his hat as he spoke to him, for he felt that he was in the presence of a great soul. The personality of a great man is irrepressible. William Roscoe Thayer, describing Washington's personal appearance and bearing at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, closed with these words: "Most men, after they had been with him a while, felt the sense of his majesty grow upon them, a sense that he was made of common flesh like them, but of something uncommon besides, something very high and very precious."

Woodrow Wilson's description of Washington at the same period of his life, accords with that of Thayer:

"That noble figure drew all eyes to it; that mein as if the man were a prince; that sincere and open countenance, which every man could see was lighted by a good conscience; that cordial ease in salute, as of a man who felt himself brother to his friends. There was something about Washington that quickened the pulses of a crowd at the same time that it awed them; that drew tears which were a sort of voice of worship. Children desired sight of him, and men felt lifted after he had passed."

Such a description of the man prepares us to understand the following incident when he took command of the army: "He reached Cambridge on the 2nd of July, and bore himself with so straightforward and engaging a courtesy in taking command that the officers he superseded could not but like him; jealousy was disarmed."

His acceptance of the commission of commander-in-chief of the armies of the Revolution showed a "mixture of modesty and pride that made men love and honor him." In a letter to his wife, he wrote: "You may believe me, my dear Patsy, when I assure you in the most solemn manner, that, so far from seeking this appointment, I have used every endeavor in my power to avoid it, not only from my unwillingness to part from you and the family, but from a consciousness of its being a trust too great for my capacity. . . . But, as it has been a kind of destiny that has thrown me upon this service, I shall hope that my undertaking it is designed to answer some good purpose. It was utterly out of my power to refuse this appointment, without exposing my character to such censures as would have reflected dishonor upon myself, but given pain to my friends."

He spoke in the same tone to the Congress, and, in closing, said: "As to pay, sir, I beg leave to assure the Congress that, as no pecuniary consideration could have tempted me to accept this arduous employment at the expense of my domestic ease and happiness, I do not wish to make any profit from it. I will keep an exact account of my expenses. These, I doubt not, they will discharge, and that is all I desire."

Washington's sincere patriotism and his conduct of the war so impressed his countrymen that, only six months before his death, "when the clouds of war again seemed to be gathering," the Secretary of War appealed to him in these words: "You see how the storm thickens, and that our vessel will soon require its ancient pilot. Will you—may we flatter ourselves, that in a crisis so awful and important, you will accept the command of all our armies? I hope you will, because you alone can unite all hearts and all hands, if it is possible that they can be united." His reply to President Adams was: "As my whole life has been dedicated to my country in one shape or another, for the poor remains of it, it is not an object to contend for ease and quiet, when all that is valuable is at stake, further than to be satisfied that the sacrifice I should make of these is acceptable and desired by my country."

The best men have their traducers, and Washington was no exception. Happy the man who can meet his adversaries with such words as Washington met his: "But in what will this abuse terminate? For the result, as it respects myself, I care not; for I have a consolation within that no earthly efforts can deprive me of, and that is that neither ambition nor interested motives have influenced my conduct. The arrows of malevolence, therefore, however barbed and well-pointed, never can reach the most vulnerable part of me; though, whilst I am up as a mark, they will be continually aimed."

Henry Cabot Lodge says that Washington's "character has been exalted at the expense of his intellect, and his goodness has been so much insisted upon, both by admirers and critics, that we are in danger of forgetting that he had a great mind as well as high moral worth. . . . He never exerted himself to say brilliant and striking things. He never talked or acted with an eye to dramatic effect, and this is one reason for the notion that he was dull and dry."

Washington was not cold and unapproachable, as some have imagined. Lodge relates this incident: As a clergyman approached Washington, hat in hand, Washington said: "Put on your hat, parson, and I will shake hands with you." "I cannot wear my hat in your presence, general," he replied, "when I think of what you have done for this country." "You did as much as I." "No, no," protested the parson. "Yes," said Washington, "you did what you could, and I have done no more." "A gracious, kindly courtesy, and not without the salt of wit," remarks Lodge.

Washington's self-effacement was one of his most admirable traits of character. As his biographer says: "There is not a line in all of his writings which even suggests that he ever envied any man. So long as the work in hand was done, he cared not who had the glory, and he was perfectly magnanimous and perfectly at ease about his own reputation."

President Butler, of Columbia University, says: "Washington's military genius and his modest and unselfish skill in dealing with men and their meaner passions, his tried and tested sagacity, his poise, and above all, his complete self-effacement, excited the wonder of the world as they compel a world's admiration." Dr. Butler further says: "He was a real person, with the ordinary human passions and limitations, but so well balanced was his character, so well ordered his temperament, and so well disciplined his mind that he made of the ordinary human material a product that is perhaps without an equal in history."

Washington's religion was to show justice and mercy in all his dealings with his fellowman, and humbly trust in a gracious Providence that governs the world.

WAR IN THE FAR EAST.

There might be less concern about the war of Japan on China if indeed we could consider China and Japan far away from us. We have been saying that science, invention, missions and commerce have made the world simply one great neighborhood. While that is so we have not succeeded in imparting the neighborhood spirit, which makes disturbances in one part of the world the concern of every other part.

No one can prophesy how far the present flare-up will spread, but we do not believe there is a will to war among most of the nations at present. Japan has been burning with it ever since she won her fight with Russia in 1904. She sent her young men to be trained chiefly in Germany, and the military dream was at the height of its pride and ambition there at the time. The conduct of the Japanese in the present conflict is a reproduction of Potsdam in 1914. It is "the scrap of paper" philosophy revived and in action again. It is plainly a war of aggression and wholly at variance with the better and kindlier day that seemed to be dawning on mankind.

It seems to us that Japan is acting in defiance of all the other nations and in the long run it can result in nothing but disaster to her. She will likely find when this trouble is over that she will have bills which will grind her population down for years to come and she will have to build up in the minds of the Western nations the respect she has destroyed by her cunningly planned coup and it will not be a very easy thing to accomplish.

This attack upon China may be regarded as still being a part of the World War. The Western nations have been contending over reparations, and one or two other peoples besides Japan seem to have had the attitude of watching for a chance to leap.

We are all on our mettle, by which we mean our wisdom and patience will be tested and the destiny of the peoples may again be in the balance. We expect the views of Christian civilization to prevail. Alas, that Christian civilization is not yet wholly Christian. It is the part of us all to think and pray, and not to lose heart that the pace of peace seems so slow and halting.—Editorial in Christian Evangelist.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, celebrated its twentieth anniversary on Monday night, February 8, 1932. The Society was organized on February 19, 1912, with one hundred members, and now has one hundred and forty-seven members.

This Society has been very active during its twenty years of service and its history shows what can be done by many workers in cooperation and counting small gifts from individuals. It is not the great gifts of a few individuals that carry the work of the Kingdom forward, but the small gifts of the millions, whose names are never in print or public notice. By regular monthly meetings, prayer, and systematic contributions, this Society has written a good chapter in Missionary history.

The Society has had only three treasurers: Miss Bessie Norfleet, three years. She passed away January 31, 1915, and she had collected $485.78. Mrs. C. B. Duke, fifteen years, who collected $12,544.12. Mrs. M. F. Hall has held this office for two years, and has collected $1,139.48. The total received during the twenty years is $15,183.84, an average of $759.13 per year. The money received and used for Missions was only a small fraction of the value of the Society's work in the Mission service. The study of Mission books, the enthusiasm created by meeting together, the increase of missionary knowledge and the spiritual satisfaction in doing the work, have added to the strength and usefulness of the Society in a way that words and figures cannot express. The President is Mrs. J. P. Hancock, Mrs. C. C. Rawles acting in her absence on account of sickness; Secretary, Mrs. O. L. Taylor; Treasurer, Mrs. M. F. Hall.

At the anniversary celebration devotionals were conducted by Mrs. W. H. Yates, her subject being "The Changing World," and after the devotionals a pageant, "The Changing World," was presented. Those taking part were: "The World," Mrs. J. C. Philhower; "Brotherhood," Miss Susie Powell; "The Church," Miss Gladys Yates; "Porto Rico," Mrs. Dewey Harrell; "India," Mrs. George Earl Rogers; "America," Miss Evelyn Yates. A male trio rendered selections at intervals during the progress of the pageant. This trio was composed of Dr. I. W. Johnson, Mr. Arthur Herrick, and Mr. Edwin Richardson, with Mrs. I. W. Johnson presiding at the piano. All the parts in the pageant were well rendered and the music was appropriate and inspiring. The lesson from the pageant was the climax of the evening, and the large attendance enjoyed every minute and every act, and the music.

It seems that women take more interest in Missions and are more willing to unite their efforts and their money in the service of Missions than men. The contrast between religious meetings and purely social meetings is great, in favor of religious meetings for real enjoyment, that it would profit those who devote their time, talents and money to parties, to divert their energies and influences for a time to religious meetings and lessons for life. There is nothing more satisfactory than having rendered service for God and humanity; and Missions is one field in which we can carry out the will and direction of Jesus, the Great Missionary.

ALABAMA LETTER.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN.—As it has been some time since I have written anything from my field of labor, I will give just a sketch of my work.

I am of the opinion that our rural churches, in this country, are feeling the effects of the depression more keenly than anyone else. All church interest of a financial character has been very much retarded, and almost all country churches have had to retrench in their programs. And as we approach the close of the winter term, the depression still continues. Many people in the Southland are out of work, and with no homes and no provision for them, and seemingly no better conditions in prospect. This makes our country church work exceedingly hard, and while this is all true, these very people are in need of just such blessings as the church and the Gospel can give. I am trusting that the spiritual needs of God's children shall be provided for.

I am praying that in this time of worry and privation, the minds of the people may be turned to God in faithful prayer. He is Master of the situation; He is not bankrupt; He is able to supply our needs, and through His son to richly bless all who will trust Him.

It is a time of testing for the humble pastor, and a time of testing for the loyal church member. We who are pastors must give our best, and do our best for the church now. Surely, we will not give, or do, less than that. And, surely, the loyal members will divide with these workmen of God their living. Many people who have supported the church in liberal fashion, have nothing to give, of a material kind, but all can give of their prayers and their presence at the house of God. And most kindly hearts can divide their living with the laborers in the Kingdom, and we will all share together in the depression.

We have a revival planned to begin in Roanoke next Sunday. Rev. Dr. Coale, of California, is to do the preaching. Our local singers, led by Rev. C. B. Holder, of the Disciples' Church, will have charge of the singing. Every detail of the meeting is being looked after with care. This is a Statewide interdenominational movement, in which our churches are cooperating most beautifully.

More than 100 women met recently in cottage prayer meetings in the town. These cottage meetings will continue during the revival, which will continue for two weeks. I am expecting the results to be commensurate with our needs, and if they should be, it will be great. There is much to do and much suffering among our people, and many souls to be saved, and I pray that much good may be accomplished.

PIEDMONT LETTER.

The annual meeting of the Union Church in Demorest was a very delightful occasion. It had the merit of being carefully planned beforehand. The dining-room was made cheerful and attractive by decorations, including many flowers. At six in the evening the members gathered around the tables and enjoyed their dinner together.

After dinner Pastor Mowbray was elected moderator. Brief reports were received from all departments. A unique feature of the program was the history of the year's activities. Mrs. Mabel C. Percy gave a bright, breezy review of the chief events of the year. It was an inspiring resume of what the church accomplished the past year and will be kept with the permanent records. This is a leading feature of the annual meeting and may well be practiced by all churches.

The State College Association of Georgia was held this year at Atlanta. Dean J. C. Rogers of Piedmont, was the president. Reports indicate that it was a lively session and some fine addresses were given. One of the speakers was Dr. Archie M. Palmer, of New York City, associate secretary of the Association of American Colleges.

Dr. Palmer came to Piedmont for the weekend, and delighted the college faculty and students with a number of scholarly addresses. He spoke at vespers on Sunday and discussed the subject, "Who Should Go to College?" He was the speaker at chapel on Monday, and in the afternoon Dean Rogers was host to the faculty and friends in honor of Dr. Palmer.

Dr. James H. Simmons of Brenau College, was the speaker at vespers February 7th. His subject was the "Dust-Covered Bible." Dr. Simmons thinks that the Bible is a neglected and misunderstood Book. "The Bible is not to be covered, but to be discovered." And he gave some of his own discoveries of Biblical teaching as an example.

Two recent chapel speakers were Chaplain Axtell and Prof. W. Baxter Smith, of the college faculty. Chaplain Axtell discussed the war situation in the Orient, and Prof. Smith described some of the wonders of the starry skies. Education, international problems, and astronomy, subjects of recent chapel addresses, indicate the wide range of interests presented at Piedmont chapels.

ROANOKE, ALA.

I thought you might be interested to know something of our Fifth Sunday meeting. We met with the First Christian Church, Roanoke, January 31st. There were seven ministers present and nine churches represented, with about thirty delegates.

Bro. V. E. Kitchens, vice-president, presided, in the absence of the president, Bro. O. O. Mitchell. The program, from start to finish, was intelligently carried out. Bro. L. H. Huey discussed "The Importance of Regular Church Attendance." Bro. Huey is an active layman and a successful business man.

Prof. Eugene Causy gave us an able address on "Developing the Talent of Youth Through the Christian Endeavor." Prof. Causy is an active layman of Pleasant Grove and is teaching in the consolidated school there. Mrs. V. L. Carter, of Wadley, gave an inspirational message on "Winning Souls to Christ Through the Sunday School."

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins spoke on "The Opportunity and Responsibility of the Church in the Present Crisis." We have never heard anything on this subject to equal it. I fear we have not yet realized the greatness of this great man of God.

We adjourned and had lunch together in the basement of the church, after which we resumed work where we left off. Bro. G. W. Huey and Rev. A. H. Sheppard discussed "Financing the Church Under Present Depression." They made us feel that financing the church is a small thing if we undertake the Bible way.

Miss Verlie Barnett and Rev. G. S. Hunt discussed "Understanding Youth," in a very intelligent way, both having been called upon without any preparation.

Prof. W. C. Edge and Rev. J. H. Dollar discussed "Greater Reverence for the House of God," which caused us to feel the very presence of God with us.

Rock Stand Church invited the next session of this body to meet with them on the Fifth

We can do it (evangelize the world) and we will.—Samuel Capin.

Sunday in July. We will have no meeting the Fifth Sunday in May, because of commencement at Southern Union College.

We are greatly encouraged in a time like this and feel that in the near future the church is going to wake up to a realization of its duty and become willing to make the necessary sacrifice to lead the world to victory.

MORALS, MANNERS, AND MOVIES.

A pastor of one of our larger cities undertakes to inform the public each week in his radio addresses as to what moving picture theaters are putting on good programs for the week, and to urge Christian people to attend what he believes are the good shows. He states that the morals and manners of the movies will be the standard of the morals and manners of our country in the years to come. He attends what he thinks are the good shows, we do not go to any; but the theaters are crowded with people, young and old, regardless of what either of us may say. It seems to us that the work of trying to select something harmless in the movies would be much like a daily pawing over of the garbage can for a crust of bread or a piece of meat to make it worth while for people who are all out for God and making every effort to get to heaven.

But is it a fact that the movies are setting the standards of America in its moral and social ideals? Then God pity us all and God help us! Evil days are before us.

An article in the January issue of the Federal Council Bulletin on this subject records the results of some research on this line among High School pupils by a student working for his Master's degree in the University of Southern California. He says, "The majority of the students recognize a conflict between the ideals of the home, school and church and those of the movies. The things most often named as in conflict are drinking, murder, fighting and gangster and bedroom scenes. The conclusion of the study is that the effect of the movie upon personality is subtle and indirect. A picture speaks the universal language of the mind, and makes an impression at once in the nerve cells of the brain. Later the impression made can be observed in changed attitudes and actions. If the personality is unified by wholesome ideals and balanced by many interests it will be safeguarded and not be so deeply affected."

Which is to say that such scenes as are described—liquor drinking, murder, gangdom and social vice—are on hand in the movies, and it is only where the young people who witness them have enough of an antidote from other sources that they withstand the immorality poured into their minds.

Mr. Roger Babson, of the Babson Statistical Agency, blames the moving pictures for a greater part of the crime wave sweeping over the country. He is quoted as saying:

"Why we American people will continue to spend thousands of millions on schools and teachers to train the children of our cities and then permit a bunch of irresponsible men to exhibit each night crime-breeding pictures within the shadow of the school building just to make a few dollars is beyond my comprehension. Such pictures in one night uproot all the good seed which schools can plant in a month. It is exactly like appropriating money for a fire department and then permitting any one to set buildings on fire just to collect the insurance.

"Such studies as I have made lead directly to the movies as the basic cause of the crime wave of today. Furthermore, when one considers that ten million people (largely young people) in the United States alone attend the movies every week, their tremendous influence in all ways must be admitted. In view of statements by psychologists that impressions through the eye are very much more powerful than those which come through the ear, it is evident that the movies are the greatest force today in molding character for good or evil. In fact, I sent a questionnaire to the school principals of New England asking which of the following had the greatest influence in molding the character of our young people today—the school, the church, or the home—and 70 per cent scratched off all three and replied: 'The movies.'"

TRESPASSING ON RAILROADS MOST HAZARDOUS PRACTICE.

Trespassing on the tracks and trains of railroads is again revealed as a most hazardous practice in a bulletin of the Safety Bureau of the Southern Railway System, showing that during the year 1931 casualties to trespassers on the property of the Southern included 146 killed and 201 injured, and that during the ten-year period, 1922-1931, they reached the total of 1,402 killed and 1,684 injured.

Trespassing on tracks of the Southern accounted for 105 deaths and 93 injuries during 1931, while trespassing on trains accounted for the remaining 41 deaths and 108 injuries. The total number of deaths is only one below the number killed in 1930 and is higher than the ten-year average of 140.2. The constancy of the hazard is shown by the fact that during the ten-year period the smallest number of deaths was 129 in 1922, and the largest 154 in 1923.

The number of trespassers injured in 1931 was 20 above the previous high record for the ten-year period of 181 in 1929 and 22 above the 179 injured in 1930. The smallest number of injuries was 133 in 1927.

"It is the same old story of trespassers walking or sleeping on or alongside of the tracks or of attempting to get on or falling from moving trains," says the bulletin.

If you persist in playing with a pretty fire, don't squeal if you get burned by a beautiful flame.

A PRAYER.

Lord teach us to pray. Teach us the language of prayer, but more, Jesus' spirit of prayer; his compassion, his love for a world that is blackened and sickened by selfishness and sedition. Show us the world's helplessness, its hopelessness, unless prayer shall completely cleanse and cure. All barriers burned away, daily bring us, O Lord, our Saviour, our Guide to the garden of prayer, prostrate, surrendered, forgetful of all else but God, possessed of Him, beseeching Him to empower the church and to lift from millions the pall of impending eternal darkness. All for Jesus sake. Amen. L.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM JAPAN.

(Our beloved friend and veteran missionary, Dr. A. D. Woodworth, writes the Editor a personal letter about many things and then closes with an insight into the Japanese-Chinese situation that we have not found elsewhere. SUN readers will get some first-hand information in this letter that is exceedingly interesting and helpful.—J. O. A.)

26 Kasumi Cho, Azabu, Tokio,
January 8, 1932.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson,
Elon College, N. C.
Dear Dr. J. O.:

Your very welcome letter came this morning and was deeply appreciated, as your letters always are.

It may be well for me to tell you about things I know a little about. A short time ago we had a letter from Boston, telling us that we can stay in Japan as long as we like, without asking the Board, from year to year, for permission to do so. They tell us that the year-to-year request is for the active missionaries who have reached the advanced age of seventy. But we are cautioned not to stay so long as to interfere with the work of the active missionaries by our extreme age and feebleness. On the top of this the heads of the schools where I teach tell me that they want me to teach another year, which I am starting in to do today. In the M. E. school it may be that the brethren are glad to have my services gratis since recent reports show that that great church has fallen behind in its mission gifts the past year by more than a million dollars. We used to think the M. E. Church was strong enough to do anything. But it seems to have its weak points like all other churches, though it would be better for all of us if the M. E. Church would set us a better example by not falling behind.

Well, what about Manchuria, anyway? In Japan, while the missionaries do not approve of all the things the Japanese army has done, we think Japan has a grievance. The Japanese have suffered many insults at the hands of the Chinese. The patience of Japan in dealing with them seems to have led the Chinese to think they could make further aggressions with impunity, such as the attempt to blow up a railway bridge and to murder a Japanese army officer. Japan once gained Manchuria in a war with China, but Russia, Germany and France would not permit her to keep it. Three years later Russia took possession and this led to the war with Russia, and Japan won it again. Then, strange to say, Japan restored the country to China, only reserving certain rights by treaty. These rights the Chinese seem to think they can ignore with impunity, and have so acted. Japan has a railroad running through the province, and has had soldiers there to protect it. These men have made the country safe from bandits and the irregularities from which the other provinces have always suffered. The result has been that the Chinese, who were five millions at the beginning of Japan's occupancy, have increased to thirty millions. Moreover, the Japanese have invested, through their government, or through the investments of her people, more than a billion dollars there. At the present stage of the game it is easy to offer wholesale criticisms of Japan but I have seen no criticism of the Chinese. If the Chinese had been victorious in the times when the Japanese soldiers and the Chinese clashed, there would have been no appeal to the League of Nations to help them out. When it comes to a show-down, I suppose the Japanese can lick the Chinese to a frazzle, but whether there is any profit in it is another question. In times past 43 per cent of Japan's foreign trade has been with China. The present conflict will undoubtedly sow a crop of hatreds which will not be eradicated in a hundred years. The losses, too, which Japan will suffer from the boycotts will be many times the value of Japan's investments. So, it might be better for Japan to give up all her rights in Manchuria than to keep up the conflict. However, there are in Japan a good many who like to stand on their dignity, and who are always ringing the changes on the bushido spirit, and think the present occasion is a good time to show it off. So you see that in my opinion, it will be a losing game to Japan whether she wins or loses. But this, you know, has always been the result of the wars—great losses to all concerned.

Now, lest you get a case of mental dyspepsia because of the exceeding length of my letter, I think I had better ring off for this time.

We are always remembering the needs and difficulties of our brethren in the home-land when we pray.

Sincerely, your brother,
A. D. WOODWORTH.

DRIVE FOR DRY DIMES FORGES AHEAD.

With 285,000 dimes received in its "Dry Dimes Will Beat Wet Dollars" campaign, the National Prohibition Board of Strategy reports a widening interest as reflected in continued contributions and in orders for coin cards in which the dimes are sent to the Board.

The great victory won by the Drys in the United States Senate on January 21st, when the wet move for State referenda was decisively defeated, 55 to 15, has stimulated the drys everywhere to increased activity in behalf of our cause.

From Alaska come 543 dimes as a contribution through the Alaska W. C. T. U., and a statement by its president, Mrs. Margaret Harris, that "because we have no vote in the coming contest for President, we are turning this money to you to expend for the education of those who do vote."

From Mexico come dimes from Americans there who want prohibition maintained in the United States, and from Canada unsolicited dimes have come to uphold prohibition. Every State in the Union has been represented and almost every town in them, in response to the dimes campaign.

The fund being raised is and will be used by the Board in its allotted task of working for dry candidates and dry planks in all political parties. Dimes have come from members of every party and of every religious group as well as from those not identified with any organization.

Ten dimes came from ten printers on a leading wet newspaper who said they wanted it known that many Union workers do not favor repeal or modification of the prohibition laws.

From Homes for the Aged, from persons struggling with acute economic problems, from millionaires, from doctors, lawyers and other professional persons, from youth, and from a great variety of other donors the dimes have come.

"I am not a citizen, but a resident of the United States," one woman writes, "but I have three children." She sent dimes from all of them to help uphold prohibition.

The coin cards and return envelopes are sent free by the Board in lots of 25 or more to any individual, or group, able to distribute them among friends and prospective contributors. The address is National Prohibition Board of Strategy, 1138-1142 National Press Building, Washington, D. C.

LOWERED MORAL STANDARDS A CHALLENGE TO THE MISSIONARY.

REV. M. A. COOPER,

West End Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga.

There are many perils that beset us today, but there is none more insidious than the perils of lowered moral standards. It is one of the ominous clouds on the horizon of our national life. It is plainly evident to the most casual observer that we are living in a lax, easy-going, careless, flippant and cynical age. Good and evil are regarded as pretty much alike. They tell us that evil is only good in the making, "one of the growing pains of virtue." We are so mixing colors that it is difficult to distinguish black from white. What is right and what is wrong? Many would say that conduct, after all, is just "a set of nervous reactions induced by various forms of external stimulus."

The enemy is threatening to come in like a flood, and the missionary must hold up the standard of righteousness. Our country needs a revival of the moral imperative. We are losing the clarity and purity of moral judgment. This is the day when the jails are full and when the officers of the law must work day and night to overtake the criminals. Crime is on the increase. The cost of crime to our own country has been estimated at half a billion dollars annually. Forgery, fraud, embezzlement, gambling, intemperance and impurity are rife in the land. The institution of marriage is crumbling, and divorce is easy. Our literature is being poisoned, the home is being threatened and moral sanctions have about reached the vanishing point. Our violation of all laws is shameful. There is an inclination to resent all discipline and authority. Great multitudes have thrown the Ten Commandments into the discard and sneer at the moral precepts of Christ. Business is worshipped. Gold is the modern god. Many get their livelihood by the sweat of other men's faces. They covet what is their neighbor's, and steal to secure what is not their own. Their end is chaos, destruction and death.

The missionary task is the redemptive task. The future of missions lies in what it is able to do in putting the principles of Jesus Christ into practice. The church must do one or the other of two things: It must strive to make the world conform to the teachings of Christ, or it must sanction the worldly spirit, and put off its religion to make itself agreeable. The church must face her problems with undaunted courage and refuse to compromise with the world. Instead of worshipping at the shrine of the God of things as they are, we must in these complacent days catch the spirit of Jesus and hurl our invectives against all forms of evil.

There are many today who are missing the mark, who are blotting the divine image out of their lives by wrong doing. They are on our streets, broken-hearted, led captive by the devil at his will, lacerated and wounded by the hand of the destroyer, and the cry is going up: "Save us from the lion's mouth." The missionary, like his Lord, is sent with the glorious gospel of divine grace, "to preach good tidings to the meek; . . . to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." The missionary carries "Good News," not "Good Advice." The good news that God is with us and for us, that He can turn men from darkness unto light, and from the power of Satan unto God. The good news that Jesus Christ is the liberator of the slaves of sin, that he can break the power of sin and set the sinner free, that he can cast out the demons of iniquity, and give peace and tranquility.

The missionary carries a message of help. If the world is saved today from moral failure, the missionary with the gospel message must save it. Men and women sunk to the lowest depths of degradation and shame are hungry for a better way, for a finer quality of life. They are athirst for the water of life. They need Jesus, the Saviour. The missionary holds in his hands the Bible which is full of social and ethical teachings. It is vibrant with a message for our times. He must endeavor to put the teachings of the Bible into practice in his own life and in the life of those to whom he ministers. He must impress upon all whom he teaches the duties and responsibilities of Christian citizenship.

What is the business of the church and its missionaries? The Great Commission answers the question. We are not only to make disciples, but we are to teach them to live in accordance with the ethical precepts of Jesus. We are too apt to pay more attention to the first part of our task than we are to the second part. "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you," is quite as important as to "make disciples of all the nations." The Bible has something to say about marriage and divorce, about intemperance, about personal purity, about Christians observing the laws of the land, about the oppression of the poor, about war and about many other problems of social reform. It is high time that the church through her missionaries should bring to bear all her resources for the accomplishment of that portion of her task which looks to the uplifting of the moral standards of our land.

Let us not idly wish for better conditions, nor merely pray about it, giving the Lord information about the state of affairs we are in. Let us not waste our time idly discussing all that. But let us go forth as one sent from God with a mission and a message, seeking out the needy, forgotten, neglected, wasted and sinful lives, and undertake by the grace and help of God to lift those lives into the "measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Let us go forth with the conviction that Christ and Christ alone can deal with sin and cleanse the soul of this perilous stuff. Let us point men to the Christ whose radiant personality, incomparable life, and sacrificial death constitute an eternal appeal to the children of men.

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,
When sound the cries of race and clan
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear Thy voice, O Son of man.
"O Master, from the mountainside,
Make haste to heal these hearts of pain;
Among these restless throngs abide,
O tread the city's streets again;
"Till sons of men shall learn Thy love,
And follow where Thy feet have trod;
Till glorious from Thy heaven above,
Shall come the City of our God."

MISSION STUDY CLASS.

The women of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference will have a day of mission study with the women of the Reidsville Church on Thursday, February 18th. The book to be studied is "The Challenge of Change," and Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Elon College, is the teacher. Each one is to take a sandwich lunch and the Reidsville women will furnish coffee. We had such a splendid day at Burlington last year that our women will be looking forward to another. We wish there could be representatives from each church in the Conference. Remember the date—February 18th, at 10:30 A. M.

A TORN LEAF.

A clergyman in England asked a dying Christian woman where she found the Saviour; and she gave him a piece of paper torn from an American journal containing part of one of C. H. Spurgeon's sermons. The scrap had been the wrapping of a package that came to her from Australia. The words of Spurgeon were read to her and were the means of leading her to Christ.

Commenting on this incident, a writer says: "Think of it; a sermon preached in England, printed in America, in some way coming to Australia, a part of it used as wrapping paper there, coming back to England and being the means of converting this woman."

What an encouragement there is in such an incident for those who preach the gospel by means of printer's ink! Tracts and religious papers have been wonderfully used of God in the salvation of souls.—Selected.

Through sorrows, heaviness and faintness of the heart ever so much increase; yet if thy faith increase also, it will bear thee up in the midst of them. I would fain have it go well with thee, and that thou mightst not want the holy Counselor and Advisor in any strait or difficulty which the wise and tender God orders to befall thee.—Isaac Pennington.

VISION OF YOUTH.

By FAY LE MEADOWS.

A Pageant Project.

Following is the outline for a pageant. I use the word "outline" because I believe that the most value will be received from it if the group works out additional "speeches" for the characters. While there is a certain amount of value to be gained from the memorizing of a set speech there is infinitely more to be gained when the "speech" has been written by the group presenting the pageant.

The Scene of the Pageant.

A platform built on three levels. In most churches the platform and choir loft can be used without extra stage building—as the scene is symbolic of mounting to a plane where the eyes of youth can behold the value of the past and the obligations to the future. One of the first things for the group to do is to plan a simply designed stage that will convey this idea to the audience.

As the pageant opens all lights in the auditorium are dimmed. A pale blue light (from sides or above) falls on the stage. From a distance there is heard the strains of the hymn, "Follow the Gleam." As the music dies away, two young people enter (a girl and a boy). This entrance is made slowly. The girl speaks.

Girl: "Did you think that the music came from this direction?"

Boy: "I am not quite sure—sometimes it seemed as though the music came from far away—at other times it seemed so close that I thought it was within me."

Girl: "Adventuring is such great fun! (She looks about her.) What a strange place! How dim the light! Are you afraid?"

Boy: "Afraid? No! Fear is such an ugly thing. I remember when I was a very small boy, how I used to be frightened in the dark and one night I told my mother of it and her answer has always helped me. 'Always remember, my son,' she said, 'that even when I am not with you, my love surrounds you.'"

Girl: "Surrounded by love! What a beautiful thought. (The lights become more intense—still a blue cast.) Look, there is more light. Truly, we are in a strange place. I feel as though we were on the edge of some great discovery! Oh, the glory of adventuring!"

Boy: "It is almost a holy feeling, isn't it? I wonder if such a feeling is akin to the true scientist as he works in the laboratory to discover new truth?"

Girl: "Or the naturalist as he sees a new creation or plant life come into being?"

Boy: "The minister, as some age-old bit of wisdom comes to him with the light of new interpretation for his day, his fellowmen! (During this last speech of "Boy," "Girl" has been closely observing the stage. She has discovered that there are two levels above the one on which they are standing.)

Girl: "Look, what a strange place this is. Like some magic hall. I begin to feel like Alice in Wonderland."

Boy: "You know, I have begun to believe that all the world is a Wonderland, in which new discoveries are to be made. What a splendid thing to be young—strong—free—adventurous—discoverers!"

Girl: "That's it—adventurers—discoverers. (Once again the music from a distance starts—the melody is the same as at the beginning—"Follow the Gleam." Boy and Girl listen intently, as the music is played. During this scene the light has grown stronger. Letters are discovered on the second stage level. They read: "The Place of the Vision of the Past." The letters are in gold. The Boy discovers the letters.)

Boy: "Look! The—place—of—the—vision—of—the—past! What can it mean?"

Girl: "Let us enter upon that plane and see. A true adventurer should have a glimpse into the past."

(Boy and Girl proceed to the second level of the platform. Just after they have reached their positions on this platform there is a chord struck from the organ, then the music of "Faith of Our Fathers" is heard. Boy and Girl stand at tense attention looking out above the audience. Their eyes become visionary and they recite to each other the scenes that they behold—only a few speeches are given. The group will work these out. Church histories will furnish much material for this. Local church history may be used if desired.)

Boy: "Look! An army with banners! The Crusaders."

Boy: "Translators of a Holy Word being burned at the stake, and yet their faces shine!"

Girl: "A young man pinning a thesis on the door of a church—The Reformation."

Boy: "Eleven men! Eleven men! With faces set toward the dawn! Courageous, brave and strong!"

Girl: "Three crosses on a hill! See—the two crosses fade—there is but one! A Cross! A Light!"

(Once again we hear music as the Boy and Girl stand with gazing eyes on an imaginary cross. The music is that of "I Gave My Life for Thee." As the strains of the music softly die away, the Girl turns to the Boy and speaks.)

Girl: "For us! All of this has been for us!

Boy: "Our heritage—our legacy—our challenge—our opportunity!"

(These words come slowly from the Boy, and with great force. For the first time he sees that all that has gone before is part of the great plan in which he is to have a part.)

Girl: "Yes! We are young(strong, brave, and all that has gone before has been a foundation upon which we are to build."

Boy: "We shall build on!

We shall build on!

On through the cynics' scorning,

On through the cowards' warning,

On through the chests' suborning—

We shall build on!"

(Again we hear a few bars of the song, "Follow the Gleam." As it is being played, the Girl discovers the words written on the third platform level—"The Place of the Vision of the Future.")

Girl: "The Place of the Vision of the Future!" Come! To behold the things that have been done, that is a privilege! To behold the things that are yet to be accomplished, that is both a privilege and a duty!"

(They mount to the third level of the platform. A Voice is heard—clear and distinct. The reader is not seen. Reader reads the poem, "Youth, O Youth, Can I Reach Thee?" After the reading of the poem there is a brief moment of silence as the Boy and Girl look with visionary eyes into the future.)

Poem:

"Youth, O Youth, can I reach you,
Can I speak and make you hear,
Can I open your eyes to see Me,
Can My presence draw you near?
Is there a prophet among you,
One with a heart to know?
I will flash My secrets on him,
He shall watch My glory grow,
For I, the God, the Father,
The Quest, the Final Goal,
Still search for a prophet among you,
To speak My word in his soul."

Boy: "I see misery alleviated, pain and anguish being conquered by love and service."

Girl: "I see fear and superstition giving way and making room for progress."

Boy: "I see the dawning of the day of brotherhood of man. The day when there shall be no more wars and peace shall reign."

Girl: "I see the coming of the Kingdom of God upon the earth and in the hearts of all mankind."

Boy: "I see the unfinished tasks calling us—wanting us—demanding us!"

(Other speeches may be added here if the group so decides.) Then, the Girl turns to the Boy, and speaking softly, says:

Girl: "I understand now—we of this generation—we who are young—we are the link between the past and the future—the link that must not fail."

Boy: "We must not fail."

Boy and Girl join hands and slowly descend to the first level of the platform. A few feet apart they kneel, facing each other.)

Girl: "We consecrate ourselves to the future."

Boy: "To the unfinished tasks."

Girl: "To the cause of Christ."

(Somewhere a voice is heard singing, "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," and the pageant ends.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

FEBRUARY 28, 1932.

WHAT CONTRIBUTIONS TO CIVILIZATION ARE MISSIONARIES MAKING?

Scripture: Acts 19:8-20.

There are at present in non-Christian lands 29,188 foreign missionaries and 151,735 native workers of the evangelical faith. The 36,246 churches have over three and a half million communicants. The glory of missionary history cannot be told in numbers, but they serve to give us some conception of the scope of the Christian enterprise.

Missions and Human Suffering.

The suffering in mission lands is overwhelming. Before the dawn of Christian missions practically nothing was done to relieve the afflicted, diseased bodies of men, women and children. Probably the crowning glory of the missionary enterprise is its ministry of healing.

Missions and Social Problems.

The spread of Western industrialism in foreign lands has created a multitude of new and acute social problems. Missionaries who are highly trained in the social sciences and problems of social adjustment are giving their energy to the solution of such problems as wages, working hours, living conditions, child labor, and the more subtle problems arising from the breakdown of the traditional family and village life.

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS.

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 28, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 11:32-54.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live."—John 11:25.

Introduction.

Man seeks to perpetuate and to heighten the values in life that seem most dear to himself. His aspiring self seeks to prolong the associations that are most cherished. His value judgment is constantly at work trying to evaluate the varying areas of human interest and desire. Many of the dearest values in life are clustered about the family circle. Close to this is that intimate friendship of a small circle of friends. The lesson for today illustrates both of these relationships.

The Bethany Home.

Just a few miles from Jerusalem, at Bethany, was a home where lived some very dear friends of Jesus. Two sisters, Mary and Martha, and a brother, Lazarus, are mentioned. There was a very real and worthwhile relation within this family. And then Jesus was a very close friend to the family, and seemed to have visited repeatedly with them. In this Bethany home we see a joyous friendship among its members, and a hospitality and friendship which was much appreciated by Jesus. Much as we enjoy the life of the family circle, with its friends, there are the inevitable separations that are necessitated by the course of life and death. The eleventh chapter of John is rich in its appreciation of the values man hopes are eternal.

Lord, If Thou Hadst Been Here.

When the events of life go against our hopes and desires we are quick to wish them differently. Illness invades the family circle. Friends are separated by death. This lesson illustrates some enduring truths by the account of Lazarus' death, and some incidents in connection with it. According to this story, Lazarus died. His sisters had sent for Jesus, but he did not return to their home until the fourth day after Lazarus' death. Mary and Martha believed that Jesus could have granted some healing to Lazarus had he only arrived before his death. But now their hearts were torn with the sorrow of their loss. They could scarcely enjoy Jesus' company because he had not come sooner. How like us were they! Lord, hadst thou been here."

Take Ye Away the Stone.

How often the demands of men are unreasonable! How often the commands of Jesus seem unreasonable! But Jesus was a very practical teacher. He called upon those present to help in accomplishing the wonder of the occasion. Christian faith is a cooperative faith. Busy helpers are more valuable than over-awed spectators. Jesus utilizes the efforts of others in accomplishing the work of his kingdom. People who are busy in a work of hope and faith are happier than those who sorrowfully sit down while others do the practical necessary tasks.

Father, I Thank Thee.

Jesus seemed to have unbroken spiritual contact with the Eternal. God was with him—a very part of his life's activity. In joy and in sorrow we can thank God. Joys should not be so great as to obscure our fellowship with God. Sorrows should not so overwhelm us that we forget that he is with us and hears us. "Father, I thank thee." Thanks to God, even in the gloom of acute sorrow, acts as a clarifying light to the one in sorrow.

Lazarus, Come Forth.

This incident shows God's power over death itself. The author seeks to show that God was with Jesus in enabling him to restore life to Lazarus after he had been dead. At the call of Jesus Lazarus came forth from the tomb. He who had been mourned as dead was restored to the family and to society. Family and friends could rejoice in the return to their group of one they loved and needed.

Suggestions.

The writer of the Fourth Gospel is the only Gospel writer who records this incident. The author has assembled incidents to prove "that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name." (John 20:31.) This gospel is the gospel of the Christ as experienced and felt in the lives of the most consecrated followers. It has served to interpret Jesus as the Christ of divine power in the inner life. Some Christians will appreciate the spiritual significance and interpretation of this lesson with little interest in the miracle element as regards Lazarus' body. Others will feel that the spiritual values do not hold unless the literal interpretation be accepted. All can agree that the lesson teaches the power of Christ to give eternal life as expressed in the Golden Text. Help us, O God, to realize the truth of immortality and to see in Jesus, the Way, the Truth and the Life.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

THE TWO BAPTISMS.

"I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he will baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with Fire."—Matthew 3:2.

Here are two baptizers, the greater seeking to be baptized by the lesser—Jesus and John. The text is a contrast between them. Aside from his divinity, Jesus is greater than John in the purity of character, in the power to transcend temporary things, in the dignity of his office which was the authority of both heaven and earth, and in his ministry. John's was to decrease and cease; that of Jesus was to increase and endure "unto the end of the world."

John represents the lesser Baptism—water. And his realization of his limitations, his humility as he stands before the Master, and his courage in confronting evil doers, is beautiful. It appears to be no trial to John to be lost in the light of Christ. To him the quickening of spiritual deadness and the salvation of the race from the moral corruption of his day was of more importance than that he should try to hold a position of prominence among the people. He knew that a great deal more was needed than he could give, and he signifies this by saying that his work goes no deeper than water, which only cleanses the outside, and that he gladly bows himself out to Him whose power would cleanse the inside—the Spirit in life.

How easy it is for us to forget this Spirit. We love position, honor and power. We are jealous and do not like to give away to others. We love the applause of men.

Learn a lesson from Jonathan and David. Jonathan was heir to the throne, but in recognition of David's superiority and out of his care for him he, in an humble and most natural way, gave it all up for David.

Prayer—"Blessed are the poor in spirit for they shall see God." Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE TWO BAPTISMS—Continued.

"Ye must be born again; except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the Kingdom of God."

These two baptisms run through Christ's ministry. When he explained regeneration to Nicodemus, he said that we must be washed inside and out—the whole man. He taught that moral reform is not sufficient, that the heart must be changed and made new. As he traversed the Galilean highways and the despised Roman provinces doing good, the same baptisms were manifest by precept and example. He turned to the sick and afflicted, healed their bodies and then he healed their souls, such as in saying, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." "Go in peace."

In Christ we have two baptisms: the one is the baptism by ourselves in which we clean up and make ready the vessel of our bodies for the indwelling of our Lord in life. The other is the baptism of the Holy Spirit in which the Lord does his part in coming in and abiding in us.

It is this baptism he spoke of as necessary when he accused the Pharisees of "making clean the outside of the cup," but within "they were full of extortion and excuses." Cleanse the inside first that the outside, by reason of inner purity, may be clean also.

Prayer—May God help us. Make us clean like Peter—"every whit." Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WORKING UP TO DATE.

"Christ in you the hope of glory."—Col. 1:27.

It is a mighty good thing to be able to keep within our own divine appointment and ability, and let others do more than we if they can. It is in this way that God develops his purposes for mankind. That is true humility.

For example, every teacher says, "I baptize you with letters, grammars, arithmetics, knowledge. However important this is, it is not enough. In fact this does very little for you. There is something in you which is the true intellectual fire and makes you alive in your application of these things to life. It is the literary instinct. There is a spirit that penetrates through these elementary things into the sanctuary of spiritual meanings. This spirit in you develops only what I have begun."

That spirit of the individual corresponds and may we not say symbolizes the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Christ's baptism of the inner man subordinates self to all righteousness. It means having the cause of good at heart; it means rejoicing with others who are able to promote that good, otherwise we love ourselves more than the good of the cause; it means seeing with pleasure the success of righteousness in others, otherwise we prize most our own glory. To be baptized with the Holy Spirit means to have the simplicity of Christ in entire forgetfulness of ourselves in our devotion to God and his goodness. Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed?"

Prayer—Say the Lord's Prayer. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A CONSUMING FLAME.

"Our God is a consuming Fire."—Heb. 12:29.

When John baptized Jesus, he said, "He that cometh after me . . . shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

There is implied here the influence which the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon one's inner life sheds upon its surroundings. It is manifest in power exerted, in the inspiration manifested, in the effect it has on others—influences which do not belong to the common sphere of life wherein the resources of mere man lie, but in the Divine, impellings that transform surroundings to that which is Divine.

Our text speaks of the divine nature as it flames against sin to consume it. It is that divine nature which is imparted to us by the Holy Spirit. It is the fire of God's love. It is the outpouring of the Spirit through us which Paul speaks of in Romans 5:5 as shedding abroad His love in the hearts of men.

This is not another baptism, but it is the outflow of the gift of the Spirit, called by Charles Wesley "the flame of sacred love."

We talk about the "warmth of affection," "the blaze of enthusiasm," "the fire of emotion"; why not talk about the "fire of God's love"? Baptized Christians are to be set on fire of God. Somebody has said, "The Spirit's baptism of fire is God's baptism of love."

Prayer—Dear Lord, our Father, be very near to us today. We believe. Help Thou, our unbelief. May that belief grow into a consuming flame of love for souls. Amen.

FRIDAY.

REFINING TRUE CHARACTER.

"I will turn my hand upon thee and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy sin."—Isa. 1:25.

Fires, floods, earthquakes, famines, pestilence, wars, economic depressions, accomplish in humanity true character—that which nothing else can do. In them all, evil genius and corruption give place to the sweet and friendly genius of friendship, health, redeeming agencies, and the Voice of God.

Through the trials of human life, sore temptations, bitterness of disappointment, the shattering of vain ideals, the anguish of pain and suffering, we are sobered and deepened, and come to find the living God, instructing, guiding, warning, rebuking, judging, haunting, condemning, trying our souls, whereby the evil is done away with and the good is refined.

The great glory of the Gospel is to accomplish this. It may be as slow as the picking of the rocks from the bosom of the earth that yields its gold, but when it is pitched into the furnace, the gold is poured out.

So is the way of man purged of his weakness, his meanness, his passions, his lusts, and his sins.

Prayer.—O God, cleanse thou us from all our faults; fire us until we shall be clean. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOLD OR STUBBLE.

"Every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."—I. Cor. 3:13.

Fire will destroy everything that is not sterling metal. You and I have the alternative, to be made genuine characters in Christ or to meet the flame of his judgment in eternity. The Spirit of God must refine and sanctify or else it will destroy; and if it is not refined here, there is no escaping it there. We are to become pure gold or worthless as stubble.

It is useless to argue that we are different, that our make-up makes it impossible. Both the sinner and the saint issue from the same material, and the outcome is dependent upon the Divine fire within us, to make or destroy. Our wills must be submitted to the action of the grace of God. It is entirely possible to everyone, for that love and grace which created us has no pleasure in our ruin, and if anyone comes to suffer hell-fire, it is because that one has refused to meet God and receive that power which cleanses.

Prayer.—Our Father, we humbly look up to thee for thy cleansing power, just for today, and if for today, then we know it will be just for another day, and another, on unto the end. God grant it. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

KEEP GOING.

"Contend earnestly for the faith."—Jude 1:4.

Ty Cobb, the great baseball player, was watching Bobby Jones, the great golfer. There was much congestion, and Jones had to wait twenty minutes for the course to clear. Being tired, he lay on the grass until he could play again. Before the twenty minutes' wait, Jones seemed certain to make a new record for the course; but after the pause he made one error after another and completely ruined his score. Cobb was disgusted. "Did you see what that boy did?" he asked. "He lay on the grass right when he was hot and keyed up. How can a man expect to

THE EYES OF THE HEART.

By W. EVERETT HENRY, D. D.

TEXT.—"Having the eyes of your heart enlightened, that ye may know."—Ephesians 1:18.

If one were to risk a guess as to what writings of Paul, Peter had in mind when he declared that "beloved brother" had written "some things hard to be understood," Ephesians would certainly be among the first to be mentioned. It may well be doubted, indeed, if there is anywhere a profounder human document. It explores such surpassing spiritual heights and depths, it reaches forth so far into the infinite extension of eternal things that it leaves one dizzy with amazement.

In one of the great sections of this letter (1:15-23) Paul speaks of "the eyes of the heart," and makes clear things concerning them.

The eyes of the heart, the capacities by which man is able to grasp spiritual truth, are possessed by every man. It is not so stated in words, yet the inference is unavoidable from what is said. Paul knew this to be true from the experiences of life as well as through revelation. He lived in an enlightened age. The peoples of Europe, Asia and Africa traveled widely and mingled freely. The cities in which he worked were in many respects as cosmopolitan as any cities of today. He had seen representatives of many races come into the kingdom of God and develop in the graces of Christian living. And every conversion, every growth in grace, was an added evidence that every man possessed the eyes of the heart.

What Paul saw in a really big way in his day, we are seeing on a still larger scale these days. Scarcely a nation in the world remains untouched by the gospel today, and wherever the gospel has been preached men have accepted it and have shown unmistakable, and often astonishing, spiritual development. The Bible declares and history proves that whosoever will may take of the water of life freely. Every normal man possesses the eyes of the heart, the capacities with which to lay hold on spiritual things.

But the eyes of the heart need enlightening—an enlightenment which comes from God. Human knowledge alone will not suffice. The human intellect is great, but not great enough to meet the demands here. In the realm of the spirit man must still walk by faith and not by sight. The tendency of the age is to depend exclusively on the intellect, and the resultant loss is great. Said a wag, concerning modern psychology: "First psychology lost its soul, then it lost its mind, then it lost consciousness; it still has behavior of a kind." The same losing process is only a little less evident in the other sciences, as frequently presented. The eyes of the heart were fashioned to see God, and no vision of God is shaped by the intellect alone. There are areas of sensitiveness in the human soul which lie beyond the boundaries of mere intellect. It is only as these also are allowed to function that the needed enlightenment of the eyes of the heart can come. There is great need today.

"That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before,
But vaster."

Paul declares also that the eyes of the heart thus enlightened bring us real knowledge—"that ye may know." At first glance there seems to be a vast difference between the testimony of the eyes of the body and that of the eyes of the heart. We seem to feel that more certainty attaches to the former than to the latter. We trust the testimony of the eyes of the body because we believe that they tell us the truth about things as they are. Perhaps we fail to remember that while we believe this, we can not possibly prove it. To quote a prominent scientist: "The fundamental assumptions of science are: first, that human senses report accurately the characteristics of the external world and thus enable us to interpret aright the physical universe in which we dwell; second, that there is uniformity of action in nature, so that effects always follow causes in accordance with laws which are universal in their application. Neither of these assumptions can be proved by any reasoning process that the logician has been able to discover." That is, we are compelled to make essentially the same assumption in dealing with the material world as in dealing with the spiritual. If our eyes are to be trusted in one region they are in the other also, and just as fully. Who of us, looking at his mother, is any more certain that he sees her than that he loves her? Or any more certain that he loves her than that she loves him? The natural timidity of the human soul in spiritual adventure plus the materialistic tendencies of these days make it imperative that we firmly insist that the eyes of the heart bring us knowledge as real and as trustworthy as any other human faculty.

All these things, however, important as they are, immediately become secondary in interest as we pass to Paul's outline of the region which the eyes of the heart are to explore. Like all Gaul—and most sermons—it is divided into three parts: "the hope of his calling," "the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints," and "the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe." Through each of these vast areas the eyes of the heart are to search for the riches of the soul.

Biblical and Christian history have made us certain of much that is included in "the hope of his calling," but doubtless not all. We know that the call of God is for every man a call to development. We enter the kingdom a babe, we are to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ until we attain to the stature of a "full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." As the body grows under right conditions, so should the soul grow. As the body approaches perfection of form and vigor, so should the soul. As there is infinite variety in bodily development, so will there be in soul development. Each in his own divinely appointed way is to come to Christ-likeness, not simply to likeness to the Christ of Galilee and Judea, wonderful as He is in His early life, but likeness to Him as He sits enthroned with the Father. God's call is also to achievement. We are created in Christ Jesus for good works, and the Master declared that the works of His followers were to be greater than He had performed. Whoever heeds the call of God thereby enters into the hope of such development and achievement as will also inevitably bring profound and eternal satisfaction of soul.

"The glory of his inheritance in the saints"—the glory of God which in the sphere of his followers "is peculiarly found, felt, and realized"—is also open to the eyes of the heart. Paul speaks of certain brethren as "the glory of Christ." In the saints of yesterday and today we may see God's glory. In them sin is being conquered, weakness is being changed into strength, base-

And still more, the eyes of the heart are to explore "the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe," as evidenced in the resurrection of our Lord. Beyond question Paul inness into holiness, unworthiness into the worthiness of Christ. How marvelous both the transforming process and the results attained in this

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage had a very welcome visitor last week, in the person of Mr. Edwin Gould of the Edwin Gould Foundation, of New York. He spent one afternoon with us and looked over our entire plant over. He is very much interested in orphaned and dependent children. He is the man who recently gave us sixty beds, mattresses and pillows. He said he would give us "A" grade on our buildings, and "A" grade on our management. We appreciated this compliment coming from a man who has visited orphanages all over the United States. He had a good time with the children, and was so friendly they all fell in love with him, and quite a number took him by the hand and thanked him for the nice comfortable beds he recently sent them. He told them he was the "Bed Man." He asked the children a number of questions, one of which was really amusing. He asked a bunch of the little girls what were the little white things in their heads that bite? They all thought for some time, but could not answer the question. In their minds they could not remember seeing any that were white. So he told them it was their pretty white teeth. They had a good laugh and enjoyed the joke.

He said he wanted each building to have a songbird and gold-fish to add a little more to our homelike buildings. He instructed the writer to purchase the birds, cages, stands and a supply of food, also gold-fish and all that go with them to make them complete, and to mail the bill to him. We now have song-birds and gold-fish in all our buildings, and the children are happy.

Mr. Gould was so kind and lovable that we all fell very much in love with him, and trust that he will visit us again.

The little dresses? We need them for spring wear. The good women got so much joy out of making and sending them that we just cannot deny them the real pleasure.

We want fifty thousand Octagon Soap wrappers with which to buy a Frigidaire for our dairy house. If you have some on hand, won't you mail them to us? Ask the children in the Sunday Schools to bring them, and if the children get interested, we will get them all right. Who will send us some?

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches x 3/4 inch
The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.
The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest-Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.
It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its unique quality and unusual tensile strength.
One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.
The size, 2 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, Editor.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

ELIOT OF MASSACHUSETTS, by David C. Chamberlin. Independent Press. 25c.

The apostle to the Indians and father of modern missions, is in this booklet faithfully portrayed. Incidentally, some sidelights are thrown on the early history of Congregationalism in New England.

CHILD PSYCHOLOGY AND RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by Dorothy F. Wilson. Student Christian Movement Press. $1.00.

A remarkably sane statement of the bearing of psychology in the religious education of children up to the twelfth year. The author inclines to value "recapitulation" too highly, and gives too much attention to instincts. However, parents and teachers of children, whether in public or church schools, will find this a very suggestive and dependable volume.

THE DAY OF WORSHIP, by W. W. Davis, Editor. The Macmillan Co. 164 pp. $1.00.

The use of the Sabbath as a day of worship—the only day for a vast number of busy people—is set forth in this volume by sixteen nationally-known writers. It is good to see an outstanding business man, Mr. Roger W. Babson, contributing a chapter. He writes with his characteristic straightforwardness on "The Day and Business." Questions at the end of the several chapters serve to produce thought and to seal impressions.

YOUTH ON THE MARCH, by Clifton D. Gray. Richard R. Smith. 220 pp. $2.00.

The president of Bates College collects in this volume nineteen addresses to his students, given either as Baccalaureate sermons at Commencement, or as open addresses at the first Chapel services of the year. It is difficult to characterize such a book as this, except to my thought it is suggestive as to what young people in college are interested in and that a strong ethical and religious note is sounded throughout.

A COURSE OF RELIGIOUS TEACHING, by G. B. Ayre. Student Christian Movement Press. 75c.

A text-book in the Christian religion in the form of a syllabus for teachers in senior high schools of England. The pupils have the Bible and use it as the basic text. The viewpoint of modern scholarship is assumed throughout. Will students learn the Christian religion, or learn about it from such a course? And which is the more desirable? These questions the reader will find himself asking as he examines the book.

OPEN DOORS IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by John W. Suter, Jr. Richard R. Smith. 128 pp. $1.25.

Dr. Suter is the general secretary of the Department of Religious Education of the Episcopal Church. His book seeks to drive home the challenging opportunity of each local worker in religious education. Every such worker he regards as an open door for securing inspiration as well as information to live the Christian life. Religious education is lost unless it grounds itself in ethical principles and leads to a sound life philosophy. Dr. Suter recognizes the place for techniques in teaching, but they are of secondary importance in achieving the real good of religious education, truly Christian character.

life! How beyond our imagination to conceive the results hereafter!

tended a climax. If he were living today, and were familiar with all our knowledge of the greatness of the material universe, its millions of suns scattered through space whose greatness can be suggested to us only by millions of light years, would he change what he wrote nineteen hundred years ago, and speak of creation rather than the resurrection? Would we not assuredly hear him meeting any such suggestion with a "God forbid"? Never can "things" speak of God's power as personality. No such revelation can be given through the material as comes through the spiritual. In the resurrection of our Lord the eyes of the heart see the greatest event in the history of the ages thus far, the one divine act in which lies revealed to all believers "the exceeding greatness" of God's power to do for us all and always "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

How real, how great, how glorious that which the eyes of the heart may cause us to know! How important and appealing the work of the church, the one organization on earth whose sole business is to develop these spiritual powers and press upon the attention of the world their testimony! —Christian Herald.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

OBITUARIES.

DORROUGH.

James Franklin Dorrough was born June 27, 1871, and died January 23, 1932, at the age of 60 years, 6 months, and 26 days. Bro. Dorrough had at one time been a member of the East Liberty Christian Church, but had drifted away. It was my privilege to visit him several times in the hospital prior to his death, and help him get back to the Lord again. While he did not expect to die so soon, he expressed himself as fully ready to meet the Lord any time. He is survived by his widow and five children. Funeral services were held January 25, 1932, at Grove Hill U. B. Church, near his home.

A. W. ANDES.

JENKINS.

Mrs. Mattie Bell Jenkins was born June 9, 1878, and died January 28, 1932, aged 53 years, 7 months, and 19 days. Sister Jenkins was a devout Christian woman, a faithful member of Leaksville Christian Church, and highly esteemed by all who knew her. It was a benediction to visit her during her recent years of illness. She is survived by one son, and three daughters. Funeral services were held at Leaksville in the presence of a large concourse of friends, January 30, 1932, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. John Jenkins of the Old School Baptist Church.

A. W. ANDES.

WAMPLER.

Mrs. Ida E. Wampler, wife of W. C. Wampler, was born July 28, 1874. Sister Wampler was a member of Antioch Christian Church from childhood, lived an exemplary Christian life, and passed to her reward January 24, 1932, at the age of 57 years, 5 months, and 26 days. She was a good neighbor, and a devoted wife and mother. Apparently one of her greatest concerns was for the moral and spiritual welfare of her children. Truly is a devoted Christian mother a blessing

CONGREGATIONALISTS BACK SEABURY COMMITTEE.—

At the annual dinner of the New York City Congregational Church Association, a resolution commending the work of the Seabury Investigating Committee and condemning conditions which it has exposed, was presented by the Rev. Edward W. Cross, pastor of the Union Church, Richmond. This was adopted with only two or three dissenting votes. The Congregationalists have always been ready to stand by the right and support all forward movements for human well-being and now that the Congregationalists and Christians have united they will be doubly active in every good work.

EINSTEIN GUEST OF WHITTIER.—

Alfred Einstein and his wife were guests at a community-wide disarmament meeting held in Whittier, Calif., January 20th, under the auspices of the local council of churches. Guy E. Talbot, western representative of the National Council for the Prevention of War, presented a picture of the setting of the Geneva Conference, and Dr. Einstein made an address in which he testified that it is his profound conviction that the only hope for western civilization is the disarmament of the nations both mentally and physically. There are multitudes of people in America who will endorse the relativity of this statement of this distinguished scientist.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.—

The Christian Endeavor celebrated its fifty-first anniversary on February 18th, throughout the world. This is one of the greatest Christian organizations for young people that has even been formed since the founding of the Church by Jesus Christ. It has been the training school for millions of young people in Christian service in all denominations and in all countries. It is inter-denominational, international, and inter-racial. It creates Christian fellowship, Christian service, and Christian leadership. It was organized by Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., of the Congregationalist Church, which is now united with the Congregational-Christian Churches of America.

METHODIST YEARBOOK SHOWS DROP.—

A decrease of 3.55 per cent in funds raised during 1931 for ministerial support by churches of the Methodist Episcopal denomination is revealed by the annual statistical reports published in the 1932 Yearbook. The total raised for ministerial support last year was $30,797,116, against $31,932,005 for 1930. The grand total of all church expenditures for 1931, including conference expenses and benevolence, was $81,149,884, or a decrease of 10 per cent from the 1930 total of $90,782,873. A drop of 16.5 per cent is indicated in expenditures by local churches for building construction and repairs, reduction of church debts, etc. We have not received a copy of the Congregational-Christian Yearbook, and cannot give comparative figures on these questions for our church.

WORLD-FAMOUS MUSICIAN.—

Dr. Charles Heinroth, organist extraordinary for 25 years, has left Philadelphia, and has taken the Chair of Music in the College of the City of New York. For 25 years he has been the organist at Carnegie Hall. Twice each week he has given free organ recitals, and 2,000,000 people have attended these concerts. Also, he has been organist and choir director at the Third Presbyterian Church on Fifth Avenue. His successor has not been announced. Dr. Heinroth was greatly beloved and admired. He was of German extraction, patient, hard-working, modest, gracious and devoted to his art. Philadelphia will greatly and deeply regret his leaving, but New York and the College of the City of New York, will be greatly rejoiced by his service in the great metropolis.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN LEADERS.—

In the first report of an extensive study of church attendance, a commission of the Congregational-Christian Churches, headed by Roger Babson, announces that a survey indicated that, while rural churches attract every Sunday 71 per cent of their membership, city churches draw 30 per cent. This will be a good norm by which both rural and city churches in our denomination may check up their church attendance and see whether they are measuring up to the average on the whole church of which they are a part. Pastors and church members should check up their individual churches and see whether each individual church of which they are members are reaching this standard. 71 per cent of the membership for rural churches, and 30 per cent of the membership for city churches.

AN APPRECIATION.—

The undertaking to raise means for the emergency fund of our college came at a time when it seemed humanly impossible to accomplish much in financial support, but many of our people responded as faithfully as they could to help in this time of need. While the amount raised in the campaign failed to reach what we really needed and what we reasonably hoped to obtain, yet we rejoice to see such a fine spirit of cooperation and loyalty for the college. There can be no doubt in the minds of any one who was in close touch with the returns from the field that the friends of the college are true and loyal and are increasing as they are made to feel the urgent need that exists. The whole church should express its appreciation for the fine spirit, loyal devotion and liberal support given by the many contributing to this call.

THE TRUSTEES HOLD MEETING.—

The Trustees of Elon College held their regular meeting at the college this week for the purpose of planning for the New Year. One of their problems was to reduce the expenses of the college wherever possible without reducing the efficiency of the service rendered the church. The original purpose of the founders of the college was to provide educational means for the preparation of the young people of the church for Christian leadership, and this question engaged the attention of the Board of Trustees in this meeting. There are plenty of institutions, both State and denominational, to provide for all the secular academic education that the constituency of our church needs, if that is all, but that is not all. We need a distinctive type of educational service at our college that the other institutions cannot give, and the church is calling for such special advantages to be added to all other advantages given at our college.

GLENN FRANK SAYS THE CHURCH A VITAL FACTOR.—

In his book, "Thunder and Dawn," to be published next month, Dr. Glenn Frank holds that the church will play an important part in the renaissance which, evolving from the present world depression, will carry civilization to new heights of moral and material well-being. "If contemporary statesmanship, official and unofficial, is to lead the western civilization out of its confusion," he says, "it must inspire a new reformation of the clogged conduits of religious institutionalism which are now checking the flow of spiritual initiative; the lighting of a bonfire of theological vanities; a resurgence of religious vitality that shall need no credentials save its own inherent effectiveness . . . that will assuage the hungers of the age grown lean on the alternate diets of sentimental metaphysics and sterile negations. Religion must be rescued from its aloof pietism and related to the human perplexities and hungers of a work-a-day world." The age in which we live, the time of depression through which we are passing, will not be satisfied when it asks for bread if the church gives it a stone. The teachers of the church must not expect to satisfy the needs of the people by dishing out the dry bones of theological discussion, when there is a far cry for spiritual food. The modernist who denies the miraculous and spiritual teachings of the Scriptures will not satisfy a spiritually hungry world.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The question has been asked us several times, "Where is the Convention to be held this year?" Will someone who can, please answer this query?

We regret to learn that Rev. J. Lee Johnson has been compelled to temporarily give up his work and to go south to recuperate. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Rev. E. B. White addressed the Woman's Club at Windsor, Va., on February 22nd. The occasion was the opening up of a flower plot in the center of the town in honor of the "Father of his Country."

Dr. W. A. Harper, who is now at Vanderbilt University, in the department of Religious Education, has suffered the loss of his library in a fire which occurred there. This would be a loss to anyone, but we know that it is a most severe one to Dr. Harper, and we extend him our deepest regrets.

"The United States enters the first world conference on the limitation and reduction of armaments with the determination to leave nothing undone to achieve substantial progress." This was the opening sentence by Mr. Hugh S. Gibson, head of the delegation from the United States. If such a spirit pervades the conference, much good is sure to result.

THE CHRISTIAN ANNUAL, official handbook of the Southern Christian Convention, has come from the press. The statistics show that there has been quite a dropping off in the financial support by the local churches. However, there is shown by the reports of most of the conferences a determined effort to carry on in spite of financial worries. This spirit will win through every time.

Three great officers sat together in council, and on being asked their opinion as to how they hoped to conquer the world, one said, "By increasing the contents of our war-chests;" the other said, "By improving our soldiery;" but the third who was Napoleon, said, "Give me the children, and I will conquer the world." If the world is to be Christianized—if our own country is to remain Christian—we must look to the training of our youth.

Dr. L. E. Smith spent the week end in Eastern Virginia, where he preached three times Sunday. The evening sermon was at Franklin, and he left early the next morning for Elon to attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Smith is doing the work of four men, and everything that can be done to lighten his load, should be done. He is also expected to speak at the Eastern Virginia Elon Alumni Banquet to be held in Suffolk Friday night at 6 o'clock.

CHURCH RESUSCITATION.

Since in almost any kind of development many measures which are valued and vital cannot be put successfully into operation until certain fundamental principles have been sufficiently promoted, it seems that in the church all would see the importance of bringing into active use that which most securely ballasts the whole program of Christian service and church solidarity, viz.: some well-tested plan of individual paying and giving. Not that by such observance any might hope to perform a full stewardship, but that, today, finding the church as it is, obedience to the divine law of individual paying and giving is the one direct way to the church's rescue from its double impoverishment. Without that rescue and a measure of rehabilitation there can be no chance for a deepening, or even a sustained, spirituality; with financial restoration sincerely attempted, there is divine promise that hand-in-hand with the there would emerge a replenished, revived, effectual church.

Notwithstanding every person is entitled to the privilege of conscience in what he believes to be God's law and God's will, some measure of imposed financial responsibility for every church member is a well-recognized scriptural verity, the extent of the responsibility being a matter subject to personal interpretation of what the scriptures teach. The amount of required obligation determined and paid, beyond that a Christian, if possessing that which is denoted as "the greatest of these," out of such love, also will want to give in order to make that love universal. God asks only a portion of our first, our best. Whether a penny or a dollar, or whatever between or above, an envelope from every member, every week, with some amount in each side, is not an impossible goal for any church. Practical employment of plans to make such goal effective is the most essential step that awaits many churches. The ideal attainment is every-member weekly offerings duly enclosed and sealed, the envelopes to be deposited with the respective church, if not every Sabbath, as often and as promptly as circumstances will permit.

MRS. J. J. L.

A CORRECTION.

The Elon College Alumni Banquet of Eastern Virginia Alumni, will be held in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church, as stated in last week's issue of "The Sun." The time of the meeting will, however, be SIX O'CLOCK. Please bear this in mind. It is hoped that a large attendance of Alumni will be present.

FROM MISS TRUE.

I happen to be just now in South Byfield, very near the old Emerson Academy where Mary Lyon, founder of Mt. Holyoke College received her greatest inspiration to devote her life to others.

In view of the great sacrifices our people are now making for Elon College, I thought a few of her experiences might encourage us.

She was born February 28, 1797, in Western Massachusetts. Her father died when she was six years old. Her first memory is that event and the neighbors whispering, "We have lost a friend; the peacemaker is gone." There were seven children: one boy and six girls. Mary Lyon spun wool from their own sheep into thread, wove cloth, took it to the mill to be dressed, then made her own dress from it. She was too far from school to go regularly, going a term here and there, living with relatives and working for her board.

She remembers when Foreign Missions was spoken of in her home as one of the marvelous things of the age. The Haystack Prayer Meeting, where first American youth decided to give their lives for the lands beyond, was near her home and in her early life time.

She did not learn to play, but she learned to the thorough and to think on great themes. "Beliefs were to those men and women what homes and lands, stocks and bonds were to their descendants. By them they swung heaven close to earth. Ideals were their only luxury. Duty done for love, grew lovely."

I think the quotation applies to the founders of Elon College and this, "Want walking gravely, smiled at her. Generosity grew up beside her," will apply to some who are yet with us. When Mary kept house for her brother and kept the wages for a fund to help her go away to school, since she had soon learned all the nearby schools could teach, she received one dollar a week.

Later she taught, receiving 75c a week and her board. When she attended the Academy, two coverlets spun, dyed and woven by herself, paid for her board.

At South Byfield she received inspiration and the conviction that learning must serve others.

A large three-story white square house stands, still owned by Mrs. Hamlin, a millionaire. One stone post at the entrance says: "Seminary, 1807," and the other: "St. Saviour, 1907." The building is said to have been the Girls' Academy, which then taught more advanced studies than any other school for girls of the period.

When, after successfully teaching for years, the need of a permanent school of high grade and moderate costs for girls was the deep conviction of a few women educators, it was Mary Lyon who made that dream a reality. When the appointed agents failed to gain subscriptions, she took the field herself with a green velvet money bag, and talked to every one in the stage-coaches by the wayside everywhere.

A time of business depression, when there was practically no money, came on. Her campaign "would not wait on time or opportunity."

$27,000 was finally subscribed by 1,800 people in 91 towns. The largest gifts were two of $1,000 each, the smallest three of 6 cents each. Many were 50c or $1.00 or $2.00 contributions.

One earnest and capable agent worked three months without collecting a cent, because of the hard times.

It may be we have forgotten the cost of some of our privileges. It is Mt. Holyoke's president who is representing us at Geneva.

Something of the religious earnestness of the founder is still there. "Marion never sees a Sunday newspaper," my cousin said, in trying to tell of the favorable influences for character building there.

May Elon workers be as successful as Mary Lyon was.

OBSERVANCE OF A HOLY SEASON.

The seasons of the sacred calendar are too important to be neglected. Great spiritual benefit is to be derived from their faithful observance. No one, for instance, can be unaffected by faithfully keeping the days of the Lenten time. These days gather up the fullness of the ministry of Christ in such forcefulness as to impress most deeply the mind which meditates upon their meaning. They embrace the last words and acts of the Master as he approached the cross. By a devout attitude one participates with the disciples in their solicitude and their yearnings. The influence of holy associations elevates the soul.

A feeling of penitence should pervade us during these forty days. We are reminded that Christ was on his way to Calvary to die for our sins, and this thought should bring us to repentance. Surely we shall desire to make our lives more holy. Shall we not, therefore, rejoice to set ourselves apart unto the Lord and to take upon ourselves a measure of his sacrifice? By communing with him through the Lenten season we shall become the richer in heavenly virtues.

God worketh in you, therefore you can work; otherwise it would be impossible. God worketh in you, therefore you must work; otherwise God will cease from working.—Wesley.

HURRAH FOR MACEDONIA! The very first church to send in its per capita tax for 1932. Now is the time to do it. And once more—Hurrah for New Trinity, the first church to send in a payment on her apportionment for 1932. That is the way to be happy at our annual meeting next October. Both these churches have Rev. Theodore L. Leverett for pastor. Who is next?

THOSE ANNUAL REPORTS are nearly all in. Only one Congregational Church of Georgia failed to send in a report to date, February 16th, while five Christian Churches of Georgia are yet to be heard from. This is a much better record than was made last year. Of course, this is the first time the Christian Churches have been asked to make these reports, so there is some reasonable excuse for them.

WHITEHALL at WAYCROSS, United Community Church, has been showing unusual and very satisfying activity since November 1st, when Rev. Alan Jones became its pastor. The last forward movement was a great revival meeting conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. G. N. Smith and Mr. Lee Sweet. During the first ten days thirty new members were received on confession of faith and one by letter. The spirit of the people insisted that the meetings be continued. It is a fine work for these people from which much may be expected during the coming years. Another fine feature of this active life was the large delegation sent to the last Young Peoples' Rally held at Enigma Church, January 31st—twenty in all. Union Hill Church, not to be outdone by her sister church, also sent twenty delegates. From all reports this was an unusually fine conference or rally. High praise is being given to the entertaining church, Enigma, of which Rev. W. C. Carpenter is the pastor.

SPIES GAINING GROUND. Under the leadership of Rev. Samuel M. Penn, assisted by Miss Gertrude Bryant, superintendent of the Sunday School, Providence Chapel, at Spies, N. C., is manifesting a fine spirit and a progressive desire to become stronger and stronger in its efforts toward ministering to the community. These people are sharing heartily with the spirit and work of Brown's Chapel, less than a mile away, a Christian Church, of which Rev. Mr. Brady is pastor. Mr. Penn preaches the first Sunday in Providence Chapel when the Brown's Chapel folks come to worship there. The second Sunday everybody goes to worship at Brown's Chapel, where Mr. Brady preaches. The pastor-at-large dropped in on these fine people Sunday, February 14th, and found a splendid group of earnest people at Providence Chapel. At the close of the Sunday School the whole crowd went to Brown's Chapel where he complied with the urgent request of the pastor to preach. The church was well filled and evidences of a happy, cooperative community were manifest. And in passing, one cannot repress the urge to say that it is in just this kind of fine fellowship between Congregational and Christian churches whose parishes are practically the same, which leads to mutual understanding and often to organic union to the advantage of both. That's another evidence of why "They were called Christian." After all, civilization is the art of Christians living together well.

CONSIDER ESTABLISHING A CHURCH AT WINSTON-SALEM.

Winston-Salem, N. C., has for several months been considering the establishing of a United Christian Church in one of its newer developments. The work has been sponsored and encouraged by Congregational Extension Boards and the officers of the Southeast Convention. The whole movement was heartily endorsed by the ministerial association at its meeting Monday, February 15th, in the following:

On motion of Dr. C. H. Rowland, of Greensboro, which was seconded by Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, the Piedmont Congregational-Christian Ministers' Association, in session at Burlington, on Monday, February 15th, unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

We all realize that for many years we have talked much about the losses which have come to our Christian Church because we have had no church in Winston-Salem, one of the leading cities in North Carolina and the South. Evidences seem to point out the fact that had we started a church in that thriving city even 25 years ago, doubtless it would have been one of our strongest churches today. But because we have failed to provide a church home in that city our surrounding churches have experienced a constant drain of members. Large numbers of Christian Church people have moved into that city and there being no church home of our order for them, many of them have been lost to the Christian Church.

We are informed that Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, has had it in his heart for many years to meet a growing need for a church and to this end, through Dr. W. C. Wicker in 1930, made a survey of this city with the result that over fifty people were found who were either members at present or former members of Christian Churches. These desired very much to have a Christian Church home, and in following up that survey Rev. M. J. Sweet and Rev. Wm. T. Scott, pastor of the Congregational-Christian Church of Salisbury, found a larger number. This led to a rally of Christian Church members and friends on Sunday night, September 13, 1931, at which time Dr. Atkinson and Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Secretary of the Eastern Division of Congregational Churches, met a group of about 90 people at the Winston-Salem Y. W. C. A. Since that time, Rev. Wm. T. Scott has been preaching to an interested group at the Y. W. C. A. each Sunday night.

We are further informed that the time seems to have come when a fine opportunity to start a work in Winston-Salem presents itself, through the cooperation of the Southern Christian Convention, the Congregational Extension Boards, and the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. Knowing these facts and realizing the necessity of cooperation and liberal support of the Christian and Congregational ministers and churches in North Carolina, therefore,

Be it Resolved: That the Piedmont Congregational-Christian Ministers' Association heartily endorse the actions already taken by the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, the Congregational Extension Boards, and the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, to enter into the development and organization of a new work at Winston-Salem, N. C., at once under the direction of Rev. Wm. T. Scott, and that it is the sense of the ministers of this Association that the Christian Missionary Association of North Carolina and Virginia Conference should proceed at once to raise and appropriate $400.00, its necessary part of the budget to finance the work for the first year, and to this end the ministers of this Association will pledge their support.

EXTENSION BOARDS SHOW GAINS.

A large gain in the work of the National Congregational and Christian Church Extension Boards during the decade since 1921 in spite of the decline on account of the depression last year was reported today at a luncheon at the George Washington Hotel, Lexington Avenue and 23rd Street, in honor of the tenth anniversary of the Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, D. D., as General Secretary.

The luncheon was given by the Administrative Committee of the Extension Boards, the Rev. George W. C. Hill, D. D., of New Britain, Conn., chairman, presiding. The receipts of the last fiscal year, Dr. Hill stated, were $1,191,640, a gain of $354,656 over ten years ago. The endowment of the Boards during the decade has nearly tripled, increasing from $1,622,562 to $4,749,419.

The proportion of the costs for administration and promotion to the total expenses of the Boards was reduced during the ten years from 15 to 12.7 per cent. Appropriations to missionary pastors were increased 21 per cent and a pension system for all employees of the boards, ordained and unordained, has been put into operation.

New members received by mission churches during the decade were 34,053. The number of states depending upon the national extension boards for the maintenance of their mission churches has been reduced by three, leaving as national missionary territory twenty-one states in which are 614 mission churches in addition to the self-supporting churches. In 158 of these mission churches foreign languages are used, including Albanian, Armenian, Assyrian, Bulgarian, Chinese, Czech and down the alphabet to Spanish, Swedish, Syrian, Turkish and Welsh.

Dr. Halliday is a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and was pastor of the Ocean Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., for eight years previous to his election to his present position. Since 1930, he has been vice-president and chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Home Missions Council, the cooperative organization of the home mission boards of twenty-seven denominations in the United States and Canada.

His early schooling was obtained on the Indian reservation of L'Anse, Mich., with Indian boys as his schoolmates. The Indian mission church on the reservation was included in the circuit of his father, a pioneer preacher of the State. Dr. Halliday's own first pastoral charge was in the sawmill town of Ontonagon, in northern Michigan.

ARABIC BIBLE FOR THE BLIND.

After five years' labor the National Institute for the Blind has completed the first edition of the Bible in Arabic Braille. The work has been carried out under the British and Foreign Bible Society, who will distribute the book to blind readers in Arabia, Palestine, Egypt, and North Africa generally. The Arabic edition occupies thirty-two volumes, as compared with the seventy-four volumes of the National Institute's Bible in English Braille, but the size of the volumes is larger and about double their thickness.—Missionary Review.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN FLORIDA.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20, 1932.

One would not think there were many tourists in Florida this winter unless one went to church. The hotels are comparatively empty, and the shops and public parks are not thronged as in former years. But one sees little difference in church attendance. If you wish a seat in church at the eleven o'clock hour, you had better occupy that seat ten to twenty minutes before that hour. The tourist and health seeker may tire of other things, but the church still attracts and the gospel is still a drawing and compelling power. There is one message that never grows old, and that is the gospel message when convincingly and properly presented. As stated in my last letter, Dr. John R. Mott, world figure, Christian statesman, orator, author, is recuperating here in this good sanitarium. He was good enough to invite this scribe to be his guest for a several hours' drive today over some of Florida's enchanting highways. Having but recently returned from a trip around the world, on which trip he spoke especially to students and teachers in colleges and universities, in twelve nations of Europe and the Orient, I asked him what was the reaction of his audiences to the distinctly Christian message, knowing that in all his addresses he exalted the Christ and His name to save and redeem. In all countries without exception, I had the largest audiences and the most eager listeners I have had in the forty years of my travel and experience. The world, not one nation, but the world, is more eager, and is more deeply concerned about the distinctively Christian message than it has been in centuries. What men and women, young and old, want is the positive message, the note of certainty in religion, and the people of all lands are coming to see and realize that Christ alone can satisfy. We have passed through, we are now passing through, a period of doubt, uncertainty, questioning. Sound the note of certainty and security in the Christian message and people are ready to hear, listen, take heed. The trouble is that so many are preaching in terms of uncertainty, doubt, hesitancy. The world is hungry for reality, that abiding reality in Christ Jesus as the world's only and all sufficient Saviour." In some such words this man who knows his world as most of us do our town or community enthusiastically portrayed the spirit of our time. On the surface of things, and from any superficial point of view, one may decide that the Gospel, the Church, the Bible, the Message that meant so much to our fathers and mothers are back numbers. Well they are not. We cannot get away from the true, simple plain Gospel, as our Lord taught it to His disciples.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., 93 years old financier and philanthropist is wintering near here—at his Ormond Beach home. This morning's papers tell the story of an incident of yesterday with this devout man of God. He was on the links for his daily round of golf and of course scores were looking on as usual, when of a sudden the multimillionaire discovered in the crowd of on-lookers a preacher whom he knew and of whose singing he was very fond. He called the preacher out on the links and requested of him a Gospel song which the preacher gladly sang. Then John D. asked for another and very familiar one, and to the delight of all, he himself joined the preacher in singing it, as did others, so that there was, the paper stated, something like a Prayer-meeting. Dr. Mott tells me that John D. Jr., is a man of deep personal piety like his father, and loves the church and the work it is doing in the world, but the younger John D. expresses the fear that his own children and those of the next generation will not love most the things that he and his father hold nearest and dearest and best. I suppose this fear is common to us fathers who have children absorbed in the engrossing and enlarging problems and prospects and amusements of this present time.

A letter came from my dear good friend, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., that he has had a nervous break-down and must have a rest and some sunshine and learn how to sleep again, and that he is leaving for Florida to seek recuperation, that I may expect him any day. If Florida sunshine and the baths, massages, electric treatments and vegetable diet of this sanitarium can't help a man with worn and weary nerves and muscle and brain back to health and hope and strength, he must be in a precarious condition sure enough.

The weather is balmy indeed now and the great out-of-doors is sweet.

J. O. A.

THE PREACHER.

The call to be a preacher is first and essential in a minister's life and work. The twelve were called in person by Jesus and studied under his teaching and example. Paul was called by a vision and a conviction as impressive as the twelve received. Others were called by similar impressions and convictions made by the Holy Spirit. In no case, either in the Old Testament or New Testament, were prophets brought into the ministry by self-choice. A call to the ministry is essential to a successful ministry. There is only one way by which human help can bring others into the ministry. That way is by prayer and not by advice. "Pray ye, therefore, to the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into His harvest." The church can feel the need of more preachers, but the church cannot supply that need by schools, by suggestion or advice, nor by the opportunity to offer themselves for such service. A human-called preacher is a failure in the spiritual Kingdom. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned and a call to stand up in the pulpit and proclaim the gospel must be divinely made. It is an inner sense of obligations, a feeling of necessity; a conviction from which the individual cannot rid himself; and if he does not yield to this call he suffers defeat all his days. There is no reason why one truly called should fail in his ministry, unless he neglects the cultivation of the life that belongs to such a calling. It is really a calling as the preacher is called. He is not only a man, but a Christian, and the call of the ministry separates him from other men.

In the case of the fishermen called by Jesus, they left all and followed him. They had no salary consideration and that is not a part of the call in this day. God will provide for the necessities of those who surrender to His call and devote their lives to His service. Jesus promised to make them fishers of men. The fisherman does not always catch the fish he seeks, but he catches some; and it is even so with the preacher. He does not get into the Kingdom all he seeks; but he gets some, and influence helps to win others. Jesus did not win many in His day, and He met much opposition; but the work goes on through those He did win from the world unto God. And he told them, "Greater works than these shall ye do, because I go unto my Father." That process continues, and will continue until every knee shall bow and every tongue shall "confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God, the Father." (Phil 2:11.) The first step toward the pulpit is a Divine Call, and there is no other true path to that high position of preaching the gospel which is God's method of saving the world.

W. W. S.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

The whole world hungers for God. We are on the verge of a world-wide revival, like the great Welsh revival that swept the world. The world over, there is great religious unrest. Look at India, China, Japan, Tibet, Turkey, Egypt, Spain, Russia, Mexico, in fact, any part of the world. Even the present-day descendants of the orthodox Jew are frequently not orthodox. In Russia the Jew says there is no God. In America the Jew is trying Christian Science, spiritualism, and every other ism. He is no longer satisfied with his Old Testament without a New Testament. He no longer is hostile to Christianity for Gentiles. He has even come so far as to say that Jesus was a great man, though not yet acknowledging him to be the long-looked-for Messiah. At heart, the Jew is secretly proud that the world's greatest religious leader was a Jew.

The Jew is on his way to becoming Christian. He already practices many Christian virtues. Witness the Jewish liberality on every public welfare drive. Did you know that over twenty thousand Jews have become Christians within the past few years? Hasten the day when the Jew becomes Christian. Then shall there be such a missionary zeal as the world has not seen since the days of that other great Jewish missionary, Paul. With movie-talkies, radio, wireless, airplanes, great newspapers, great evangelists, great singers, great writers and in a thousand other ways, the world will hear the call of Jesus in one generation, and we Gentiles shall be ashamed of the half-hearted way in which we have evangelized the world. God speed that day. But shall the world wait until that day comes?

Basically, the world is in great unrest religiously. Unsettled religiously, it is unsettled, and in great unrest financially and politically. There is a lack of faith everywhere, in every walk of life. You read great headlines across the front page of our papers reading: "Leaders Plan to Restore Confidence." What is confidence? It is a word derived from two Latin words, con with, and fides, faith. The leaders plan to restore faith. Business cannot do without faith. The world cannot do without faith. The church cannot do without faith. Every great business executive knows the world lacks faith. Everything is unstable. There is no anchorage.

Never in all the world's history has the whole world—Christian, Mohammedan, Jewish, Buddhist, Confucianist, and what-not, longed for a way out, religiously, as now. The clock is striking twelve. The door is wide open. And yet the world does not know who is to bring the longed-for message of peace and hope. How the world waits, with sad, aching heart, for this message. Who says the world is not ready for evangelism?

The world has looked into every door of hope. It has looked at the church. It deems the church to be self-satisfied and cold, and not evangelistic, and not touched with the heartache of the world. If you doubt this, just talk with those who are outside of the church. The world does not think of the church as evangelistic. Tragedy of tragedies, the church does not think of itself as evangelistic. Today many of our great church leaders say the day of evangelism is past. If the day of evangelism be past, then has the gospel of Jesus lost its power. How shall the world turn to a church that is not evangelical? How shall the world be saved by a church that is satisfied that the small groups constituting its membership are saved, and so is happy, while forgetting the sad, hopeless, faithless world outside that is dying for a message of salvation and hope? My friends, that is a very, very serious question.

Paul was chained to a soldier for two years at Rome. Two or three times a day they changed soldiers. Paul and the soldier walked together. I wonder what they talked about. Strangely enough, Paul tells us. In one of his letters he says that his imprisonment was not altogether bad, for he converted practically the whole praetorian guard. That was personal evangelism, by the greatest missionary of them all. He converted them one by one. He had a greater theme to talk about than they had. Haven't we?

The church that is on fire for God is a church that studies its Bible, and talks with God. It is tragic that home Bible study and family prayers have gone out of date. How many homes do you know that have family worship? How can we know God if we do not read and re-read over and over, God's letters to us, and commune with Him in prayer? How can we become intensely spiritual if we do not drink deep at the fountain whence the spiritual flows? How can we have close fellowship with God if we have not walked and talked with Him?

The task is a personal one. It is not just the task of the pastor. We win or we lose as we win or lose as individuals. A battle is won by the privates, not by the generals. It is not the church that saves souls. It is the individuals in the church.

The elders, deacons, deaconesses, Bible school teachers and officers, heads of departments and circles, have a great responsibility. It is a mighty challenge. A small fire, if fanned, becomes a consuming fire.

Remember, an uneducated fisherman preached at Pentecost. A ripe scholar was the world's greatest missionary to the Gentiles. In recent times, an humble cobbler, set the world on fire for missions. A clerk in a small shoe store became the great Dwight L. Moody. God knows you far better than you know yourself. When he calls, say: "Here am I, Lord; send me."—By Clinton H. Dorn in The Christian-Evangelist.

HOLY FIRE.

When Jesus prayed that last prayer with his disciples, recorded in the 17th chapter of John, he did not pray for sinners. In verse nine, he said, "I pray not for the world." Did you ever stop to wonder why Jesus did not have any burden for sinners in that parting prayer? In verse four, Jesus said, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." In verse eleven, he said, "I am no more in the world." In this prayer, Jesus is looking out just beyond the cross, and his crucifixion is considered already past. Jesus has finished his work for sinners and is entering now upon his new ministry as high priest, interceding for his people at the right hand of God. "But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." (Heb. 9:11, 12.) Jesus finished his work for sinners on the cross; and now as high priest commenced his work for believers.

Jesus told his disciples that it was expedient for them that he should go away, because he would send the Comforter unto them, and when you read the second chapter of Acts and see the Holy Ghost coming in power upon the little company of about one hundred and twenty, who had prayed for ten days in the upper room, you realize that Jesus had already begun his work as high priest.

Now, if you read the book of Leviticus you will find that fire had a large place in the tabernacle worship, and without the use of the altar fire very few of the tabernacle ceremonies could have been performed. Remember, also, that in the Holy of Holies burned that supernatural Shekinah fire, on the Mercy Seat, which was the manifest presence of God. Is it any wonder then that on the Day of Pentecost the Holy Ghost came in the form of tongues of fire and sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost? They went out in the power and enthusiasm of that Holy Fire and three thousand were converted the first day. A little later Paul went up through Asia Minor and over into Europe with this same holy fire preaching the gospel, and New Testament churches sprang up all over the country. Many years later John Wesley came preaching with that same Holy Ghost fire and stirred England and this country, too, with mighty, soul-awakening revivals. Before very long the early Methodists, inspired by that holy zeal, carried revival fires around the world and sinners trembled under the mighty power of God and rushed to the altar.

Today, religion has become with many a form and the church service a ceremony. The story is told that a certain church caught fire early one morning and crowds hurried to the scene. One of the church members recognized a neighbor at the fire who seldom went to church, and said to him, "Well, I never saw you out at church this early in the morning before," and the neighbor replied, "No, and I never saw the church on fire before either." In Romans 12:11 we are told to be "Fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Now fervent means boiling hot, or red hot.

The definition of the word Ghost or Spirit is a "breath" or "blast" and has the idea of heavenly dynamite. This is just what the third Person of the Trinity has meant to us who have definitely sought and received the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and who now walk in vital communion with our Great High Priest in Glory.—Rev. H. C. Goodenough, in The Wesleyan Methodist.

THE MACHINE OR THE MAN?

In many states of our nation stringent laws seek to keep the automobiles under state licenses in safe driving condition. In New Jersey the law forbids the driving of a car in an unsafe condition. Defective steering gear and brakes, glaring headlights and imperfect mirrors are dangerous not only to the driver of the car but to all other drivers he may chance to meet on the highway. In order to protect the public, the state insists upon a yearly inspection of all cars, trucks, and busses. All such inspections are highly important, and if rightly made, assure us of mechanical safety.

More important, however, than the machine element in the driving of the car is the human element. In the vast majority of cases the man behind the wheel and not the machine is the cause of the accident. And yet, like Andy, in "Amos 'n Andy," the other evening, someone else is to blame when an accident occurs. If the telephone company had notified Andy that it had placed a new pole on a new corner, the accident would not have occurred, according to Andy's idea of the matter, in spite of the fact that he was not looking in the direction in which he was driving, but was waving his hand to someone on the other side of the street. While the man behind the wheel is the most important factor in automobile driving, after he receives his driver's license, he is seldom examined again unless he should have an accident.

Very few accidents are really accidents. Most of them are due to recklessness, carelessness, poor judgment or to some physical or mental defect of the driver. Yet men, knowing these facts, are willing to introduce yet another factor into this complex machine age that will make driving still more unsafe and dangerous. We read almost daily of accidents brought about by drivers who were under the influence of liquor, whose judgment was warped because of alcohol in the brain. There are many men, even in the state of New Jersey, who are ready to vote to make it possible to secure liquor more easily than now, and thus seriously affect the physical and mental condition of the man at the wheel. Would it not be silly and the height of folly for the government to demand an inspection of a machine if its voters should empower it to license a man to sell that which assuredly will destroy the good judgment and the sense of responsibility of the driver of that machine?

"I never attempt to write after taking a drink," says Chester Crowell, in Cosmopolitan. "Men ought never to drink when immersed in the details of their business. Especially they ought not to take a drink, and then try to operate any sort of machinery. I was amazed to discover some years ago that I could not type as rapidly after taking one small glass of three per cent beer as I could before. This was more than adequate proof for me that no one ought to drive a car after drinking."

The model critic finds something to praise before he finds fault, even if he has to put on his specs to find it. And if he can't find anything good in the lines, he reads it in between them.—Cowan.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

George Washington was born in Bridges Creek, Westmoreland County, Virginia, February 22, 1732, and died at Mt. Vernon, without issue, December 14, 1799, at the age of 67 years, 9 months, and 22 days. His father was Augustine Washington and his second wife, Mary Ball. His grandfather, Lawrence Washington, came from England to Virginia in the time of Cromwell, in 1657, and his father was born in Virginia in 1694. His father was married twice and died in 1743, when George was 11 years old. Westmoreland County, Virginia, was famous for great men—the Washingtons, Monroes, and Lees. The year after George was born the family moved to Mount Vernon where, ten years afterward, his father died. His mother thought it best for George to live with his half-brother, Augustine. After the completion of the Mount Vernon mansion, his mother moved to Fredericksburg, perhaps for the education of George, and he there attended school. When he was 14 he had a great desire to enter the British Navy, and had made his arrangements to go; but his mother persuaded him to remain at home. He was an obedient son as well as, later, a great ruler.

At the age of 16 he became a surveyor, and was denied a college and university education, and derived his education from experience in outdoor life and contact with real work and real men. One year after he entered the work of a surveyor, he was made a public surveyor and, by this position, came in contact with prominent Virginians, among them the Fairfax family which still retains the English title of Lord Fairfax. At this time stories are told of Washington that indicate that he was prepossessing in person, dress and manner, to the young ladies, as he was welcomed to Greenwood Court and other first-class homes.

At the age of 19 he changed from surveyor to soldier, and in 1751 he was a major on the frontier. He left his military position to care for his brother, Lawrence, who had been sent to the Barbados by the doctors for his health. After a few months his brother died, leaving George as one of the executors of the estate, with the understanding that if he outlived his brother, Lawrence's youngest son, he would heir the Mount Vernon estate. It was by this provision of his brother Lawrence's will that he came into the possession of this property.

In 1752 he was promoted to adjutant-general and sent to the frontier, and by 1754, was a lieutenant-colonel of the militia. His rapid military progress was checked by the failure of the Great Meadows campaign. After this he accepted appointments as aide-de-camp to General Braddock. From this appointment he was made commander-in-chief of the Virginia forces, and sent on a military commission to New York. In 1758 he resigned his commission as there was no need for immediate service, with the desire to retire to private life. He had courted Martha Custis and he wanted to lead her as his bride to the Mount Vernon home. They were married in 1759. In that very year he was elected a member of the House of Burgesses. From 1759 to 1769, he remained quietly in his home, except on his trips to Williamsburg to attend the sessions of the House of Burgesses. Being appointed in 1769 as commissioner to settle the accounts of the colony. In 1774 he was a member of the Virginia Convention to consider the points at issue between England and Virginia, and that same year was made a member of the First Continental Congress. June 15, 1775, he was unanimously selected as commander-in-chief of the American forces, as the appeal to arms seemed inevitable. He began his real military service July 3, 1775, and December 27, 1776, was invested with absolute dictatorial powers. After the surrender of Cornwallis in 1781, Washington retired again to private life to prevent a rumored sedition. But in 1789 he was made President of the Constitutional Convention and on April 30, 1789, made President of the United States.

W. W. STALEY.

WINDSOR, VIRGINIA.

I am well aware of the fact that to suggest that dark days are upon us is to be pronounced guilty of pessimism, and to declare that the world is trembling wins for one the title, "alarmist," but I am convinced that a critical survey of the world is not needed to reveal the fact that we are in the midst of moral and spiritual chaos. Sin is gnawing at the very vitals of humanity. Today people have little relish for righteousness. Crime, greed, lawlessness, lust and high life are running riot like a Belshazzar's feast. The God-forgetfulness of many is appalling. Thousands of Esaus are peddling their birthright for a mess of pottage. They think about eating and drinking, dress and company, amusement and pleasure, riches and honours; but better, and eternal things seldom occupy their thoughts. They "love the world," and the "things that are in the world," but the "love of the Father is not in them." Such people find their ideals, their motives, their inspiration in those "things which perish with the using," and deliberately cheat themselves out of "an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, which fadeth not away." The present materialistic philosophy, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die," stands in opposition to the good old-fashioned Bible-inspired belief that the supreme object of living is preparation for a future life with God. The time has come for us to realize that this present life is the seed-time of sowing, and in the life to come we will enjoy or we will regret sorrowfully the sowing we have done.

We seem to have forgotten that over and over again it has been demonstrated that loyalty to Jehovah is the condition of the life of a nation, and of its prolongation, and that sin is a forerunner of weakness and ruin. The destruction of our present-day civilization would not be a new thing in history. Israel lost her glory and her greatness by forsaking the old-fashioned things of Jehovah. God was in Israel's history, but He is equally in all history. He has not changed, and His methods of dealing with sinful nations have not changed. History has demonstrated the fact that the transgression of God's holy laws causes iniquity to be visited on generations of those who hate God, and that the mightiest empires fall and the strongest nations disappear when the favor of the mighty Creator, Ruler and Lawgiver is withheld. That's why the passing centuries have witnessed many a human institution laid away in Time's great cemetery. That's why the mighty dynasties of Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar, of Cyrus and Alexander the Great, of Caesar and Charlemagne have long ago crumbled to atoms. It is a fact that their proud capitals and palaces and magnificent temples have been buried beneath the drifting sands of the centuries. Today these mighty nations are only a memory. They have gone down to ruin. Why? Because they refused to follow the lofty principles enunciated by the Psalmist and Prophet. Like stricken hulks, they are strewn upon the shores of Time. Their voices and the Book of Divine Wisdom have said: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord" stands for just as much today as it did in the years of our progenitors. All of this confusion and perplexity in which we find ourselves is entirely of man's doing. We have no right to blame it on God. The trouble is we have forgotten God, and have been following our own ways, rather than His ways. No wonder we have as our reward economic paralysis, which we call the depression. Sin reaps its harvest of sorrow, and wickedness brings disaster in its train.

Notwithstanding the fact that early in the centuries Almighty God solemnly warned us when He said: "The nation and the kingdom that will not serve me shall perish," America seems to be fast drifting toward the fate of ancient Greece and Rome. When has there been a time in our history when the love of luxury, speculation, greed, graft, lust, immorality, lawlessness, crime, irreligion and other outstanding sins were so prevalent as today? Is God being considered an important factor in our national life? Hasn't our national prosperity led us to the point where we glory in our own strength? Isn't sin eating like a cancer into our personal life, our domestic life, our social life, our civic life, and our national life? Many of our people recognize the God of love in the home, but in the business world they recognize the God of selfishness. They recognize the God of good-will and friendliness among the people of their own social circle, but the God of exclusiveness outside their social circle. They recognize the God of forgiveness among their friends, but the God of revenge among those who have wounded them. That's why so many vain and empty lives abound. Beloved, as long as sin goes unrepented, life is upon a low plane; you cannot walk with God, nor enter the Celestial City. Almighty God is against sin in nations no less than in individuals. Therefore, national wickedness is the certain prelude to national ruin. Our security depends on our Godliness.

In these dark and "perilous times" we need a new discovery of God in the vastness of His unlimited wisdom, power, grace and love, and a new obedience and loyalty to Him—the King of Righteousness. For those who trust in God—the Universal Father—are never brought to shame. He "shows mercy unto thousands of those who love Him and keep His commandments." Happy, thrice happy, are they who lean upon His great heart and trust His everlasting arm. Child of God, can you be afraid when the strong, triumphant, tender hand of your Heavenly Father holds you? Let darkness become darker, let perplexities increase, let sorrows and trials multiply—God shall not fail nor forsake. The strength of every Christian is in His God.

Our problem for today is to find for ourselves the real Christ. We must re-enthroned Jesus Christ—the Friend of souls, the Comrade of struggling humanity, the Guide of suffering hearts, the Divine Reconciler with God, "the Author of eternal salvation" unto all them. We live in a day when there is too much unhallowed speculation about the sacred person of Christ. If the character of our Lord be the invention of men, why was it not invented before He came? If, as the evolutionists would make us believe, Christ was evolved, what was back of Him, and why hasn't evolution produced another? The answer is because He is "the Ancient of days," the "Messiah" of prophecy, the "anointed" One, the Lord of Glory, the Deliverer and Redeemer of the world—sent as a messenger of God's love and mercy to our lost world. "Christ died for our sins." He suffered once for sin—"the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God." Yes, beloved, Jesus Christ—the Lamb of God—paid the penalty, that He might deliver the sinner from the consequences of his sins; and every sinner that accepts of the sacrifice of Christ by faith, the finger of God's mercy, dipped in the blood of His Son, writes that sinner as one over whom the second death shall never have power. Blessed be His holy name! In these days of Higher Criticism, let us not forget that God embodied His Divine nature in the human personality of Jesus Christ, so that that personality became and is forever Divine. God is Jesus Christ. He is always the same—"the same yesterday, today and forever." His life, His mercy, His graciousness have not diminished or altered in any degree with the passing of the centuries. All men are sinners, but there is a common remedy for all—Jesus Christ, the Saviour. Ah! dear friend, there is nothing, absolutely nothing, that will cast out the sin we have harbored in our hearts, but Jesus. If you die rejecting Him you will find yourself, in spite of all that modern thinkers say, doomed to eternal perdition. The hope of the world centers in Jesus of Nazareth—God-Man.

Today, the world stands in need of the mighty power of the Holy Spirit to change men's hearts, to direct their misdirected energies, to dispel their lustful passions, to make them love God and practice the Golden Rule.

The one hope of improving general conditions today is a "mighty spiritual awakening"; a worldwide revival of old-fashioned religion—a revival that will break the hearts of sinners, confound the unbelief of infidels, overthrow the work of the Devil and bring multitudes of souls to Jesus. Christ is calling you, beloved brethren, to give yourself to Him—with all your sins and imperfections—to be what He wants you to be, and do what He wants you to do. It is time for us to realize that the first business of every Christian at all times is to follow Jesus Christ—the second Adam, the Messiah of Israel, the Saviour of the Gentiles, the Glory of Heaven, the joy of earth, the Royal Advocate, the coming King. To follow Jesus is to be as active, as loving, as pitying, as unceasing in good as He.

To men and women with their burdens of hardships, with their uncertainties and anxieties, I sound the explicit challenge of God—our Benefactor. Listen to His wonderful pledge: "If you walk in My statutes and keep My commandments to do them, then I give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit, and I will be your God and ye shall be my people." What blessed promises these are! Those who put their trust in Almighty God He will uphold, sustain and carry through all.

Simple living, the reestablishment of love, purity, unselfishness, and the family altar are the supreme needs of the hour. Give your life fully consecrated to God, tell the glad story to all who need to hear it, win souls to this living Redeemer, and the glory of earth's true Ruler—Jesus Christ—shall be yours. E. B. WHITE.

SOUTHERN UNION LETTER.

It is always good to be able to tell of progress. In these days when the spirits of so many of us have been weighed down by the psychology of depression, it is refreshing to be aware of new life and growth, of renewed faith and enthusiasm.

Before I came to Wadley, a few days ago, I was told that I would find changes since my last visit here. Instead, I found a transformation!

The Administration Building has been completed, giving class-rooms, offices, auditorium, all efficient and attractive. The campus has been graded and prepared for landscaping. Through the generosity of New England friends, an amazingly complete library has been acquired, and is now completely catalogued. The Wadley Hotel, refinished and equipped throughout with water and steam heat, has been leased and now provides an inn of which any community may be proud, a comfortable home for professors, dormitory space for young men, and convenient class-rooms for night classes of adults from the community who are delighted with the opportunity to take work in Bible, in Alabama history, sociology, and art appreciation, now being given.

A competent and loyal faculty is hard at work and as fine a lot of young people as can be seen anywhere are going purposefully about their tasks. Throughout the town and the surrounding region is a renewed spirit of cooperation and faith.

The Southern Christian Convention, churches of Alabama and Georgia, and the Wadley community undertook a worth-while task when they founded Bethlehem Junior College. As it lives today, re-named Southern Union College, it represents their vision, Christian statesmanship, and sacrificial generosity. The only college in a field twice as large as Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, its future offers a great task and a great opportunity for the now united churches.

It is a pleasure to tell the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN of the progress which has been made during these months when so many of us in our own affairs have felt that we were compelled to wait for a better day in order to bestir ourselves.

S. C. HEINDEL.

LIFE'S JOY.

God gives a joy that we may give,
He gives us love that we may share;
Sometimes He gives us loads to lift
That we may learn to bear.
For life is gladder when we give,
And love is sweeter when we share,
And heavy loads rest lightly too
When we have learned to bear.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Lord teach us to pray. Teach us the language of prayer, but more, Jesus' spirit of prayer; his compassion, his love for a world that is blackened and sickened by selfishness and sedition. Show us the world's helplessness, its hopelessness, unless prayer shall completely cleanse and cure. All barriers burned away, daily bring us, O Lord, our Saviour, our Guide to the garden of prayer, prostrate, surrendered, forgetful of all else but God, possessed of Him, beseeching Him to empower the church and to lift from millions the pall of impending eternal darkness. All for Jesus sake. Amen. L.

SHORT ACCOUNT OF CHRISTIAN MISSIONS IN JAPAN.

By the REV. A. H. LYNCH.

NOTE.—Mr. Lynch is a Methodist-Protestant and this article is reprinted from the February 14th issue of The Methodist Protestant-Recorder. Due to the present conflict in the Far East, we believe it is of especial interest to our readers.

Nearly 400 years ago a man by the name of Xaxier, while in India, received an invitation to come to Japan and teach his religion to the people there, and in August, 1549, he landed in one of the southern ports and started a work that was destined to prosper to such a degree as no other missionary has ever had the privilege of enjoying, but which was destined to flourish for a short time and later to be all but stamped out by the ruthless heel of oppression. He had been here only a few days when he baptized 150 and started the first Christian church ever to be established in the Kingdom of the Rising Sun, and from this initial success he went on to other successes equally as great. Although he did not stay to see the final outcome of his work, within thirty years after he landed there were more than 150,000 Christians in Japan. But soon after this the tide began to turn and the enemies of Christianity began to try in earnest to stamp out that which they considered the faith of the barbarian. Thousands were tortured and suffered worse than death until it is said by some that those in power became sick and tired of the butchery, but to them it seemed that that was the only way to put a stop to this new religion that had gotten such a hold in their midst in so short a time, and so the butchery continued. The writer had the privilege of going to the city and indeed to the very spot that has become famous as the place of torture and death by fire and sword. On this spot where only a comparatively short time ago the blood of so many martyrs, and the cries of the children of the Christians went up to high Heaven by the thousands, a small company of Christian missionaries were gathered to spend a social evening together in quiet and peace, thanks to the Prince of Peace.

In this city of Nagasaki, every year the Japanese non-Christians stage a festival in commemoration of the stamping out of Christianity in those early days and just as they opened their doors and removed the "Shoji" (paper walls of the houses) then, they still do the same to this day. This was done to aid the police in hunting down the Christians and to show that none were hiding in the houses nor in the gardens beyond. In those days if there was a house that harbored a Christian, when the procession of the gods came along they made a detour at this place and in the same manner today, they make a detour wherever a Christian lives. In the old days, the time of this festival was dreaded by the Christians, but now it is altogether harmless and one enjoys seeing the gay procession pass by.

The first signs of relenting, so far as the prohibition of Christianity was concerned, came in 1855 when the Dutch traders were given the right by treaty to worship within their own buildings so long as they did not teach the same to the Japanese, and at the same time, it was declared that they were strictly to refrain from teaching anything about the pernicious doctrine or to import books, pictures, or images relating to any foreign religion. But regardless of this and other prohibitions, in 1859, Dr. Simmons, Dr. Hepburn and Dr. Brown, were quietly at work as the first Protestant missionaries to Japan. But Christianity was still a prohibited religion for the Japanese; the placards offering an extravagant reward for the denouncers of Christian believers were still in existence and were not removed until after more than another decade. The placards read differently in different sections, but one was as follows: "So long as the sun warms the earth, let no Christian be so bold as to come to Japan, and let all know that if King Phillip himself, or even the very god of the Christians contravene this prohibition, they shall pay for it with their heads." But regardless of these and all other efforts to keep back the tide, the doors of Japan were forced open, and within a few years they were to observe the greatest revolution ever seen in Japan or perhaps in any other country up to that time. The period of seclusion was at an end and all of the power that they could muster from within was not able to stem the tide and keep the doors closed to the Western influence and to the spreading of the Christian religion.

At the time of the accession of Megi, Emperor, to the throne in 1867, there were only four known native Christians in Japan besides those who had held on to the Catholic faith through all the evil years that intervened between the so-called stamping out of religion in Japan and the reopening of the country to westerners at this time. But by 1889 there was said to be 31,000 Protestant Christians besides 45,000 Greek and Roman Catholics. By 1873 the attitude had changed in favor of the Christian religion, and at this time the notice boards prohibiting the preaching of Christianity were removed and now are in the museum here in Tokyo as historical relics. There were even Japanese leaders who, merely out of zeal for the acceptance of our Western ideas, perhaps, were moved to suggest that Christianity be made the national religion. Happily this was averted but the tide began to turn in favor of the missionaries and very soon there were many who had professed Christ and were baptized. Men of high rank filled the churches and helped to influence the public in favor of Christianity.

In 1879 an American Baptist missionary presented the first New Testament in the Japanese language, and in 1887 the entire Bible was finished and presented, the work having been done by a committee from all of the missions then working in Japan. This of course was a great step forward and has been a great help to the cause of Christian teaching in Japan, and now the Bible in whole or in part is obtainable at a very low price and is widely read and studied.

At first, almost all of the work was done by the missionaries themselves, but very soon there began to rise a powerful leadership among the Japanese Christians, and when they took hold, the work received a new strength and went forward with somewhat of a steadier growth, and was placed on a surer foundation so far as the Christianization of Japan was concerned. The Japanese leaders themselves surely know better how to appeal to their own countrymen who have the same background and training than we who have had such a different background. There is still a place for the missionary or else God would cease to call them to foreign lands but it is a different place from that held by our predecessors. The new leaders were mostly young men of the "Samurai (nobility) class, and their idea in embracing the new faith consisted largely in an earnest aspiration to work out the spiritual resurrection of the nation in conjunction with the political life. Their faith was more ethical than religious and wrought into their Confucian ideals of honesty and fortitude. Their Samurai spirit was invigorated and rejuvenated by the Christian inspiration. Their conversion met with opposition and threats from their parents and other relatives, but these only tended to increase their zeal. The high tone and the broad spirit of the young Christians of those days may be seen from a declaration issued upon the foundation of the first Christian Church by Japanese in Yokohama in 1873:

"Our church does not belong to any denomination but is established solely in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, our sole authority is the Bible, and we deem all to be our Brothers who believe in the Bible and live according to its teachings. All members of this church should love all members of the churches the world over as members of the same family. Therefore, we call our church, 'The Church of Christ.'"

This initial spurt lasted until about 1890 when a tide of conservatism swept the country and since that time the going has not been so easy nor has it been so rapid, but has steadily made progress in spite of all the forces in Japan and all the rest of the world to counteract its influence. We must remember that the Christian religion has been severely criticized even in the so-called Christian world and has had some very grave battles to fight since that time, so we need not be surprised that it suffered a setback in the lands where it had such a firm footing, because the Japanese saw the battle and also saw that the Western world was not, after all, so interested in its religion as in its commerce and trade and all of the material things of life. So that being the case they paused to study the religion that they were at the first so ready to accept merely upon the recommendation of others. But we, as Christians of all the world, have great cause to rejoice at the progress made in the last few years by those who have sacrificed and dared so much when the going was not so easy as at the present.

At the present time the Christians number almost two hundred and fifty thousand according to a recent survey.

For the information given in this paper, I am indebted to Gowin's History of Japan, Murdok's History, Volumes II and III, Anesakies' History of Japanese Religions, C. H. Robinson's History of Christian Missions, and Japanese Traditions of Christianity Gathered from a Number of Sources.

The other evening after sunset, I had a feast of color spread across the sky—pink, old-rose, salmon, purple, tints and blendings I can't name. But all ministered to a need within me. The One who spread it there knew I had a color-hunger, as clamorous as bread-hunger, and He fed my soul from His own glory in His heavens." Cowan.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

Program IV.

WOMAN'S SOCIETIES.

Theme—The Local Church—the Heart. Worship helps:

Hymn—"The Church's One Foundation."

Prayer—That our own church may see her part in the great whole, and devote her life and her substance to doing that part. That we, as individual members may see and know and to our part, that the earth may become God's Kingdom.

The leader may say: "For three months we have been speaking of our organization as a body with its head, its hands and feet, its backbone, and today we have come to the heart of it all, the local church—our church; for, after all, it all depends on us.

"The responsibilities are at least four-fold. The first is to work in the church. A second responsibility is to support the church. A third responsibility is to the support the wide outreach of the church. A fourth is to know about our church, and our denomination, and a fifth is to devote ourselves to the task. We cannot be held responsible for another's shortcomings, but we can and will be held responsible for our own."

(Here the group may be divided into two sides with leaders, and questions may be asked and conducted like an old-fashioned spelling bee. The questions of material for this program is found in the little booklet, "Our Congregational-Christian Body at Work," and may be secured for 10c from the Commission on Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.)

As a closing feature, the members may all stand in a circle and clasping each other's hands, unite in a prayer of personal consecration and in singing softly, "Take My Life and Let It Be."

YOUNG PEOPLE.

Topic—"God and the Census."

Theme—"True Discipleship."

"BETTER TIMES," SAYS BABSON.

"The depression is in retreat," says Roger W. Babson, noted statistician and economist of Wellesley, Mass., who, according to news reports, issued the following statement on January 26th:

"The Babson chart, which was the basis for my forecast of the market break in 1929, is now with equal positiveness indicating that we have seen the trough of the depression of 1930-32, and that the present year will show an irregular movement toward higher levels.

"The chart is now turning upward for the first time in more than two years, except for the temporary rally of last spring. For some years to come I do not expect to see the Babson chart below the depth reached last November. Of course, this does not mean any sharp rise back to normal conditions, but it does indicate the depression is in retreat. The long outlook is that fundamentally better times are now definitely assured."

EXTERNAL LIFE.

The immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the body are tremendous facts of human existence, but a greater thought even than this is found in the promises concerning eternal life. It is what its name implies—life—God's life, coming out of the past and entering into the eternity of the future. For the Christian eternal life is the immortality of his soul brought into vital connection with God. Dr. A. T. Pierson has a beautiful thought on this matter. He says: "Just as when you cut a scion into a great tree, the scion begins at once to get the benefit of all the past years of that tree's life, as well as its present vigor and power and fruitfulness, so it is if you are ingrafted into God. Eternal life is bliss, eternal life is power, eternal life is glory, none of which are necessary to immortality."

WORLD PEACE.

By FRED B. SMITH.

When I was in Oslo last September, the president of the University of Norway quoted himself in an address. He had said in 1919, "Inside of ten years there will be a moral collapse all around the world." He went on to argue (more than ten years ago) that in four years of the World War we had been arousing the world to beastly and damnable passions. We had taught men to hate, and to applaud cruelty and unfairness. "How can you expect the world's morals to stand up under that?" asked this leader.

When we do to the world what we did for those four years of the war, we do not whimper and whine when religion is difficult. We are paying the price now in morals.

If today those who read these words could unite to send out positive word to the world that there will be no outbreak of war for twenty-five years, what would happen? Economics would start up at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Our governments would give new concern to their service to mankind and less to their existence. Confidence would be restored.

We have made some progress toward such a condition as that. In my student days I was surrounded by the glorification of militarism. Today the larger institutions have a chair to teach internationalism and good will. We have had the Hague tribunal, the League of Nations, the Locarno treaty, the Court of International Justice. This World Court has the adherence of fifty-six nations; twelve years ago there was no international court. Yes, we have made progress, but have we done enough?

Bishop Brent told us not long before his death, "I believe if the Christian Church will combine against war, we can abolish war in one generation." He continued, "You may call me a fool for saying that, but if so, let me go down in history as one of God's fools."

Making Peace Secure.

If our side is to win, we must organize and prepare for a long siege. It can not be done all of a sudden; here we shall gain a little, and there. There will have to be a million sermons preached on world peace before we can reach victory. It will be a long campaign. But did you notice that statement by Arthur Henderson, secretary of foreign affairs for the British government? He said, "If the people want disarmament badly enough, they can have it. The people are the final arbiters of disarmament."

World-wide peace can not be certain and secure until there is one great forum for all the nations, and every nation is in that forum. We can not have peace without that. There is a menace to the peace of the world as long as the United States is not in such a forum.

World-wide peace is not certain until every nation in the world is a member of the International Court of Justice—including the United States. Some things are settled in the parliament of nations, the League. Some things are settled in the Court. We can not have world-wide peace with any nation of prominence outside that Court.

When can we have the peace carnival and say to the world, "We have quit slaughtering; we have quit murdering"? When will that hour come? Refusing to serve and going to jail will not stop war. War will not be stopped by telling the story of its horrors.

War will go out when it has been made a sin against Almighty God to organize young men that have never had a word to say about it and send them out and shoot them down as hogs would be slaughtered in the stock-yards. Some day it will be considered a sin to do that, and that is the day when war will stop.

That is a moral and spiritual question. I wonder whether we in the church can meet it. Already I have seen the evangelization of the world postponed a hundred years; I say this after having been in Japan seven times and in India five times. The Orient is turning against our bloody Western Christianity.

Let us stop war, we of the West, or call home our missionaries.

Committed to a Task.

Some years ago I heard that the great Gladstone was to speak in Birmingham. I was on the way to London, but I broke my journey and hurried off to hear him. He was old and bent, and his voice did not carry until he came to the climax of his address. Then he squared his shoulders, and his voice rang out in one sentence that every one heard, and would remember—"I believe any man who can move forward one little step the cause of Christian unity in his day may well lie down happy with the record of his life."

I feel that way, not only about Christian unity, but about this sacred cause of world peace and good will. If they can say of me some day, "This man, in his day, helped the cause of international good will a little," I shall be very glad.

There are reasons why I say that. Those are buried in Flanders fields, among the poppies, that should be alive. And some of them are there because I advised them to go. The other day I saw a woman, the noblest of my acquaintance. Thoughts do not follow through with her now, thirteen years after she signed a paper that let a boy under age go to war. She has brooded these many years. The other night, while tears streamed down her cheeks, she asked me, "Will you promise me that everywhere you speak you will say a word against war for the mothers who can't speak?"

That is what I have been doing. And I have been addressing my words, too, to young men and young women, who should grow up to feel that it is devilish for nations to have no better method than war for composing their differences. Young men, get hold of it. Young women, get hold of it. Do not let your day go past without having a part in this crusade for peace. "Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

MARCH 6, 1932.

"WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE A CHRISTIAN?"
Matthew 16:24; 7:24-29.

A recent author has said that it is absurd to think that we can follow the teachings of a man who lived nearly two thousand years ago. Is it? It is true that Jesus Christ did live in a very different world from the one in which we live. His needs and problems were different from those we have and face. But if one studies his teachings carefully, it will be found that Christ laid down rules in no instance that bind a person to do any particular thing regardless of circumstances, except the one rule that we should love and obey God and love our fellowmen. Christ gave principles that will apply throughout all the ages. We are expected to use our intelligence to determine what we should do under varying conditions and circumstances.

Read Luke 14:27-30; 19:5-10. What do you think Christ expected of those who joined him? It seems that he expected them to be very different from others. He warned them to count the cost. And yet when his followers gave up all they had to follow him—he accepted it as a matter of course. It is very evident today that the young people who join the church do not do all that Christ expects of them. The fact that other people do not do what they should is no excuse for our not doing it; neither is it any excuse for not joining the church. Should we not rather join the church and do what we can to follow him, and thus, by the grace and help of God, strengthen our brothers in the Way?

Christians get more out of life than others do. But that does not mean that the Christian way is an easy way. It is a way of striving and work. Christ has a right to expect the same amount of attention that any other pursuit, such as art, music, or athletics, demands. We gladly spend years learning in some particular field, while we think we can be Christians on just a few hours a week. Perhaps this has something to do with the quality of our Christianity. Do you think so? Christ gives us the assurance that his discipleship is worth all that we put into it. Will we dare to trust his word and put everything we have and are into it?

It is quite evident that many professing Christians do not take their Christianity seriously. American homes are breaking down because of lack of respect for the personalities and rights of members of the families. American business men have in some instances become so persistent in their pursuit of the money their businesses will bring that they have crushed human life and hope and joy. Politicians may be professing Christians, but that does not stop some of their graft and violation of the law. Christ could say of us today: "Hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel."

WHAT IS MAMMON?

What is meant by Mammon? Mammon, we shall answer at once, means money and all material goods. True, but it means something more than worldly goods in themselves. Christ meant worldly goods that have no background to themselves, or a false one. He meant goods of all kinds that have ceased to be our servants and have become the masters of our souls. He meant goods that have come to be regarded by us as "ends in themselves," and not means which are used to serve the higher values and ends of life.

There is no enemy of our manhood and womanhood, of our sonship or daughtership in God, so insidious as this spirit called Mammon. I remember hearing John Caird, that prince of Scottish preachers, take up a whole discourse to show how, at every turn, Mammon so disguises himself

JESUS WASHES HIS DISCIPLES' FEET.

LESSON X—MARCH 6, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 13:1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."—Matt. 20:28.

Introduction.

The life and teaching of Jesus show a constant devotion to the welfare of others. Jesus' attitudes show a high degree of achievement in social motivations. Human nature has its mechanisms more readily adjusted to self assertive action than to service for others. Jesus shows a mastery of all his powers and the use of them for social welfare. As we study this lesson we find a beautiful example of Jesus supreme devotion to the welfare of his followers.

He Loved Them Unto the End.

True love must be constant. As Jesus neared the cross and the tragedy of the closing days, the realization of his own sorrow and pain did not dim the love he had for his disciples. "He loved them unto the end." They wavered in their loyalty to him. Judas sought to betray him. Some of them were disputing who would be greatest and have influential positions in his kingdom. But Jesus loved them unto the end. Clouds of disappointment did not dim the love of Jesus for his disciples.

He Took a Towel.

He might have asked some one to do the work of a servant. He might have given an authoritative command to all or to one. Instead Jesus took a towel and a basin himself. He could have told his disciples the better way, but he chose to show them the better way. How much more effective in life is the example than the precept. Jesus leads the way and tells us to follow him. The Master took the towel and basin and performed the service himself.

Wash The Disciples' Feet.

This was a useful and refreshing custom in Palestine. The open sandals and the dusty paths at the conditions for the custom. Jesus, their Lord and Teacher, performed the duty of a servant to them. There is a genuine dignity in service. The social conventions of a caste system or a social system that retains some part of the class distinctions, perpetuates many standards that are at variance with the unassuming but genuine example of Jesus. He was a carpenter and unashamed of honest toil. He was their Lord and Master but unashamed to wash their feet.

Also My Hands and My Head.

Peter was not going to allow Jesus to wash his feet. He was a sturdy soul and did not want his Lord to be his servant. Peter did not understand. Jesus told him he would "understand hereafter." Many of the significant experiences of life are not understood until hereafter. Often it takes a long time for a man to realize the real meaning and worth of an experience. Then Peter wanted not only his feet but also his hands and head washed. But Jesus was not primarily interested in the bath but rather the symbolism of the action. It was not a bath that Peter needed. He needed understanding. He needed purified and refined motives. Later Peter saw with clearer insight, and with refined motives followed his Lord in a wonderful ministry of service. He received far better than the washing of hands and head.

Washing One Another's Feet.

Jesus said "If I then, the Lord and the Teacher, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." I have great respect for the people who earnestly and sincerely practice this in literal fashion. It is, however, a much more difficult task to carry out spiritually and practically the quality of living that is implied in Jesus example. The more important thing for our churches is that our people may come to a fuller practice of actual service in the commonplace activities of life. Jesus came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and give his life in service for others. We, his followers, should seek to find joy in humble useful service. May we become more like our Master in the quality of our lives.

WHAT IS MAMMON?

as to be most difficult to distinguish from God. And yet, it is not very difficult for a man or woman to know how far Mammon has enslaved them if only they will but examine themselves and be honest with themselves. Here is the test of it, as one of the foremost interpreters of our day in the teaching of Jesus describes it: "Whenever anything belonging to material things (a material possession or a desire for material possession) is of such value to a man that he sets his heart upon it, that he trembles at the thought of losing it, that he is no longer willing to give it up, such a man is already in bondage." Whenever a man is so engrossed in his bank book that his Bible gathers dust; whenever a household's chief ambition is to turn the parlor into a drawing-room and, as a consequence, to turn the charities out-of-doors; whenever we submit to a social set that measures people by what they have and not by what they are; whenever politicians speak and act as though self-interest and class-benefit are the only appeals they need trouble about; whenever statesmen divert the King's honors to men merely because their purse has loaded the party chest; these people, and all like them, evince themselves as the servants of Mammon.

How insidious is this power, how general it is, how freely it is accepted as the normal spirit and conduct of life in individuals and states! It was this that roused the clean, calm indignation of Christ and called forth His demand that it must be killed in those who would be His. He says, "You must make your choice—either God or Mammon; you cannot serve both!" The world says, "You must serve Mammon or be a back-number!" Christ says, "Unless you kill this thing, you shall never be numbered among those who live."—Dr. A. Boyd Scott, in the British Weekly.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

IN THE BEGINNING.

"The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God."—Mark 1:1.

Everything has its beginning. With every story it can be said, "Once upon a time." We hark back to the beginning things with our personal life, and the thought that they had a beginning, that there was once a time when they were not, gives a freshness to the feelings with which we regard them. Comparing their commencement with what we have achieved in them since, brings us natural pleasure.

You and I believe that nothing has opened our hearts and lives so powerfully and given our hearts so much pleasure as the beginning of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, in our hearts. It places us in the realm of Godliness, in the assurance of salvation, in the glory that floods our souls and fills the heavens, in the hope of the kingdom that endures forever. It means harmony with the Divine will. It means "co-partners" with God in trying to live His eternal purpose.

Prayer—Dear Father, our lives are dry and as unfruitful as a desert, and we are miserable and famished and wretched. Enable us to see ourselves in the light of thy love, make all sacrifice necessary, and make thou our lives a flowing stream of rich blessings to share. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE ETERNAL PURPOSE.

"Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 3:2.

"Repent ye, and believe the gospel."—Jesus. Mark 1:15.

The beginning of the Gospel of the Son of God was in the coming of John and Jesus. Their messages were the same—our text gives it.

We are told that the biographer and sculptor, Michael Angelo, was once seen standing, chisel in hand, gazing intently upon a rough block of marble. Upon being asked what he was looking at, said: "I see a beautiful angel imprisoned, and I mean to set it free."

God saw (and sees still) in rough undeveloped humanity, a vision of an ideal man. He sent Jesus into the world to change the face of humanity to that ideal. So the presence, the preaching and the work of Jesus was, and is, the deliberate work of God in time to transform man from what he is to what he ought to be.

Has that beginning in you been just that?

Prayer—Our Father, we thank thee for all thy goodness toward us and for that patience of thine that has chiseled away upon us to make us what we ought to be in Christ. Make us humble and submissive to thy will and thy transforming hand. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CONTENT OF THE GOSPEL.

"If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable."—I. Cor. 15:19.

St. Paul's life as a disciple and minister of God's gospel gives us a striking example of the content of the gospel for the transportation of a man from what he is to what he ought to be.

First, from his conversion, Paul believed that Jesus was the Son of God, and as such he embraced the whole meaning and value of God. In Christ Paul found God, discovered God's truth and by following Christ he had communion with God. And following Christ, he was determined to know nothing but him and him crucified. This was his salvation and it was the salvation of the world. Paul exhausted the possibilities of human speech in order to bring home to the hearts of men this thought. Did he succeed? He did, indeed. And thanks be to God through our Lord Jesus Christ, that Jesus is the ground and reason for our hope and peace, and our transformation to that ideal man. And the difference is that of the difference between a dead and a living Christ—a dead and a living man. The Father of the prodigal son expressed it: "The lost is found. He was dead and now he is alive." To our souls, it is the difference between hope and despair. He is a living power. How do we feel about it?

Prayer—Dear Lord, may our lives proclaim the Lord Jesus. Bring to us the consciousness of sin by bringing us into the presence of Christ and keeping us in his presence always. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A PERSONAL TESTIMONY.

"And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men to me."—Jno. 12:32.

Christian living has never made me afraid. I was born of Christian parents and nurtured in a Christian home. I cannot recall when I gave my heart to God. I passed into personal relationship with Christ without volcanic eruption or consciousness. I have had much to repent of, but as far back as I can remember, I believed in Christ and trusted God. In my life there has been a growing consciousness of Christ. In that consciousness I have learned more and more not to measure my life by the standards of men, nor by the average man, but to measure it by the standard of Jesus Christ. When this became my consciousness, I began to see how much I was a sinner and to go down in the dust of humility and plead for his mercy. This is one way of finding oneself. This is one way of laying the life down in order that it might be taken up.

In the vision of the Lord we know our sins. In the lift of the Cross we are satisfied in his pardon. In the harmony with his will we are given power to stand. Pardoned in his death, we are saved in his life.

Prayer—Our Father, may we ever live in thy presence now—here in this life—and forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

STRAY BRICKS.

"There are four things which are little upon the earth, but they are exceeding wise."—Prov. 30:24-31.

Agur's four little things are ants, conies, locusts, and lizards; but the wise since his day have been heaping up instances of amazing and profitable trifles. One of these, it seems, is stray bricks. A man in North Carolina has been carrying home the stray bricks he has found. He amassed ten thousand bricks in a year and a half, and now he has a perfectly good three-room house made entirely of those waste bricks.

A man may easily become learned by using the odd minutes. Fine characters may be built up by looking after the flaws which other folks neglect and utilizing the opportunities for helpfulness which most persons pass by. Eternal life may be constructed out of little Bible verses and little prayers for which most of us consider ourselves to be too busy.

Prayer—Infinite Architect, direct our building. Make us wise beyond the fragment of time we spend on earth. And grant that we may regard nothing as a trifle if it concerns thy will. Amen.

—A. R. WELLS.

SATURDAY.

ROUNDED CORNERS.

"Let us search and try our ways."—Lamentations 3:40-54.

Berlin has been experimenting in the rounding of street corners, and has found it to be a great improvement. When corners are left square, automobiles can not make the turn without running out to or beyond the middle of the street; but with round corners they can turn close to the curb, thus avoiding the danger of collisions and speeding up the traffic decidedly. Berlin is now rounding off all corners in the city, as far as practicable.

There is a lesson here for all of us in the cities of our souls. Too many of us have built ourselves angular minds. We need to round off the corners of our opinions, our prejudices, our preferences. We should make it easier for other folk to live with us.

It is far less trouble to lay out a city or a life in rectangles, with square corners. A straight line is more readily drawn than a curve. We naturally proceed along the path of selfishness. We do not naturally bend aside, out of the way of others. But round corners are the Christian way.

Prayer—Our Saviour, lead us on the road of love. Make us brotherly and neighborly. That thy will may be done on earth, and thy way may be known among all peoples. Amen.

—A. R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"Thou shalt see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither."—Deut. 32:48-52.

One of the saddest of the Bible tragedies is the view of Canaan which Moses had from Mt. Pisgah. He was allowed to feast his eyes on the promised land, but he was not allowed to enter it, because he had outraged the divine majesty when he brought water from the rock. Thus his hundred and twenty years came to a sorrowful conclusion.

So it is with many of us. It is easy to dream, to hope, to see visions. It is very hard to bring to completion even the least of these. Too often we take the vision for the deed, and pride ourselves on what we mean to do as if we had actually done it. For all such there is a Mt. Pisgah, and a burial there—nothing more.

Joshua and Caleb were very inferior to Moses in their intellectual power and their abilities as leaders of men, but they were his superior in that they realized their visions. Instead of Mt. Pisgah was the crossing of the Jordan for them, the conquest and the settlement of Canaan. For all his glory, they would not have exchanged lots with Moses.

Prayer—Our Father, give us grand visions, but oh! enable us to make them real. We would walk humbly with thee through the wilderness, that we may possess our Canaans. Amen.

THE BIBLE AND THE DEPRESSION.

By DR. ELISHA H. KING.

The word "depression" is not a new word. It has been used by every nation under the sun during their periods of unsuccessful existence. The history of the world is a record of the rise and fall of nations and as history is best told in biography, we find the same law at work among individuals. The movement of progress is not steady, but more like the waves of the sea, now up, now down, but progress itself is like the tide that rises slowly but surely.

Life is made up of sunshine and shadow, of joys and sorrows, of successes and failures; but life continues. If one nation fails the world goes on, if individuals fail society continues. Life is persistent and cannot be defeated though individuals fall by the wayside. And history teaches us that men are made or broken in the way they meet success or failure. There is a difference in the way they take it. Nothing better has ever been written on this theme than the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Every worthy represented there passed through a terrible grilling but endured through Faith.

The sacred writer is careful to tell us what he means by faith. It is the assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen. It is that intangible spiritual influence by which men achieve. Without it they become helpless and disappear from the stage of life, with it they override every difficulty. Mind becomes superior to matter, spirit stronger than flesh and the will supremely powerful. Faith changes despair into hope, defeat into victory, sorrow into gladness, anxiety into encouragement. The depression is changed to mean "press on."

The old story of the man who owned a small estate and in a period of discouragement decided to sell it, may be worked over to enforce a truth in this connection. He called in a publicity man whom he instructed to write a description of the estate to be printed in the newspapers. When the agent visited the owner and read his story he said, "Please read it over again." After the owner had listened the second time, he said, "I do not think I will sell. I have been looking for just such an estate all my life, but I did not know that I owned it." This seems to be the case with the Bible. Doubtless there are copies of the precious volume in every home, but like a favorable will, unread by the beneficiary, or a buried treasure in the garden, it remains closed and unknown and the medicine for every woe of the human heart which it contains is untouched and unapplied.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, for more than twenty-five years the pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, New York, said recently, "The majority of Christians are lukewarm in their Bible study, and the majority of those who are not Christians do not read the Bible at all. Indifference to the Bible is one of the outstanding features of our time." "Nevertheless," he says, "this Book has been built into the moral fiber of the nation." General Grant said, "To the influence of this Book we are indebted for the progress made in true civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future." General Robert E. Lee said, "The Bible is a Book in comparison with which all others, in my eyes, are of minor importance, and in all my perplexities and distresses has never failed to give me strength." Great and good men everywhere have praised the Bible, but as Dr. Jefferson says, "The Bible in the house is nothing unless it is also in the mind. Only a Bible in the minds becomes a force in the life of the town. A Bible unread accomplishes nothing."

Why is the Bible of such value in a period of depression? Because the Bible for the most part was written by men who lived in periods of depression, and on account of their inextinguishable faith in God they worked their way through to daylight. Another reason is this: we believe that God revealed His love and solicitude for all His children through these wonderful expressions of faith. Within this mass of literature are found laws and principles of life which, if followed, would bring health, wealth and happiness to thousands of people. If, on the other hand, life seems to be one of hardship, poverty and struggle the Bible contains comfort and encouragement all along the way.

The Drama of Job is a noble example of this power of the Sacred Book. A good man of great wealth loses everything—his houses, lands, family and friends. He rebels against God because he feels the injustice of it all. Three of his so-called friends try to prove his sinfulness as a cause of his calamity but Job maintains his integrity and refuses to believe it. The suffering through which he passed worked out for him a staunch and manly character, brought him to a better understanding of God and led him to say finally, "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him," and "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord!"

The story of the Hebrews as told in this Old Testament is, as Lewis Browne calls it, "Stranger than Fiction." The Hebrews had the promises of Jehovah to live by, but they lived mostly in the valley, on the desert or in captivity. They lost all their money, their liberty, their homes, and cried out on the banks of the Euphrates, "How can we sing the songs of Zion in a strange land?" But they also declared, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I remember thee not, if I set not Jerusalem above my chiefest joy." Their religion was all they had that they could call their own. This was their meat and drink. The bludgeonings of circumstance did but make them cling more closely to their God.

When Daniel was told not to pray to his God any more, he opened his window toward Zion and prayed while the angry lions roared and his enemies laughed. In time Zion was rebuilt, prosperity once more came to them. But when the Romans came with their legions at a later day many of them rushed into the temple and perished there. Neither life nor death, massacre or torture, sword or fire could quench their faith in God. Without their tenacious, uncompromising faith the nation would have perished from the earth centuries before.

The lamentations of this people are found in the poetry of the nation. Where will you find anything more representative of the wavering soul between fear and faith than in the 42nd Psalm Here are a few lines:

"Why art thou cast down, O, my soul?
Why so despairing?
Wait, wait for God; I shall again be praising Him,
My saving help, my God."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It is sometimes the case that we overlook to report some article that has been sent to us; but we want to assure you that it is always an error of the head and not of the heart. We appreciate contributions, however small, and would report a pair of socks as readily as we would a suit of clothes.

The good women of our churches made up their minds that our children should have a chicken dinner for Christmas, and they did it beautifully and in a grand way—but in reporting the number of coops of chickens sent in, somehow we overlooked making mention of a coop of chickens sent in from our Pleasant Ridge Church, N. C. We regret this, and offer our apology and beg forgiveness and promise to do better in the future.

If our churches knew how much help it is to us in this work to donate flour, chickens, lard, preserves, canned fruit, clothing, sheets, spreads, dresses for the girls, etc., I believe they would do more work of this kind. If a church would ship us a barrel of flour, or two or three barrels, it would save us buying that amount, and we need these things. Since the bank closed and caught our money and tied it up for some time to come, it has made a gray color come on your superintendent's head thinking just how to meet bills.

For fifteen years, by your loyalty and the loyalty of friends who love little children who are helpless and dependent, we have been able to pay our bills each month and so far this year we have been able to meet them. It would be sad and heart-breaking now to break that record. Will you suffer it to happen? If you have no money and have wheat, send us wheat or flour, or any of the articles mentioned above. It will help us.

We have three nice brick buildings all filled with bright boys and girls, with splendid good Christian women to train the children, and keep the buildings clean and tidy. These children are here because they had no other homes. They are asking you for a chance in life, because former conditions and circumstances denied them a chance. Now, won't you come to our rescue in this time of need? Don't wait for your neighbor to see that it is done. Ask yourself this question: "What have I done to help the Christian Orphanage and its 105 children?" Don't let your church wait for some other church to see that we have bread. How much bread has your church furnished during the year just passed? Please think, and do whatever your conscience prompts you to do.

The following has been sent in since our last report:

B. W. Sellars & Sons, Burlington, N. C., 13 lumber jackets for boys.

Ladies' Aid Society, Sanford Church, N. C., 1 gross pencils.

Ladies of the Liberty Christian Church, Liberty, N. C., one nice quilt.

Acme Drug Co., Burlington, N. C., 3 dozen jars of fancy candy.

We are grateful. CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4½ inches x¾ inch made. The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made. The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller. It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength. One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together. The size, 2½x1¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.
Or where will we find a more assuring faith than in these words of Psalm 46:2-4:

"God is our refuge and our strength,
A very present help in trouble.
Therefore, we will not fear though the earth do move,
And though the mountains be moved into the heart of the seas.
Though the waters roar and foam
Though the mountains quake at the swelling thereof."

And so it is that the Old Testament ministers to our despondent mood today. It is possible that in the days of prosperity we have been altogether too prone to think our material things sufficient, but it was Jesus who said, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." (Luke 12-15.) A young governor of Massachusetts changed it to read, "It is better to make a life than to make a living." The richness of life consists of a cultured soul, a wholesome faith, some leisure, and trusting friends. Channing's "Symphony of Life," may seem a bit fantastic for this age, but after all it breathes the spirit of a calm and happy life.

"To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common—this is to be my symphony."

A curious thing has been happening in the world for some years. Dr. Jefferson reminds us that a new generation of Orientals has been trying to discover the secret of America's prosperity. (Let us notice that by way of comparison with other nations, we are still a prosperous people. Conditions here are infinitely better than anywhere else in spite of our feeling of depression!) It has been hinted to them (the young Orientals) that the secret lies in a little book called the New Testament—a book that tells the story of a man who was born in Asia and whom the West has crowned the Saviour of the world. These young foreigners, as we call them, are reading this book as never before. Though they are not professing Christians they are searching the Scriptures to find out why a large degree of enlightenment and prosperity follows this book. We who have read it understand, but what will the next generation have to say about it if they grow up without any knowledge whatsoever of the Bible?

A story of the civilizing influence of the Bible is told of a skeptical Frenchman who visited the Pacific Islands. The Chief of the Tribe had a copy of the Bible in his house. The Frenchman sneered at it, saying that in Europe they had got past that book! The Chief, understanding the reference, led his guest out of the house and showed him the place (and the utensils) where they used to cook and eat their meals in cannibal days. The Chief said, "My friend, if it had not been for that book (the Bible) I should have been dining upon you now!"

The Bible should be circulated widely. It is being printed in many languages, but what a shame it would be to buy it simply to give it away and never read it for ourselves. The Bible as printed these days may be had by anyone who desires it in any language he can read whether he has any money or not. But a beautiful Bible in the home will do no one any good unless he reads it.

In these times there should be a revival of Bible reading. It would encourage our faith, strengthen our good resolves, give us courage to carry on, and help us answer the question,

"Why art thou cast down, O my soul?" with the reassuring reply, "Hope thou in God for I shall yet praise Him who is my saving help, my God." The secret of triumph over depression at any time is a strong faith in a good God whom we may trust to carry us through.

"I see the wrong that round me lies," says Whittier:

"I feel the guilt within;
I hear, with groan and travail-cries
The world confess its sin.
"Yet, in the maddening maze of things
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixed trust my spirit clings;
I know that God is good!"

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAMS.

We, the members of Mt. Bethel Sunday School, feel deeply the loss of our sister, Mrs. Mary Williams, who died on January 2nd. While we mourn her passing, and will miss her cheerful presence, we feel that our loss is Heaven's gain. In memory of her pure life and Christlike spirit we have a noble example to follow.

Therefore, we, the committee on behalf of our Sunday School, offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to His will and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun," for publication, and a copy be filed with the records of the Sunday School.

MRS. CLARA MORICOLE,
MRS. J. T. STEWART,

Committee.

HOLLAND.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Holland died at the home of her son, J. C. Holland, Drum Hill, N. C., February 12, 1932, aged 78 years. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Holy Neck Church, assisted by Dr. W. M. Jay, pastor of Holland Christian Church, and Rev. T. L. Brown, pastor of Reynoldson Baptist Church.

Mrs. Holland had been a member of Holy Neck Church since her early married life. She was a good woman and died as she had lived trusting in her Saviour. She leaves seven children: J. C. Holland, Drum Hill, N. C.; Mrs. Nannie Beacham, Holland, Va.; Mrs. Ollie Lewis, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. Pauline Hedgepeth, Mrs. Blanche Duke, Mrs. Clio Hedgepeth, and Dewey Holland, Holland, Va.; thirty-one grandchildren, and six Lenten Sunday for Parents.

The Greater New York Federation of Churches in cooperation with Columbia University Extension, has arranged a special study and discussion group for parents during the Lenten season. The subject chosen, "What Is Basic in Religion that We Must Share With Our Children?" is one which ought to attract a goodly number of perplexed men and women. The leader chosen for these meetings is Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers, successor to Dr. Jefferson at the Broadway Tabernacle. Dr. Chalmers is registering marked success in his pastoral activities, and is rapidly assuming a place of religious leadership in the city.

Federal Council Work.—

In the face of the conflict in China it is good to know that the Federal Council of Churches has been working earnestly to bring the power of the Christian conscience to bear upon the men who have the decisions to make in this crisis. In addition to keeping in touch with our own authorities, cables have been sent to the Japanese Christians and Japanese officials. Cables have come from Christian leaders in both Japan and China appealing to American Christians to urge the government of the United States to adopt every possible measure for restoring peace between China and Japan. This is the Christian course and should result in conciliation.

Power For or Power Over?—

The Christian, like other men, longs for power, but he wishes power at his command to be used for mankind. The non-Christian wishes power as much as the Christian, but he wishes power to use for his own benefit over others. The unselfish desire power with which to bless others and make them happy; the selfish desire power to wield over others to make himself happy. Place the former in positions of trust and confidence and they will use the power at their command to elevate humanity and to make it a blessing to others; put the selfish in positions of power and they will use over others for selfish glory. He came not to be ministered to, but to minister to others. This is the keynote of the Christian religion. This is the measure of a man, and it is God's measure.

Brotherhood of Man.—

There is much said about the brotherhood of man as the goal of Christian effort, but while the great object of Christ in the Kingdom of God was doubtless to establish the idea of the salvation of society and the brotherhood of man, the most important conception of our immediate work among men is the manhood of the brother. Without the manhood of the brother there can never be the brotherhood of man. We must work with the individual and make our evangelistic appeal to the individual for his personal salvation. The salvation of each is an unique experience which is intensely personal. The modern idea of religious education may do much to teach unconverted people what they ought to do, but regeneration is the unique work of God in the soul of man and the best we can do is to fulfill the conditions of salvation and by faith accept his way of salvation.

Magic or Mysticism?—

Speaking of the temptations of Jesus at Trinity Episcopal Church, New York City, two weeks ago, Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, of Philadelphia, declared that magic still plagues the world of religion. Comparing magic with mysticism he said: "Magic tries to get, mysticism tries to give. Magic uses God for its own purposes, whereas mysticism uses God for his own purposes. They are poles apart, yet they look so much alike that it is difficult to distinguish them. Many of the ills of today are the result of this ancient conflict. It appears in the conflict between man-made religions and God-made religions which project man's desires on the screen of his fears. No wonder people say that religion is breaking down. We must learn what the will of God is, not what we think it ought to be. He said, 'If you do the will of God, you will know the truth.'"

Women Rap Repeal Talk.—

A resolution which expressed strong opposition to any referendum on the Eighteenth Amendment and prohibition laws was passed by 1,000 women in their annual Woman's Missionary Union meeting of the Atlanta Association of Churches last week. The delegates represented more than 15,000 women in societies of Atlanta, and spoke with intense feeling on the resolution which flatly opposed any kind of referendum of the prohibition question to the voters. "This thing has been settled by votes already," said Mrs. J. W. Willis, retiring president and sister to Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia, and noted prohibition leader. If the women of our land and the loyal supporters of prohibition will stand together, there will be complete and final victory against all and every effort to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment or to modify the present restriction on the prohibition question.

Planning Ahead.—

The Board of Trustees of Elon College was in session last week laying plans for the new year. It was good to see the men at the college working with faith and hope and outlook for a great session of the institution for the coming year. The problems are not yet all solved, the difficulties are not all met, but real progress has been made within the past two months under the administration of Dr. Smith. The friends of the college are loyal to the institution and will rally to the support of the college as fast as economic conditions will make it possible. With the cooperation of all the constituency of the church and friends outside we shall soon see Elon doing greater things than ever. I understand that there will be a special Elon College Day observed at the approaching Commencement, devoted to the development of a widening loyalty and larger support of the college. Everybody interested should plan to come on that day.

Lands Recreation.—

Dr. Lawrence Pearsall Jacks, noted British editor of the Hibbert Journal and principal of Manchester College at Oxford, has recently spent several days at Atlanta, Ga., and has addressed interested groups of educational and professional people on the subject of "Recreation." He urged the abandonment of indoor pastimes for outdoor life. He commented on the obvious fallacy of seeking recreation by sitting in dark theaters and at game tables indoors. "Take yourself into the open for vigorous out-of-door recreation every day," he urged, and he is good authority on many things connected with life of the body as well as of the soul. Many of our people would live longer, work better, and serve more if they would follow his advice. Many people who go away from their work to watering places and other recreational places for renewed strength would find it just outside the door if they would only use it. Try this remedy and see what results you can get.

Garrett Seminary in Desperation.—

The Christian Advocate reports that President F. C. Eiselen, of Garrett Seminary, has received less than $20,000 in pledges toward keeping the school's doors open another year. This is less than a fourth of the amount needed. The trustees have placed an agent in the field who will solicit large gifts. If 1,000 alumni would contribute $5.00 a month, the crucial emergency could be met. The entire income from the seminary property has been assigned to the bondholders' committee. The $5,500,000 real estate in Evans-ton and Chicago is encumbered with $3,000,000 of indebtedness. Our college should take heart when we remember that others are in far worse difficulty than we. If the alumni of Elon College, or even half of them, would give $5.00 a month to Elon College we would be safe with what other help we could get. Our president will have to appeal to our people for money to meet the obligations which we must meet, and we believe that many who have not given all they can will respond to his request until we shall soon see better conditions. The future of the college is assured if we will cooperate the best we can.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. J. E. Kirby, pastor of our Raleigh (N. C.) Church, was a visitor in Richmond for a short while Monday.

We welcome the following new subscribers this week: Mrs. Mary Stilson, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Russell Laine, Windsor, Va., and Miss Hilda Acey, Norfolk, Va.

From an exchange we clip the following: "Be sure that your church puts the college in its regular budget. Times are hard, but success depends on sharing with others. Christian education ought to receive its share of the funds of the church."

Mrs. J. H. Warren, wife of the pastor of our Ocean View Christian Church, has been very ill for several weeks. We hope that she will soon be well again. Mrs. Warren is a very faithful worker in her church and her presence is greatly missed.

Mr. Frank Alexander represented Richmond at the Eastern Virginia Elon Alumni Association last Friday evening. He reported a most enjoyable and profitable meeting. There were others who wished to attend, but were detained by business, or otherwise.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The churches of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference are urged to send as large a representation as possible to the Mid-year Conference, which will be held with the Bethlehem Church, Thursday, March 10th. The program is arranged so as to provide for free discussion of the problems of the church. Please come prepared to ask and answer questions of importance to the local church and to the general work of the church. While large space will be given to discussion, we are happy to state that Dr. L. E. Smith, recently elected president of Elon College, has consented to be with us, and we are indeed glad to give him a place on the program. I hope that many of our people may hear him, and get acquainted with him. The morning session will open at 10:00 o'clock. Come, and help make it a great session.

R. L. WILLIAMSON, Pres.

UNUSUAL SESSION.

The ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference had a very delightful meeting February 22-23. The meeting was called at the usual time. Instead of having a regular program for two and one-half hours, as we usually do, we had a two-day conference. The fellowship of brother minister with brother minister for these two days was delightful and uplifting. Most all the ministers of the conference were present for part of the conference.

This unusual session of the Union was brought about by having the privilege of hearing Dr. Charles Emerson Burton in a series of five lectures. His messages dealt with a series of topics relating to the daily tasks of the minister. It goes without saying that these lectures were masterpieces; for those who know Dr. Burton know that he always gives something worthwhile. Following each lecture, there was an open forum. This proved helpful to all.

We often wonder if it would not be a fine thing for the ministers of the Southern Convention to get together at least once a year and have different men to present the various subjects which are so vital to the life of the minister, such a gathering and program might be worked out in connection with our Chautauqua at Elon each summer. It looks as though such a procedure would give a greater impetus to the Chautauqua and provide the fellowship of minister with minister, minister with young people, and also help keep the minister in contact with the vital problems of the day.

JOSEPH E. MCCAULEY.

HERE AND THERE IN THE VALLEY.

K. B. HOOK, Director of Religious Education.

At a recent session of the Executive Committee it was decided to hold the summer session of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference in Winchester. The Rev. R. L. Williamson, president of the Conference, is pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester, which will entertain the Conference in August.

The Young People of the Winchester Church and some of other churches throughout the Valley have already begun laying plans for Youth's part in the annual conference. It is expected that there will be another annual banquet of the Youth Congress as there was last August, when the Conference met at Mt. Olivet Church, in Greene Co.

It was the privilege of the director to attend morning worship at the Leaksville Church, February 7th. Rev. A. W. Andes delivered a particularly strong sermon on this occasion. One of the chief things observed in that worship service was the free participation in the service by practically all present. There was a spirit of reverence and true worship throughout the service. Bro. Andes is doing remarkable work considering the large number of churches in his pastorate.

March 21st we journeyed over to the Mt. Olivet (Rockingham) Church, where we were privileged to hear Dr. M. L. Weekley deliver one of the most impressive sermons we have ever heard. Dr. Weekley is certainly one of the strongest men in our denomination, from a spiritual point of view, at least.

Sadness must come to each of us. Our good folks here in the Valley are blessed in many ways, but they, too, have their troubles. Both Leaksville and Mt. Olivet have suffered loss in recent weeks, when the hand of death removed a member from each congregation.

Mrs. Jenkins, who with other members of her family, has long served the Leaksville Church faithfully, passed to her reward January 28th. May our loving Father comfort and guide the three daughters and son whose loving mother has been taken from them.

The Mt. Olivet community mourns the loss of Mr. Bruce, whose death occurred about two weeks ago. We understand that Mr. Bruce was a former teacher in the Mt. Olivet Sunday School.

Our omnipotent Father called upon his faithful servant, Dr. M. L. Weekley, to make one of the greatest sacrifices man can make, when he removed from this earth, Mrs. M. L. Weekley, Bro. Weekley's faithful and loving wife. Mrs. Weekley was ill for some days at the Rockingham Memorial Hospital in Harrisonburg, where she passed to her reward about three weeks ago. Through the grace of God, Dr. Weekley, though sadly broken by the great loss sustained, is working quite zealously for the glory of God and his kingdom.

Dr. Weekley is planning a series of Sunday evening services in which six Congregational-Christian Churches are participating cooperatively. The first of these will be held at the Bethlehem Church, Sunday night, February 28th. This is a fine step forward in our Valley work.

A PLAN FOR SPIRITUAL EXERCISE.

The exercises about to be suggested do not presuppose a large amount of free time. They are intended for people who are part and parcel of the exacting, passionate life of our day, but who feel the need of more vigorous and satisfying relations with the Eternal Life and Mind and Spirit than they have had, and want the increased inward vigor that comes from such intensified and disciplined relations. The time devoted to the exercises may be lengthened as much as any individual will, and such lengthening would be of great advantage; but even the minimum mentioned here makes it possible to accomplish something of worth in the development of spiritual vitality.

Here, then, is a simple plan.

Go apart by yourself. Choose a place and time, and a position of the body, which will help you to become most thoroughly oblivious of external things.

Then offer a brief preliminary prayer for intense awareness of God; or merely utter the words which you find most effective for helping you to the realization of God. Some such words as these: "O my God, infinite and eternal Father, my Saviour, thou brooding, enfolding, life-giving Spirit." Hunt for the words which present God most vividly to your own mind and soul.

After that, try for five minutes to shut out from your mind every thought but the thought of God. Exclude all petition, and even all praise. Exclude, if possible, all words but the reiterated expression, "My God, My God," or "My Saviour, My Master," or "Thou enfolding Life!" or some such. Make it a time of "pure intent upon God: not thought about your needs, nor about your desires, but intense concentration upon God, with all else banished from the mind.

After this, take another period of five minutes for the absorption of God. Start with a prayer something after this order: "O my God, in thee I live and move and have my being; and thou art Life, and Spirit, and Mind, and Energy, and Light, and Loveliness; and thou desirest to live in me and work through me." Then invite the abundance of God into yourself. And not only invite, but definitely and actively take life and spirit and mind and energy and light and loveliness from God. This period should not be a time of passively waiting to feel something. It should be a time of intensely willed appropriation of the very life of God for yourself.

If you cannot take five minutes for these things, take two minutes. Take also a minute or two or some affirmations. Then make your prayers of the more usual kind. Your mind will doubtless be full of them.

After a few minutes spent in this fashion, you should find yourself living habitually with the consciousness that it is indeed in God that you live and move and have your being, and that you are in touch with him continually, receiving from him continually. You should find yourself in a state of inner and outer calmness that you have not known before, with a vigor of body and mind and soul which enables you to meet the demands of life more efficiently and more happily.—Congregationalist.

Though sorrows, heaviness and faintness of the heart ever so much increase; yet if thy faith increase also, it will bear thee up in the midst of them. I would fain have it go well with thee, and that thou mightst not want the holy Counsellor and Advisor in any strait or difficulty which the wise and tender God orders to befall thee.—Isaac Pennington.

MISS COGHILL AT FORT MYERS.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Assistant for Religious Education and Young People's Work in Florida, spent last week at Fort Myers, where she was an instructor in an Interdenominational Leadership Training Institute. She also spoke at the Sunday night forum at the Edison Park Community Church, of which Rev. O. T. Anderson is pastor. This forum is a distinct feature of the church work at Fort Myers. Miss Coghill's subject was "The Modern Youth Movement." She has recently returned from the important religious education meetings in Chicago.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY AT POMONA.

The church at Pomona, Fla., last Sunday, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the church which occurred in 1882. The pastor of the church, Rev. R. E. Newton, has served the church since 1924. He and his church committee had planned an interesting celebration. The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent of the Florida Conference, and at a special afternoon service, Rev. Charles DeW. Brower, of Interlachen, gave an historical address on "Congregationalism in Florida." Mr. Brower has been in pastoral service in Florida for a number of years, having served the churches in Tampa, Sanford and Winter Park and he was well qualified to speak upon this subject. The church at Pomona has filled an important place in the Conference in Florida, though it is a small village.

THE SPIRIT THAT WINS.

In a recent letter from one of our Home Missionary pastors, after telling of the great hardships they were facing, both as a church or as individual members of the church, he goes on in a semi-humorous, but fine way, to express a spirit which is sure to win. We quote the following:

"This is only a part of our 'tummy-ache.' One thing is sure, there'll be no going to sleep under a Juniper tree even if there is a chance of having an Angel come around. If an Angel wants to see me and talk to me he or she will have to get busy and step lively. I am on the run and he will have to run and talk while running. There is lots of work to be done. My clothes are in fine shape; so are my shoes. My car will have to die in 'his boots.' My health is O. K., and God is still on deck and in His time will speak. It is a great world. A great challenge is before us. It is great to be living. I prefer this age to the era of prosperity. I feel I have a mission now. A message! Listeners! The Day of Great Faith and fervent prayer is here."

DEDICATION AT FORT MYERS.

The beautiful new church at Fort Myers, Fla., was dedicated with appropriate and impressive services on Sunday, February 14th. The pastor of this church, Rev. O. T. Anderson, and his congregation are certainly to be congratulated on the dedication of this fine building. The dedication sermon was preached by Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Secretary of Missions from Washington, D. C., the topic of his sermon was "Finding God Where God Finds Us." A special act of dedication was led by the pastor, who also offered the prayer of dedication.

In the evening the services took the form of a Forum, following out the usual program for the winter service in this church. The address was given by Superintendent Gillette, who spoke upon "The Function of the Church in Community Service." He also answered questions and led the discussion which followed. Both services were largely attended and all were pleased with the dignity and beauty of the church and its setting. The church is now known as The Edison Park Community Church (Congregational). It is beautifully located, facing a broad driveway and the impressive gateway to the Park. It is directly across the street from the homes of Mrs. Thomas A. Edison and Mr. Henry Ford. The architect of the building was Mr. William O. Sparklin, who is the architect of all the Barron-Collier interests. Mr. Sparklin contributed his services. The church was organized in 1925 and Mr. Anderson has been pastor since its organization.

A FLORIDA RECORD.

The Florida Conference was one of the few State Conferences in the country to give more for missions in 1931 than in 1930. Early in the month the Commission on Missions issued a table showing the credits for the various states and the group conferences. This table was not complete as later credits were reported by the Boards. In this table, however, only two conferences were reported as having given more than in the year previous, these two conferences being Southern Idaho and Wyoming. Next in order came Florida with a loss of four-tenths of one per cent, this being much below any other state in the Union. However, we are glad to report that undesignated gifts reported by the American Board since that time has changed Florida from a negative to a positive state. The final credits under the apportionments stand as follows: For the American Board, $4,425, as against $3,711 in 1930. For the Home Boards, $4,269, as against $4,539 in 1930. This gives a total of $8,695 against $8,250 for 1930, or a gain of $445. This does not include the unbudgeted receipts which are credited to the churches. When these are included it brings the total contributions for Congregational-Christian missions to over $10,000 for the year. This is much below the giving of Florida in the days of prosperity, but we are at least glad that the State has done better than last year. Mr. Harold B. Belcher, Treasurer of the American Board writes:

"I want to send a word of congratulation to you on the record which Florida has made with the American Board on its 1931 apportionment giving. There are only a few states which have registered any increase over 1930 figures and I realize that it represents a real accomplishment in these days, particularly when you have plenty of home missionary needs right there before you."

A MISSION TOUR IN FLORIDA.

A series of four conferences were held in Florida in the interest of the missionary program of the churches. These conferences were held in the First Church, Miami; Union Church, West Palm Beach; First Church, Daytona Beach, and the church at Winter Park. These were attended by the pastors and delegates from the churches in their respective regions. The conferences were very well attended and great interest was shown. The team that visited the conferences consisted of Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, of Washington, D. C.,

Miss Miriam Wodbury, of New York, with Miss Pattie Lee Goghill and Edwin C. Gillette, of Florida. Dr. Bloom presented the needs of the Boards in the present crisis, calling attention to the fact that the contributions in 1931 fell off from the contributions of the year before by $459,000. He also spoke upon the effects of this loss upon the work, and the cuts in salaries and budgets that had resulted therefrom. Also the voluntary contributions being made by many in the form of percentage cuts contributed to the special relief fund of the Extension Boards.

Dr. Gillette especially presented the Dollar Plan, and discussed with the pastors and delegates methods for interesting the members of churches and constituency in the plan. Miss Coghill especially presented the relation of the young people and the Sunday School to this plan. Miss Woodbury gave missionary talks, bringing fresh interpretations of the work being done in the Home Mission field. The party made the tour of the State by automobile, with the superintendent at the wheel.

Following this series, Dr. Bloom spent three days in St. Petersburg doing some special writing. Miss Woodbury visited the West Tampa Mission and also spoke at Interlachen and Jacksonville.

HONORING DR. HALLIDAY.

A large gain in the work of the National Congregational and Christian Church Extension Boards during the decade since 1921 in spite of the decline on account of the depression last year was reported today at a luncheon at the George Washington Hotel, Lexington Avenue and 23rd Street, in honor of the tenth anniversary of Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, D.D., as General Secretary.

The luncheon was given by the Administrative Committee of the Extension Boards, the George W. C. Hill, D. D., of New Britain, Conn., chairman, presiding. The receipts the last fiscal year, Dr. Hill stated, were $1,191,640, a gain of $354,656 over ten years ago. The endowment of the Boards during the decade has nearly tripled, increasing from $1,622,562 to $4,749,419.

The proportion of the costs for administration and promotion to the total expenses of the Boards was reduced during the ten years from 15 to 12.7 per cent. Appropriations to missionary pastors were increased 21 per cent and a pension system for all employees of the boards, ordained and unordained, has been put into operation.

New members received by mission churches during the decade were 34,053. The number of states depending upon the national extension boards for maintenance of their mission churches has been reduced by three, leaving as national missionary territory twenty-one states in which are 614 mission churches in addition to the self-supporting churches. In 158 of these mission churches foreign languages are used, including Albanian, Armenian, Assyrian, Bulgarian, Chinese, Czech and won the alphabet to Spanish, Swedish, Syrian, Turkish and Welsh.

Dr. Halliday is a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and was pastor of the Ocean Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., for eight years previous to his election to his present position. Since 1930, he has been vice-president and chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Home Missions Council, the cooperative organization of the home mission boards of twenty-seven denominations in the United States and Canada.

His early schooling was obtained on the Indian reservation of L'Anse, Mich., with Indian boys as his schoolmates. The Indian mission church on the reservation was included in the circuit of his father, a pioneer preacher of the state. Dr. Halliday's own first pastoral charge was in the town of Ontonagon, in Northern Michigan.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN FLORIDA.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27, 1932.

People who like them are not likely to be without oranges in the next generation or two. Florida having tried its hand on a land boom and having ingloriously failed (as all superficial and specious efforts, undertakings and values do fail sooner or later), is now getting down to its own again and is developing a real asset. Florida can grow oranges. By the kindness of a friend who has his car here, I visited yesterday what is claimed to be the largest single and continuous citrus grove in the world. Think of one hundred and ten thousand acres studded from center to circumference with grapefruit and orange trees all in luxurious growth and bearing. This a rolling, hilly section, so that miles in the distance, as far as one can see, the long, straight unbroken rows bent with trees of rich green foliage and golden fruits. Hundreds of thousands of crates of oranges and grapefruit have already gone forth from this grove and many hundreds of thousands are now in the picking and are to go forward to Eastern markets and out into the great world trade. The world need not go hungry for orange and grapefruit juice as long as Florida keeps its mind and climate, and refuses to be led into another land craze. They are just now reclaiming from waste and almost ruin, thousands of acres of orange groves. For be it remembered that the orange tree must be constantly nurtured, cultivated, fertilized, sprayed, trimmed, or it will go to wreck in quick and short order. They plow and weed out the orange groves in Florida as frequently and as assiduously as we do the cotton and corn fields in Carolina. If there is anything of value on this earth that grows and flourishes without labor and attention this writer has never found it. The old Romans were right, "Labor omnia vincit." And the reverse is true, "All things have to be conquered by labor."

The chief physician in charge here told us, in his medical lecture last Wednesday evening, that the longevity of life had been lifted from a level of 33 years, a half century ago, to a level of 53 years at present, not by lengthening the life of the old, but by saving the life of infants and the young. Not as many people now reach 70, 75, 80, 85 years of age as did fifty years ago. The nervous strain on man now, our complex method of living, our disregard of fundamental laws of health now carried off people of maturity far more rapidly than was the case fifty years ago. Where one person had diabetes fifty years ago, 166 persons have it now. Where one died with cancer fifty years ago, 150 die with it now. Where there was one nervous wreck of body and mind fifty years ago there are more than 200 now—and so on. Hospitals and clinics and sanitariums are multiplying, and many of them are crowded to overflowing with those who have voluntarily or involuntarily violated the laws of health, or tried to pack into one year what should have been put into two—and often to better effect. One is surprised indeed to find so many people of such varied experiences in a sanitarium. This writer numbers among his rather intimate acquaintances here and now a distinguished and well-known teacher and scholar (of Yale University), a wholesale shoe dealer of North Carolina, a shoe manufacturer of New Hampshire, a railroad official of St. Louis, a manufacturer and importer of jewelry of Chicago, an Episcopal clergyman of Washington, a missionary from Palestine, and so on. No profession or calling escapes the wreck and ravages of nervousness, rheumatism, insomnia, paralysis, and the hundred other diseases to which this mortal body falls heir.

It has been a restful month for this writer and it has brought strength, renewed hope and energy, a new lease on life's outlook, and now for home, work, service—the real joy of life. It is far more trying and difficult to rest than it is to work, and service is a blessing indeed, and not a curse—when the body is strong, the hand willing and the heart anxious. Life is mysterious and its problems many. Man, unaided and unguided by the divine hand, is hopeless and helpless—baffled. God alone can guide us through the dark as through the light, through weakness as through strength, through sickness as through health. In Him is our refuge and our only security. His blessings are beyond measure, and for all these we should be grateful.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

Few people in the pew realize the value of their presence at the regular service. Some think if they pay their dues and attend occasionally, they have done all that is really necessary for a member of the church; but this is a poor member compared with regular attendance. There are at least four values of regular church attendance: 1. It improves the preaching and that, as all will agree, needs improvement. Every preacher knows, if the members do not, that the smaller the congregation the harder it is to preach. The sermon in its delivery is largely derived from the congregation. That is one reason sermons at revival meetings are better than at regular services.

2. It improves spiritual growth in the church. There is something in association that creates an atmosphere that benefits all. It improves song service, the prayer, the aspirations of all present,

One rarely sees or feels spiritual enthusiasm in a small scattered congregation; but when the church is full and the singing is forceful, it warms all hearts and people return to their homes feeling "we had a good meeting."

3. It improves church activity. Members learn what should be done and what is being done by regular attendance; and when they see the need and hear the plans and come in contact with the active workers, they naturally become active in missions, orphanage, church paper, college, and the poor and sick. If they do not attend regularly they miss these contacts and this desire to engage in church work.

4. It improves church helpfulness. There are so many ways in which members can help, and there is so much that ought to be done, that regular attendance acquaints members with the needs and suggests ways and means to help the shut-ins, the poor, the neglected, the unfortunate, the aged, and all forms and conditions of those needing visits, kindness, and material help; that touch with others, conference about conditions and needs will touch minds and hearts and increase all the church activities.

W. W. S.

DO WE CARE?

I live alone, in a small apartment of adequate accommodation and gentility. Rent is high, very high. Rent is something a person in my position cannot control. Optional expense is different. Other than a place to live, practically all personal outlay is a matter of self-regulation. At this time, when a big part of the world is hungry and cold it behooves the person who cares to do something about it. It did not take depression and disaster, such as now prevail, to bring me to this manner of reasoning. Always I have felt condemned to appropriate comforts beyond that which would seem a fair level for all mankind. From childhood to this day I have steadfastly refrained from extravagance or excess in any line of personal gratification or aggrandizement. For many years Sherwood Eddy's motto has been mine: "To live simply and sacrificially, without waste or luxury."

Just now thousands are helpless—without food or the equivalent of five cents a day to provide food and other exigencies. Why should not I restrict myself to less than former indulgence even though already, in comparison to the common average in the better circumstances of life, the amount personally expended is astonishingly small? For many years conservatism and economy have been my rule for laying by for the Lord. But past-time self-allowance is more than enough. I am over-supplied. So forcefully am I brought to this consciousness that every meal I have eaten since the New Year has been with the feeling that it ought to be shared, if not directly, with causes and sources which fortify against future material lack and loss of morale. I firmly believe for me and for thousands whom I have specified as within the better circumstances of life, that less than customary outlay would amply cover every need and reasonable comfort. Feeling this way, I have thought out the matter to this conclusion: in addition to a tenth (the first tenth never has been mine, nor yours; never will be), hereafter I shall not count myself as having shared until I have spared to the limit of what in my best judgment, were material equity established, would be proportionate for human allotment. Who will join me in this resolve? I need both temporal and eternal blessing. So do you, and others. "What doth it profit" to say "be ye warmed and filled"?

I have prepared this statement for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and wish to subscribe myself.

A WOMAN.

OPPOSITION TO CARDOZA.

Condensation of, with extracts from, the statement of William H. Anderson, General Secretary of the American Protestant Alliance, Washington, February 19, 1932.

"When a judge is through with a case, his handling of it may be criticized without his having any greater right or higher power than an ordinary private citizen. Judge Benjamin N. Cardoza is heralded as the friend and protector of human rights. When I establish a wicked injustice and a vicious prostitution of the courts, and his participation in sustaining it, I have raised a valid issue of fitness for membership in the United States Supreme Court which the Committee and the Senate must decide in the light of the fact that when a judge has once helped a concern like Tammany, there is always the possibility of a repetition.

"The New York newspapers, with one exception, have grossly misrepresented the facts about my case (some of them even since I made this protest) which, the Assistant General Manager of the Associated Press said in writing, involved a political issue. The Dallas (Texas) News, 2,000 miles away, editorially condemned this attitude (read to and filed with the committee). On a wholly fabricated charge, with no complaining witness who had the slightest interest or claimed to be wronged, I was convicted of a fictitious crime called 'third degree forgery.'

"The only thing charged in the only indictment which Tammany dared to bring to trial, hoping to confuse the public on bookkeeping technicalities though realizing that the man in the street instinctively knows whether a thing is stealing, was falsely called an 'alteration' of the books of the Anti-Saloon League, of which I was State Superintendent. In fact, all I did was to order openly, the correction of an error which had been made by a bookkeeper in entering a proper expenditure in the wrong column. No money changed hands as a result of it. It did not cost the League a cent, nor profit me a cent, and never could have done either. The certified public accountant auditors had approved it in the first place and did so at my so-called 'trial.' The Board of Directors, representing the only interest that could have possibly have been defrauded, unanimously indorsed what I did and denounced my prosecution as 'a monstrous perversion of justice'. (Read and filed with the committee.) And yet on that statement of facts, because of Tammany political necessity, to help Al Smith, early in 1924 I was convicted of a felony, an infamous crime, involving the loss of my civil rights, my right to vote and to practice law, sent to prison before the Madison Square Garden National Democratic Convention, and kept there until after the fall election.

"Of this the Brooklyn Standard Union, wet and my bitter opponent, which, five months in advance of my trial, said that it was 'common talk' that I was to be 'railroaded,' editorially said: 'Anderson's conviction is the darkest spot in Tammany's bad history.' (Quotations read and filed.)

"Passing over the trial judge, whom Tammany unsuccessfully tried to reward, the special term judge, who has been rewarded by promotion to the United States Senate, and the spokesman for the Appellate Division, whom Al Smith also unsuccessfully tried to reward, I come direct to Judge Cardoza. In most States in such cases one who is convicted is released pending appeal if he can give bond. For reasons politically convenient to Tammany this is not true in New York. It was I who had compiled originally in 1918 the details of Al Smith's disgraceful record as a Tammany saloon legislator, used with such devastating effect against him in 1928; and I had set up and conducted the campaign that beat him for Governor in 1927, his only defeat prior to 1928. I submit that Justice Cardoza's memorandum refusing me liberty awaiting the decision of his court (read and commented on and copy filed with the committee), when understood in connection with the indisputable facts of record when set out, in the deviousness and disingenuousness of its distortion and suppression of the truth, and its false assumptions, is more worthy of the most slippery police court pettifogger than of a prospective Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"The Court of Appeals, the highest in New York, sustained Judge Cardoza's ruling that had kept me safely locked up in until Mr. Smith, beaten at Madison Square Garden could be re-elected Governor, in order to have another chance in 1928. That august tribunal, by filing no opinion, in effect hid from the public, outside of the legal profession, the fact, as I am advised to uphold my conviction it had reversed the law by counsel and believe as a lawyer, that in order of the State from the earliest times and its own decisions for many years interpreting the statute under which I was convicted, all of which, till my case came along, required proof of criminal intent beyond a reasonable doubt to convict of a felony. And not even the lawyers knew then or know now the real reasons for this decision, which will not stay down, but with increasing rapidity is becoming understood through the nation as a major political and judicial scandal.

"It is self-evident, under the peculiar conditions, that the Court would gladly have filed an opinion if it had been able to agree upon one which it was not afraid or ashamed to put into the public records. When it thus failed to protect itself, the public is free to draw its own conclusions about the use of the highest Court of the Empire State to consummate a Tammany political conspiracy, the infamy of which would contaminate even the infernal regions.

"Then, in due time, Governor Al Smith in fact rewarded Judge Cardoza for what, regardless of its motives, was invaluable political assistance to him, by forcing his elevation to the Chief Judgeship of the Court of Appeals in violation, as publicly charged by Republican leaders, of a non-partisan judiciary agreement with them, that this position should be given to a Republican who would be compelled to retire for age years earlier. And Judge Cardoza was nominated in the Democratic Convention by the Tammany boss preceding the present boss, whose dealings with one of the Appellate Judges have so recently been exposed in the nauseating revelations of Tammany government. One of Judge Cardoza's intelligence must be presumed to have realized the natural inference from this sequence, unless he believed that I was so completely and permanently killed that I would never be able to get a hearing for the facts.

"All this gives pertinence to the fact, now suppressed by the New York papers, that Judge Cardoza, one of the notorious 'Tweed ring judges', who, Denis Tilden Lynch, in his recent authoritative book, 'Boss Tweed', said was 'owned body and soul by Tweed'. A son should not be blamed for what his father did, provided the son has never done anything of the same sort. But when this same Judge Cardoza himself participated in a proceeding which enabled Tammany to get away with a monstrous miscarriage of justice, family history in relation to subservience to Tammany becomes both relevant and material. Why should I suppress the truth and thereby sacrifice the public interest, to save Judge Cardoza's feelings when he, with wicked injustice, assisted Tammany in the effort to put in legal form, but wrongfully, a permanent stain on my good name, which morally they have not been able to make stick?

"Tammany has been notorious for having the right judges in the right places. It has always had some eminently respectable window dressing. But just why should New York, with 10 per cent of the population of the country, be given 33 per cent of the membership of the nation's highest court, in order to enable Tammany, now reaching for control of the national government, to put into the Supreme Court of the United States a second generation Tammany judge?"

THE CHURCH IN A NEW RENAISSANCE.

The church will play an important part in the renaissance which, evolving from the current world depression, will carry civilization to new heights of moral and material well being, according to Dr. Glenn Frank, noted lecturer and publicist.

In "Thunder and Dawn," to be published by The Macmillan Company, New York, Dr. Frank devotes considerable detail to the function of the church in the new economy he forecasts as an inevitable sequel to the present condition.

"If contemporary statesmanship, official and unofficial, is to lead Western civilization out of its confusion," he says, "it must inspire a New Reformation. By this I mean a clearing of the clogged conduits of religious institutionalism which are now checking the flow of spiritual initiative; the lighting of a bonfire of theological vanities; a resurgence of religious vitality that shall need no credentials save its own inherent effectiveness . . . that will assuage the hungers of an age grown lean on alternate diets of sentimental metaphysics and sterile negations.

"Religion must be rescued from its aloof pietism and related to the human perplexities and hungers of a workaday world."

"Thunder and Dawn" is described by Dr. Frank as "the personal record of my own fight against fatalism as I found myself at the end of the war facing the possibility of having to live in the chill and shadow of a disarticulate and despiritualized world." After carefully analyzing the moralistic, as well as the economic, background of the depression, he sounds an optimistic note in the forecast of practical and healthy recovery.

Dr. Frank outlines a program for the leadership he expects to emerge to take command. It includes such planks as "cultural nationalism, economic internationalism, socialized religion, realistic pacifism."

"If Germany caused the War," he asserts, "it was not by any last-minute caprice of a mad Kaiser or his militaristic councillors, but simply because Germany outran the rest of the world in a paganism that was everywhere in progress. If Germany was the blind Samson who pushed down the pre-war temple of Western civilization, candor compels the confession that the temple was tottering even before broad German shoulders were brought against its pillars.

"Little if any discrimination can be made between allied, enemy, and neutral people of the West. We were all guilty of the sin of surrender to pagan ideals. We practiced paganism when we preached Christianity. Western civilization (in 1914) was a vast corporate hypocrisy!"

Macmillan will release Dr. Frank's book in March.

Myron Tyler, Blackshear, Ga., says: "I have good pecans, but little cash. Wishing to give $5.00 to the Elon College Fund, I offer 5 pounds of nuts for $1.00; 10 pounds for $1.75, prepaid. The first $5.00 to be returned to Elon's treasurer. Friends, send your cash."—Adv.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The annual meeting of the Elon College Alumni of Eastern Virginia was held in the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday night, February 26, 1932. The business meeting was held in the Philathea Class Room, and Dr. J. E. Rawls was elected president, Rev. F. C. Lester, of Waverly, Va., vice-president, and Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, secretary-treasurer.

After the business meeting, the banquet was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church, where ninety sat down around the tables, decorated with Elon colors of maroon and gold, jonquils, daffodils, spirea, and yellow candles in silver holders. A three-course dinner was served by the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, and all seemed to enjoy the dinner.

Dr. J. S. Rawls presided at the meeting, welcomed the alumni and their guests, and presented Miss May Lee Williams, of Franklin, toastmistress. Invocation was offered by Dr. W. M. Jay, pastor of Holland Christian Church. College songs were led by Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of Rosemont Church, with Miss Margaret Corbitt, of Sunbury, N. C., as pianist. The response to the address of welcome by Dr. Rawls was delivered by Mr. Russell T. Bradford, of Town Point; and a tribute to Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, by Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of Waverly Christian Church.

Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor of the Holy Neck Christian Church, in a brief address, compared "Old Elon" with "New Elon" in the changed conditions. Revs. J. F. Morgan, I. W. Johnson, and O. D. Poythress rendered interesting songs as a trio and the audience responded by hearty applause. In these songs Mrs. A. D. Bowen was at the piano. A quartet composed of Mrs. William S. Beaman, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. West, and Mr. Oma Parker, with Mrs. A. D. Bowen as accompanist, rendered fine music which was greatly enjoyed.

The climax of this great occasion was an address by the new president, Dr. L. E. Smith. In his address he reviewed the 42 years of Elon's history, the present condition as to buildings, equipment, student body, faculty and work; the financial needs of the Institution, the importance of the loyalty of the alumni and the membership of the church in the Southern Christian Convention, and his determination to carry the work on in the interest of the Kingdom and the Christian Church. He emphasized the fact that the greatest need at the present time is financial help. Among other things Dr. Smith traced the growth of the church in the Eastern Virginia Conference through Elon graduates as pastors of churches in this region. He held the audience in rapt attention to the close of his address.

It is estimated that there are 300 alumni of Elon College in this area and the goal for the banquet next year is set for 150, which would be 50 per cent. There is no more valuable asset to Elon for the future than the loyal support of her alumni in the pulpit and in the pew, in the home and the professional and business world.

The meeting, the dinner, the music, the addresses, the fellowship, the deep concern for Elon's future marked a renewed loyalty, faith, and purpose, in our college. Education is essential in this day and Christian education is needed more than any other kind of education; and the church college is the source of that education.

PIEDMONT LETTER.

Lincoln's Birthday was observed by Piedmont College with a special service at which Colonel Claude Bond, an attorney of Toccoa, was the speaker. Colonel Bond spoke on "Lincoln as a Lawyer." The first part of his address was devoted to a discussion of the legal profession, emphasizing the importance of adequate training, the opportunities for rendering valuable political and social service, and the need of men of worthy character in the profession. He paid high tribute to Lincoln as a lawyer, stressing the fact that he was a successful practitioner, absolutely fair and honest in handling his cases.

Piedmont had the pleasure of a visit from Dr. Vaughan Dabney, of Boston, Mass. Dr. Dabney is dean of Andover Newton Seminary and while at Piedmont had a conference with the college students who are preparing for the ministry. He also delivered a forceful address at chapel. Visits from such men as Dr. Dabney are highly appreciated. They come with sane views of life and help to keep vision clear and effort purposeful.

The J. S. Green Literary Society presented a public program of merit recently in commemoration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of the society.

Piedmont College is rendering a bit of community service in providing a training course for teachers in church schools. The course is based on the outline prepared by the International Council of Religious Education, and is entitled "The Principles of Teaching." There are twenty-one pupils enrolled in the course. The local churches—Baptist, Methodist and Congregational-Christian—are cooperating. Daniel B. Atkinson is the teacher. Some college students are taking this course as are also teachers in the local schools.

The Book Club was given a real treat at its meeting this week. Prof. Brooks Phillips gave a review of the book, "God in the Straw-Pen," by John Fort. The title of the book is novel and needs explanation. The book is a description of religious work about one hundred years ago in North Georgia. More particularly it described a camp meeting. The "Straw Pen" was the name given to the space in front of the speaker's platform which was covered with straw. The name is closely allied with "the saw-dust trail" of modern times. For vividness of description, for understanding of primitive conditions, for insight into human life, it would be difficult to find a better book. The Fort family is well known in this part of Georgia. The author of the book lived for two years in Demorest. This local color adds interest to the book. DANIEL B. ATKINSON.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

"Depression" has a moral and spiritual influence, as well as an economic one. This is reflected even in the Lord's work. Like many others, our people have been very hard hit financially, yet they are bravely trying to meet the situation in such a way as to bring success to the cause, and we are confident that they will not fail.

The year opened with an increased attendance and interest in the various departments of our work. The increase has been especially noticeable in the Sunday School. The attendance has been larger almost every Sunday than that of the corresponding Sunday last year.

We have space to mention only one or two of the features of our work that give promise of good results. The time of the meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society has been changed to the hour of the morning worship service of the church. This brings together a number of children, some of whom, would not attend service.

Recently, the Win-One Bible Class decided to hold regular business meetings. The first meeting was held with Mr. E. W. Cather. The second was with Mr. L. H. Hook. Much interest was manifested.

A lady who has had opportunity to observe the work of the various churches, some time ago said to the writer: "Your church has the strongest leadership of any church in the city." That was a remarkable statement concerning a church that has less than one-fifth of the membership of the largest church here, and a much smaller membership than that of several others in the city. We appreciate very much the splendid leadership of the church. There is probably no greater human factor in kingdom building than consecrated membership, and under God great things may be expected of those who earnestly desire to know and do His will.

MEBANE OBSERVES BI-CENTENNIAL.

With an appropriate program and tree-planting, the Mebane Christian Sunday School observed the bi-centennial of Washington's birth, on Sunday morning, February 21st, as a part of the nationwide celebration of George Washington's 200th birthday.

The church was artistically decorated with American flags and a picture of George Washington was presented in a group of American flags.

The following program was presented:

Song—"America."

Prayer.

Theme—"George Washington."

Motto—"First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

"Picture and Story of George Washington," Annie Lynch.

Reading—"George Washington," Mary K. Farrell.

Song—"Tale of a Cherry Tree."

Song—"Prayer for Valley Forge."

Reading—"George Washington, the Farmer," Lee Lynch.

Reading—"George Washington Had a Garden Home," Francis Davis.

Salute to the American flag.

Song—"Your Flag and Mine."

Immediately following the lesson period all marched to the church grounds, where a beautiful evergreen, which was presented by a former member of the Sunday School, Miss Mary Graham Fowler, was planted and the following program was rendered:

Song—First verse of "America."

Prayer—J. O. Fowler.

Question—"What Does Our Country Ask of Us, the Youth of America?"

Reading—"Washington Planted Trees," Edna Farrell.

Poem—"Planting a Tree," Mrs. J. S. Cheek.

Plant the Tree (each putting in a shovelful of dirt.)

Song—Last verse of "America."

Benediction:

"Our Saviour, ere we part,
Thy blessing we implore;
O guard us, shield us, be our stay
Henceforth and evermore.

Amen.

The music for the day was rendered by one of our Junior girls, Mary Kerr Farrell, and it was given in a manner that would have been an honor to one of more years and longer musical training.

"LET NOT YOUR HEART BE TROUBLED; NEITHER LET IT BE AFRAID."

This is the word and the lesson for the hour. "The depression" bears more heavily upon the people every day and I have thought I noticed incipient hysteria. The darkest hour is just before the dawn, and sometimes it seems the longest. Strange rumors float about us and it may be the worst moments are yet to come. But the poorest way in the world to meet a single disaster or a whole epoch of disasters is to give up to fear and begin to borrow trouble.

In the first place, we are not nearly in as bad a plight financially and otherwise as we may imagine ourselves to be. If there were not a carload of grain or steel shipped for half a dozen years, the marvelous gifts of adaptability that have made men able to take care of themselves in every and any condition would come to his rescue. We are not nearly so destitute or naked as were the first colonists who landed on the "stern and rock bound coast." But they lived and laid the foundations of a gigantic nation. We are not nearly so limited and cramped as were those who won the great West only a few generations ago. We are not on the verge of starvation such as confronted Washington and his soldiers that winter in Valley Forge. Some of the soldiers even tried to extract a taste of nourishment from their broken and worn shoe soles. They refused to give up and most of them, the leaders at least, kept up their faith in God and in themselves—and God delivered them out of their troubles.

I have no doubt that if the worst came to the worst, and we had to do so, we could live on if everything in the world were swept away, and we had to start without a penny of money, a bag of flour in the house, or a turnip buried in the garden. We would find a way to rebuild our ruined world. Man is not easily crushed and God is not far away.

Our nation, and our personal lives, have been full of Red Seas, desert wanderings, famines and wars, but God has always delivered his people. We can only stand in amazement at the greatness and number of the hard times we have mastered and wonder that there were ever thin places in our faith or any halting moments in our progress.

Our true resources are in God and good men, in Christ and in our own souls. It is reassuring to reflect that the ablest and most experienced men in the world are working at the problem of "getting us on our feet" again. And, as the good Quaker poet reminded his generation:

"Before us, even as behind
God is, and all is well."

It is an encouraging omen that the representatives in Congress—regardless of party affinity or political outlook, are working together to help the people find work and happiness. The most experienced and gigantic minds in the world are busy with this matter. Name the men over and think who they are and what they have achieved in the past. The men at the head of the nation are of large dimensions every way; many of them are prepared for this crisis by long and honorable experiences; public servants of proved patriotism; lovers of home, church and the people who suffer because the people suffer, and who are accustomed to deal with big problems are putting their shoulders to the wheel. Added to these are the bankers, the brokers, the manufacturers, the political economists, the teachers and preachers and lawyers, and laborers in the factory, toilers on the farm, and captains and privates of commerce, travel, and transportation—all bent on just one thing now and that is to get us out of the present situation into a fairer day. The whole world is engaged in this struggle. It is inconceivable that they should not find the road of deliverance.

Humanly speaking it will all depend upon how sincerely we want to find the right way. We shall have to get over selfishness, such as seeking to get personal or business advantage; over love of ease, such as holding on to luxuries when others are hungry; over shirking, such wanting others to carry the heavy end of the burdens in community, state and church; and no one must be a slacker or wish to hide and play the coward when others are struggling, even unto blood, for the common good and the whole good. False moves will make the come-back slower and harder and render it insecure when it arrives.

Many remedies and proposals will be offered, but they will all prove futile unless they are based upon righteousness. Diplomacy, expediency, short circuits, and wisdom waterlogged, with materialism will all be at work. There will be temptations to compromise with evil. Gambling schemes will be brought forth, wildcat enterprises will offer themselves, false business will clothe itself as an angel of light; and propositions to debauch the manhood and womanhood of citizens will be made with the plea that the state must have taxes. Cursed forever is the state that debauches its people for the sake of revenue. We shall be delivered if we build in a straight, true way; otherwise our house will have a deadly curse upon it, times of depression will recur again and again, and our house will be left unto us desolate.

All unrighteousness leads to "hard times." Slavery caused our Civil War, the love of money and power and a place in the sun caused the World War; the attempt of nations to rob each other of their wealth brought most of the wars of earlier history. The cry of all these experiences is that we can only be saved by true principles, righteous conduct, and unselfish cooperation.

Undoubtedly there is a divinity in it all. God has not taken His hand off the wheel. He is in His world and taking part in the affairs of men. Nations and individuals must seek His will and His way. Prayer must be a large element. God helps those who pray to Him. He gives us the strength and urge, and in His written revelation He has given us principles, rules, and made it certain to us that the right thing will come to pass if we obey Him. The nations that forget God shall be turned into hell—not by God, but by the

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father, out of the night we come to thee. May it be as new creatures into the new day. With the passing hours of sleep grant thou to have closed upon time every page that would make us ashamed. Help us to appreciate the receptivity of the pages unwritten, and by their very blankness and cleanness may we be led to know that all the light and hope of the world is ours to embrace and occupy for our Lord Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

DUTY OF BACKING OUR MISSIONARIES.

There is no argument so specious or forceful that it can excuse the members of the home churches from backing up the missionaries who are sent into foreign fields—or for that matter who have been called to mission work in our own land. It is a duty far deeper than honors, and vastly more important than patriotism—and we could not face our fellowmen if we did not stand full height and foursquare for both. We shall not here argue about what to do if any sent out should prove untrue to their trust. We should bring them home and let them find their places in life somewhere else.

When we speak of "backing up" our missionaries, maybe money will be the first thing to arise in the mind of the reader. Of course we do mean money but we mean a great deal more. We have in mind daily prayer for the missionaries, keeping our congregations interested in them by calling their names in sermon, speech and conversation; by praying for them by name and country in the pulpit; and by teaching the children, and men and women, who they are and what their work means to us and the world. To feel that the missionaries are separated from us who are in America in any way except geographically is to miss the feeling of brotherhood, and to break the tie of loyalty to our comrades on the advance lines of battle.

Dr. Temple, the very able and consecrated Archbishop of York, England, recently spoke the following strong words on this subject:

"It is a futile thing to send out preachers of the gospel who have not heard of it, at the same time, our fellow-countrymen are going out to show by their lives that they do not themselves maintain their faith in that gospel. The negative influence of a group of English people who go out and become indifferent to their faith and its requirements will be far greater than the positive influence of those who go to preach by word what those others are denying by act."

According to reports many Americans who travel put the same disadvantage upon the missionaries and give the same false impression about church life in their country. But we must hastily and quite earnestly add to this that scores of the people who stay at home fall below the Christian standard in this respect. We are not only to take the cross and the commission seriously as to sending preachers into all the world, but we must take them seriously in personal self-discipline, and sacrifice. Righteous churches are the best backing missionaries can have. Somehow living like Christ has a way of getting out and working a saving power throughout the whole world. Anyhow, we should live so that, whether missionaries or not, we shall have no occasion to apologize for each other.—Editorial in Christian Evangelist.

A NATURAL CONSEQUENCE.

It is said that most of the Tahitians have remained loyal to their Protestant teaching. This is largely owing to the fact that they have knowledge of the Bible and skill in using it. In the Society Islands alone are to be found 2,000 Protestants. In the Marquesas Islands there are about 1,500 Roman Catholics and 500 Mormons. In the Paumotu Islands there are some 4,000 Roman Catholics and 1,500 Mormons. There are twenty-two churches and thirteen pastors on the Islands of Tahiti and Moorea alone. All the activities of the mission, both in church and in school and press, are self-supporting and are willingly sustained by the Tahitian Christians. "We admire the sterling quality and perseverance of those descendants of the Huguenots," says Alexander M. Allan, of Bogota, Columbia, "who carry on so well the fine work whose foundations were laid deep in the Bible."

UNWISE ECONOMY.

There is an economy that is never wise or right. It is economy in making the Bible available to men.

When days are dark, men need its light.

When times are hard, men need its confidence.

When despair is abroad, men need its word of hope.

There are luxuries that may well be spared. There are even necessities that can be curtailed. But the Bible, indispensable at all times, is still more indispensable in times like these today.

The Bible is not a book of political maxims or of economic theories. It is not a book of maxims or theories at all. It is a book of living principles. Its spirit is the spirit of brotherliness and good will.

It is a summons to helpfulness: "Bear ye one another's burdens."

It is a summons also to self-respecting independence: "Let every man bear his own burden."

It teaches charity, but also justice.

It calls us to the giving and serving which the strong owe to the weak, and those who have to those who lack; but it also strikes straight and clear at the moral defects in individuals which are responsible for a large part of the suffering of the world; and also at the moral and economic defects in society, in business relations, and in the distribution of the common resources of the world, which are responsible for the remaining part.

Christ is the only hope of individuals and of society. And the Bible is the only book which tells his story. It alone preserves his words, which are spirit and life. It alone records his deeds by which he saved the world, and would save it now if we would obey him.

The best thing men can do is to spread the Bible and get it read and obeyed. This would mean the end of hard times, of poverty, of unemployment, of injustice, of wrong, of war.

The last place to economize is in our gifts to spread over America and the whole world the gospel and the Book that contains it.—Robert E. Speer, in Missionary Review of the World.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

Program IV.

WOMAN'S SOCIETIES.

Theme—The Local Church—the Heart. Worship helps:

Hymn—"The Church's One Foundation."

Prayer—That our own church may see her part in the great whole, and devote her life and her substance to doing that part. That we, as individual members may see and know and to our part, that the earth may become God's Kingdom.

The leader may say: "For three months we have been speaking of our organization as a body with its head, its hands and feet, its backbone, and today we have come to the heart of it all, the local church—our church; for, after all, it all depends on us."

"The responsibilities are at least four-fold. The first is to work in the church. A second responsibility is to support the church. A third responsibility is to the support the wide outreach of the church. A fourth is to know about our church, and our denomination, and a fifth is to devote ourselves to the task. We cannot be held responsible for another's shortcomings, but we can and will be held responsible for our own."

(Here the group may be divided into two sides with leaders, and questions may be asked and conducted like an old-fashioned spelling bee. The questions of material for this program is found in the little booklet, "Our Congregational-Christian Body at Work," and may be secured for 10c from the Commission on Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.)

As a closing feature, the members may all stand in a circle and clasping each other's hands, unite in a prayer of personal consecration and in singing softly, "Take My Life and Let It Be."

YOUNG PEOPLE.

Topic—"God and the Census."

Theme—"True Discipleship."

I. Business period.

II. Study period. Chapter VI. "The Place of Play."

1. Making God count in play as illustrated by the change in John Susseoff, pp. 7-73.
2. The influence of a Neighborhood House in a community, pp. 73-76—a member.
3. Play and character, pp. 78-80.

III. Worship period.

1. Hymn.
2. Scripture—Matt. 5:1-16.
3. Prayer.
4. Offering.
5. Brief message (The Essence of Discipleship).
6. Hymn—"Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."
7. Benediction.

WILLING WORKERS OR JUNIORS.

Poster V. Follow same design as for Poster IV, substituting China for Africa, and using pictures from pages 57, 72, 77.

Topic—"Open Windows."

Theme—"Love and Loyalty."

I. Worship period.

1. Leader—"Love Ye One Another."
2. Song—"Jesus Loves Me."
3. Prayer—(Sentence prayers closed by the leader.)
4. Memory Verse—"Serve the Lord with all thy heart."
5. Offertory.

II. Story period.

1. Chapter V.—"Open Windows."

(Presented by leader or members of group. There are many interesting pictures and curios of Japan and a collection would be most interesting. Always encourage the children to talk about the stories after they are told.)

2. Song—"Fling Out the Banner."
3. Benediction.

"NEVER MAN SO SPAKE."

It was about the middle of his personal ministry, and Jesus was in Jerusalem at the time of the feast of tabernacles. He was teaching the multitudes in the temple and performing many wonderful miracles. The excitement was high. "The last day, the great day of the feast," had come. There was much questioning among the people as to whether he was the long-expected Messiah or not. Some said, "He is a good man;" others said, "Not so; but he leadeth the multitude astray." Again: "Some of the multitude, therefore, when they heard these words, said, 'This is of truth the prophet.' Others said, 'This is the Christ.' But some others said, 'What, doth the Christ come out of Galilee?'" Still others, in confusion and astonishment, inquired: "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" This was too much for the jealous chief priests and Pharisees. They sent officers to arrest Jesus, but they returned without him. When asked,

"Why did ye not bring him?" they promptly replied: "Never man so spake." (John 7:46.)

This testimony, coming as it did from the side of the opposition to Jesus, was, and is, significant. These officers were, doubtless, strong, resolute men who were trained to obey orders, even in the face of great danger. Failure to carry out instructions, as they must have known, would likely imperil their reputation and position; and yet they return without Jesus, assigning no other reason than that, "Never man so spake." They made no plea to free themselves of blame. How is this to be understood? There was an unearthly majesty in the manner, the words, and in the person of Jesus that struck fear to their hearts. Yes: "Never man so spake." This was true with respect both to his manner and to his message. There were many things in his teaching that impressed those who heard things that impress us now.

1. He adapted his teaching to the needs and the understanding of those who heard. "And with many such parables spake he unto them, as they were able to hear it." (Italics mine.) (Mark 4:33.) He spoke, not primarily according to his ability to impart, but rather according to their ability to receive, instruction. The humble man of the hills and the unlettered fisherman of the lakes could understand the message when Jesus taught.

2. He taught the truth because he loved it and the souls it would bless. The great Teacher had much to say about "the truth." "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8:32.) Again: "I say the truth." (John 8:45.) Once more: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." (John 14:6.) No one can follow the example of Jesus without being sure that what he is teaching is true—"the truth," which will save those who hear. Jesus loved truth to the extent that in his teaching he would not allow his disciples to labor under a false impression. "If it were not so," said he, "I would have told you." (John 14:2.) His love of the truth was such that he corrected evil and reproved sin in his intimate disciples, apostles (Matt. 16:23), as well as in those who were hostile to him. Those who teach truth for the love of it will now reprove falsehood and sin in friend as well as foe. The man who does not have the courage to do it is unworthy of the name teacher. He is a moral coward.

3. He "taught as one having authority." This was the judgment of those who heard the Sermon on the Mount. There were no doubtful or uncertain tones or terms in his teaching. He knew whereof he spoke. Ever conscious of his own divine sonship, his deity, he could declare, with sublime majesty and calm: "I am the good shepherd," "I am the resurrection and the life," and "I am the way, the truth, and the life." He never spoke as if in doubt. There was the element of finality in all his declarations. "Here was one," said a distinguished professor, "who was conscious that he was greater than Moses; that his knowledge of God's will and sympathy with his spirit transcended even that of the founder of the Jewish religion. His sense of sonship with the Father made him the unique exponent of his will to men, and the new era he inaugurated original and independent, though not contradictory of what had gone before." There was no element of doubt or disbelief in his teaching. No man who questions the deity of Jesus, the reality and consciousness of which gave authority to his teaching, can teach or preach with much conviction or authority now.

4. He did as he taught. Many great teachers have been able to teach more wisely than they were able to live. Others have been sound in teaching who were corrupt in life. Jesus condemned the scribes and Pharisees on the grounds that they "said, and did not." (Matt. 23:3.) No one has been able to show that Jesus ever taught anything that was untrue or that he did anything that was wrong. If any difference, perhaps, his doing stands out more prominently than his teaching. Luke wrote of the things he "began both to do and to teach." (Acts 1:1.) He lived a sinless life and gave men a perfect standard of conduct—the scheme of redemption.

Assuming that Jesus was purely human and not divine, no one can explain the infinite superiority of Jesus as a teacher. The only adequate explanation is that given by himself: "My teaching is not mine, but his that sent me." (John 7:16.) —B. C. G. in Gospel Advocate.

The forest fire plow was developed especially for fighting forest fires. This new machine made its appearance during the past summer and is nothing more than a powerful tractor with a big, wide plow out in front. But it does the work wonderfully. It is used principally for constructing fire lines through fields and forests to prevent the spread of such fires. The plow cuts a furrow 15 inches wide. The dirt from this furrow is thrown 16 inches on either side. Thus it makes a path of fresh, moist earth almost four feet wide which is sufficient to stop many fires. It is said that the tractor plow can do more in one hour than 10 men can do in a day.—Exchange.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

THE UPLIFTED CHRIST.

By MARGARET SLATTERY.

The young people with me are on their way to a conference. We leave the Boston Commons and cross the Gardens. The pansies are very beautiful. Suddenly one of the boys turns to me. "What is it all about, anyway?"

The question caught me off guard. "The procession?" I asked.

"No," he laughed, "Life—all of it. What's the use of it? Those women and the kids, those sailors, the Rolls-Royce and the procession. That was a great address the Bishop gave us this morning. It listens all right, but I don't know what difference it makes, all these conferences and our resolutions. They don't change things much. I'd like to know what life is for, anyway—and what to do with mine," he added, after a moment. We drew up to the benches under the trees and talked. Here are some of the sentences that fell from the lips of these young, earnest, ardent, sincere students:

"It does not seem as though Christianity, as we've been taught it, is adequate to the terrible need of the world."

"Life seems to be all confusion and no real good, you might say."

"Where should one put his life? It seems as if he might better make money and then do as much good as he can with it."

"I'd be willing to go to the mission field, but I'm not sure that's the way to help most."

"Sometimes I think that to get into politics and just fight for decency is the only thing worth while."

"I think life is such a dead level these days. I think what we all feel in college, and, in fact, all my friends not in college, is the need of a meaning, a motive, for it all—an incentive is what I mean."

I believe that last statement embodies all that was in the minds of the group. They were hungry for a reason for the thing called Life, eager for a motive, sub-consciously longing for an incentive. They find it difficult to see the relation between religion and life on the Common, between ideals and challenges, and the world they see about them.

The dictionary says that an incentive "serves to set on fire," has a "tendency to incite to action," and then adds in explanatory type, "Love of money and position are powerful incentives." Love of money and position do incite to action and do act as strong motives, but they are incentives being repudiated by great multitudes of youth today all over the world. What can we give to these youth who are not keen to make money only, who find no satisfaction in cheap or sordid pleasures, who are strong, verile, mentally honest, spiritually wholesome and normal?

I think the answer is Christ. He was the incentive, the force that served to set on fire men of many temperaments and women of varying types. There was as great difference in Peter and John as exist in any two young men today. There was a great gap between Mary of Bethany and the Mary known as Magdalene, as one can find between any young women of our day; yet, the Christ of Nazareth and Galilee, and the stormy days of Jerusalem, enkindled within them a fire that none could quench. I do not see as I read history that his power to act as supreme incentive has been limited by any age or day. In the first era, in the days of Constantine, in the renaissance, he could, and did, act as determining factor, as motive, as incentive for life. I do not see that his power has been limited by sex; class distinctions have defied their own limitations, and all classes found in him their motive power. He can furnish the incentive for black and yellow, brown and red men. He is not limited by color or language. In him there surely is for this day of confusion an incentive, the power to determine action, the force to enkindle the fire.

Then why are so many young people groping in the dark? Why are so many, in the years when life should be at its best, blundering along toward uncertain goals?

I think it is because vast numbers of youth and a multitude in the prime of life have missed the meaning of religion. They have failed to discover Christ. They are familiar with the machinery by means of which men have hoped to present Christ to mankind. It is machinery often elaborate, sometimes crude and inadequate, and sometimes complicated beyond hope of disentanglement. Many have been taught to admire the machinery so that the soul of it all has not even brushed the surface of their self-centered lives. The beautiful and complicated garments which the centuries have woven and made sacred have hindered Christ's spirit; the walls builded carefully and with earnest devotion, to safeguard him from the onslaughts of all enemies have imprisoned him. Our age wants Christ. No age has had greater need. He was never more truly the only hope of man's salvation. He speaks from the four gospels. His teaching stimulates the alert in mind, makes challenging demands upon the honest soul, calls for sacrifice and brings satisfaction. Putting aside all else, we must, as men and women interested in the moral, ethical, and spiritual salvation of those who will be the world tomorrow, lift up and out from the things that have obscured him, Jesus Christ, who said clearly, with no hint of uncertainty in the words, "And if I be lifted up, I will draw all men to me."

His day is not done. His task is not finished. He was no mere prophet of Palestine. "Thy touch has still its ancient power," is being proven all over the world. His voice is not stilled.

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife
We hear thy voice, O Son of Man."

We must make it heard by those who have been deafened by clashing sounds of things and self.

Christ must permeate and dominate all that we teach. Youth needs his courage, his simplicity, his sympathy, for those who fail, his triumphant, confident soul, his fine scorn of all that is false, his faith in the love and the will of God.

We need Christ. He could give meaning to life down here upon the earth, now in our day. He could set on fire young hearts who would bring a new vision to the world, to the dwelling places of greed and indifference, to the dark haunts of poverty and ignorance. We owe to youth, as its right, Jesus Christ liberated, uplifted. He is the incentive for which youth is unconsciously searching, the best answer to their longings, the meaning of life for which their spirits hunger.—Used by permission of the International Journal of Christian Education.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

MARCH 13, 1932.

"DO I WANT TO BE A CHRISTIAN?"

For this meeting it will be well to have the closing part of the program be the worship program in order that it may be a time of uninterrupted quiet and that it may come as the climax to the meeting. The meeting may open with the singing of a hymn, a prayer for God's guidance in the discussion of the topic, and then the topic should be discussed. This may be done by assigned topics being discussed by members who have prepared in advance, or by an open discussion led by the leader. In the latter case the leader should give much time and thought to the preparation of leading thoughts and questions for the meeting.

Some suggested topics for discussion are: "What Does a Christian Do About Prohibition?" "How Can a Christian Forward the Cause of World Peace?" "How Does Being a Christian Help or Hinder a Person in Business?" "What Do We Yet Lack?" "Christ for the Individual Heart," "My Personal Need for Christ," "How Hard is it to Be a Christian?" "Bringing All to Christ—to Find in Him Our 'All in All.'"

THE WORSHIP PROGRAM.

Hymns that may be used in this program will be determined by hymnals that are available. If possible, try to use some of the following for this meeting: "Fairest Lord Jesus," "Take My Life and Let It Be," "O, Jesus, Thou Art Standing," "I'll Live for Him," "Beneath the Cross of Jesus," "I Gave My Life."

Poem:

ACCEPTANCE.

"I cannot think or reason,
I only know he came
With hands and feet of healing
And wild heart all aflame.
With eyes that dimmed and softened
At all the things he saw
And in his pillared singing
I read the marching law.
I only know he loves me,
Enfolds and understands—
And oh, his heart that holds me,
And oh, his certain hands!"
—Willard Wattles.

EVERY YOUTH.

"Every youth has a quest to make,
For life is the king's highway;
And a joyous heart is the scrip to take
On the road of Everyday.

"Every youth has his gifts to guard
As he fares to a far-off goal—
A body pure, a mind unmarred,
And the light of a lovely soul.

"Every youth has a task of his own,
For the Father has planned it so,
He seeks the way and he alone
Can show him the path to go.

"Every youth has a loving Guide
From the vale to the mountain crest,
For the unseen Friend who walks beside,
Is the Way and the End of the Quest."
—Mary S. Edgar.

JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES.

LESSON XI—MARCH 13, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 14:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you: Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be fearful."—John 14:27.

Introduction.

The cycle of life's experiences is varied. There are times of prosperity and times of adversity. There are great joys and deep sorrows. Religion involves all of life and proves to be a refining influence in the whole range of human experience. The Bible presents us with religious experiences that have come both out of joy and out of sorrow. Jesus experienced the varying circuit of the race except in personal sin. In the closing scenes of his life and in the shadow of the Cross his thought was still of others and their welfare. Out of this period of trial and gloom come some of the most comforting words to be found in our Bible. John, chapter 14 to 17, is a much-loved passage.

Troubled Hearts.

A society that is morally sensitive will always have varying degrees of joy and sorrow for its members. Humanity can not escape the heightening of pain and pleasure which comes as the natural result of social factors. There are always some with troubled hearts. The church ministers to all. Jesus has messages of insight that find us and give us aid in any and all of the varied moods of life. The troubled heart needs comfort, and the joyous heart needs to share that joy.

Jesus The Way.

Centuries before Jesus came, troubled hearts had found relief in some sense of fellowship with God. God's existence had been suggested by the works of nature and by the spiritual promptings that were felt within the souls of men. Since Jesus lived among us, an increasing number of people have found him to be the way of life and to God. No one else has so completely mediated God to man. Jesus stands supreme among the prophets of the Hebrew race. He is the culmination of a long line of prophets through whom God's Spirit bore the message of the Eternal to the temporal.

Show Us the Father.

Quite universally, man has believed there was some unseen spiritual cosmic force. He has wanted to worship this Reality that he could not see but felt certain existed. Often he has dramatically made vivid this realization by the aid of symbols such as springs, trees, lightning and idols. A higher conception of God is reached in the form concepts of human values. Father conveys the idea of human and family values. Both Jeremiah and Isaiah had used the symbol (Isaiah 63:16; Jeremiah 3:19.) Since Jesus used it in the Lord's Prayer, it has become universal. Now men want to see this universal Father.

Father Seen in Son.

Jesus could say, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." So completely did Jesus conform to the Father's will and so without measure was the Spirit of God manifest in him that he could use these words. But no one else could use them. Jesus is the preeminent Son, the only begotten Son, as elsewhere stated. For nineteen centuries men have been seeing God in the life and teaching of Jesus. The power and spiritual presence of God is best realized through Jesus, our Master. We see God in his Son and feel more realistically the presence of his Spirit.

Keep My Commandments.

The joys of discipleship lead unto a most practical conclusion. The comfort of his presence and guidance points to a logical sequence. "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." Discipleship with Jesus is a comfort and a hope-inspiring experience. He expects us to keep his commandments. His sustaining comfort and peace may be the abiding reward of those who love him and keep his commandments. "Peace I leave with you." With this peace in our hearts we may show others the Son, and they too may see the Father.

HOLD MID-WINTER RALLY.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Western District of Virginia, held their Mid-winter Rally at the United Brethren Church in Harrisonburg, on a recent Sunday afternoon. There were about two hundred Endeavorers present, representing many different Societies, denominations, and communities included in the territory from Covington to Winchester.

Miss Margaret Richards, state president, and Miss Rene Matthews, district president, were present and took a leading part in the afternoon's activities. The program was varied and filled with many helpful and important meetings and conferences. Among other things there were several typical Christian Endeavor meetings which illustrated to the new workers the various possibilities of developing an interesting meeting. There was also a business meeting put on by the Congregational-Christian Senior Society of Winchester.

Study groups were led by Margaret Richards, Rev. H. M. Crim, Rev. Wayne Bowers, and Mrs. R. A. Larrick. There were classes on different phases of Christian Endeavor work. Special speakers and debaters on the program included: R. A. Larrick, Winchester; Cathleen Shiplett, Staunton; Irene Headley, Winchester; Stewart Bell, Jr., Winchester; Orville Hoover, Winchester; and K. B. Hook, Forestville.

The Society having the most members present was the Senior Society of Woodstock Reformed Church, Rev. Wayne Bowers, pastor. The County Line Reformed Society of Timberville, Va., ran a close second in this representation. This is the youngest Senior Society in the Western District (so far as we know). It was just organized about two weeks before Christmas.

We will sing in work and play
For the One on high who sees us;
We will think from day to day
Of the sacrificing Jesus.

—Carmen Malone.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

THE LOVE OF JESUS FOR HIS OWN.

"Having loved his own . . . he loved them unto the end."—Jno. 13:1.

John's Gospel is divided into two themes. The first theme relates to how Jesus wrought the works of the Father and is contained in the first twelve chapters. The remainder of the book has to do with his departure and relates to his love for his people.

A. McLaren has called this latter half "the Holy of Holies of the New Testament." In no other portion of the Scriptures is the presence of the Lord so blended with human tenderness as it is in these chapters, from the 13th to the 21st. No where else do we find the heart of God so unveiled and no where else, it would seem, has so many eyes, glistening with tears, looked up and had their tears wiped away.

Turn to the chapters and read them this week, with this specific idea in view—see if you do not find him sweet to your souls.

Prayer—

"He loved his own unto the end,
And asked their love;
He said, 'I call you each my friend,
And not my servant; and I send
One from above,
Who shall recall such grace and truth
to you
As in my sojourn here ye never knew.'"
—Josiah Irons.

TUESDAY.

"He loved them to the end."

This is a very satisfying text for the closing of our Saviour's life. It is the sublimest testimony that an apostle could give of his memory. How natural it is! How human, as well as divine. How often have we heard at some open grave, "He was faithful to the end," or such like.

This tribute of John's reflects our Lord's loving life—washing the Apostle's feet, in which he put them to shame by confessing himself the servant of all; turning the water to wine for the salvation of a social occasion; loving the Samaritans to solid faith in the Father; healing the sick and the maimed; the healing of Bethesda; comforting the widow of Nain; receiving the anointing of Mary the sinner at Simon's table; feeding the hungry multitude; his lessons of humility, forbearance and love; his overlooking the sin of the adulterous woman for her soul's sake; publicans, sinners and outcasts flock to him—there is not a phase of his life or of his teachings that is not a proof of his endearing love. He was possessed and governed by love. All that he did and was, was the fruit of love; and to the end crowns the work—"It is finished." This sacrifice was the culmination of all his love and grace.

Prayer—

"But why depart," they cry, "Why will
To leave us here?
Thou sayest that thou dost love us still;
Can it be love if thus thou fill
Our cup of fear?
O Master, shouldst thou now depart
Sorrow needs must overwhelm our heart."

WEDNESDAY.

THE BADGE OF CHRISTIANITY.

"A new commandment I give unto you; that ye love one another; as I have loved you. . . . By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples."
—Jno. 13:35.

How many kinds, measures, and tones of meaning are comprehended in this work "Love," even in our every-day common language? What must this be in the spirit and language of God, of Jesus the Son? If we love our own, what must the love of Jesus be for his own? Here we are called "his own," and that to love as he loves is the token by which we are to be recognized everywhere.

This love is a love that assures us that he is a "rewarder of those that diligently seek him." It is love that leads us into the sphere of truth. It is love that is interested in the welfare of others. It is love that tries to keep another from falling, or that receives one who has fallen. It is love that is glad in the success of others. It is love that questions if he (some one, any one) lacks anything. It is love that lives so as to invite the eyes of others into one's own life. And it is Jesus who overlooks our lack of such a love, bears our blames, washes our feet, and serves us, that we may sit down at his table, feast on his life and be known as Christians.

*Prayer—*Dear Lord, make us thine from this day. Give unto us and fill us with thy love now and forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

"Be ye therefore followers (imitators R. V.) of God as dear children."—Eph. 5:1.

Is there any difference between the love of Christ for "his own," and the love of Christ for the world, or the love of men as such?

MacLaren asks: "Is there any reason why we should be afraid of saying that the universal love of Jesus Christ, which gathers into his bosom all mankind, does fall with special tenderness and sweetness upon those who have made him theirs and have surrendered themselves to be his?"

And, in brief, MacLaren answers this question this way: "The sun shines on the dunghill and places of impurity and on the polished mirror alike. What is the difference? That is easy. The mirror reflects the sun's image, lustre and glory. And that must be a special delight to the sun."

Jesus Christ loves publicans, and sinners, and harlots, and outcasts, and bandits, and crooks, but that is no reason why he should not bend with special tenderness over those who receive him, love him, try to reflect him in the world, and have set all their hopes upon him. "The rainbow strides across the sky, but there is a rainbow in every little dewdrop that hangs glistening on a blade of grass," and in every little raindrop that falls to the earth.

*Prayer—*O Holy Saviour, we know that thou hast died for all, and by thee men are drawn to the Father. But we know that thou art more than love and desire for thine own. Enter into our lives and help us in our dangers, infirmities and failures. Protect, cleanse, heal and strengthen us in thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FRUITION OF FAITH.

"We believe that thou camest forth from God."
Jno. 16:30.

The 14th to the 17th chapters of John are the record of a private conference of Jesus with his disciples. It was in an upper room. Here he seems to have lifted the hearts of his disciples high above doubt and agnosticism, bound their hearts to him forever, and planted their faith on the solid rock. The whole verse of the text is a sublime confession of faith, and a blessed assurance that they gave him as he was leaving them. "We know that thou knowest all things . . . we believe that thou camest from God." Isn't that great?

This developing faith of the disciples seems to blossom out in strong contrast from the lurid background of unbelief among the masses on the streets of Jerusalem. Outside events are leading to the Cross. Inside, around the Christ table, there is the preparation for Pentecost. Their souls are emptied of every doubt and they are ready to be filled. That emptying was necessary for the filling that was to come.

This was the last work of Jesus. Having accomplished this, there was nothing left for him to do but to bow to the Cross. The world hung heavy upon him, but the load must have been lightened considerably, and the agonies of the Cross made more tolerable by this new touch of gratitude for the spirit of those who now pledge him their fidelity. Now let us go with him in that marvelous prayer, 17th chapter, and hear him say, "O righteous Father . . . these have known that thou hast sent me." Isn't that beautiful gratitude?

*Prayer—*Our Father, kindle a flame of shame in our hearts against our perversities. Consume our pride and vice. Make us to realize the supreme love, sacrifice and service of our Lord, and to offer to thee an appropriate and acceptable sacrifice of ourselves. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A SEAMLESS LEGACY.

Read John 19:23-23.

"Let us not rend it."—Jno. 19:24.

The raiment and garments of our Lord were what the crucifying band heired from the Cross. The garment, being a seamless piece, they did not part, they cast lots for that.

This incident would seem a small thing. But it is easily a symbol of what transpired in the upper room. It was a symbol of his love for humanity—a love that is unique and never to perish. It is a symbol of an inner sacrifice that goes out to help and give happiness. It is a symbol of the death of his being, the softness of his spirit, the warmth of his heart which was to go with them when they are exposed to pain and peril. It is a token of those free last hours of devoted instruction and warning and comfort. It is the symbol of the unique legacy of peace. It is the "omen" to his own powerful pleadings in that great prayer.

*Prayer—*Dearest Lord, we want to live here as Jesus tells us we may, and, when our work is done here, we want to go home to thee. We give our lives to thee, and for this. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LOVE TO THE END.

"To know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fullness of God; that ye may be able to comprehend what is the breadth, the length, and depth, and height."—Eph. 3:18, 19.

The Cross was not the end of our Saviour's love. This love is for all time and eternity—the end of his life, the end of our lives, the end of the world, the end of time, the end of the endless, the limit of the limitless, the end of love itself. Our text expresses it better than we can. Read it again. That is how he loves.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

WHY THE ANGELS SING!

TEXT: "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."—Luke 2:13, 14.

There was once a band of shepherds watching their flocks by night. The long night watches provoke one to deep thought. The crisp night air releases the mind for adventure in the far reaches of human destiny. The basic needs and yearnings of man are crystallized and become part of surface thought. As if in answer to these needs and yearnings, an angel announced a Saviour born, a heavenly host took up the refrain. Above the dullness of daily routine these shepherds could hear angels sing.

I am interested this morning in answering the question: "Why did the angels sing?"

They sang because a new conception of God had come into this world. God had at last sent His very likeness to dwell among men. His only begotten Son had come to live, teach, suffer, reveal, die, in full view of all mankind.

No longer would it be necessary for man, in his wide searchings, to speculate about the personality of God. No longer need man turn to abstract philosophic thought, and no longer need he turn to worn-out theories of the personality of God, or to myth gods, the creation of his own imagination (like Mars the God of War), in his search for the true and living God. Man now was to know what God was really like.

The angels sang because God would now be fully revealed to man in the personality which was entering into life there in the manger. Those angels knew God as a God of love (no hatred, bitterness, envy, unfairness, impatience, or imperfection of any kind), a heavenly Father of love, kindness, sympathy, vital interest in each individual, forgiver of sins and shortcomings. Perfect and complete love in all that those words mean to our finite minds

The angels sang because man was now to know himself. By whom he had been created, why he was here, what he might become, to what he was destined.

No longer would it be necessary for mankind to grope about as a blind man in a strange room—no longer to vainly ask the question, "From whence came I?" and receive only a hollow echo in reply. But to know that he came from God, had been created by God, had lived in the mind and heart of his Creator before creation's dawn, had been made by God, his heavenly Father, and was potentially able to commune and fellowship with his Father. Man was to realize he was from God, and that his heart would be restless until it rested in God. And because man was to have this knowledge placed before him in the person of a Saviour, the angels sang.

Man was now to know what he could become. That is what he potentially was, a very Son of God. He need no longer conceive himself in the abstractions of an old-world philosophy; or as an accident in an ongoing, developing universe, or further still (and to thoroughly modernize the statement and bring it up to date) he need not now conceive himself as some distant relative of a monkey or gorilla—removed by eons of generations to be sure—but a monkey descendant just the same. Man now knew he was a child of God, could think God's thoughts after Him, could commune with Him, could increasingly grow in the likeness of his heavenly Father, could ultimately, in the world to come fellowship with God in perfect freedom, liberty, and peace. No longer would it be necessary for the King Lear to bleat, "No man careth for my soul" for now man was to know himself for what he really was—a Child and Son of God. And the angels sang in joyous anticipation.

Finally, the angels sang because the Way of realizing the fullness of the higher life, while still in this life, was being offered to suffering humanity in the person of the Babe in the manger. "The only begotten Son of God," "The Messiah who was to take away the sin of the world," the One who had dwelt with God before the world was, had now come into the world.

He was the revealer of God as a loving heavenly Father; as he was also the revealer of Man as a potential Son of God. It was He who was to give Himself a ransom for many, to die on a Cross that men might have abundant life. It was in and through Him that salvation was to be extended to mankind.

In knowing Him as God's Son, as the long-looked-for Messiah, as the example of the perfect life, as the revealer of what mankind might become, as the hero of the soul, as the Son of God who cometh to take away the sin of the world—in short, as Saviour of all who confessed Him in spirit and in truth—man in knowing Him thus was to come to the newness of life offered in and through Him.

In the realization of this I join the angels in song. Don't you? And yet:

If Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born;
Until He's born in me, my soul is all forlorn.

* * *

One wonders are the angels still singing because Christ is being born in the hearts of men? I suspect it is only that marvelous phenomenon which will produce song in heaven. Some appearances to the contrary, I deeply believe the angels are still singing. Don't you?—J. Warren Hastings, in the Christian-Evangelist.

THE BLOTting OUT OF SIN.

A little boy ran in one day to his mother, after he had read that promise: "I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions." He said, "Mother, what does God mean when He says He will blot out my sins? What is He going to do with them? I can't see how God can really blot them out and put them away. What does it mean—blot out?"

The mother said, "Didn't I see you yesterday writing on your slate?"

"Yes," he replied.

"Well, bring it to me."

He brought the slate. Holding it in front of him, the mother said, "Where is what you wrote?"

"Oh," he said, "I rubbed it out."

"Well, where is it?"

"Why, mother, I don't know."

"But how could you put it away if it were really there?"

"Oh, mother, I don't know! I know it was there and it is gone."

"Well," she said, "that is what God means when He says, I will blot out thy transgressions."—Apples of Gold.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I sometimes wonder if the Christian Orphanage will ever reach the place where it will be without a need. It is like any other home—something is always needed to make it a little more homelike, a little more comfortable, and a little more convenient. I have been the head of a family for thirty-seven years, and during all these years I know there has never been a time when all our needs have been fully supplied. We have been blessed with a large family of children and our needs have been many, and our means to meet the many needs have been very limited. So it is with an Orphanage with more than one hundred children—we always have needs. One of our needs at the present time is a cooling system of some kind to keep our milk cool in the summer months. The best price we have been able to get for a machine that will care for our milk will cost us a little less than six hundred dollars. It certainly would be kind of some member of our church or some friend of the Orphanage to supply this need. I wonder if our good women have thought about mailing us Octagon soap wrappers? We want 150,000. If every Sunday School throughout the church would make a campaign to collect soap wrappers, we would soon get the desired amount. Many children who have no money could collect soap wrappers to help our little children here. Let's make a special effort during March and April.

"LET NOT YOUR HEART."

evil leaders, rulers, and by false and selfish guides. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid: we believe in God; let us believe also in Christ and work for the good of one another and we shall be saved. When Christ blesses and distributes the bread there will be plenty for all.—The Christian Evangelist.

FAMILY ALTAR.

The washing of his disciples' feet in the sanctity of the upper room thus gives utterance to that endless love for his own which language cannot express.

In our weakness and poor spiritual vision we sometimes think we have reason to doubt the Saviour's love. We can appreciate why the disciples felt that they had been left as sheep among wolves. Why should some things happen which we cannot understand? Why should we be denied some things we desire?

Maybe we have settled upon a conception of our own as to what his love is, or upon what we ourselves think it should be. Mary and Martha could not understand why Lazarus was allowed to die. That was their own thinking. The disciples could not understand why the Saviour must die. But as time went on they realized that from that faith in him he poured out the same loving heart, and time revealed that his promise was true that "all things happen for good to them that love God." Today that same tenderness flows on.

Prayer—Dear Father, in the light of the ascension, the glories of thy Spirit's workings, may we see thy eternal love and goodness and be drawn forever to thee. Amen.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the publisher's price.)

A PRAYER BOOK FOR BOYS, by Margaret Cropper. The Macmillan Co. 64 pp. $1.00.

There is often great need for help for the boy who is outgrowing his first prayers. "Lord, teach us to pray," is a vital call of youth. The boy who prays, in private and in public, is better for his prayers. This little book will serve as a guide to those who crave assistance. It is well written and timely. It is small enough to be carried in the pocket. J. T. K.

COMMUNION WITH GOD, by Elmore McNeill McKee. Ray Long & Richard R. Smith, Inc. 198 pp. $1.75.

This book presents a number of well-selected prayers for special and general occasions. Beginning with sentence prayers and opening phrases, it continues with complete prayers for the layman and the minister as well. Mr. McKee, who was formerly chaplain of Yale University, is now rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Buffalo. He is noted for his ability as a leader in public worship, and, to quote another, "Few, if any, men of our generation are better fitted to perform the delicate task to which he has addressed himself in this book." J. T. K.

A MODERN VIEW OF THE OLD TESTAMENT, by Wm. G. Shute. The Macmillan Co. 151 pp. $1.50.

"A Modern View of the Old Testament" is well written, and possesses an interest that will hold the Bible student to the last page. Mr. Shute offers a very concise account of the historical development of Hebrew theistic faith, and gives his idea of the evolution of the Old Testament, as related to the Jewish people. Many of his statements are quite logical. However, others are dogmatic, and cause one to wonder if Yahweh has communicated directly with him, that former mistakes as to the Scriptures might be rectified. There is much good and some bad in the volume, but taking it as a whole, and not too seriously, we believe it well worth reading by those interested in theological study. J. T. K.

SUPERVISION OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by E. J. Chave. University of Chicago Press. 352 pp. $2.50.

At last we have an authoritative book on supervision in religious education, a book sound in principles and helpful in practical methods. Dr. Chave writes like the experienced technician and that is exactly what he is. In his work in the University of Chicago, he is constantly dealing with supervisory situations and his book is in the real sense the record and interpretation of his own laboratory experience.

Administrative officers and executives in our church schools will find this volume a mine of suggestions with expert guidance for their pressing problems. But teachers will find it equally valuable. Ministers will find it opening up to them avenues of profitable adventure in sermon making as well as in planning worship service and in lending their support to genuinely educational progress in their churches. It is easily the most practical and scientific book in its field.

THE CHARACTER OUTCOME OF PRESENT-DAY RELIGION, by Prof. Herbert Betts. The Abingdon Press. pp. 117. $1.25.

Professor Betts is one of the devout Christian leaders of the day. A great scholar, he is also a great religious leader. He loves the church so thoroughly that he is ready to face the facts of her short-comings as well as of her successes. This book is a study of the views of three hundred leading ministers, directors of religious education, professors of religious education, and outstanding laymen. Only twenty-eight per cent of them think the church is preaching and teaching religion so that character is the outcome.

But Prof. Betts is not only diagnostician. He is also presumptionist. The way is clear if the church will only follow it. First, she must make character her goal rather than mere conversion, expecting character to develop willy-nilly. Second, she must give youth responsible participation in her program and modify it to meet their needs. Third, she must accept rather than oppose modern knowledge. Fourth, she must inculcate the motives that result in unselfish action rather than in self-safety. Fifth, she must discern in each local situation the points at which life needs guidance and adjust herself to their clarification.

Prof. Betts has rendered the church of our time a real service in this book and the two others of like outlook and emphasis which preceded it—The New Program of Religious Education and The Beliefs of 700 Ministers.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

OBITUARIES.

JONES.

When one who is known so well and loved so much as Capt. Flu Jones has lived to a ripe old age and then departed this life for a better sphere, we should not grieve, but be grateful to Almighty God for our associations with him. Therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we, the members of Berea Christian Church, of which he was a member for many years, express our appreciation of his loyal friendship and generosity. He was kind-hearted and lovable—always ready and willing to help lighten a brother's load, and to comfort and help those in distress.

Second: That we deeply sympathize with his children and grandchildren in their bereavement, and bid them look up to Him who rules and reigns in Heaven and in earth, and who is able to sustain them at all times.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be published in "The Christian Sun," a copy made in our church register and a copy sent to his family.

Christian Unity.—

A unique event in the religious history of Wyoming Valley, Pa., was enacted a few weeks ago when eighty-five ministers, representing seventeen denominations, knelt at the altar rail in St. Stephens' Episcopal Church at Wilkes-Barre, and received the holy communion, administered by Bishop F. J. McConnell, of the Methodist Church, and Rev. F. L. Flinchbaugh, of St. Stephens', with Rev. Paul S. Heath (Presbyterian) and Rev. H. F. Randolph (Methodist) serving as deacons. Such a spirit as this will do more to cultivate Christian fellowship than all the creeds of Christendom.

Adult School of Religion.—

The second annual adult school of religion, being held on Thursday evenings during Lent, at Mt. Pleasant Congregationalist Church, Washington, D. C., Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, minister, is considering the following subjects: "Progressive Religion in the Old Testament and the Religion of Today"; "The Mind of Jesus in World Affairs"; "Valid Quests of Life"; "The Church in the World." At the 8 o'clock assembly hour, during the season, the speakers are Dr. Clinchy, Linly V. Gordon, Rabbi Morris Lazaron, Dr. J. S. Plant, Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas and George E. Haynes. Such meetings with such speakers will illuminate the themes chosen for the meetings and inspire the hearers with something of the spirit of the climacteric event at Easter.

Religion, "An Escape from Life."—

Speaking in New York City, three weeks ago, Dr. Halford E. Luccock, of Yale, scored the modern psychologists who interpret religion as an escape or defense mechanism. "The most effective way of putting an end to these accusations that religion is an escape from life," he said, "is not to deny it but to accept it. Religion's profound necessity to man lies in the fact that it does provide a means of escape from life's prison-house. Thus the charge that would destroy religion becomes one of its highest claims. We should be grateful that there is such an escape, a shelter for the soul, but it should be an impulse toward, not a substitute for, righteousness. The person who scorns religion because it is an escape and binds himself by the limits of the physical world is living in a blank world. A faith that interprets facts in the light of high values takes man out of the prison house into freedom."

Congregationalist Missions Decrease.—

At the January meeting of the Congregationalist Commission on Missions, in New York City, figures were revealed indicating that gifts from the churches and individuals to the whole apportionment for Home Boards, the American Board and the State conferences, had decreased $458,000 below 1930, the largest drop recorded in many years, and representing a sixteen per cent loss. Of this amount, the American Board's decrease was $169,000; since the board had reported a loss from these sources up to September 1 of $70,000. The leaders predict that the present year may bring an equally difficult or worse problem. Every board has cut its budget severely, both at home and abroad, and these new figures, it is said will compel a further examination of every item of expenditure. An emergency fund is being raised by the American Board, which has already reached about $30,000.

Elon College Day.—

Our new president is planning an Elon College Day for next commencement on which he hopes to have thousands of the friends of the college to assemble at the beautiful college campus, hear educational and inspirational addresses about the future of Elon College, meet their friends in social contact, visit the buildings of the college, see its splendid laboratories, library, classrooms, equipment for excellent academic and religious instruction, meet its student body and plan for greater things for the future. Tuesday of commencement week has been mentioned as the special time for this event, and it has been contemplated to have a free barbecue for all who come and make it a great day of fellowship, goodwill, enthusiasm, and acquaintance for all who come. What do the Alumni of the institution say about such an occasion? What do the leaders of the church think about it? Shall we make it worthwhile for the future of the college? You will probably hear more about this plan if you watch the announcements from the college.

Impact of the Spiritual.—

St. Louis ministers have experienced a spiritual refreshing. Early in the year the whole group spent a day in retreat. The past week ministers of the Congregational Church under the auspices of the state conference directed by Dr. Charles C. Burger, the state superintendent, spent three days at Eden Theological Seminary in study, meditation and prayer. The discussion took inspiration from studies in the preacher as priest, prophet and pastor. There were also periods when the conference broke up into small groups or singly for silence and meditation. The evening sessions were given up to missionary addresses. Systematic preparation was made for the meeting. The entire expense of travel and entertainment was provided from conference funds. More than fifty ministers from the state and contiguous territory were present. Such meetings for meditation and prayer, for mission study and inspiration, for good fellowship and self-improvement are eminently worth while and many of our churches would be enriched if such meetings were more generally held.

Geneva Conference.—

The atmosphere of the disarmament conference has changed completely within the first week. At the beginning general uncertainty, complete absence of constructive proposals and much doubt as to the worthwhileness of the whole undertaking. Since then there has developed a keen interest concerning the many concrete suggestions which have emerged in the last few days and a general feeling that, whatever its other results, the conference will at least help to clarify many of the acute issues of international adjustment. One of the first to come out was Lord Cecil, with proposals that all armaments which serve only and purely for aggressive purposes should be abolished. Among these he included aircraft, tanks, big guns, large cruisers and submarines. Unfortunately the English government does not want to go so far. This attitude has made it impossible for him to accept a place on the British delegation. That he will not, however, cease to fight for disarmament became clear on Saturday when he addressed the conference on behalf of various peace societies and made a strong appeal for security by lessening the power of offensive armaments.

Campaign for Students.—

All the colleges of the South are now busy with the line-up for students for next fall's session, and are communicating with high school students who will graduate this spring and urging them to enter college for next year. The colleges that wish full patronage must keep busy to keep pace with the campaign and secure their quota of new students. Those colleges whose accommodations have not been taxed during the past year with students will be especially anxious to secure a full enrollment. The overhead expense of administering the affairs of a college is about the same with a fifty per cent enrollment as it would be with a capacity enrollment. Every friend, patron, student, alumnus and alumna of Elon College will be anxious to cooperate in this campaign to place students in the college to a capacity enrollment. Now is the time to do the work for next year, before the students graduating from high schools have signed up for some other college. Special effort should be made to secure the patronage of every member of Congregational-Christian Churches within our territory. There will be many new students who have no denominational affiliations or preferences and we should use our influence to secure our quota of these.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Easter Sunday, March 27th—less than three weeks off. Are we preparing in mind, heart and soul for that most sacred and joyful event?

Envelopes go forward this week to all church secretaries in our Southern Convention for the annual (Easter) offering for missions. Every member in every church should and may have one. Through self-denial we follow him whose life and love we seek through missions to share with others.

Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, having recently undergone a major surgical operation, and though yet weak from the ordeal, is happy to be in his home and on the road to increasing strength and, we trust, to complete recovery. He now indulges the hope that he will be able to occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The one command of our risen and ever-living Lord to his followers. And that, not the mandate or wisdom of any mission board, is the source and security of missions. It was not a man, but the Son of Man, who was the author and sponsor of missions.

President L. E. Smith of Elon College, was at Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Va., for the 11:00 o'clock service and at Ingram for the 3:00 o'clock service, and at Danville, Va., for the 7:30 o'clock service Sunday, March 6. So many duties and calls and responsibilities press upon him in the strain and stress of his new task, that he finds it difficult to know which way to turn and where best he may serve. Surely, here is a man in a great struggle for divine guidance and one whose problems and welfare should have our interest, sympathy and prayers.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, the beloved and faithful pastor of Suffolk Christian Church, recovering from a long siege of fever, is able to preach once each Sunday to his people, thus dividing with the pastor-emeritus, Dr. W. W. Staley, the responsibility and the task of the Sunday services. A great task and a heavy responsibility require all the physical and mental energy of a strong man, and it is good to learn that Bro. Hardcastle is steadily but surely coming back to good health, and hopes at an early date to be able to meet all the responsibilities and the requirements of the great pastorate which he serves.

THE SUN's editor finds it a source of genuine joy to be back at his desk and his daily tasks. In maturity, work is far more engaging than play, and the tasks of the day seem far easier than the pursuit of pleasure, recreation and recuperation. The child knows how to play and loves it and has to learn how to work. Maturity knows how to work and has to learn how to play, for the greater love and the more engaging effort is work, and hence it is more pleasant. When a child we used to be taught, "Duty before pleasure and work before play." That was necessary to the child and was easy, indeed, to the parents who taught it, because duty is pleasure and work is the pursuit of the normal healthy man or woman. The fact is that many, very many men and women need just as much to be taught the lessons of leisure, and the practice of play, as the child needs to be taught the lesson of labor and the necessity of the task. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy"—and also a very dull and inefficient man.

One is surprised to meet in the sanitarium so many teachers, preachers, physicians and men of other professions broken down and seeking recuperation. One asked this foolish question: "If a preacher is serving the Lord with all his heart and strength, why should he break down?" While one smiles at such a facetious question, it gives one the opportunity of saying that the foundation and background of our mental and spiritual strength is physical, bodily and of the earth, earthy. And while a preacher may be absorbed in and given to a spiritual task, he must suffer the consequences if he violates physical law as much as any other person, or if he in any wise over-builds on the physical foundation. A good physician said awhile ago that it would be well for all of us to bear constantly in mind that while the spiritual is above the moral and the physical, even as the top of the skyscraper is far above the foundation on which the building is erected, still the foundation was essential and must be sufficient to endure and support the entire building.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Fuquay Springs, who carries upon his hand and heart possibly the largest rural parish and work of any of our ministers, with the possible exception of Rev. A. W. Andes in the Valley of Virginia, was compelled to withdraw for a season and seek recuperation for mind and body in a Florida sanitarium. Just as farmers, merchants, manufacturers become worn and bankrupt in body and finance, so do preachers, whose heart and soul are with their members, become straitened and bankrupt in body and mind. The pastor who cares and serves not only has his own personal burdens and problems to bear and solve, but he has also the burdens and the problems of his people upon his mind and heart. This will, in a measure, explain why faithful pastors and those given solely to the service of the church, exhaust their physical strength, and have to withdraw to recuperate. Here's hoping that our good friend will soon be back among the people he loves and serves so faithfully, and with strength to bear the strain and the burden of the great work to which he has been called.

THE REFRESHMENT OF LENT.

By REV. ELISHA A. KING.

"It is hard for a man to go down in the Valley of Humiliation."

Thus spoke the Christian pilgrim of John Bunyan's imagination. But he paraphrased a human experience, true to life. The Valley of Humiliation is not for those timid souls who must trip lightly over the realities of life. Some there are to whom religion will always be a surface thing, a matter of smiles, kind words and cheering platitudes. But this experience is for those more courageous souls who are strong enough to know the price of truth and the cost of service. The valley richly rewards them with the crown of light and life.

Lent offers us the opportunity of walking, step by step, with the Christ through this valley of his last days. We share his humiliation, his rejection, his sorrow. We pray with the few at Gethsemane, comfort the disciples when he is taken from them, and grieve with them when he dies. And when the sun of Easter morning breaks the clouds over the eastern hill we rejoice. We died with him. So we also will arise with him.

THE WETS NEED NOT FEAR . . . IF (?)

The Washington Post recently carried a cartoon representing the wet and dry issue as two parrots swearing at each other, and between them the legend, "The Eternal Argument."

It does seem that way, but it isn't.

That argument will be long and bitter, but it will finally end as the arguments about absolute monarchy, imprisonment for debt, human slavery, the right of parent to kill child, and many other like arguments have ended. It will be settled in the interest of humanity and the progress of the race.

The wets need not fear if their cause protects and extends the life, liberty and happiness of the people.

The dries may rest in calm confidence if the triumph of their hopes will minister to the welfare of little children, and elevate the hopes and ameliorate the conditions under which men, women and children live. When the Boston mob threatened to tear Wendell Phillips, the great abolitionist orator, limb from limb, he answered, "If our cause is right the feeble heart-beat of a little babe shall withstand the hostile cohorts of the world."

If liquor drinking protects the birthright of babies—their right to be well born, well nurtured, well cultured and to be given the opportunity and environment for development in the best that there is in life, if it promotes the joys of motherhood and culture, development and safety of womanhood—if it makes men better socially, mentally and morally—if the drinking doctor, engineer, teacher, preacher, editor, mechanic, banker, motorist, sailor, father, husband, neighbor, citizen are all made better and more worthy by drink, then as certain as the rising of the sun, as sure as the procession of the panoply of the skies, prohibition which will not long endure to curse the world.

G. B. B.

IMPRUDENT STRIKES.

There may be occasions when strikes are justifiable. When the greed of employers prevents their paying their helpers a fair wage; when they will not be moved by reason and protest, it may be proper for employees to decline in a peaceful way to continue in the service. In fact, we do not see how they can do otherwise. But when wages are reduced simply because the proceeds of the business will not enable the employer to pay present wages, the case is very different. In that case employees should think twice before they vote to strike. In this time of business depression those who have remunerative work in any degree should be slow to join the ranks of the unemployed. A bad situation may be made very much worse by imprudent procedure. Those who labor for others should consider that many employers—possibly their own employers—are continuing to conduct their business at a loss in order to give employment to their help. Unfortunate it is for both parties when friendship is misinterpreted.

Employers some times provoke imprudent strikes by want of tact in dealing with their employees.

Many difficult problems in business would find a solvent in right human feeling. Let the employer think of his employee as his younger brother. Let the employee think of his employer as his older brother.—Methodist Protestant-Herald.

"The Kingdom of God is not so much advanced by our efforts to build it up as by our yielding ourselves to be built up into it. Here lies the secret power of Christianity. A living sacrifice is a more real contribution to the advancement of the Kingdom than our efforts or our gifts."—Bishop Walter Lambuth.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

MR. L. E. BOWERS, of Crestview, Fla., has the sympathy of many friends on account of business losses due to the financial depression.

REV. and MRS. GEORGE R. WATSON, living at Mountain Creek, Ala., were able to minister to many people of the community when an epidemic of measles became general.

REV. JAMES NAPOLEON CARTER, who lives in the Antioch neighborhood, and is probably related to the Carter ministers of the Christian Church, has revived Pleasant Grove Church near Opp, Ala.

REV. H. M. GRAY, of Langdale, Ala., serves the Mt. Olive Church near Tallassee over one week-end each month. During the last visit, he preached three times, had a church meeting, and visited fourteen homes.

ROCKY SPRING CHURCH, near Haleyville, Ala., which will appear in the Year Book for the first time, has purchased property and is erecting a church building. Rev. M. L. Hargraves is the pastor and promoter.

MISS MARGUERITE DAVISON, returned from her vacation and speaking tour of the East to attend a C. L. C. Conference in which seventy-two young people were enrolled, at the Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., and then went to her home with the Butlers, at Thorsby, Ala.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH OF BIRMINGHAM has found a place for its large audiences in the Strand Theater, where the acoustics are better and the organ all that could be wished. The pulpit is placed in front of the platform. The church is a great factor in the life of its people.

MINISTERIAL FELLOWSHIP in Southern Alabama was promoted by the use of a larger parish car by Rev. M. L. Thrasher, who went with the Conference Superintendent to visit Rev. George H. Bell. Bro. Bell joined the party, which called on Rev. C. E. Burkett, who made a fourth traveler, for the visit to Rev. J. P. Blackwell. It was a fine day.

THE MIDDLE ALABAMA CHURCHES met at Mt. Olive Church, Tallassee, on the fifth Sunday in January. Rev. G. D. Hunt, of Roanoke, as pastor, brought a fine message. This Congregational group appreciated his leaving his own fifth Sunday meeting that day to serve them. The program was varied and moved along well. Two male quartettes sang during the day.

TALLASSEE, ALABAMA, is a picturesque mill town with a river and a dam. The rural Mt. Olive Congregational Church is not far from the town, and on the other side of it is Liberty Church of East Tallassee. Rev. James I. Barker is pastor here. With the ministers of the Methodist and Baptist Churches, he is holding a weekly meeting at the mill. This interest in the workers results in larger church attendance.

ORANGE CITY, FLORIDA. This church has called Rev. Gordon Brokenshire to act as pastor of the church for the next six months, with a view to a longer pastorate. Mr. Brokenshire has arrived and began work with the church on Sunday, March 6th. Mr. Brokenshire is a graduate of Middlebury College and Yale Divinity School and spent the last year and a half with his brother who is a medical missionary in the Philippines.

MR. W. PRESLEY INGRAM, of Birmingham, Ala., who is an auditor for the Birmingham Electric Co., made an excellent contribution to the fusion of the United Christian-Congregational Church of Birmingham with the larger Birmingham Church, by producing a treasurer's statement of the transactions of the United Church covering eleven pages. This was accompanied by an explanatory statement of two pages. The church trustees appreciate such auditors.

REV. MARION L. THRASHER rallied the people of his five churches at Antioch Church, Andalusia, on the last Sunday in January. There were eight or ten talks and discussions by leaders in the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and Women's Work. The young people's parts were especially good. Special music was furnished by the Thrasher Quartette. Rev. W. H. Williams, of West Florida, was a visitor at the rally and made his contribution to the program.

STONY POINT CHURCH is no more Stony Point Church, but has become East View Parsonage, in the form of a nice bungalow, on the high ground overlooking the valley. There was almost no waste in the lumber on account of the fine management of the foreman, Mr. J. A. Dobbs, who is clerk of East View Church, and his active group of church helpers. Rev. and Mrs. A. Calvin Nelson wish to have the pastor's home set apart for a religious service soon after it is occupied.

REV. CHARLES W. SMITH takes the pastorate of the Steppville, Mountain Grove and Garden City Churches after April first. He also plans to help Alabama churches remodel or build churches and parsonages. Having been a contractor before he became a minister, and having built a number of churches, Bro. Smith has planning ability, purchasing experience, skill in placing funds, and enthusiasm for suitable and beautiful structures. It is his ambition to see many more churches and parsonages in Alabama, where he has spent his life, made beautiful.

MR. J. A. STALLINGS, once Moderator of the Alabama Conference, lives at Henderson, and is a leader in the work of Wesley Chapel, which was first a Southern Methodist Church, then a Congregational-Methodist Church, and now is a Congregational Church. Rev. Jeremiah J. Stallings, his father, was a general missionary in Alabama and Georgia about 1900. One of the special interests of Mr. J. A. Stallings is a union community prayer-meeting for all the people of Henderson. The young people have a program assigned a week in advance. The church auditorium is attractive and the meeting goes along with fine interest.

DR. ARTHUR G. LYON, of Lake Helen, Fla., gave one of his Drama Sermons at the Pomona Church on the evening of the Sunday on which the Pomona Church celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. This drama sermon entitled, "Paid in Full," was based on an episode in an early pastorate and the pastor takes the part of the characters. The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Pomona was very largely attended and it was interesting especially that the Baptist Church in the community was closed so that the members of that church could share in the anniversary celebration at the Congregational Church, which was for many years the only church in the community. Two former pastors were present and shared in the service and one person who was a member of the church from the beginning.

FORT MYERS, FLORIDA. This church was crowded on a recent Sunday evening when Stanley Hanson spoke at the Forum on the Seminole Indians, attired in the Seminole costume. Mr. Hanson is a resident of Fort Myers but has been deeply interested in the Seminole Indians and was initiated into the council of the Indians in 1925. Great interest was taken in the address and the questions and answers which followed. In the early history of Florida Congregationalism great interest was taken in the Seminole Indians but in recent years there has been no Christian missionary work among them. Recently Princess Atalooa spent some time with them and as a result there is being organized, throughout the State, groups to be known as friends of the Seminoles and two trained Indian workers have been engaged, one to do educational and welfare work and another as a nurse.

NOTES FROM PLEASANT HILL.

The Community House of Pleasant Hill, Tenn., connected with the Community Church, now stands forth in fine outline as a large building veneered in native sandstone, one hundred yards from the Tennessee Highway, No. 1, and across from a large dormitory of Pleasant Hill Academy. The stone veneering and partitioning of the Community House was chiefly done by voluntary labor through specially organized effort. The Community House has been much used this winter for services, exercises, suppers, and general community purposes. The Get-together Club has met in it to do a fine relief work for the neediest people over a wide area. This Club has organized a new group which provides instruction, and a chance to work for the boys of Pleasant Hill, and is called the Community Church Children's Club.

At Derossett, Tenn., in the Pleasant Hill larger parish, a weekly Bible class and prayer hour has come out of a series of special meetings held in the community.

Miss Elizabeth Fletcher, of Uplands Sanatorium, Pleasant Hill, Tenn., has had the pleasure of seeing the Browntown Sunday School continue to grow in size and interest. Three Hi-Y members of Pleasant Hill Academy have been helping her. Hi-Y boys of Pleasant Hill Academy are leading a group of Pleasant Hill boys in Sunday School work and recreation.

Miss Lawrence, a teacher of Pleasant Hill Academy, is leading the local C. E. Society, which cares for the evening service of the Community Church.

Rev. Edwin E. White, pastor of the Community Church of Pleasant Hill, has a passion to serve aspiring humanity, and is versatile in his help. His work reaches out to thirty points on the Cumberland Plateau. A sample activity is at Toddtown where, on Thursday nights, Mr. Erwin, the Smith-Hughes agricultural teacher, has a weekly night school. The pastor adds a cultural period, giving a talk on World Peace or some world figure, such as Gandhi, or a great story, or some similar topic. Some times Dr. May Wharton, of the Sanatorium, gives health talks in place of the agricultural lessons.

Dr. May C. Wharton, of Uplands Sanatorium, Pleasant Hill, has a large extension work on the Cumberland Plateau. One of her activities is a weekly clinic at Toddtown.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MARCH, APRIL, MAY, JUNE.

These are the months, this the season, designated by our Southern Convention and by all our Conferences as Mission Period in the churches. Just as Thanksgiving, and the weeks centering thereabout, are set aside for the Orphanage, so Easter and the weeks centering thereabout are appointed for the Mission offering. Since the church undertakes both Home Missions and Foreign Missions, the thought in mind was two months for each, through one offering in the churches, this to be divided, unless otherwise designated, equally between Home and Foreign Missions. It is useless to say that, because of bank failures, and the locking up of funds in December, our Mission work has suffered tremendous embarrassment and is suffering. It is useless, also, to repeat that every church enterprise, and benevolence, has suffered and is suffering, from the general depression, and that the funds of individual church members were, in many instances, locked up in banks, just as the funds collected for benevolence, charity and the church were. These are facts which all of us face and which need not be dwelt upon now. It is easy to say that stout hearts, courageous souls, strong arms, well-founded faith, accept hardships, disappointments and embarrassment as a challenge, and a summons to redouble consecration, and real self-denial.

If the time through which we are now passing shall quicken and deepen our faith in God, and increase our practice of self-denial, in the name and for the sake of our Lord, we shall all be better and happier, and not poorer or worse, for the ordeal and the experience.

These months that cluster about Easter are most fitting in church life as the period in which to teach, to preach, and to practice Missions. The supreme task of the church is that of exalting the Christ, delivering his message to the world, making him known to those who do not know him. This is the Mission task. He founded the church that it might carry on his work in the world. He did not need the church while here on earth in body, but as he in person withdrew from the world, he needed and established the church, that it, through the guidance of the Holy Spirit, might carry on the work that he had begun, delivering the good news of him, the story of the Cross, both to the nearby and remote parts of the world. This is Missions. This is the supreme task of the church, the first duty and the highest privilege of the church and of mankind.

At this season we come to the mightiest and most significant single event ever occurring in the history of the world, viz.: the Resurrection of our Lord. His birth and his life, his labors and his teachings would have been as those of other great men and would have passed into history as the contribution of an outstanding human figure. His resurrection, however, lifted the Man Christ Jesus above all other world figures and at once sealed the service he had rendered as the Son of God, and signified to the world that God had revealed in him power over death, hell and the grave. The resurrection sealed and completed the fact and the act, of God's plan of salvation for man.

During this season the churches will emphasize the fact that our Lord Christ, in rising from the dead, fulfilled and completed the fact of redemption, without which fulfillment the rest would have been only human and in vain. And as we rejoice in this season and exalt the risen Lord, we shall prove that our worship and exaltation are sincere and complete as we make our offering for Missions in self-denial, for he himself said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

A BABY.

The world is shocked and horrified at the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby. Here is an innocent twenty-months'-old child snatched from its cradle, and its sleep, by the hand of a ruthless and heartless ruffian. It is difficult to think of a crime more horrible because of the anguish and the suffering it entails upon parents and loved ones. It leaves them a prey to their own unbridled and uncontrollable imagination, totally disarming them with unspeakable fear of the worst that could befall or may befall the child of their affections. This cruel crime has served to emphasize the fact that the whole world can become interested in a baby. Strong men stopped in their tracks to think with a shudder of what had happened to a baby. Men busy, to the limit of their strength and capacity of mind, halted for a time, dazed as their minds grappled with the fear over the fate of a baby. Anxious mothers with infants of their own, bent over their loved ones with intensified emotions, and shed a tear of sympathy for the Lindbergh mother, and for the fate that could befall the innocent darling of their own hearts. Pleasure-seeking, worldly engrossed women, going to places of amusement and diversion, their social clubs and card parties, hesitated and halted for a time to express the deep desire, the inherent desire of motherhood, in their own hearts, for the relief of the suffering of the Lindbergh mother. Students in school, in pursuit of their daily lessons, children on the streets and about their play, stopped for a time to inquire further of the facts of the kidnapping and to express to each other their horror and their hope. The whole world became engrossed in the love, sorrow and anxiety of one father and one mother and in the welfare of one baby. A baby grasped and gripped the attention, the time and the interest of the mind and heart of mankind. After all, nothing appeals to us human beings like the innocence, the prattle, the sweetness, the joy, of a little child.

Our All-wise Creator knew and understood this, as we mortals did not, and thus gave to the world centuries ago His only begotten Son as a Baby in a manger. That Babe is bidding, has been bidding, through the centuries since he came, for the attention, the devotion and the heart of mankind, all of which he has been gradually but surely and steadily winning; and he will win, for his life, his love and his death seal and confirm all the high hopes and loving devotions of the mother who bore him, of the Father who gave him, of the wise men who worshipped him and of the shepherds and of the angels who declared and glorified his babyhood to the world. Yes, a baby, as we have seen, can fire the imagination, engage the interest and captivate the affections of the world. When all is said, we now know our Saviour was right in saying: "A little child shall lead them."

"MORALLY INSOLVENT."

Dr. James I. Vance, Nashville, Tenn., one of the outstanding pastors and preachers of our day, asserted, before a great audience at Charlotte, N. C., the other day, according to the daily press, that "we seem to have repudiated God; and there is no wonder that God has brought on us this terrible depression all over the world as a retribution for our forgetfulness of Him." Dr. Vance was discussing his topic, "Come Back to God," deriving the same from Malachi 3:17: "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts." "Malachi's generation called him an old fogey," said Dr. Vance.

"They bantered him, and scorned him, they called him a liar, and justified themselves in their irreligion and immorality. But Malachi was right. The people had forgotten God, and the prophet called them back to God and to faith and obedience.

"We, too, are in troublous times and our trouble is not financial, much as we need money. The main seat of our desire is in the spirit, the great lack of spirituality." This Lenten season should bring home to us the truth that this great preacher is proclaiming, and at the same time reveal to us the way out of our greatest danger and difficulty. We are even now in that season during which the heart of our Lord was exceedingly burdened with the troublous times in which he lived, and the financial and worldly problems that faced the people of his day. These bore upon his heart even to the breaking; as he approached the terrible ordeal through which he was to pass in order to bring life to a world groping in darkness. On Easter morning he brought that life, even brought it out of the darkness and depth of death and proved himself victorious in spite of all the sin and hatred and crime of mankind. It is our privilege now to approach him in reverence, devotion and humility, and out of our need, through worship and self-denial in his name, gain strength for spiritual conquests. Many are thinking that the world is financially bankrupt; many will realize with Dr. Vance that the world is morally bankrupt and in spiritual distress and need. There is a way out. But it is the way of Christ and the cross, of self-surrender and of self-denial.

"Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospels, the same shall have it. For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" J. O. A.

HOSPITALS AND HORSEPITALS.

Hospitals express the hospitality of Christianity through followers of Christ to the afflicted. A hospital is an institution that receives the sick and ministers to them in generous kindness. Such institutions do not exist where Christ is unknown, and where people do not believe in him. The workers in hospitals are physicians and nurses trained for such service. It is no easy position to fill successfully. The workers in hospitals constitute a vast army of men and women who work day and night to ease pain, restore the afflicted, and repair broken limbs, and restore patients to health and home. There is no place quite as good for the afflicted as a good hospital. The medical missionary is side by side with the evangelistic missionary: they both carry the gospel to the heathen; for the soul and the body. To plant the church and the hospital in benighted lands, is to change the home, the social conditions and the government of the people; and that has done marvelous good.

A horsepital is a place where a horse and a man work upon the soil and change its condition. The horse is the doctor and the man is the nurse. I passed a lot the other day that had been plowed up beautifully; and a friend, a good man, was in the midst of the lot dressing the fresh soil. I said to him, "This gives me a new idea—a hospital and a horsepital." When "God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," He "took the man, and put him in the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it." (Gen. 2:7-15.) Man is a product of the earth, lives upon the earth, and will return to the earth when his work is done. There is no more necessary or worthy employment than the cultivation of the soil. This age is getting too far away from the horse and the field. The city and the machine have taken too many people away from the horsepital. The unemployed can not purchase what the machines and the farmers produce, and hence, "hard times." "Back to the land" for millions who hold out their hands to individuals, churches, organizations, and the government for help. The horse, the man, the plow, and the dirt would give physical, financial, and spiritual health to millions who spend their time at cards, parties, movies, and complain against the sources from which they derive their support. The best people in the world are the human beings who spend their energy and their rest in the horsepital. To "dress the land and keep it" would solve many of the problems that vex society. Go to the hospital when sick and to the horsepital when in need. W. W. S.

THE SECRET OF CHEERFULNESS.

An old man who had met life serenely and tranquilly for more than eighty years was asked the secret of his cheerfulness. He answered in four words: "Thinking of other folks." "You will find," he explained, "that your path is all tangled up with other folks' path. Some people think that if they can only travel their path without getting hurt themselves, they're going to be happy. "But there's more than that to it. To never cause grief to another soul is getting close to real happiness. "In other words, when you get so far that it's a joy to you just to make others happy, you're about there, yourself."—F. A. S., in Light and Life Evangel.

ELON COLLEGE PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

The Board of Trustees in session at the college February 23rd, in addition to reviewing the work of the past year and considering present-day demands, attempted to take a look into the future and to provide against the necessities of the days to come.

These are trying days for those who are really interested in the college and are burdensome times for all who are charged with the responsibilities necessary for the carrying on of all programs of Education and Religious training for the youth of our church.

For the college to be able to carry on with profit there are certain things that are necessary. The enrollment for this scholastic year is 301. We have made a net gain in our student body for this semester year over the fall semester of 22. This, we think, is a commendable record in face of conditions as they are, but with the facilities that we have at Elon we should have doubled this enrollment. The Board of Trustees voted requesting the present student body, the members of the faculty, the members and friends of the Christian Church to use every possible effort to increase our enrollment for 1932 and 1933. Will all readers of this article please forward to Mr. C. M. Cannon, Registrar, Elon College, the names and addresses of graduates of high schools who may be induced to enter college next year. Please do not fail in this. It will help us tremendously. We will be glad to mail bulletins, circulars and answers to all inquirers to you or to those whom you may direct.

Individual Church Support.

In addition to this action the trustees considered suggestions that came to the board from interested friends. One suggested that each church in the convention feed the college for one day. In next week's paper will appear a list of articles required for our dining room for one day, together with detailed suggestions as to how our churches may cooperate in this commendable undertaking. The church making this suggestion has pledged itself to lead the way. If every church in the convention would follow this, it would mean the release of all money paid for board for other college expenses.

College Acre.

Another suggested that all the farmers in the church be asked to set aside one acre out of their farms to be known as the "College Acre," the farmer agreeing to prepare, plant, cultivate, harvest and send the entire crop to the college. It is estimated that there are at least twelve hundred farmers in the membership of the Christian Church. This is an opportunity for a man who is really interested and wants to help do his part. The acre can be cultivated at spare time. Such an effort will not impoverish any farmer but will greatly enrich the college in many ways. If the college had twelve hundred acres under cultivation, the gross proceeds of which were to be turned over clear to the college, it would amount to a considerable sum. At the close of this article will be found a blank for you to sign and send into the office of the college. Let everybody join in this plan.

Free Barbecue on the Campus.

The above suggestions are not inclusive—all cannot participate, perhaps, but here is a suggestion in which all can have a part and we are most anxious that every alumnus of the college, every member and friend of the Christian Church, and every citizen of Alamance county, shall take seriously to heart and put forth every effort possible to cooperate. May 24th has been designated officially as Elon College Day. We are hoping to have every alumnus of the college, every member of the Christian Church, every friend of the college and every citizen of Alamance county that we possibly can present on that day. An appropriate program is being planned. One of the most prominent citizens of North Carolina and of the United States has been invited to make the principal address. A free barbecue dinner is to be planned for our visitors and will be served on the college campus. We want you one and all to come, to enjoy the day and to be inspired by the program, but most of all we want you to see Elon College and to have an appreciation of the high grade of work it is doing and to be convinced of the absolute necessity of maintaining our college at any cost.

It is the purpose of the Board of Trustees in arranging for Elon College Day to ask all who are present to have a part in underwriting the budget for next year. Everyone will be given an opportunity to make a personal and individual subscription to the college to be paid any time during the next scholastic year. No one will be embarrassed, but everyone will be given an opportunity. This matter of giving will be entirely voluntary, but surely everyone will want to have a part in this great undertaking.

A Dollar for Elon College.

Another friend of the college has suggested that Palm Sunday be designated as Elon College Day in all the churches throughout the convention and that on Easter Sunday every member of the church be asked to contribute $1.00 to Elon College, that we may be able to balance our budget for this year. This expression of interest and loyalty on the part of the entire membership of the church would remove all question, encourage our leaders and assure the future usefulness of an institution that has inspired every act of benevolence on the part of the church and that has served the church for more than forty years. What do you say? Would you give $1.00 to see Elon College carry on in the fine service that it has always rendered the church and the country at large? Will the readers of this article please express themselves to the writer their opinion of the advisability of such an effort and send such expressions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication. We invite your comments on the suggestions included in this article.

Yours for the College,
L. E. SMITH, Pres.,
Elon College.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH HONOR ROLL.
ONE ACRE FOR ELON COLLEGE.

Because of my great interest in Elon College and my earnest desire to do what I can to maintain our Church School, I will set aside one acre on my farm to be known as "College Acre." I will prepare, plant, cultivate, harvest and turn over to the college the entire crop from this one acre to be used as the Board of Trustees may direct.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Funerals and flowers attract the serious attention of people and, in many cases, provoke adverse criticism. So often one hears good people say that it would do so much more good if flowers were given to the living instead of the dead. The thought in that criticism is that those beautiful flowers, artistically arranged, are presented to the dead. They cover the casket, they fill the room with their beauty and fragrance, and then they cover the grave. So far as we know the dead know nothing of their presence, nothing of the hearts and hands that have arranged them. If they are given to the dead, the sympathy they express is wasted on the desert air. There are other views that may be taken of the flower-covered grave and the hearts of those who bring or send them. Those views may be taken of this common custom of sending flowers at funerals. They are intended for the living and not the dead. They express the sympathy and love of friends in the loss of their loved ones. If for the dead they would be taken to the grave after the burial; but they are taken to the home, the church, the funeral so that weeping eyes and aching hearts may be comforted in their deep sorrow. If the dead had no friends to mourn, there would be few flowers. Those great displays are for the living and not for the dead; and it is the sweetest way to express sympathy for the bereaved. Many do not know some of their real Christian friends until they see the flowers and the cards at the funeral of their dead. It is true that the flowers express respect and even love for the dead, but the main thing expressed is for the living.

Those who raise the flowers often earn their living by that means. A widow said: "The only way I can make a living for my children and clothe them for school, Sunday School, and church is by raising flowers to sell for marriages, memorial services and funerals. Buying flowers from her is a contribution to the living; and that means of caring for her family is a beautiful way of supporting herself and her children. Buying them is helping the poor, and helping to beautify the world. It would be a dull world without flowers and it might be a world without sympathy and love.

Flowers increase the business of the world and business is a necessary part of the progress of mankind. The beauty in pictures is largely flowers in the mind of the artist expressed by his brush. The art galleries are mostly picture gardens and the harvests of the world are started in flowers. Ruskin describes the beauty God has displayed in the plumage of birds and nature smiles through its flowers. The language of the libraries is colored by beautiful expressions, and women improve their looks and their lives by paints and flowers. Flowers are simply the beauty of nature, man and God combined; and beauty of character is simply the combination of faith, truth, and love in human lives.

ELON COMMUNITY CHURCH.

(THE SUN's editor is a member of this church, and he thinks his church has about the best treasurer of any church. If proof is needed, then read this letter which he received recently, and no doubt every member of the church received the same.—Editor of THE SUN.)

Dear Co-worker:

Another quarter of our church year is ended with the passing of February, which also completes the first half-year. Each one of us should "take stock" of what we have done thus far in contributing our part to the support of the church in our community.

But perhaps some of us will say "If I were paid all that is owed to me, I would give more freely to the church." That may be true. Yet in the stress of human activities we are so apt to forget that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." It follows, then, that nothing that God gives can be withheld or lost through any human agency. Perhaps He is giving us a smaller allowance to prove our willingness to use it wisely in His service.

Two sisters, daughters of a wealthy father, were converted and started out side by side in life. The father died and left each a fortune. One became a liberal giver. The other withheld more than was meet. The first has been, these many years, successful, useful, and happy in her simple life, giving more and more, both of herself and of her money. The other is withered. She spent her money for the world, and the world robbed here of her money, of health, of happiness and usefulness, and now her life is nothing but a lament. Each is reaping as she sowed. As surely as we live, Christian giving is a long step toward right living.

Whether our gifts can be large or small, let us share of what we receive, to promote God's Kingdom work.

An envelope is enclosed which may be used as a catch-up envelope, or for a donation to the church if you have made no pledge.

Very truly yours,

MRS. J. W. BARNEY,
Treasurer.

WITHOUT GOD WE FAIL.

By REV. A. R. FLOWERS.

We are told that when John Knox was called to the ministry, and to serve the Church at Saint Andrews, he was so much embarrassed after his first attempt to preach that he burst into tears and went away, shut himself up in his room determined never to make another attempt in the capacity of a pastor. But after serious meditation and fervent prayer, he again set to the task of a preacher of Christian righteousness, and became a world-famous minister. The most hopeful thought I can entertain in regard to any leadership, especially the ministry, is never to be too sure of self unless there is a consciousness of God bestirring and guiding our thoughts along the way. We may seem to go on for a while with only a feeble trust in God, but ere long we find ourselves working against odds by which we are defeated. God wants us, everlastingly, going on, upward and undaunted to greater heights and more fruitful achievement. That something, we call life to me, without the presence and power of God is a trite possession and can know little of the fullness of joy and the peace of mind that comes to those who know God. Why could Lord Balfour be a leading figure in the British Parliament in his early eighties? Is it not the life of this aged statesman a sufficient reason for his full-grown and lasting gift of intelligence. Great souls live in a realm much greater than it is possible for them to make in their own strength. "Why should we be content to grovel when it is our privilege to soar?" Nothing can be more imperative in our life than a consciousness of our need of God, that can strengthen and purify our individual life, our homes, spiritualize our indifferent churches, rebuke business dishonesty, and cleanse our political motives. I believe it was Charles Ellwood who asked, "Can the Christian Church again furnish, as it did of old, the saints and martyrs needed to redeem the world?" I believe it can, and I feel that it will when it receives the Spirit of our God in its purpose, worship and works. I believe, before the passing of another decade, we will have come to our senses and wonder why we ever became such spiritual weaklings, while God was so willing and ready to have supported us in the fullness of his might. Passing one of our Southern universities, about a year ago, three young ministerial students boarded the train and took a seat near me; which gave me a chance to hear them talk for more than an hour. Two of these young men appealed to me as having had a real genuine call to the Christian ministry, and that they were out-and-out for Jesus Christ and his righteousness; and that their trust was, first of all, in God. The other fellow was very much inflated with things of his own personal interest, and to my mind has some very flimsy, superficial ideas, as to what he is going to do when he gets his D. D. It is pathetic when a young preacher pulls other things in between himself and his God. This young fellow seemed not to know that all persons who are really worthy of degrees must honor their degrees rather than their degree honoring them. Until that young preacher becomes deeply conscious of the need of God in his life, he is destined to failure.

AS THYSELF!

How much we love ourselves! We have failings, and we know it; but we love ourselves. We do things that shame us; but we still love ourselves. We can't see many of our own faults. We know this well enough. But the fact that we are worse than we see ourselves does not abate our love for ourselves. It is a mercy to us all that we can not clearly see all our own faults.

But we have a clear vision of the faults of others. We have a quick reaction to them. The same fault in a neighbor looks worse to us than in ourselves. We can not love him when he is like "that." Let any other practice upon us but a fraction of the wrong that we practice upon ourselves, and it would place an impassable gulf between us.

We all want friends. We all need friends. Life is not worth a straw to the person who is so made up that everybody excludes him. But nobody who is always resenting the faults of others can ever keep a friend. We are all slow to see faults in ourselves, and swift to forgive ourselves for persistent and premeditated wrongs toward others. Why can't we forgive our friends? The little faults in them are no worse than in us.

One trouble is that we dwell too much upon the faults of others. Our own failings would make a bad impression on us if we should dwell upon them. But we don't. We make ourselves the hero or heroine of every situation. We always assume the center of the stage. But the best actors on the stage of life are those who can forgive the little faults and dwell upon the best in their friends. If we can't do that, let this be a warning to us that we must have more grace.—Publisher Unknown.

Wise men profit more by fools than fools by wise men; wise men avoid the faults of fools, but fools do not imitate the examples of wise men.—Cato.

WHAT WASHINGTON WON.

By WALLACE M. CRUTCHFIELD.

A passage from the Bible to be quoted in a discussion of the place and influence of Washington in the life of his country and the world is, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." This towering man won a good name and loving favor, and time has not amended the estimate of Henry Lee: "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." A good name and loving favor belong to this man today as yesterday, and this comes from nothing less than the qualities of his character. No sudden rise in political or social fortune gave luster to his name, and it was not a simple matter of reputation. Character, substantial and enduring, has given this name its pre-eminence. His character suffered its supreme test in the reaction of the peace which followed the victory of Yorktown, and the acknowledgment of independence. Certainly the wisdom of the first President of the United States, the forbearance of his statesmanship, and the genius of his patriotism were as great as those qualities which made the Virginia planter the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Armies. Not only did he survive the after-revolutionary period of reconstruction with fame unimpaired, but returned to private life to have added luster attach to his name, as he passed, in quiet dignity, along the path of uncrowned citizenship to his throne of immortality.

Three men in American political life have borne the supreme responsibility of government in similar crises: Washington, Lincoln and Wilson. Lincoln went to his coronation at the end of the first of three stages of his public career, and we can only imagine what might have happened had he survived. Wilson is too close to us now to be made the subject of current discussion by the processes of historical comparisons. Unlike Washington, who survived, and Lincoln, who died, he fell with mortal wounds that withdrew him from active leadership. With Time, the only competent judge for Woodrow Wilson's spirit and deeds, we salute him now as the first American who both challenged and captured the morality of the world. Of these three distinguished leaders of the nation in its hour of crisis, Washington alone, humanly speaking, finished his work, completed his career, and rounded out his life. Intervening circumstances called Lincoln after Appomattox, and halted Wilson after Versailles. But the path of Washington lies under the eye of the world, a highway undisturbed by fatal violence, and completed to the end of human destiny. The escutcheon of his shield was unsoiled by the darkest experiences through which his honor fought. His place was fixed in the hearts of his fellowmen when he took his last couch as quietly and humbly as the lowliest citizen who has ever found death the Christian's great adventure.

Washington was bigger than his gold. The choicest of metals have their alloy, and their purchasing power is limited. Silver and gold may warrant comfort when properly expended; but temporal wealth is sometimes a menace as well as a blessing. There is such a man as a poor rich man, and we need to pray that God may give us more men whom he can trust with wealth, men who will devote their means to the betterment of society. No man will insist that the riches of Washington were responsible for his good name. Silver and gold did not deprive him of loving favor, but became a means to a blessed end in his hands. While this man had an ample estate that provided for his needs, it was his character that issued in his life, in his colossal ministry of patriotism, and gave him the place he holds in the hearts of men. It was his recognized character that made his temporal possessions a moral asset rather than a moral liability.

A good name is greatly to be desired and loving favor is a rich reward because they have life within themselves. They are nearer to us than poverty. Money lies in our pockets, while the qualities of the soul lie in the heart. A good name gives to its possessor his final social status. Washington has a name that is both good and great. And he won this possession, since a good name and fame can never be bestowed either through inheritance or by good fortune. Washington had a fine foundation for a worthy career. Good blood coursed through his veins, and he was envied in the most helpful manner. These blessings helped him, though the same advantage aided Aaron Burr and Benedict Arnold in vain. Washington won a good name and loving favor in his own right. He won by unselfishness, by pouring out his own spirit in an inspired leadership, and by imparting to society the good he had to bestow.

Again Washington won his good and great name by a complete surrender of himself to a cause worthy of that surrender. He laid his plantation, his savings, his securities, and even himself on the altars of his country, on freedom's young shrine. He emptied himself for the advantage of his people, and fame has a large room in which to store her treasures of remembrance. He faced adverse circumstances, was always the master of himself, and was generous even to his foe. However, as we consider those qualities by which Washington won a good name and loving favor, his faith in God ought to be mentioned. The power of Washington lay in the Author of his life. In order to view the field in which Washington won, to come upon the secret of his greatness, to hold the key to his immortal destiny, we do not go to Cambridge, under whose elm he took his high command, nor to Long Island, nor Trenton, nor Yorktown, nor Mount Vernon, but go to the Treasury Building and see the figure of a man kneeling in the snows of Valley Forge as he holds council with the Captain of his soul. His final appeal was not to the courts of kings, but to the throne of heaven.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father, out of the night we come to thee. May it be as new creatures into the new day. With the passing hours of sleep grant thou to have closed upon time every page that would make us ashamed. Help us to appreciate the receptivity of the pages unwritten, and by their very blankness and cleanness may we be led to know that all the light and hope of the world is ours to embrace and occupy for our Lord Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

TO OBEY OR NOT TO OBEY.

Missions is not a question of choice, but of necessity, with the Christian. We cannot as Christians choose or refuse missions. Christ, the Son of God, chose missions for us. Believing in missions working for missions, giving to missions is simply obeying the most emphatic command our Lord ever gave His followers. Not believing in, not working for, not giving to missions is simply disobeying the most outstanding emphatic command He ever gave. That is all. It is simply and solemnly a question of obedience, or disobedience to our Lord. He is the author, the origin, the source and the sponsor of missions. So if one says he does not believe in missions, one simply says "I do not believe that the Lord was right when He instituted missions and so I will not obey Him." The Christian then does not decide that he will believe or not believe in missions. He simply decides that he will obey or not obey his Lord. That is all.

It was our Lord, not some human being, much less a Mission Board, who said, "Go teach all nations and lo, I am with you." And also, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem" (at home) "and unto the uttermost parts of the earth" (foreign.) It was unto Him that His followers were commanded to bear witness.

And so He made it possible for us to obey Him. When we go in person we bear witness (evangelize) at home. When we go by sending our gifts to carry His Gospel we are missionaries. When we withhold we simply disobey our Lord, and wound His heart.

NOW, IF EVER, THE CLARION CALL.

By DR. RAYMOND CALKINS.

A situation without parallel in recent history confronts the mind and conscience of the church today. Everywhere we turn our eyes the world seems to be in disorder and confusion. The whole human family is involved in a disaster which has world dimensions. We have discovered that there is no such thing as a splendid isolation. We are all members one of another.

The more deeply we probe into the causes of this common catastrophe, the clearer it becomes that the problem is not a political problem; neither is it an economic or industrial problem. It is a deeply spiritual problem. We have followed the road of selfishness, of greed, of avarice. We have used the weapons of hatred and violence, and these have brought us to the brink. The wholly un-Christian aspects of our so-called Christian civilization are the real cause of our universal suffering today.

Whenever in its history did the church have a more glorious opportunity? To see it, however, she should first cast the mote out of her own eyes. She should confess that too long the church has been the handmaid of the secular interests and secular powers, and has failed to maintain her own free and independent position, bringing fearlessly the mind of Christ to bear upon every problem that vexes the mind of the race.

To seize this opportunity will require courage and sacrifice. Now if ever, the trumpet call must be heard and it must give forth no uncertain sound.

These critical times call for a consecrated ministry. As never before in history must our ministers be the world's moral and spiritual leaders.

These critical times call for a consecrated laity. More is required of our laymen and women than that they observe the properties of the personal life and find comfort for themselves in the faith which is theirs. They must change from being quietly and receptively religious to seeing the Cause, accepting it, being devoted to it.

How will this mood, once received, manifest itself? How shall the church make itself felt?

There shall be, for one thing, a voice heard in the land, saying boldly that our sufferings are due to our having forsaken the Christian way of life. Can anyone doubt that the kind of nationalism, the kind of predatory competition, or the kind of war system which has been an integral part of our civilization, is in essence unchristian and therefore the cause of our misfortunes? Now is the time to say so.

But this is not all of the church's duty. Against the dark background must shine a bright and burning light. The church must issue its positive message of hope. Its preachers must fulfill that hope of salvation which lies in a return to the Christian idea of love and justice and brotherliness in every relationship of life. They must summon men to incorporate that idea in the economic, social and international issues of the hour.

But the mission of the church to the world does not stop here. It reaches beyond our own borders and into every land and nation.

There on the outposts of civilization, on the far-flung battle line, in the struggle for a pacified and contented world in which dwelleth righteousness, are the emissaries of the church, the appointed and commissioned ambassadors to all the races and to all the nations of the earth. These are the heralds of that Gospel which the church must share with all the world or be recreant to its duty and faithless to its trust.

The Christian workers all over the world are the great spiritual engineers who are literally laying the foundations of a new world order. They are the world's foremost internationalists, interpreting the East to the West, and the West to the East. They are the fashioners of a spirit, of a hope that brings health and a new morale to every land and people.

Engrossed in our own problems and difficulties at home, have we paused long enough to consider the crushing burdens and staggering difficulties which present world conditions have imposed upon this band of consecrated men and women? They have been sought out and sent out by the churches. They have been asked to do and have agreed to do their difficult work, and they are doing it with consecration and with success. To forget them, to abandon them, to leave them in discouragement, their work crippled, their hopes defeated—this surely would be gross indifference and it would mean moral disgrace for the church which promised its support when it commissioned them to do its work.—The Missionary Herald.

UPLAND SAINTS.

We ought not to rest content in the mists of the valley when the summit of Tabor awaits us. How pure are the dews of the hills, how fresh is the mountain air, how rich the fare of the dwellers aloft, whose windows look into the New Jerusalem! Many saints are content to live like men in coal mines, who see not the sun. Tears mar their faces when they might anoint them with celestial oils. Satisfied I am that many a believer pines in a dungeon when he might walk on the palace roof, and view the goodly land and Lebanon. Rouse thee, O believer, from thy low condition! Cast away thy sloth, thy lethargy, thy coldness, or whatever interferes with thy chaste and pure love to Christ. Make Him the source, the center, and the circumference of all thy soul's range of delight. Rest no longer satisfied with thy dwarfish attainments. Aspire to a higher, a nobler, a fuller life. Upward to Heaven! Nearer to God!—Spurgeon.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, Editor.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the publisher's price.)

THE TRANSFORMING FRIENDSHIP, by Leslie D. Weatherhead. Abingdon Press. 164 pp. $2.00.

A splendid specimen of devotional literature is this book. The author has had a personal experience of Christ. There is no cant in his highly emotional descriptions. His mysticism has the genuine ring of sincerity. Read this book slowly and it will transform your thinking.

UNEMPLOYMENT—A DISCUSSION OUTLINE, By Harrison S. Elliott and others. Association Press. 48 pp. 35c.

Groups of adults and young people, church prayer-meetings, Sunday School classes, Young People's Societies, whole congregations, will do well to use this discussion outline which deals straightforwardly with a problem that is wrecking millions of lives around the world and may wreck our civilization unless it is solved on a Christian basis.

SELFHOOD AND SACRIFICE, By Frank Gavin. Morehouse Publishing Co. 85 pp. $1.00.

Dr. Gavin has, in this Lenten volume, given a fresh and enlightening treatment of the seven words of the Cross. The discussion throughout is illuminating, but those on forgiveness and on Jesus' attitude toward the physical body are especially helpful. It is a book that will heighten the appreciation of spiritual values, and that, too, in spite of his constant reference to Mary as Our Lady, and to our evangelical faith as Catholic.

INFORMATION AND CERTAINTY IN POLITICAL OPINIONS, By Harold S. Carlson. University of Iowa. 48 pp. $1.00.

During the Hoover-Smith campaign by scientific methods, a study of 357 University of Iowa students was made to determine how far information determined their political opinions. It was discovered that the relationship between information and certainty is not very great and that they are of exact and balanced judgment in political matters is not nearly so universal as the democratic theory of government presupposes. It is good that scholars have found this out. The politicians have known it all the time.

SON OF THUNDER, by J. P. D. Llwyd. Ray Long & Richard R. Smith, Inc. 170 pp. $1.50.

The author of this delightful volume is a distinguished preacher and scholar and writes in a most pleasing style. Drawing upon his Celtic imagination, he portrays the life of St. John the Divine from early youth to the closing years of his life. At times one feels as if he were living in close contact with the subject of the story. Certainly we cannot better express ourselves than has Robert Norwood in his introduction. "Dr. Llwyd is a mystic of the high order of Celts, without whom the tongue in which this book is written would lose its immemorial cadence and its unusual distinction of lyric charm. Therefore, I commend it with joy to those who read it, knowing they will love it as I love it." J. T. K.

THE DISCOVERY OF GOD, by James H. Snowden. The Macmillan Co. pp. xiv; 230. $2.00.

Dr. Snowden is possibly best known to our readers as the author of "Snowden's Sunday School Lessons," but he is also an author of many other books of value and interest. The one whose title is given above is certainly among the best of those he has written. Its style is masterly and gripping. It requires concentration, yet it is hard to lay the volume aside, once started, until the last page is reached. Its subject matter is the most fundamental of all questions, and Dr. Snowden's method of approach to this question is original and unique. He begins with the principle of discovery as an unusual urge in the world and traces its development to its final development in the discovery of God. Questions are faced fairly, and conflicting views are examined sympathetically. One who reads this book with an open mind must of a necessity conclude it with a clearer understanding of and a deeper conviction of faith in God, and even say with new emphasis, "I know him whom I have believed," for "at the end of our journey we find satisfaction and peace, rational explanation of the world and a worthy world in which to live and do our work and achieve our victory."

J. T. K.

GRACE IN THE NEW TESTAMENT, by James Moffatt. Ray Long & Richard R. Smith, Inc. pp. xxvii; 418. $3.00.

Dr. Moffatt is a scholar and writer of no mean ability and in this present volume he is at his best. We cannot recommend it to the casual reader, but to the earnest seeker after the deeper truths of the New Testament it will prove of very great value. Dr. Moffatt has a religious insight which enables him to delve directly into the subject before him and bring it out in bold relief. He gives a comprehensive study of "Grace" to the Church at a time when it is much needed.

The volume is divided into seven parts: The Introduction, in which Grace is defined; The Antecedents of Grace; Jesus and Grace; The New Testament Language of Grace; Paul on Grace; After Paul, in which the term as used by James, Peter, John and others is considered, and in conclusion, comparing Grace in the New Testament with the grace notes in music. Dr. Moffatt says that the Grace notes of the New Testament are essential, not ornamental. "If they are omitted," says he, "at the whim of the interpreter, something may be left indeed, but it is not music which is worth calling Christian."

J. T. K.

LIBERATING THE LAY FORCES OF CHRISTIANITY, by John R. Mott. The Macmillan Co. 175 pp. $2.00.

A series of five lectures, dealing with this important question, under the following four heads: "The Contribution of Laymen to the Church," "The Need of Augmenting the Lay Forces," "Influences Militating Against Larger Participation of Laymen," and the last two chapters dealing with the things necessary to liberate the now dormant forces among the laymen of the Church.

The lectures are masterfully written, and capitalize the forty years' experience of the author. In the first lecture are noted the contributions made by laymen from the first century to the present time. The various lay organizations have played a most important part in the dissemination of Christianity. In the second chapter is shown the need for the continuance and enlargement of this work. Mr. Mott points out the fact that the layman, as the secular leader, has points of contact, especially in the foreign field, which the missionary or preacher can never hope to have. These contacts are absolutely essential if the work of evangelization is to be consummated. In the final chapters, the author deals with the obstacles which beset the utilization of the layman in the work, and the way in which they can be overcome.

J. T. K.

JESUS IN OUR TEACHING, by C. T. Craig. Abingdon Press. 146 pp. $1.50.

Prof. Craig is really sorry for the professors of religious education and our best trained teachers in our Church Schools. They are "fed up" on methodology and do not acquaint their pupils with the real Jesus. It is just as unsatisfactory he thinks to search the Scriptures for light and assistance in solving a problem in the field of experience as it is to take a certain number of verses from the Bible and apply their truths to life. So he writes this book to help clarify the situation.

He is not entirely wrong in his viewpoint and however much we may disagree with his theology and his interpretation of Christ, we can certainly endorse his eight outcomes or values for one day of the Man of Galilee. They are briefly summarized as good health, the primacy of spiritual values, sincerity, forgiving nonretaliation, creative living, humble service, the abundant life through prayer, the sense of forgiveness, and God's free gift to men counted in the concept of this kingdom, and finally, courageous faith.

His main thesis, however, is that we find need for the total aspect and import of Jesus' life and not simply for certain generalized principles or teachings based on single incidents, if we are to teach effectively. Religious teachers would do well to ponder this suggestion long and thoughtfully.

HOLY WEEK MEDITATIONS.

The following suggestions for private meditation and devotional study are given with the hope that they will prove helpful to those who may use them. They are not offered as finished programs. Additional material may be added in the way of Bible readings, hymns, and prayers.

PALM SUNDAY—Jesus Honored.
(Matt. 21:6-9.)

Even though the crowd did not realize just what part it was playing, it served to herald a great and wonderful King to his city. It is still true that many do honor to Jesus, by singing hymns and saying that we believe in him, but that is not enough. He demands that we do more. We must enthroned him in our hearts and lives.

We may follow Christ. We may be in the throng that greets him. We may follow him in penitence if not in purity. If we do not understand all we see and hear about him we may at least be teachable. We may have the wonder and admiration of a little child as we gaze upon One who is so pure and wise and holy.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to bow in humble reverence before thee and the love thy son revealed unto us. May we be worthy to praise Jesus. Help us to claim him as Lord of our lives. Amen.

MONDAY—Facing Forward.

"It is great to be out where the fight is strong; To be where the heaviest troops belong, and to fight for man and God.

Oh, it seams the face and dries the brain,
It strains the arm till one's friend is Pain, in the fight for man and God.

But it is great to be out where the fight is strong."

During the last week Jesus was to be on earth he "set his face steadfastly toward Jerusalem." Although he sensed what was to be the end of his career he kept on with his work and courageously faced forward. At other times he had made his escape from the crowd, but now his time was approaching. He made his decision and loyally stayed by it, regardless of the cost that he knew was attached to what he was doing.

Hymn—"Have Thine Own Way, Lord."

TUESDAY—Meeting Death.

People may be judged by the way they meet death. Jesus spent his time during this last week instructing those who were to live and carry on his work about what would be expected of them. He spent his last few days (as well as all of his life) preparing not for death, but for life. He was to live on in the spirit and power bestowed upon his followers.

Christ taught that life must be lost to be found. "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." The heart of man is so constituted that its fullness comes of spending. Christ gave his whole life, saw his plans and hopes apparently crushed, that he might gain a fuller life. That more abundant life that he purchased with the price of his life he offers to all those who will meet the requirements.

Prayer—"Teach us, Lord, to serve thee as thou deservest; to give and not to count the cost; to fight and not to heed the wounds; to toil and not to seek for rest; to labor and not to ask for reward; save that of knowing we do thy will."—Layold.

WEDNESDAY—Betrayed.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for a friend." Did not Jesus carry out his teaching of this principle in a magnificent way? He selected twelve unlearned workingmen—when his personality would have perhaps more easily commanded educated idealists looking for new tasks—to use in his work. He gave much of his time and strength to teaching these twelve men. He loved them. And then one of this chosen group proved himself unworthy of Christ's trust and of his friendship. Surely, Christ thought of Judas, too, when he prayed "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Christ's life rings true to his words: "Greater love hath no man than this, that he die for a friend."

"He built a kingdom with his heart and brain,
He knew hosannas and the Psalms, till one
Played Judas for a paltry little gain,
And in that hour his kingdom was undone."

Prayer Hymn—"Breathe on Me, Breath of God."

(Series concluded next week.)

The Western District of the Young People's Congress of Eastern Virginia reports twenty-five renewal subscriptions and five new subscriptions so far in their campaign for new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This work has been accomplished through individual workers in each church. The campaign has not closed yet. Additional reports from the Western and Eastern District campaigns will appear from time to time. Elizabeth Sharpe, of Waverly, heads the Western campaign, and C. E. Warrington, of Norfolk, heads the Eastern campaign.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

MARCH 20, 1932.

HOW CAN I SHOW MY CROWD THAT I AM A CHRISTIAN?

PROGRAM.

Instrumental prelude—"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Call to worship—"A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

Prayer hymn—"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Introductory talk.

Discussion of the topic.

Hymn—"O Jesus, I Have Promised."

Scripture—Titus 3:1-8.

Prayer.

Hymn—"I Would Be True."

Benediction—"Into My Heart." (Sung softly.)

Additional hymns—"Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us"; "Just As I Am, Thine Own to Be";

"Somebody Did a Golden Deed"; "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

A Christian respects his body.—It is in relatively recent years that a regard for one's health has been given proper emphasis as an expression of Christian living. Paul says, "Know ye not that ye are a temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? . . . Glorify God, therefore, in your body." A Christian will not abuse his body by keeping late hours, eating and drinking things that are harmful, or indulging in amusements that are injurious.

A Christian respects his mind.—It is not easy to protect one's mind from the invasion of unworthy thoughts and ideas. The market is flooded with sensational literature that plays up low standards of conduct. Many movies shown widely in America are so immoral that Turkey, portions of Africa, China, Korea, and Japan have forbidden them to be shown. The minds of many young people are so saturated with unwholesome thoughts that their conversation is on a low level. True story and movie magazines, and novels of the same type provide the reading for a group of Margaret's associates. Their conversation naturally centers around the thoughts suggested by these things. Should Margaret continue to associate with this group? Do you think she could interest them in more wholesome reading? If she leaves the group should she frankly state her reasons?

A Christian respects his morals.—Certain moral standards have been wrought out of a long experience and everyone recognizes that a Christian must respect them. There are other modes of conduct that are on the border line and these constitute the problems for Christian youth. Some things may be all right if done in a certain way and under certain conditions. Many think that dancing belongs to this group. Some things may not be wrong in themselves but may lead to wrong, such as card playing. Others may be excused as "just a good joke," or "having a little fun," or "all right if you can get by with it." Do you think that a Christian can modify and perhaps change the conduct of his group if he holds rigidly to his ideals and uses tact and self-control? Young people often complain that they are unpopular unless they "do as the crowd does." Could it be that they have exercised no initiative or leadership themselves?

One athlete changes his team.—"Dad" Elliott, for many years a prominent leader in the Y. M. C. A., was a star linesman on the Northwestern football team. It was almost time for the game in which the championship of the Big Ten was to be decided. In his last confidential talk with his team in the locker room, the coach told the boys that by using certain tactics they could knock out the star players on the opposing team and win the game. Elliott started taking off his football togs. The coach asked him what he meant. He replied, "I have always played clean football and I am not going to play a dirty game today in order to win a championship." His sincerity and earnestness challenged the group. The spirit and morale of the whole team, including the coach, was changed.

JESUS DIES ON THE CROSS.

LESSON XII—MARCH 20, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 19:17-22, 25-30.

GOLDEN TEXTS "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."—I. Cor. 15:3.

Introduction.

The Cross seems to us to be the symbol of only one thing. It is hard for us to realize that the Cross was once a symbol of shame and disgrace. Like the electric chair or the gallows, the Cross once symbolized the most cruel and shameful death. As we study again the lesson of the Cross let us feel the vigor of its triumph from shame to glory and supreme honor.

They Took Jesus.

A world that benefits by the joys of social relations and achievements must also suffer because of the mistakes of others. Suspicion and jealousy have always been forces potent with evil consequences. Many of the Jewish leaders were suspicious of Jesus' action. Their ideals of the Messiah were so different from Jesus' action that they could not believe he could be the real Messiah of God. So they took him into custody. He was tried and by prejudiced minds condemned to death.

Bearing the Cross.

"And he went out, bearing the cross for himself." In some ways, every man must bear his cross. There are some burdens that must be borne alone. Jesus bore his cross. It was a rough and heavy cross, but Jesus carried it until it weighed him down with exhaustion. Heavy as the cross must have been, it was light, compared with the burden of sorrow that the Master bore as he toiled up the slope to Golgotha. In the period of Jesus' greatest popularity throngs of people followed him. Many had turned away. He had been denied by friends, betrayed by a disciple and condemned by the highest body of his church. Still he patiently carried his cross.

They Crucified Him.

This was a most painful and agonizing death. With hands and feet nailed to the cross the victim must slowly and painfully endure for hours before unconsciousness and death gave release from the torture of pain. And with it all Jesus could say, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Wonderful was the love of Jesus to see through the mistaken ideas that led them to make him suffer, and then in the midst of his sorrow to pray for their forgiveness.

King of the Jews.

This title posted above the crucified figure indicated the charge on which he was condemned. Truly, it seems absurd that any real king with power should thus suffer at the hands of his subjects. Could a king show power from the cross? Could divine power be there manifest? One of the thieves who was crucified with Jesus thought the cross could show power if Jesus would mysteriously save them from the cruel plight and by magic or miracle take them down. But Jesus knew a greater power than the thief could conceive.

The Power of the Cross.

Jesus suffered. He patiently bore the pain and humiliation. Just and innocent, no sense of guilt and still he was willing to suffer for the wrongs of others. This is the greatest glory of the Christian religion. The cross demonstrates the most potent force in the redemption of a lost and ruined world. It is the supreme manifestation of perfect and all-inclusive love. Love, so pure and sincere that it suffers the agony of death because of the wrongs of others. The world has fought for thousands of years, supposedly to protect and secure justice. Jesus loved so supremely that he was willing to die for the sins of others.

Toyohiko Kagawa, the Japanese evangelist, says: "There is only one fundamental principle in Christianity. It is the cross. The cross of Jesus is the sole principle—social, educational, and religious—of Christianity." The philosophy of the cross seemed foolish to the people of Jesus' day. It has always seemed foolish to many. But it is the crowning glory of Christ. It is the kernel and climax of his life and teaching. It is the vital eternal principle that will yet transform the world.

Prayer.

O, thou eternal God, show us the beauty, the transforming power of the cross. Help us to be more like Jesus in the spirit of our lives.

THE REMEDY.

"But he can't preach." Who said this? Persons who have been attending preaching services regularly a number of years. They have attained certain ideals which they wish a sermon to meet. Failing in this, listening to a sermon is wasted time to them. For this reason many fail to attend services or they attend only for a part of the hour.

What would remedy this condition? To answer the question requires an understanding of the demands of the listeners. First of all, they want to hear a message that comforts. If a sermon has no comfort it is to some persons inane. In the second place, they want a sermon that has a rational exposition of a portion of the Scriptures. This portion may be either long or short. But whether long or short, it is the main kernel of food which the hearers are seeking. For this to be furnished from the pulpit weekly requires a life of reading and of study on the part of the minister. Perhaps the greatest deficiency of the preaching referred to in the foregoing comment lies in this particular. A minister may be ever so excellent in making his pastoral calls in which work he may be commended most highly but if he fails in his pulpit ministrations the remark quoted above is heard. It is a serious condition and must be remedied by the minister, if he would not lose his place, a step expensive to him and to the church.

It is inconsistent to close our eyes to what God commands us, and beseech Him to open His ears to our petitions. If we would have Him hear our prayers, we should heed His commands.—The Presbyterian Record.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

A GOOD RECKONING.

"I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to us-ward."—Rom. 8:18.

The Bible never despairs of the future. With the Lord Jesus the apostles look forward to the future with the reverence of a great artist nerving himself to accomplish some great design; like a farmer, despite all failures of the past, going forward in the spring to sow his crop with sanguine expectations of a good harvest.

Visions of the heavenly future to us-ward present a final consummation of something greater than our hearts conceive, and the struggles and the strains through suffering, are borne with a cheerful fortitude so long as we do not lose the vision.

So the Lord promises us, this morning, that we may look across the space of our time to the last result and believe that that result will amply compensate for all our toil and suffering.

Prayer—Dear Lord, help us to be faithful in all things looking for the advent of that new, purer and happier life, where all pain shall be forgotten in the joy of a better man and a better humanity. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? . . . Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."—Rom. 8:35, 37.

The apostle does not say, "I know," for that would imply experience of both the sufferings and the glory. Neither does he say, "I think," for that would imply less than he had experienced. He knew a whole lot of suffering and much of the glorious. All that he says here is based on that word used yesterday, "I reckon." That means that he has come to some conclusions which are warranted by some facts of experience. It is the language of knowledge, of faith, and of anticipation. He knows he is on his way from the earthly to the heavenly. It is the urge which made him say, "Forgetting those things which are behind and stretching forward to those things which are before, I press on, etc."

Prayer—Dear Lord, we too would live life in transcendent glory—and be filled with the Divine urge to never give up, but ever press on. Grant this to us this day. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ABUNDANT REVELATION.

"I have shown thee, O man, what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy Lord."—Micah 6:8.

Paul's conversion on the road to Damascus, his escape from the conspiracy at Jerusalem, his providential release from jail, overcoming the persecutions of the Jews, miraculous escape from being stoned to death, the shipwreck, in the midst of it all often "caught up into Paradise," penetrating spiritual realms where God dwells, and hearing words of God and seeing things eternal which are not given to the face of man to see, all fitted Paul to know that God is and the rewarder of them that seek Him.

We too may root our souls in soil divine, so that when earth's overwhelming strifes and struggles come, and pain and suffering racks us sick and sore, we may be convinced of everlasting life and God, and never waver.

"The structure that we build with careful toil,

The tempest lays in ruin in an hour;

But like a grand tree that springs from the soil
We're bended, but not broken, by its power."

Prayer—Dear Lord God, without thee and thy love, and thy coming glory for man, we could not endure the pains of life's sufferings. But in the hope of glory we can endure all for His sake. Grant that we may. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A LESSON FOR SUFFERING.

"In all these things we are more than conquerors."—Rom. 8:37.

"Ye know not why God hath joined the horse-fly unto the horse,

Nor why the generous steed is yoked to the poisonous fly:

Lest the steed should sink into ease and lose his fervor of nerve

God appointed him this: a lustful and venomous bride.

"Never supine lie they, the steeds of our folk,
to the sting,

Praying for deadness of nerve, the wounds the shame of the sun;

They strive, but they strive for this: the fullness of passionate nerve;

They pant, but they pant for this: the speed that outstrips the pain.

"Sons of the dust, ye have stung: there is darkness upon my soul.

Sons of the dust, ye have stung: yea, stung to the roots of my heart.

But I have said to my breast: the birth succeeds to the pang,

And sons of the dust, behold, your malice becomes my song."—Anonymous.

The great point of this poem is that there are other facts in life which must be taken into account as well as sorrow. If we did not have troubles here there would be no problems, and if there were no problems life would be very uninteresting.

There are many things which seem to say that "God is cruel." But a thousand things contradict that: sunshine, flowers, fruit, singing birds, love, true friends, the splendor of day and night. Can we see?

Prayer—Dear Lord, everything that thou hast made is so large, so considerate and so thoughtful, so fatherly, that our own tenderness is unfeeling by its side. We dedicate our lives to thee for the promotion of happiness among those whom we meet. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SACRIFICE AND DISCIPLINE.

"I beseech you, therefore, by the mercies of God ye present your bodies a living sacrifice wholly acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service."—Rom. 12:1.

The mystery of suffering lies in the good of sacrifice and discipline. It expresses the whole relationship of God to man. To be a Christian does not mean merely that we must give up wickedness; it means that we must fight temptation.

In order to do this it is often necessary to forego ease and comfort and many other things we like. It is literally taking up crosses in order to overcome. This effort means sacrifice. It is just what Jesus spoke of when he enjoined plucking out one eye, or cutting off one hand, as being the salvation of the whole body. Someone has said something like this: "Men's characters are spoiled by prosperity and unspoiled by reverses."

Also, there are some things that are better than pleasure. The history of the world tells us that out of pain and anguish come God's beautiful gifts that can turn sorrow into joy. Often we have to choose suffering deliberately as an escape from defect and despair. When there lies before us two ways, one of ease but of acquiescence in evil, and the other a harder way of Godly sorrow but victory of soul—dare one hesitate? This is but a picture of God's call to the school of endurance, where we are trained by the way of the cross for the glory beyond.

"I wait in His own good time to see
That as my mother dealt with me
So with His children dealeth He.

"I bow myself beneath His hand:
That pain itself was wisely planned
I feel and partly understand.

"The joy that comes in sorrow's guise
The sweet pains of self-sacrifice,
I would not have them otherwise."

—A. E. The Divine Vision.

SATURDAY.

SEEING THE GLORY.

"Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."—1 Cor. 13:12.

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him."—1 Jno. 3:2.

Glory is a very vague word to many of us, but maybe not so vague when we remember that the common everyday meaning of it is: "The manifestation of excellence." As applied to God, it is the manifestation of the excellence of God, whether in love, wisdom or goodness, or whether in all that He is. As applied to man it is the manifestation of the excellence of man. But when we examine man honestly we find him an exhibition of weakness, fault, sinfulness and this application pales into weakness. But Paul is applying it to Christian men, which means that a Christian has a hope in God's glory, not in themselves. They are the children of God, brothers of Christ, and the citadel of the Holy Spirit.

In the flesh, that future glory is vague, but if our text means anything, we have the promise that he who sets both his thoughts and affections on the things that are above, shall have the glory of complete triumph over sin, and perfect conformity to Christ. He is to enjoy the wondrous blessing of being one with God, partakers of his strength and beauty, his life, his eternity, heirs and joint heirs with Christ.

"He makes my windows agate,
That I may dimly see
The glories that await me,
The joys prepared for me.

"Through mists of tears the bulwarks
Of Zion's city rise:
I greet its pearly portals,
Its jasper meets mine eyes;

"A mystic glory lightens it,
It shines upon my road,
And through my agate windows
My heart exults in God."

SIN THE CAUSE OF SORROW.

By REV. N. G. NEWMAN.

"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down; yea, we wept when we remembered Zion."—Psa. 137:1.

The Jews had received the most signal tokens of divine favor. It was for them that God had deposited the waters of the Red Sea. For them he had manifested his presence in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. For them he had rained bread from heaven and caused water to gush forth from a barren rock. For them he had made known his will to Moses on Mt. Sinai amid thunders and lightning. He created for them civil institutions by which they might make for themselves a name among the nations of the earth. He gave them the temple with all of its glory and hallowed mysteries, and instituted a perpetual service therein. But they depreciated all these blessings and ignored the most sacred precepts of his law. They converted the beautiful temple service into a hollow mockery, and made his house a house of merchandise and a den of thieves, and even turned aside after strange gods, until the cup of their iniquity was full, and the race, accursed of God and man, was driven forth from Zion to be a by-word and a reproach to the nations of the earth.

Nebuchadnezzar, under the hand of God, was the instrument of this chastisement. He marched against Jerusalem three times. First, in the year 606 B. C., and carried away many captives, among whom was Daniel. Again, eight years later, he captures a vast amount of treasure from the palace and temple, and carries away to Babylon ten thousand of the best men. Twelve years later he marches against the Holy City for the third and last time. The inhabitants of the once glorious Jerusalem resist bravely for eighteen months, but finally succumb to famine and pestilence. The city is taken, her walls thrown down, her palaces destroyed and temple profaned, and the flower of the nation carried away to Babylon. Then followed a period of fifty years' captivity, in which the Jews were slaves and bondsmen by the rivers of Babylon. There the heart yearned for the religious privileges which they had lost, and they wept bitter tears of repentance.

"Yea, we wept when we remembered Zion." The love of the Jew for his native land surpasses, perhaps, all other patriotisms on record. To him Jerusalem was the dearest spot on earth. It was the capital of his nation, the city of his God—yea, the very gates of heaven to his soul. Whether a prisoner in bonds, or a slave in a Roman galley, or a prime minister at the right hand of some proud monarch, the cry of his heart still was: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." In this sad picture from Jewish history we see many practical lessons, a few of which we will now notice.

1. Sin Makes Men Captives.—It was sin that brought the Jews into captivity. They once worshipped under their own vine and fig tree, and were happy and free. Now they are slaves to a heathen master, far from their beloved Zion, while their harps, with which they were wont to praise God, are hung upon the willows, and they sitting in solitude by the rivers of Babylon, weeping away their lives.

Sin always destroys liberty, and "when it is finished bringeth forth death." It destroys liberty, civil and religious, national and individual. Liberty is not found in freedom from law, but in the strictest conformity to law. The law-abiding citizen is happy and free, while he who defies law falls into its hands, and liberty is taken away. To a law-abiding citizen it is all the same as if there was no law. The law is no more to him than the wall built upon the high bank of the river to keep back the tide which never rises to its base. Thus it is with the Christian. The soul hid with Christ in God is, as the apostle says, no longer under the law. To him it is null and void. Dwelling within the circle of the law he remains steadfast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made him free; but when he attempts to break through, he falls at once under its dominion.

A law-abiding, God-fearing nation can be free, but when sin and anarchy enter, the wrath of God and the curse of man fall upon it. It becomes incapable of self-government, and falls an easy prey to some ambitious monarch. The same thing is true of the individual. As long as he conforms to the laws of God as written in his own being, he is free; but when he violates them by yielding to the appetites and passions of the body he soon becomes a slave of the most abject type. There are many men who have not drawn the breath of freedom for years, and perhaps never will again, in time or in eternity. They have sold themselves into bondage for a mere morsel of self-gratification.

In slave times a first-class colored man sold for $1,000. Now men sell themselves for a few packages of cigarettes, or a few drinks of whiskey, or a few ounces of opium, or some other form of sensual indulgence, into a more abject slavery, from which according to their own confession, they cannot escape. A man may yield to a habit until, demon-like, it fastens its fangs into him and will not be shaken off. He becomes like the youth who fell down before Jesus foaming and gnashing his teeth, or like the men that dwelt among the tombs, crying and cutting themselves night and day, and were so exceedingly fierce that no man might pass that way.

2. The Rejection of Privileges Leads to a Withdrawal of Them.—The Jews once enjoyed the blessings of Jehovah in the land he had given them; but they depreciated these blessings and abused their most sacred privileges. Now all has been taken from them, and they from the land of their birth. No gilded temple rising in yonder distance, no smoke from the altar of God curling heavenward greets him, a pilgrim to the Holy City; no priest stands to intercede for him—no altar of sacrifice, no mercy seat.

In the divine economy God has seen fit to take from man what he will not use, and withdraw offers he will not accept. The pound which the servant hid in a napkin and buried in the earth was taken from him. Christ's command to his disciples was, "When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another," and their subsequent history showed that they heeded the command. The personal observation and experience of men teach the same truth. It is seen in the continued hardening of the sinner's heart until he seems completely isolated from the sphere of the spiri-

OWNED HOMES.

"Every man under his vine and under his fig-tree."—1 Kings 4:20-28.

Two well-known judges of juvenile courts have recently spoken vigorously in regard to home ownership. By far the largest per cent of juvenile delinquents that come before them—one of them says 87 per cent—come from rented homes, providing no place to play and no incentive and opportunity for the development of child life.

If we care for our own spiritual growth, and that of our dear ones, we must look to the home surroundings. Home-builders are also soul-builders. "I go to prepare a place for you," He said.

So let us build up homes for the Lord Jesus, such homes as that in Bethany where Mary and Martha and Lazarus received their Saviour and received from him the priceless gift of life. Every Christian home may be a Bethany.

Prayer—Come to our hearts, O blessed Redeemer! May they be thy abiding place. Radiate thy glory through all our rooms. Accept them as thy own, and then they will be our most truly, and ours forever. Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

tual, and proof against all the holy influences of the gospel. This principle extends further. It will apply to material things. The unkept house soon falls into decay. The untilled farm grows up in briars and bushes, and the man has no farm. The neglected business goes to pieces and forces the man out of business. "To him that hath shall be given, but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that he seemeth to have."

3. The Memory of Lost Blessings Saddens the Heart and Often Turns It Back to God.—"We wept when we remembered Zion." Judea, with her hills and valleys and plains dotted with the fleecy herds and waving in golden grain, was ever present to their mind's eye. Zion, with her magnificent palaces, her holy temple, her mighty bulwarks, could never be forgotten. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning." There they once worshipped at the shrine of Israel's God, and tuned their harps for the sweet songs of Zion. Now they sit and weep by the waters of Babylon, while their harps hang in mournful silence upon the willows. But note one thing: It was these sane reminiscences that brought them to a state of true repentance, and thus prepared them for the return to Zion. O, the power of memory. It is the still small voice ever calling the wayward back to duty, or the terrible scourge in the hand of God, wreaking vengeance upon the incorrigible. How many wayward youths, wandering from home and duty and God, have been brought back by the gentle voice of memory. It was this that brought the prodigal back to his father's welcome arms. Far from home and kindred and friends, a stranger in a strange land, a slave in abject servitude, perishing of hunger, he sat down by the swine trough to think, and there he came to himself. He remembered his father's home—that sparkling fountain at which he had so often slaked his thirst, that sumptuous table at which he had so often satisfied his hunger, that soft couch upon which he so many times had rested his weary head, were all present in memory's vision. It was then that he resolved to return to his father's home. The memory of the old homestead, the old spring down by the hill, the massive trees in the yard under which so many playful hours have been spent, the old orchard, laden with luscious fruits, through which he had so often rambled with light and joyous heart; mother's old armchair and thumb-worn Bible, the corner in which she used to kneel at night—and the memory of such things, I say, has arrested many a reckless youth in his downward course just as he was about to make one long, wild leap into eternity.—The Christian Sun, Issue of Dec. 23, 1897.

Christianity is not a voice in the wilderness, but a life in the world. It is not an idea in the air, but feet on the ground, going God's way. It is not an exotic to be kept under glass, but a hardy plant to bear twelve manner of fruits in all kinds of weather. Fidelity to duty is its root and branch. Nothing we can say to the Lord, no calling Him by great or dear names, can take the place of doing His will. We may cry out about the beauty of eating bread with Him in His Kingdom, but it is wasted breath and a rootless hope, unless we plow and plant in His Kingdom here and now. To remember Him at His table and to forget Him at ours, is to have invested in bad securities. There is no substitute for plain, everyday goodness.—Selected.

It is when we strive for a common object that we see above our petty jealousies and rivalries and recognize our essential oneness in Jesus Christ.—F. B. Meyer.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

SPEIGHT.

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Nannie Riddick Speight, and

Whereas, by her death the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has lost a valued member, her family circle a devoted wife, mother, and sister; and her large circle of friends one of gracious manner and genial disposition; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we humbly submit to God's will, knowing that He is too wise to err; and that we seek to emulate all that was good in the life of our departed friend. We offer to her bereaved family and sorrowing friends, our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that God may bring speedy relief to their burdened hearts.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to "The Christian Sun," and a copy placed on the records of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society.

Respectfully,

WEEKLEY.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, in his wise Providence, to call from this life to her eternal reward, our esteemed friend and co-laborer, Mrs. Edna McCormick Weekley, wife of our beloved pastor, Dr. M. L. Weekley, who since coming into our midst, has been a faithful teacher in the Willing Workers' Bible Class, and a loyal member of the Woman's Missionary Society, of the Linville Christian Church, and while we deeply deplore the great loss we have sustained in her going, we humbly bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, who is to wise to err, and too merciful to be unkind.

Though her stay was short with us, we were impressed with her knowledge and deep love for God's work, her loyalty to home and loved ones, her fine cooperative spirit and her abiding faith in prayer; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Weekley we honor her precious memory by carrying on the work and record with high appreciation of the useful service rendered by her while in our midst.

2. That we bear willing testimony to her many virtues, to her unquestioned consecration and pure life.

3. That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in this their sad bereavement and commend to them the Christ whom she loved and served so faithfully, who will sustain them in this hour of sorrow.

Our Minister Yale Chaplain.—

It will be of peculiar interest to members of the Congregational-Christian Churches to know that one of our ministers has been appointed chaplain of Yale University. Rev. A. Sidney Lovett, of the Mt. Vernon Congregational Church, Boston, has been appointed to this position of honor and trust, to succeed Rev. Elmore M. McKee, who resigned last year to become rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Lovett received his theological training at Union Seminary, and spent a year in study at Oxford. He has ministered to the Mt. Vernon Church since 1919. Such promotions should inspire all of our young ministers to prepare for greater things. There will always be found a place for the minister who is worthy and well qualified for the position. We should prepare before the time and opportunity comes and be ready to step in when the waters are troubled.

All Alumni for Elon.—

We are to have a luncheon on March 19th for the Alumni of Elon College to get together in a mass meeting to consider the patronage for next session and other interests of the college. If we can revive the Elon spirit among the Alumni that once existed, there can be no doubt about the complete cooperation of the Alumni in their work for the future patronage of our college. We have every assurance that we shall have the hearty support of all who have graduated here in every movement that looks to the greater development of the usefulness of the college. There has never been a more loyal spirit shown by the ministers of the church than is shown at the present time, and out of the meeting next Saturday we expect to see a united effort of the Alumni to increase the patronage of the college to four hundred students for next session. We can bring this to pass if we can have the active cooperation and support of all who have graduated from the college.

New Hymnal—

For three years, a joint commission representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, has been working on a revised hymnal and psalter. One group studied words, another music. This week the full commission was to meet in Cincinnati to join the efforts of the two groups to ratify the changes recommended by each. Some of the changes that will be recommended will be the "imagery of blood" as distasteful in the old-time hymns. The Manhattan ministers to whom the group of the commission on words reported, agreed that some of our old-time hymns were "too bloody." Let the modernists keep on and they will rule out all the symbolism of the Old and New Testaments, the miraculous and supernatural which do not suit their tastes, and declare the Bible inspired only as any other book written by good men. The result will be increase of crime and disregard for the religion of our fathers.

Virginia First.—

Virginia was the tenth State to ratify the Federal Constitution, June 25, 1788, by a vote of 89 to 79. Last week it was the first State to ratify what is likely to become the 20th Amendment to that Constitution. Prodded into speedy action by Senator Carter Glass, it did not wait to be notified officially by Secretary of State Stimson that Congress had put this newest amendment up to the States. Last week Mr. Stimson was still waiting for the Government Printing Office to turn out 48 copies of the amendment to be signed, sealed, red-taped and distributed among the States. As submitted to the States by Congress, the 20th Amendment would eliminate the short, or "lame duck" session of Congress which follows every biennial election. Each Congress instead of waiting 13 months to get to work would open January 3rd, after the November voting. The President would be inaugurated January 20th instead of March 4th. Congressional sessions, within the two-year term of members would be unlimited.

Education.—

In the United States are one million pedagogues teaching 30,000,000 pupils. The United States pays annually three billion dollars to run its seven billion dollars worth of schools. Educators, an imposing group, have their organizations, their associations, and their trade journals. Together with the teachers the workers and students in the field of education in the United States constitute over one-third of our population and they are working at the task of preparing the future citizens of our nation about ten months in the year. It is the greatest undertaking for the preparation of the future citizenship of our country that we have. Without Christian culture and moral character all the mental training and education that may be given will not solve our national problems, but we need stronger emphasis put on character building in our young people to prepare them for the responsible positions of leadership for the future. If our leaders were as well educated in Christian character as they are in intellectual qualifications these times of depression would soon be overcome. Parents should think of this when they select a school for the education of their boys and girls.

Stanly High.—

Stanly High, former editor of The Christian Herald, who has spent the past year in an effort to establish a Christian daily newspaper in New York City, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Congregationalist Church, Stamford, Conn., of which he has been supply minister in recent months. It is to be hoped that his project to establish the daily Christian newspaper will not fail. He has done excellent work as editor of The Christian Herald, and would give the Christian world great service as editor of a great national daily religious newspaper. Such a journal would be a strong medium with which to combat evil influences of many of our dailies that oppose righteousness wherever it conflicts with what they think is good politics. Unless our nation can be conducted in the spirit of Christ and political and national questions can be settled in His name and spirit, the nation shall mourn, our economic system will be shattered on the rocks, and our banking system will go to pieces, and depression reign and rule and ruin our country. Give all our people the faith in each other that Christ taught, faith in the eternal verities of the Christian religion, and faith in Christ that saves and our country will be safe and prosperous.

Theological Interest in Germany.—

While all academic professions in Germany have been crowded for a good many years, the ministerial career had been an exception. During the entire post-war period the theological faculties and seminaries did not turn a large enough supply of students to fill the vacancies in the parishes. This situation is now beginning to change. At present the German universities have far more theological students than during the most crowded pre-war years. In almost all parts of the country large quotas of theological candidates are passing their examinations to enter for the ministry. And it is foreseen that the present supply of vacancies will soon be exhausted. In a few years students of theology will have no better chances of getting positions than their fellow-students in other faculties. Theological students should think of doing some constructive work as well as holding positions created by their predecessors in the ministry. This must be done if expansions and growth in the church keeps pace with the growth of the population. The Christian Church would be much larger than it is if her ministers had always stressed the importance of doing missionary work in the home field and had stressed evangelistic work both in established churches and in new missionary fields. Then if they had followed up their work with church organization and administration for the conservation of our membership. There is a reason for the existence of the Christian Church, or it should never have been organized, and we should herald that reason to the world in such a manner that it will prove effective in church expansion.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"And he said to them all, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For what is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Through worship and song we shall praise our Redeemer that He arose from the dead; through self-denial and offerings to Missions we shall share with Him the joy and the glory of His resurrection.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, President of the Woman's Board of the North Carolina Conference, reports a most excellent meeting at Reidsville of a one-day school of missions recently, and that Rev. A. P. Hurst, of Elon College, gave a splendid study in "The Challenge of Change," the mission study book now for the women.

As we near Easter, the greatest day on the Christian calendar, let us plan to make the occasion this year a great spiritual blessing and not a time in which we major in dress parade and holiday revelry. Christian people ought to make this the greatest of all days in bringing spiritual blessing to the people and the churches.

Envelopes went last week to every Church Secretary in the Conferences of the Southern Convention for the Easter missionary offering. It will be a tragic loss, in these times when every drive possible is needed for Missions, if these envelopes are laid aside somewhere and not distributed. They were sent with faith in Church Secretaries and pastors, and we cannot believe they will fail in such an emergency.

Rev. W. T. Scott, Salisbury, reports quite hopeful conditions at Winston-Salem, and regular preaching in the Y. W. C. A. in that city. Bro. Scott feels that we cannot longer neglect Winston-Salem as a place of real need and opportunity for the Christian Church. While no organization has been effected, the prospect is very encouraging. The belief is expressed that the time is near when a church should be organized and a building secured or begun.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, spent much of last week in the Valley of Virginia, presenting to the people the claims and needs of Elon College and soliciting funds with which to support the college. Dr. Smith deserves and should have the support both of the prayers, and the contributions of purse, of the people who care for Elon College. He is giving all the strength and energy at his command to a most worthy cause, and we can but believe that his efforts will be crowned with success.

Dr. Rowland and the First Church, Greensboro, had a great service Sunday, March 13th, the occasion being that of dedicating their splendid new pipe organ, which was a gift to the church by the Philathea Class. Mr. W. B. Truitt, on behalf of the class, presented the organ, and Attorney F. F. Wyrick accepted the gift on behalf of the church. Mrs. Truitt, the accomplished organist of the church, rendered a musical program, with the assistance of the choir. Dr. Rowland preached, appropriately, on the "Power of Music." It was a delightful service.

As we draw near to the Easter season, that period in our Lord's career when the spirit rose above the flesh, and the soul was mightier than the body, and life was more powerful than death, it behooves us to seek the things of the spirit and inquire if we truly believe in Him who is the resurrection and the life. Many of us think we are passing through an ordeal now. Think through what suffering, sorrow, self-denial our Lord passed that through it all He might come to assured victory, a glorious resurrection. "And if we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him."

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, the faithful and ever loyal pastor of Suffolk Church, writes: "My general condition as to health is good and I am hoping my strength eventually will return. When I planned my work ahead while at the beach I made provision for emphasis on missions leading up to Easter. I have secured an illustrated lecture of our work, and have had my people sign up for the Guest Book, and I am planning missionary sermons between now and Easter. The Woman's Missionary Society has been having its mission study class on successive Wednesday nights and will finish tomorrow night. As usual, I shall get out a letter to my people, and we shall do all that we can to get as generous an offering as possible. I am sure that it will be more difficult to raise our quota this year than ever before, but we will do the best we can." If all our pastors planned and preached Missions during our Mission Period (March, April, May, June) as faithfully as does Bro. Hardcastle, we would soon become a missionary-minded, that is to say, growing church.

The Disciples of Christ have set the week prior to Easter, March 21st to 27th, as "Self-Denial Week," and are urging their people to deny themselves something they very much want and need, and give the price of that self-denial to help save and promote their Mission work. We Christians need most urgently to follow this Christian plan and example of our Disciples' brethren. In commenting on the plan and program of Self-denial Week, Dr. Harvey B. Smith, of Washington, D. C., writes The Christian Evangelist: "Only two ways are open to the true disciple of our Lord. One points toward the cross and is marked 'Self-Denial.' The traveler is constantly nearing his Master. The other points away from the cross and is marked 'Self-Indulgence.' The traveler places widening distances between his soul and the Master. Much unshared treasure awaits His touch." If members of our Christian Churches would practice self-denial one week for the sake of their Lord, and give the proceeds to Missions, a spiritual feast would be spread, and our Mission cause would get new life.

THE ONE WHO FOLLOWS.

One day an old umbrella-mender brought his skeleton frames and tinkering tools into the alley at the back of my office. As he sat on a box mending the broken and torn umbrellas, I noticed that he seemed to take unusual pains, testing the cloth, carefully measuring and strongly sewing the covers. Being always interested in any one who does his work well, I went over to him.

"You seem extra careful," I remarked.

"Yes," he replied, without stopping his work; "I have always tried to do good work."

"Your customers would not know the difference until you were gone," I suggested.

"No, I suppose not."

"Do you ever expect to come back?"

"No."

"Then why need you be so particular?"

"So that it will be easier for the next fellow who comes along," he answered, firmly. "If I put on shoddy cloth, or do bad work, they will find it out before long, and the next mender who comes along will get the cold shoulder or the bulldog—see?"—S. S. Friend.

"I SHALL BE SATISFIED."

An Easter Meditation.

By REV. H. H. SMITH.

At this season, when our thoughts turn to the glorious life beyond the grave, let us recall the words of the Seer of Patmos: "And I heard a great voice out of the throne saying, 'Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His peoples, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God: and God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain, any more, for the first things are passed away.' And He that sitteth on the throne said, 'Behold, I make all things new.' And He saith, 'Write: for these words are faithful and true.' And He saith unto me, 'They are come to pass. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is a-thirst of the fountain of water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit these things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.' The authorized version reads: He that overcometh shall inherit all things. But the sense is the same, for to inherit "these things" means to inherit all the blessings just named, and these include everything that is necessary for the happiness of the human soul.

The Christian thinks of heaven, reads of heaven, dreams of heaven, but God in His wisdom has not seen fit to reveal to us fully just what that life is. Perhaps it would be impossible for Him to do so while we still dwell in the flesh. Heaven will mean to us the full satisfaction of all our desires. "We shall inherit all things." Some long to be released from physical infirmities, and they shall be: "There shall be no more pain." When Robert Hall, whose body was constantly racked with pain, was asked his idea of heaven, he replied: "My idea of heaven is rest, rest." We all long to be wholly delivered from sin and serve God perfectly, and we shall have this yearning satisfied, for no sin can mar that life. We long to draw nigh to the blessed Saviour and look upon him who has redeemed us and saved us, and so we shall, for we shall "see him as he is." We cannot pierce the veil and see what God has prepared for those who love and serve Him, but we can comfort ourselves with this Scriptural thought: Heaven will mean that nothing will be lacking for our complete happiness. Here we can anchor our hopes with peace and joy, and with perfect trust and contentment await that hour when "this mortal shall put on immortality." A few lines from one of Horatius Bonar's poems are impressively appropriate:

"When I shall awake in that fair morn of morns,
After whose dawning never night returns,
And with whose glory day eternal burns,
I shall be satisfied.

"When I shall meet with those whom I have loved,
Clasp in my eager arms the long removed,
And find how faithful Thou to me has proved,
I shall be satisfied.

"When I shall gaze upon the face of Him
Who for me died, with eye no longer dim,
And praise Him with the everlasting hymn,
I shall be satisfied."

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

REV. JAMES M. TROSPER, amid many difficulties, is still carrying on the work at Evarts, Ky., where the Red Cross is now feeding many people. Cars on the highways in this region have been stopped while a search was made for any "red" literature. A bank failure at the county seat has added to the local distress.

ORANGE CITY, FLORIDA. Rev. Gordon Brokenshire has been invited by this church to serve the church for the next six months, with a possibility of the extension of the period of service. Mr. Brokenshire is a graduate of Middlebury College in Vermont and of Yale Divinity School. After graduating from the Divinity School he spent over a year in the Philippines with his brother, who is Medical Missionary under the American Board. He is the son of a Congregational minister and comes highly recommended to the service of this church.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL, Extension Worker in Florida, has been having an interesting time in field work recently, doing a variety of things. During the past month she was Forum Speaker on Sunday evening at the Fort Myers Church; taught a course in Adolescent Psychology in an Interdenominational Leadership Training School; organized Young People's Societies at Fort Myers and Avon Park; had a number of personal and group conferences with officers and Young People's Societies and Church Schools, and visited the West Tampa Mission, spending the night with the four teachers in their apartment, which they call the "Sky Parlor."

NIAGARA, UNION CHURCH, under the leadership of the minister and several strong men and women, is putting on a campaign for new members to culminate at Easter. New life, new interest, new spiritual life is manifest on every side. Witness the splendid road cut through to the very door from the main highway. The village is growing in its love for its only church and tourists find a worshipful life here. With it all a reorganization program is being carried on quietly but strongly. This will result in a well-planned business meeting just after Easter for the adoption of constitution and by-laws and the election of officers. Jefferson Canoy is the minister.

MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA. It has been customary to publish a volume of Dr. King's sermons each year at this time. The new volume is entitled, "Making Religion Real." Five sermons are included, namely, "An Approach to God," "An Available God," "Communion With God," "The Life of Prayer in an Age of Science," and "Religion and Life." This little book is designed for personal meditation. It is thoughtful, simple in expression, and with a mission of faith and experience that is most helpful. It is particularly timely and we recommend its wide reading. A limited number of copies have been printed and these can be bought for 50c per copy by addressing Dr. E. A. King, 1620 Drexel Avenue, Miami Beach, Florida.

HOLLY HILL, FLORIDA. The Union Church in the fall invited Dr. Lewis H. Keller, formerly president of Atlanta Seminary, to serve as pastor for the winter season. There was uncertainty about the future in view of the financial hardships. Dr. and Mrs. Keller have endeared themselves to the people of this church and the community and it was the earnest desire of all that their service be prolonged at least for another year. The invitation was extended to Dr. Keller and he has accepted to serve as pastor of the church at least until the summer of 1933. The Tourist Church at Seabreeze, under the leadership of Dr. Edward M. Noyes, so greatly believed in Dr. Keller's work and in the future of this church that they have recently contributed $200 for the maintenance of the work. Dr. Keller reports a Pastor's Training Class of fifteen members, preparing for membership in the church. Also an active Young People's Society and a growing and enthusiastic Sunday School.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE is showing a brave front these days. The beginning of the second semester showed a student body of fine men and women to whom the pastor-at-large had the privilege of speaking at Chapel on February 29th. It was an inspired and inspiring audience—just after vigorous mental exercise in classrooms and just before lunch. But everybody was happy. The financial situation was none too good, but it would be hard to beat the spirit of those students and their loyalty to the great little college among the hills of North Georgia. A sane religious atmosphere prevails and the fact that no drinking is allowed there bears out the teaching of Coach Alonzo Stagg, famous teacher of splendid athletics, that "My rule when drinking men apply for the team—I cut their heads off." And also the wisdom of Fielding H. Yost: "I would not waste my time trying to train or develop one who uses alcohol." Pretty fine idea—if not worth developing drinkers for football, why waste time in a Christian college trying to develop an alcoholic? A Christian college functions to build up capable men and women who know where power lies. So, glory to good old Piedmont! May her strength increase despite the foibles of others. The pastor-at-large greatly enjoyed his short visit there.

BANQUET AT LONG BEACH.

A unique and unusual banquet was held in Long Beach recently, at the First Christian Church, in honor of its pastor, Dr. George P. Taubman. Three hundred men and women, not only members of the church, but others who have learned to love and respect Dr. Taubman during his residence of 18 years among them, attended. The tickets sold for $5 each and every item served at the banquet was donated by merchants of Long Beach. Flowers were in profusion, and were also donated by various florists.

The present church has been in use for 10 years, and in making a report, Mrs. Taubman, for the Women's Union of the large congregation, said that a pledge was given that in 10 years $40,000 would be applied on the indebtedness of the building, and up to the evening of the banquet $48,000 had been raised, all by their own hard work, with the exception of $500 bequeathed in a will.

Besides Dr. and Mrs. Taubman, their three children who came with them 18 years ago to Long Beach, were guests that evening.

Musical numbers were enjoyed after the banquet. So successful was the occasion that the women of the church have decided to make this an annual affair.

Dr. Taubman is head of one of the largest Bible classes in this part of the country, which he organized 16 years ago and who is still the teacher of the group. Many prominent citizens of this city are members of Dr. Taubman's Bible class.

THE SPIRIT OF UNION.

The spirit of union is again evident in Columbus. Rose Hill and North Highland Christian Churches are courting each other, and it is believed there will soon be formed there a strong United Church, which will worship in the beautiful Rose Hill edifice. To help this union along the pastor-at-large was called there for two days, Saturday and Sunday, February 27th and 28th. Rev. J. D. Dollar, president of the Georgia and Alabama Conference, was also present. Many conferences and interviews put the people on edge for the Sunday morning service in North Highland Church. Mr. Sweet preached the sermon, but Rev. J. D. Dollar and Mr. J. R. Prince, licensed pastor of the church, both shared in the service, and in the conference following. Mr. Dollar preached at the evening service, and the spirit of Union rose to a high point. A statement looking toward union had been prepared and duplicate copies were to be circulated among both groups during the week. But the spirit seemed to move all toward a series of meetings, and so it was arranged that Mr. Dollar go to Columbus Monday, March 7th, and hold services every night. On Friday, Dr. Ensminger will be in Phenix City and Mr. Sweet will be in Columbus. Dr. Ensminger will try to help the Phenix City churches (two of them are also uniting) to seriously consider the question of grouping with the Columbus United Church, and Mr. Sweet will try to help Columbus to group with Phenix City.

All this, some will think, is going into too much detail. Perhaps it is, but it is significant that just such work as this must be done in scores of the churches in the Southeast before the union of small churches shall be effected under the great union of two denominations. Any one who works down among the people knows that the final decision of Union lies in the uniting of the small churches so that each church may have, by the grouping system, a full-time, well prepared pastor.

Leaders are more and more coming to find this fact to be standing out more prominently as the United Churches gradually come to functioning from the General Council down through the State and district conferences and associations, to the local church. And here is the final test. Can churches unite and do better work afterward? The only way to prove it is to try it. Witness LaGrange, First Christian and First Congregational. Two years ago they were both struggling small churches. One year ago, and a little more, they began to talk union. It took a full year to effect this union. How is it now? Under the leadership of that splendid young minister, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, this United Church is the talk of noon-day luncheon clubs and the admiration of leading men of the city. Why? Because they had the courage to unite and then the wisdom to choose a strong leader who had been trained beforehand for the ministry.

If the Columbus churches unite and then call the young man they are both looking toward right now, there is every reason to believe that instead of two to four struggling small churches, there will be one strong United Church in Columbus and one in Phenix City. And that is the result of the Spirit of Union. Let this power increase and reach small hamlets, villages and rural parishes until our comrades of other denominations shall see the way of the cross leads toward union.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE RESURRECTION.

We approach now the annual celebration of Easter, the most important single event in history. Nothing else approaches in significance the resurrection of our Lord. It was Paul who wrote, 'If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.' The coming of Christ into the world, the life he lived, the miracles he wrought, the gospel he preached, had begotten a lively hope, and had brought gleam through darkness. If, however, the crucifixion should end all, and he was unable to conquer the grave and come forth from the dead, it all availed nothing. Great and good men had lived, taught, wrought and died. If the Christ could only do that, he would take his place with other teachers and great ones gone. But the Resurrection sealed the claim of his deity, and established, once and for all, the power of the Christ to overcome the last enemy, which is death, and to show that the grave had no dominion over him.

He himself had declared, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me shall never die." That too had begotten a false hope had he not himself arisen from the dead to show that his words were true, and his teachings beyond question. Nor is this all. In his life, before the crucifixion, he had claimed to be the Saviour of mankind, the world's Redeemer. That claim could only be established through his power over the hosts of darkness, of sin and of death. When these had done their worst and he had triumphed over them in coming from the grave, his authority could not be questioned, and his plan for the salvation of men was fulfilled, completed, perfect. The resurrection completed the redemptive act, and established forever the truth that "In none other is their salvation; for neither is there any other name under heaven that is given among men whereby we must be saved." The resurrection of our Lord rivets the attention of the world on him as the sole and all-sufficient Saviour and Redeemer.

In celebrating the resurrection, the signboard of the way points to two inevitable terminals: (1) By song, by sermon, by service of worship and praise, the Church will herald to the world at Easter time the glory of the resurrection, and the victory over all foes, even death itself, through the name and power of our Lord. (2) To prove that song and service and sermon are sincere, genuine, abiding, we will make an offering of our substance, even out of our self-denial, in his name and for his sake, that we may send to others in parts nearby or remote, the glad tidings of him who is our Saviour and Redeemer. There can be no more fitting time than Easter for the churches, Sunday Schools and individuals (who believe in the power of the resurrection), to make an offering of their substance, that, through that offering, the hope that we have in him may be given to other hearts who do not have that hope, because they do not know him. In our mission offering we are trying to share with others the glory of his resurrection and the joy of service in his name.

SHALL WE FORGET?

It is very easy to learn that pastors, teachers, church officials, employees and laborers around us have had their salaries cut or have voluntarily reduced them. All we have to do is to glance at the morning paper, or read the church paper, or get the information at first hand from pastors, teachers and others who tell us so. That is very easy and is brought to us without the asking. Some may be too modest to talk much about it, others may herald it as a boost for business. At any rate, it is easy to get such information.

It is hard, however, to get, or to keep in mind, the more heart-rending, the more pitiable, the more tragic facts of those who are suffering most in the present world-wide depression. We are simply floating on flowery beds of ease in comparison with our brothers and fellows in remote parts, especially in those parts of the earth where economy and salvation through our Lord have not been taught. Bear in mind that in Christ Jesus is the hope of the world—the economic, the civic, the moral, as well as the spiritual, hope of the world. Missionaries of our own Board and of other churches, and the people they were seeking through Christ to reach and to save, were living only on "the crumbs," and the barest necessities with the closest margins before this world-wide depression came. Then when we here in the homeland cannot have the luxuries, comforts and necessities that we enjoyed in days of ease and plenty, we withhold from the Treasury of the Lord, from Missions in particular, simply because we do not know, and do not try to visualize or learn. Missions income, for home and for foreign work, shrank amazingly, pitifully. Meagre salaries had to be more meagre; margins had to be eliminated; many necessities had to be given up, and the hand of want and distressing need stretched itself into every Mission area where men and women had gone to proclaim the gospel of our Lord. Many Mission points have had to close up, missionaries called home. Schools and churches, stations of helpfulness in places where Christ had been taught had to be abandoned. Every Mission Board that this writer knows anything about, is saying in effect, that which our own is saying, that which is so painfully and heart-rendingly true: "In this great world's emergency your Mission Board confronts a critical, financial situation almost without parallel in its history." In spite of curtailment at every possible point, in spite of reducing salaries beginning early in the year, 1931, and continuing to this good hour, of every Mission Secretary, and their helpers, even to the remote worker in the humblest hamlet on the mission field, the deficit grows and the cry for help comes as it never has before. The church cannot hold its Mission Board responsible, for they had curtailed and planned, prayed, pleaded and done their best; and yet the urge in the mission field is more insistent and the deficit accumulates and the cry of need is incessant. As Dr. Culkins, writing for the American Board, and for our Board, and for every other Mission Board, says: "Surely the churches cannot and will not forget their duty to the Mission Boards is a sacred obligation which they must assume and ultimately discharge."

It is easy to see the call for charity and benevolence around about us; it is easy to hear the voice of one who speaks in our ears; it is easy, indeed, to grasp the superficial needs of those around us. As some one has said, "It is much easier to realize a scratch on one's hand or an insignificant pain of the little finger than it is visualize and to feel the heart anguish, the agony, the death wail and the cry of a hundred men and women who are perishing in some remote land."

Shall we bear in mind that there is no remote land in the sight of Almighty God, and that he has linked humanity together. When it comes to the matter of salvation, relief, and safety from suffering, there is only one race, and that is the "human race"; only one kind of man, and that's mankind; only one family, and that's the human family. And there is only one Saviour, and that is Jesus Christ, our Lord, who said to those who would be saved through him, "Go, teach all nations; and lo, I am with you unto the end." We have an opportunity now, through the call of our Southern Convention, and all our Conferences, to help relieve this distress, and help show our love of Christ to others, through our Easter missionary offering. Can any true Christian deny or give deaf ear to this call and this challenge to duty and to privilege.

THE POPE GOES RAILROADING.

Pope Pius of Rome has decided to take a railroad trip. This will be the first time since 1870 the Pope has ridden in a railroad train. We wish the Pope a safe and happy journey, and see no reason why, if his conscience will allow, he should not have one. No, he will not go out on one of the trunk lines, or any of their allied systems. He has built him a line of his own within the Vatican grounds, the shortest railroad line and system in the world. It is only 600 feet long, but what it lacks in length, it makes up in luxury and magnificence of train and equipment. In order to avoid possible danger, the 600-ft. system is double-tracked all the way, "with a station that would do justice to a 600-mile system." The Pope's special train is described as one of magnificence, seldom equaled, probably never surpassed, in luxury and elegance, and consists of three coaches—one for his throne, another for a chapel, and the third a private coach in which the Pontiff may dine and sleep—when going over the whole distance of his 600-ft. system. The coaches are all of steel, painted red, and each one carries the Pontifical coat-of-arms in bronze. Of this 600-ft. line, 330 feet are tunnelled, so that the Pope will not be "exposed" during more than half the length of his railway journey, should the journey take him over the whole length of 600 feet.

The line, of course, will be used for hauling freight to and within the Vatican grounds when not in use by the Pope on inspection tours and pleasure trips.

So does the one "carry on" who is claimed by the Catholic world to be the successor of St. Peter, and the descendant through Peter, in Apostolic succession, of Him Who, in order to teach humility and service, washed His disciples' feet and declared that He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. WORDS AND GESTURES.

The value of words comes down to us from the oldest book in the world, the Bible; and that value has been multiplied through law, science, poetry, history, and the preaching of the gospel through the centuries since the Bible was written. The printing press has multiplied the written Bible until it is printed in more languages and in more copies than any other book in the world. Words are powerful. They excite laughter, anger, praise, complaint, and without words, social life and education would perish. Nothing goes as far and reaches so many people as words. Radio illustrates this statement.

Words are strengthened by gestures; and, in some uses, gestures are more powerful than words. A cop on the street corner, directing traffic, says nothing, but he makes gestures that stop or start cars, with safety. A gesture does not excite resentment like words, but it is more promptly obeyed. A gesture may stop a great oration, a train, or a great procession. The pulpit needs to cultivate the natural and acquired art of gesture for the best results in the delivery of a sermon. Life is a great school and the Doctor of Divinity might learn how to make an effective gesture as well as how to write a correct sentence, or to quote an appropriate thought from prose or poetry. In fact, all could improve their way of living so as to make conduct a gesture.

Words and gestures enter into all life and all conditions; but people take more offense at words than gestures. In fact, much of the hard feeling among people grows out of words meant to be insulting or misinterpreted. What the world needs is religion expressed in better words and better gestures. W. W. S.

SOULS MUST GROW.

The universe is a growing concern. All is developing, pulsating with life under the orderly plan of an intelligent Creator who is still at work. Jesus, once answering his accusers, said: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Later translators have rendered it: "My Father is still at work, and I work too." (Goodspeed); "My Father works unceasingly, and so do I" (Weymouth); and "as my Father has continued to work to this hour, so I work too" (Moffatt). In the physical world science has proved this fact in countless patient quests into the realm of the infinitely great and the infinitely small. Yet no lens has been made which can reach beyond the stars or penetrate the secret of creative force.

We rejoice that we live under the law of growth, physical, mental, spiritual. As the race has developed through the centuries, so the individual in his development epitomizes that of the race. But in order to grow we must work. This law of life governed Jesus, it must govern us. If we are to be co-workers with God, we must be up and doing. Jesus perfected the plan which the Churches guide. He is the great pattern; and what a vital, energizing Pattern he becomes! Each generation has a fresh revelation of Jesus and the significance of his teachings as applied to its own day. Both time and research have greatly enriched our interpretation of God's message and his dealings with the children of men. Because of our faulty understanding of our Father's purposes and messages to us, we need not so much the past tense as the present in our methods of cooperating with him. We are growing souls as well as growing bodies; we are called to be co-workers with him to whom there is no yesterday or tomorrow, but only a pulsing and priceless today in which to work and to grow.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE CHURCHES AND THE WASHINGTON BI-CENTENNIAL.

By SAMUEL MCCREA CAVERT.

In spite of the reckless aspersions of certain ultra-modern biographers, of the school aptly termed "assassins of character," the fact remains solidly established that George Washington was a man of sterling integrity and of devout Christian faith and practice. James Truslow Adams' latest notable volume, "The Epic of America," records the judgment of the authoritative historian when he declares that the greatest legacy of the United States during all its formative period was the character of Washington. It was "by sheer force of character," Adams says, that Washington "held a divided and disorganized country together." To emphasize this, to hold it before our citizens and youth and to call attention to the foundations of Washington's character in his religion is a signal service that can be appropriately rendered by the churches during the present bi-centennial of his birth. That is why the Federal Council of Churches has issued an official statement commending this observance by the Christian forces of America.

The evidence of Washington's genuine religious interest is unimpeachable. Robert Lewis, his nephew and private secretary during the first term of the presidency, records that he often saw his uncle in his library in a kneeling position, with an open Bible before him. Nelly Custis, granddaughter of Mrs. Washington, said of him: "In New York and Philadelphia he never omitted attendance at church in the morning, unless detained by indisposition. No one in church attended to the services with more reverential respect." Clearest of all is Washington's own testimony, disclosed in his official utterances. It was he who established the practice of having chaplains in the army, "persons of good character and exemplary lives," for the sake of securing the greatest possible moral and religious influence. In 1776, he wrote, expressing the hope "that every officer and man will endeavor so to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier defending the dearest rights and liberties of his country." In 1783, on disbanding the army, he sent a letter to the Governors of the States, in which he said:

"I now make it my earnest prayer that God would have you and the States over which you preside in His holy protection . . . and that He would most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion, and without an humble imitation of whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy nation."

And as if summing up the best wisdom gleaned from his public service, he penned this immortal testimony in his Farewell Address:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports . . . and let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

A single aspect of the bi-centennial anniversary may prove to be unfortunate—the tendency to bandy about superficially the famous caution in the Farewell Address against "foreign alliances." Thousands of persons will probably assume that the Father of Our Country meant that we should pursue a policy of aloofness from all international affairs. To such we suggest that they ponder these significant paragraphs, constituting part of the context in which the reference to "foreign alliances" is set:

"Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence.

"In the execution of such a plan, nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations, and passionate attachments for others be excluded; and that in place of them just and amicable feelings toward all should be cultivated."

As Edward Tallmadge Root has discerningly pointed out, this passage in the Farewell Address, so far from urging American isolation, actually enjoins a close friendly relationship with the world as a whole. Washington did emphasize, it is true, the advantage that America has in its "distant and detached situation" and strongly advised that we should not forego it. But at the same time he counseled "harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations" as "recommended by policy, humanity, and interest." The foreign relationships that he really protested against were "antipathies" or "attachments" for "particular nations." Such "attachments" and "antipathies" for certain nations as against certain others are, indeed, "entangling." Washington was decidedly right in thinking that they would not only be destructive of the internal unity of America but also inimical to "peace and harmony with all"—i. e., to the unity of the world as a whole.

But there is another kind of alliance which is not entangling but liberating—cooperative fellowship in behalf of world peace and the welfare of humanity. Against such cooperation there is no reason to suppose that Washington would speak a word. How, then, can his position be regarded as a reason for keeping apart from organizations like the World Court or the League of Nations, whose very purpose is to overcome the "inveterate antipathies" against which Washington warned, and to secure the very "peace and harmony with all" which he bade us to cultivate!

Another passage of the Farewell Address deserving more attention than it has received is Washington's warning against the danger of "overgrown military establishments," which, he declares, "under any form of government are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty." Let us recall, too, that Washington's "first wish was to see war, the plague of mankind, banished from the earth." These two utterances may well serve as mottoes for the American delegation now at the Geneva Conference, called the League of Nations in order to secure an end to the "overgrown military establishments" whose baneful influence Washington feared.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In February I received a letter from Everett R. Clinchy, Director of "The National Conference of Jews and Christians," to attend a conference of "Catholics—Jews—Protestants" to be held in the Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., March 7-9, 1932. The letter I received contained, in part, the following:

"We cordially invite you to participate in the 'National Conference of Catholics, Jews, and Protestants.' A program is enclosed. We believe that this is the first time in history that a nation-wide round table of leaders of these cultured groups has been arranged in any country to discuss the important questions of their relationship as citizens. I sincerely trust that you will accept this invitation."

I sent my check for registration, went to Washington on March 5th, and attended the entire three-day session. The Catholics, Jews, and Protestants were all well represented; took an active part in the Seminars. The meetings were all held in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The first meeting was held at 1:30 P. M., Monday, March 7th, with a general discussion of the "Situation in American Communities," with C. E. Wilcox, Institute of Social and Religious Research, Toronto, presiding. The purpose of the conference was to present the facts, and to secure an understanding of the main elements in inter-group relations in American communities. Addresses were delivered, as follows: "My Expectation of the Seminar," by Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of the Diocese of Washington, Protestant Episcopal Church; "The Values of Community Cooperation," by Rev. Frances J. Haas, Ph. D., Director, National Catholic School Service, Washington; "The Significance of the Inter-group Movement," by Rabbi Abram Simon, the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

At 8:00 P. M., a "U-Table" was conducted, which was a group of ten men with Professor William H. Kirkpatrick, Teachers' College, New York, presiding. At this meeting representative Jews, Catholics, and Protestants; clergy, educators, and social scientists, discussed the main problems growing out of the afternoon sessions. The discussions were all free and frank, bringing the points of difference into an open conference. The friendly feeling that seemed to control all the meetings and discussions would seem to indicate that differences are more credal and historic than real and essential. If the whole Christian world could be as considerate of one another, and as friendly as these groups in conference, unity in Christian cooperation would be achieved and nations and races would be at peace; war would be ended, and the Prince of Peace would rule the world. It is hoped that this conference may initiate conditions that will see an answer to the prayer of Jesus, "That they all may be one." (John 17:21.)

I attended the First Congregational Church on Sunday, visited former Suffolk residents and members of the Suffolk Christian Church, through the blizzard of wind, snow, and fallen trees, in the afternoon, and turned in late to rest at the home of my daughter, Mrs. Cheatham, and her son, William, Secretary to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, who drove us around in his car through the storm. I was in the pulpit and took part with Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, and his great choir, at the morning service.

HIGH TOP SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The still existing but ever progressing High Top Sunday School, is fast on the road to renewed life. Almost forgotten to the memory of many yet the Lord is still with it. As we go up on some of the high cliffs on High Point, we are reminded of the time when Christ was tempted by Satan after his baptism. Such a beautiful scene can be found nowhere in Virginia as can be seen here, overlooking the great Shenandoah Valley and the proposed National Shenandoah Park. We feel the nearness of God in this region as we gather together for worship Sunday after Sunday.

We are few in number, but the comforting words of Christ ring in our ears: "Where a few are gathered together in my name, I will be in their midst." We have some very devout Christians up here, who are letting their lights so shine, that others may see their good works, and glorify our Father in Heaven. They are sowing their seed on good soil, for there is a wide field, that they may bring forth fruit into the Kingdom of God.

We are taking great interest in the children up here, for we have the words of Solomon before us, "Train a child while he is young, in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." They recite Bible verses each Sunday. We are conducting a Bible Verse Contest, in which the winner will be awarded a prize. Much enthusiasm and zeal has been exerted toward winning this contest. With snow about two and a half feet deep, their interest held up to a remarkable extent.

High Top Sunday School has been as a spark of fire. It has started a great Christian fire, that has swept the whole mountain. These hard-working Christians should be remembered in their denominational paper for their untiring efforts. Their church building was burned to the ground a few years ago, but this did not cause them to procrastinate in their Christian work, nor did it hinder them in worshipping. I feel sure that the faithful members of High Top Sunday School will find their names written in the Golden Book of the Lamb.

EARL S. HOLLAND.

STANDING IN THE CHURCH BREAD-LINE.

By J. C. JACKSON.

A real estate man in Lexington, Ky., once sold me a house. He took me through it from cellar to attic, and then got into his automobile and drove around in the immediate vicinity. He showed me the nice school building located nearby; the great State university three blocks away; the fire station on Woodland Avenue; Woodland Park with its great auditorium building, but finally he pointed out the church in which I worshipped for many years thereafter.

These were his arguments why this section of the city was a good section to live in; it had pleasant surroundings, it had a good school, it had good fire protection, it had good police protection, it had splendid churches, and there was one of my own faith and order in which I could worship.

These assets made the property look good to me, but even more valuable to anyone looking for an investment.

The deal was clinched and I moved in. As a citizen of the city I contributed my share to the maintenance of the school; I contributed my share to the maintenance of the park; I contributed my share to the maintenance of the fire department; but for several months I contributed nothing to the church.

I grew ashamed. I said to myself, "My property is a better investment because the church is nearby. If death or trouble should come to my home I would not hesitate to call on the pastor. I accept all of these benefits which make my home desirable, and contribute to them all except the church, to which I am contributing nothing."

So I grew ashamed of taking so much and giving nothing at all, of standing in the church's bread-line. Many Christians would feel as I did if they should think the thing through. Every community has people who are getting something for nothing at the expense of the church.

THE MOST INSIDIOUS HERESY.

By CLARENCE TRUE WILSON, D. D., LL. D.

I am not a heresy hunter. Heresy must strike me in the face to get noticed. It must attack my church, sidetrack it, or pervert its mission to put me on the warpath against it. The most subtle error in the Methodist Church is the defective program of the "Religious Education" movement. It has had the whole machinery of the church for a score of years, its Book Concern, its colleges, its theological schools, its money, its ministers; and we are now reaping the fruit of its planting. What is it? 50,000 loss in membership and $900,000 lost in benevolences. If we had had a holiness revival or an evangelistic crusade with such results, how these leaders would have looked wise and said "Revivals do not pay."

Will the facts show to all but the willful blind that Religious Education as a substitute for regeneration does not pay? We have crowded conversion into the background, and obscured our Methodist Mission to spread scriptural holiness abroad in the land. We have devitalized Methodism.

The whole emphasis is false. It has made salvation a personal achievement, rather than the acceptance by faith of a gift from God. The difference between the religion of Jesus Christ and this modern substitute can be put in a sentence. The one says Christ came down from heaven to bring a gift to man; the other teaches that religion is man's achievement through religious education. The whole gospel scheme is reversed. "God so loved that He gave" is changed to "Men must so work and study as to know and live."

I heard a college president of a church supported school stand up and plead for money for the Board of Education, and say, "The future of Methodism is based on this board. We used to get our members through the altar process, but now we are going to educate them into it."

We have teachers in our church actually teaching that a sinner can be transformed into a saint by an educational process; and one scholar has written a learned book to show how Christ himself achieved Divinity. He achieved it by a supreme sacrifice upon the cross! I asked Dr. Frank W. Collier, professor of philosophy in the American University at Washington how to answer that false philosophy in a sentence. He replied: "You can never create metaphysical entity by a moral process."

Everything remains what it is born, unless lifted by a new creative process. So Jesus said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; . . . Ye must be born again." Neither new birth, nor sanctification are educational processes. Give us converted and entirely consecrated Christians, and then a religious education to fit them for service.

Washington, D. C.

WHAT IS THE MEANING OF EASTER?

Easter is the birthday of the world's hope.

When two men were arguing about whether a dead fish would float they appealed to Ben Franklin. He said: "Bring me a pail of water and a dead fish."

The experiment was tried, and there was no more to be said.

Men used to argue about whether an aeroplane could fly across the Atlantic Ocean. They employed mathematics and physics and chemistry and philosophy, but Charles Lindbergh is the answer. The question will not be argued again.

When Christ rose from the grave the universal hope of mankind was confirmed.

Easter means love.

"Easter sun is shining:
Wherefore now on things above
Set our affection!
Know the power of Jesus' love
By this resurrection!"

Easter means victory.

Christ might have said, Victory follows me, and all things follow victory if ye be followers of me.

Easter means new visions. And we are admonished that where there is no vision the people perish (Prov. 29:18).

Easter means progress.

Then press on, for the grave there is no work or device! Press on while yet ye may!

Death without and with Easter's assurance is illustrated by these stories.

An infidel lay dying, and was greatly distressed in mind. A friend, holding to the same views, stood by his side trying to comfort him.

"Don't be frightened!" he said. "Hold on, man, hold on to the last!"

"Yes," replied the dying man, "that's all very well, but tell me what I am to hold on to?"

When Michael Faraday, the scientist, lay dying someone said to him:

"Mr. Faraday, what are your speculations now?"

"Speculations?" said Faraday. "I have none, I thank God. I am not resting my dying head on guesswork. I know whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to guard that which I have committed unto him against that day."

Easter means a prepared place for you. "I go to prepare a place for you."

"Goin' home, goin' home,
I am goin' home;
Quiet-like, some still day,
I'm jes' goin' home!"

"It's not far, jes' close by,
Through an open door;
Work all done, care laid by,
Gwine to roam no more!"

"Mother's there, spectin' me,
Father's waitin' too;
Lots of folks gathered there,
All the friends I knew!"

"No more stumblin' on the way,
Nothin' lost, all gain;
No more longin' for the day,
No more fret nor pain!"

"Mornin' star lights the way,
Res'less dreams all done;
Shadows gone, break o' day,
Real life jes' begun!"

"Dere's no break, ain't no end,
Jes' a livin' on,
Wide awake, wits a smile,
Goin' on and on!"

WHAT NOT TO DECIDE.

We are called on to make decisions every day. Most of them are decisions on minor questions, but some of them are decisions of major questions. All of them demand correct decisions. Incorrect decision in some cases would be disastrous. Our destiny, temporal and eternal, is involved in our decisions, our choices. In many of the cases coming up for our decision we do not have complete knowledge and cannot decide with confidence. To decide rationally we must first inform ourselves of the pertinent facts. There will be those interested in giving us misinformation for information. We must be careful not to be misled by them. But perhaps the greatest danger comes from our own minds through prejudice or passion. Our judgments may be misled disastrously by our own feelings.

When prejudices prevail in our minds or when passion is aroused it is a time to defer decision. Our decisions, especially our moral decisions, should be most carefully made under the cold white light of pure reason and conscience. If we decide under the red light of passion we are almost certain to err disastrously if not fatally. "There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." The importance of our moral choices cannot be overestimated. Our moral life is to be reviewed in eternity. "After death the judgment." That great thought should move us to an early, honest, persistent study of the greatest of all our questions until we see clearly how to make the great decision. When once the light appears we should not for one moment delay our decision. Our temporal interests may lure us to hasty decisions, our eternal interests which infinitely outweigh all others, cannot move us too soon. "Now is the accepted time, today is the day of salvation." The time to decide any question of practical concern is when that question demands our action, if we have not previously decided it correctly.—Editorial in Methodist Protestant-Herald.

The Bible is to be lived, not merely believed. It is not sufficient to know its ideals; they have to be made part of one's life; they have to be prayed in and lived out. Prayer will impress them, and conduct must express them.

A PRAYER.

Father, out of the night we come to thee. May it be as new creatures into the new day. With the passing hours of sleep grant thou to have closed upon time every page that would make us ashamed. Help us to appreciate the receptivity of the pages unwritten, and by their very blankness and cleanness may we be led to know that all the light and hope of the world is ours to embrace and occupy for our Lord Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

IN FAITH OR IN FEAR?

We of the Church must face our problems. There is no escape. In times of panic and peril the weak flee. In times of doubt and distress the hesitant and the faltering look back with longing. (Remember Lot's wife—and her ignominious fate?) "Forward," is ever the watchword of the brave and true Christian. Yes, this writer knows what we face. So does Dr. Raymond Calkins, who declares:

"A situation without parallel in recent history confronts the mind and conscience of the Church today. Everywhere we turn our eyes, the world seems to be in disorder and confusion. The whole human family is involved in a disaster which has world dimensions. We have discovered that there is no such thing as a splendid isolation. We are all members one of another.

"The more deeply we probe the causes of this common catastrophe, the clearer it becomes that the problem is not a political problem; neither is it an economic or industrial problem. It is a deeply spiritual problem. We have followed the road of selfishness, of greed, of avarice. The wholly un-Christian aspects of our so-called Christian civilization are the real causes of our universal suffering today."

Confronted with such a situation what are we going to do about it, you and I? Briefly, since it must be one or the other, shall we take counsel with our Fears, or with our Faith?

Fear says, "We have already done our best and failure is upon us. We have given all we can give. We have nothing left to give. We need every dime and penny for self, family, neighbors. Our local church obligations are already behind. Our pastor is not paid up. Whatever we do or give, must be for home, family, our church. Charity begins at home, you know." So Fear.

Faith says, "Forward. There is no defeat when Christ leads. Follow him. He said, 'go ye,' give the gospel to all nations. I must obey, I will obey, my great Leader. In doing so, I cannot go wrong. He set the supreme example of self-denial and said, 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself.' I haven't been denying myself. I have been giving only that which I could spare without denying myself, or family, any comfort or necessity. My time of testing has now come. I will follow my Lord and obey him. This world will never be saved till he saves it, and he calls me now to join with him, to follow him in self-denial. Faith says, Onward with Christ, and I cast aside Fear and follow Faith!"

Our Christian churches in conference and convention assembled designated March, April, May, June (Spring-time, Easter-time, Resurrection-time) as the period in which I am called to make a self-denial offering to Missions. I, in faith, obey the call and out of self-denial lay my offering on the altar to help share with others who do not know him, the personal blessing and fellowship of the Lord.

Yes, God helping me, I will be true and faithful and make my offering out of my need; out of my very "living," that the Kingdom of my Lord and His Christ may not suffer distress and loss.

A BRIEF STATEMENT OF A GREAT WORK.

Since Congregationalists and Christians have united in their mission work, completely merged in fact, so far as the foreign work is concerned, we are engaged and have become a factor in a great world-wide work. Our Board, the Foreign Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, is the oldest organized and incorporated Mission Board in America, and is now in its 121st year. There are, under the Board's help and direction, 694 missionaries, besides 4,905 nationals at work in 17 missions, 97 stations, 1,916 out-stations. There are 705 native churches, 101,959 members, with 285,011 adherents. In our schools and colleges on the mission field, there are 88,646 students under instruction of Christian teachers; 82 hospitals and dispensaries and $7,500,000.00 invested in lands and buildings. The natives in our mission fields last year contributed $388,074 to distinctively Christian work and $785,811 for all purposes. We are doing mission work in India, China, Japan, Africa, Turkey, Spain, Mexico, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Syria, Greece, Micronesia, the Philippines, and in these lands we have evangelists, teachers, physicians, nurses, Christian workers to serve mankind in the spirit of Jesus, our Lord and Redeemer. Because of decreased income, we have had to retrench, to withdraw and to curtail salaries to the limit. The challenge comes as never before, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." We Christians can heed this call now by making our annual contributions to Missions through our churches. It is the call of our Redeemer, challenging us to obey him, and through self-denial show our faith in him by sharing with others his love and his life.

JUST ONE PITIFUL EXAMPLE.

(A Letter from a Missionary.)

(Let no CHRISTIAN SUN reader think that there is no increased suffering in our mission fields because of the depression. We, here at home, simply do not know what suffering is, nor how "hard times" are out on the mission field. Just read this from one of our faithful ones, and think, please—yes, think—and then pray, too, if you will.—J. O. A.)

Mrs. Emmons White writes from Aruppukottai, India, December 15, 1931, as follows:

"I want to say a word about the Indian workers. When I think of their condition, I can hardly keep back the tears. The past two years the Indian workers have often gone without their December salary because there was no money with which to pay it. Since the cuts, it has been much worse. In several pastorates the workers have received neither November nor December salaries. Most of the wives had their small salary stopped and yet we know that it is economically impossible for them to live on the combined wages of husband and wife.

"Sunday afternoon a man who has worked for nineteen years in our Mission came to see me. I cannot get the sight of his face out of my mind. His wife has received no salary since August. He has foregone both his November and December salary. Now in the light of the further cut his work is to be stopped! This time of year it is impossible for him to get Government work.

"On Saturday another worker came for advice. He has five dependent children and is far, far in debt. His wife is to receive no salary for January—not one month only—she is to forfeit twelve months' salary! And yet you suggest that the agents do more in the matter of giving. Give till it hurts? You surely cannot give more than everything, can you? Even in the past, with the wife receiving salary, we have had to help the family to make both ends meet. And last Wednesday I sat in the Local Council meeting and saw the patient, resigned face of another catechist, as the Council voted to stop the pay of his wife, which in his case is nearly half the family income. The pay of the wife has been stopped in nearly every one of our pastorates.

"It seems to me that it cannot be the will of God to ask these people to give more than they have been giving. You speak of the spiritual value. I think there is not much spiritual value in an empty stomach. If these catechists had been living even in semicomfort for the past years, we might think that a year of starvation might be good for their souls. As it is they have been so near the border line of starvation that to ask them to give up any more than they have already given up is too much like trying to run a sweat shop.

"One of the pastors came to me two weeks ago. His little son of Robin's age was ill. He said, 'I cannot take him to the hospital, even though it means that we shall lose him if we do not go. I am still in debt for the time we took him to the hospital last year.' That pastor has been without one or more months' salary for the past two years. He did not complain about his lot. Can we ask him to do more than sacrifice his son? Even God did not do more than that.

"I realize that this letter is not abounding in Christian cheer. I do not mean to add to your burdens, but I think that perhaps the people at home should realize some of the very real suffering that is going on out here."

THE SABBATH SCHOOL AND MISSIONS.

(There is no more fruitful field in which to sow missionary seed and cultivate the missionary spirit than the Sabbath School. This writer was in a Sabbath School recently when the following was read as a part of the Secretary's record of the school for the previous Sunday.):

"Missionaries in all parts of the world look to the Sabbath Schools in the homeland for financial support as well as for loyal workers who will accept the call to service. As a beacon light guides the storm-tossed ship safely into the harbor, so our Sabbath School as it shines out to the world through its messengers and mission offerings lead many from darkness into the truth of God. The responsibility of keeping the beacon light burning brightly belongs to each Sabbath School member and requires faith and loyalty. The Sabbath School inspires one to greater heights in Bible study, in Christian experience, and in service.

"Miss gave us a Mission reading on China. Our hearts are always touched by these readings because we realize that the Lord loves those people just the same as he loves us, yet we have seemingly a little time of peace while they are suffering persecutions in their endeavors for souls there."

A CALL TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

As the glad Easter season approaches let us not think only of ourselves, but of the One who gave himself for us in order that we "might have life, and have it more abundantly." Christ gave us a real example of service. May we follow in his footsteps, not only by giving of ourselves, but by giving of our material possessions. The gold and silver are his, and the cattle on a thousand hills. We are merely his stewards, and may we, as young people, realize this, and at this Easter season make our special offering as large as possible for Missions.

This is a splendid time to have a public program during one church service period. Why not plan for a pageant, or a special musical program for Easter Sunday night, receiving a special offering in addition to the offering the young people themselves will make for Missions. Enlist the help of your pastor and the older people in your church and make this a gala day in the church for young people.

Christ has need of each young person in his church, but to give ourselves without making a sacrifice in order to give of our wealth is not enough. Jesus came from above to obtain our salvation; he suffered, bled and died, all he bore for us. What are we doing for him? Now is the time for us, as young people, to give to him; let us not fail him. May our offering this year be larger than it has ever been. Give and be blessed in so doing, for he said, "For inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these ye did it unto me."

MARY LEE WILLIAMS,
Pres., E. Va. Y. P. M. C.

THE GOSPEL FOR A TIME OF DEPRESSION.

By CHAUNCEY R. PIETY.

Jesus lived in a time of depression. The country in which he lived was subject to Rome and ruled by Herod, the tyrant. The Jewish desire for freedom had, in most hearts, turned to despair. Unjust taxgatherers impoverished the people. The land lay under the gloom of paganism, poverty, ignorance, superstition, and smoldering hatreds. So thick was the darkness that the majority could not recognize help when he offered it; but his gospel led those, who believed it, out of that depression; and it will lead us, if we believe, out of this one.

Today much of the depression is in the mind. People are suspicious and distrustful. They have lost faith in man whom they have seen, and forgot about God whom they have not seen. And so, they have hidden their money away, swamped the banks, closed the factories; and sent laborers out begging food and clothing in a land full of hoarded money and supplies. America is suffering because of unemployed men, unemployed money, and unemployed religion; and most from unemployed religion. Jesus' gospel of faith and love and service, if practiced, would conquer the depression of the modern world.

The gospel of Christ would teach us two things about faith: to keep faith in God and faith in man living and active. Paul understood it when he cried, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." We need the "can" in our minds and to keep the "can" in American.

Last summer a farmer had the spirit when he said, "The grasshoppers took most of my crops; but I gathered about ten tons of the critters—got 'em stored in the barn, and they will make first-class feed for my chickens this winter. I'll come out pretty well after all." There are others like him who are turning defeat into victory. More should try it. Let the minds think what to do and love to do it.

The gospel is economical. Remember the fragments of the loaves and fishes. We need a second Martin Luther to preach against indulgences—not ecclesiastical indulgences of the medieval church; but modern American indulgences. Parents are too indulgent and wasteful. They are too easy and indulgent with their children. They spend too much for luxuries, sports, theaters, tobacco, cars, gas, confections, etc. Americans are wasteful of resources, products, money, and time. We need a Luther to preach against these indulgences until Americans hear and repent.

The gospel would teach us the supremacy of spiritual values. We need a second St. Francis to preach renunciation, until we know that "a man's life consisteth not in the multitude of the things which he possesseth." Today, as Emerson said "Things are in the saddle and ride mankind." People think the chief thing is the dollar, and they suffer depression without it. Not the dollar sign, but the sign of the cross is the sign of manhood. If we would change our objectives and seek the spiritual values, we would find them, and happiness with them. If we would put the Kingdom of God first, our material conditions would improve. There is no way so sure to rout depression.—Christian Evangelist.

It happened at the wedding of a friend. A small guest, aged four, was little interested in the wedding ceremony, but much interested in a goldfish in a bowl, which he watched excitedly all during the ritual. Just the moment after the minister said the binding words, "I pronounce you man and wife," the little boy cried out, "Oh, the poor fish, he can't get out."—Congregationalist.

HOLY WEEK MEDITATIONS.

(Concluded from last week.)

THURSDAY—Thinking of Others.

"If Christ had thought just of himself,
Our blessed Saviour Friend.
Would not have trod the bitter path
Up to the very end;
He never would have borne the cross
Up there on Calvary,
Nor paid salvation's cruel price,
Nor died to set us free."

"I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." (John 10:10.)

"For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Mark 10:45.)

The test of each person's Christianity comes at the point where his life touches the lives of others. If he fails to measure up in loving his neighbor as himself, something is wrong with his Christianity.

Prayer Poem—

"Others."

"Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayer will be for others.

"Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I do for you
Must needs be done for others.

"Let self be crucified and slain,
And buried deep, and all in vain
My efforts be to rise again,
Unless to live for others.

"And when my work on earth is done,
And my new work in heaven begun,
May I forget the crown I've won,
While thinking still of others.

"Others, Lord; yes, others:
Let this my motto be:
Help me to live for others
That I may live for thee."

—Charles D. Meigs.

FRIDAY—Bearing the Cross.

"They borrowed a bed to lay his head
When Christ the Lord came down."

* * * *

"He borrowed the bread when the crowd he fed."

* * * *

"He borrowed a room on his way to the tomb,
The Passover Lamb to eat.

They borrowed a cave for him a grave.
They borrowed a winding sheet.

But the crown that he wore, and the cross that he bore,

Were his own—

The cross was his own."

—Author Unknown.

"And led him away to crucify him." Never before had men compelled Jesus to do anything. He accepted his crucifixion willingly, or it could not have been accomplished. He laid down his life to take it again, realizing that the joy set before him surpassed the pain.

Hymn—"Bearing His Cross."

SATURDAY—Suffering.

"If we had our choice of pains, we should always rule out our own greatest opportunities."

Do you not see how necessary a world of pain and trouble is to teach a mind and guide a soul?

"And he began to teach them that the Son of Man must suffer many things." (Mark 8:31.)

"Are ye able to drink the cup that I drink? or to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" Matt. 20:22.) "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified with him. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to usward." (Romans 8:17-18.)

Hymn—"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

SUNDAY—Living.

"In Him was life."

have life through His name." These two verses

"The life was manifested and we have seen, and bear witness, and declare unto you the life, the eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested to us." (I. John 1:2.)

The Fourth Gospel opens with this statement: "In Him was life." It closes with the purpose for which it was written: "That believing, ye may have life through His name." These two verses may be regarded as the poles between which the whole thought of the Gospel revolves. The eternal need of man is for life, more abundant life. The word may carry with it widely different meanings to different men, in various periods of the world's history, but in itself it is the one comprehensive word which sums up all the thousand wants and longings of our human nature. And in Jesus Christ we have life—the supreme possession in which all desire is satisfied.

Christ's gift was nothing less than the communication of his own life to those who accepted him as Lord.

"I know not how that Joseph's tomb
Could solve death's mystery;
I only know a living Christ,
Our immortality."

—Harry W. Farrington.

NOT WHAT, BUT WHOM.

"Not what, but whom, I do believe,
That in my darkest hour of need,
Hath comfort that no mortal creed
To mortal man may give—

"Not what, but whom!
For Christ is more than all the creeds,
And his full life of gentle deeds
Shall all the creeds outlive.

"Not what I do believe, but whom!
Who walks beside me in the gloom?
Who shares the burden wearisome?
Who all the dim way doth illumine,
And bids me look beyond the tomb
And larger life to live?

"Not what I do believe,
But whom!"

—John Oxenham.

Hymns—"Alleluia!" "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," "Christ Arose."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

"THE MEANING OF EASTER."

MARCH 27, 1932.

Program.

Piano Prelude—"I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

Call to Worship—"I Know That My Redeemer Lives and Life Eternal Brings."

Tableau—"He Is Risen."

This tableau should be arranged behind the curtain before the program begins. At the proper time the curtain should be drawn with the characters found in their proper places. This tableau may be based upon the picture by Plockhort, by the title, "He Is Risen." The music for the prelude may be used, if played softly, for the tableau. At the conclusion of the music have the curtains drawn.

Hymn—"He Arose," or "Christ the Lord Is Risen Today."

Scripture—I. Cor. 15:1-11.

Hymn—"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Talk—Use either of the following subjects: "The Problem of Life After Death," "Why I Believe in Immortality," "What the Resurrection Means to Me," or "My Idea of the Future Life."

Music—"Hallelujah Chorus," Handel. Use Victor phonograph record No. 35768 ($1.25) for this, and a portable phonograph. The Society should stand during the playing of this record.

Benediction.

Helps On the Topic.

The following was prepared for a paper on "Immortality" for college work, by the editor. It gives a brief summary of this subject:

The question of immortality of man does not receive much consideration in our day. We are too busy living to be concerned with what is coming next. It is perhaps well that this is so, for it would do no good to speculate upon the matter as we can not learn very much about something that can not afford more definite proof one way or the other than does this question. It is a very difficult question to examine as we can really find out nothing from "the other world." At least such communications are not very common. They are, at the best, so rare that they are still questionable.

And yet, we believe that there is a life beyond; we do not think that this life is all. In fact, there must be a life beyond if there is any meaning to this life and if there is any God.

The personality of a good man is the most valuable thing of which we know. If such personalities can survive and continue to develop and to be of service, the universe is richer than if these personalities are bound to perish.

Fosdick, in his book, "The Assurance of Immortality," says: "Behold a man gives himself to disbelief in personal permanence, let him consider this result, that in such a world falsehood makes the best character and truth destroys it. No man need, therefore, stop with the vague possibility of life to come. Immortality is a hypothesis, if you will, but so is gravitation, and around them both considerations weighty and assuring gather in support. The reasonableness of the universe is pledged to the immortality of man; the beneficence of God is unthinkable without it; the verdict of the spiritual seers confirms it; and when it is put to the verifying test of life it builds the loftiest character. Death is a great adventure, but none need go unconvinced that there is an issue to it."

JESUS RISES FROM THE DEAD.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 27, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: John 20:11-20.

GOLDEN TEXT: "But now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the first fruits of them that are asleep."—I. Cor. 15:20.

Introduction.

In last Sunday's lesson notes it was said that the cross is the crowning glory of Jesus' life. It marked the supreme climax of a life lived in devotion and sacrifice to the common welfare of the race. Jesus' enemies thought his crucifixion would end the career of a mistaken imposter. His friends felt the sting of its disgrace and thought their Messianic hopes had been misplaced. Surely, his death had marked the end of the fears of his enemies and the end of the hopes of his friends. A sense of triumph was felt by his enemies. A sense of defeat was felt by his disciples.

Sorrow and Weeping.

Crucifixion was a painful and tortuous death. As the shadow of the cross lengthened and the life of Jesus went out from his wounded body, the sorrow of Jesus' friends intensified. But they could still show their love by the rites of burial. There is devotion and beauty in the last sad rites that friends can perform in honor of their dead. With sorrow and kindly love disciples of Jesus hastily placed his body in the rock tomb of Joseph.

Then there were those long hours of loneliness in which the living miss so sorely the presence of their departed dead. How lonely for devoted friends are the recurring periods in which they were accustomed to enjoy the fellowship of a loved one.

At the Tomb Weeping.

"Mary was standing without at the tomb weeping." How intensely human are the touches that are given to the picture. Countless mortals have stood at the tomb weeping. Love that reaches beyond the chasm of death brings friends to sorrowing moods as they keenly feel the absence of those they love. A sorrowing parent sometimes stands and weeps at the tomb of a child and then feels the quickening inspiration of an innocent life that seems so near although death has severed the ties of sense and touch. Sorrowing husbands and wives have stood by the tomb of a departed companion and realized anew the spiritual vigor of a life that death seems not to have ended. Countless millions have stood as Mary stood by the tomb weeping.

The New Vision.

And then there come those moments of spiritual fellowship with the departed. The enduring qualities of a life and personality are felt long after the tomb has received the broken body of the dead. In a moral universe there are qualities of life that persist and endure beyond the span that can be experienced by a mortal body. It is the persistence of these moral values that makes immortality a felt reality in our universe.

Jesus' enemies had tried to check and end his career. But the quality of life that Jesus lived could not perish. For a while Jesus' friends gave up their hopes in him. But the quality of his life could not be obliterated from their lives. New visions dawned. The tomb was empty—the real Jesus was there no longer. Various of the disciples felt hopes renewed, and life quickened by the visions of an ever-living Christ. The Jesus whom they had crucified seemed more alive than ever. His followers felt the inspiration of a spiritual presence. The cross became transformed from an emblem of shame to an emblem of beauty and courageous faith.

I Ascend Unto My Father.

From this time on the followers of Jesus looked no longer for the bodily presence of the historical Jesus. They felt the enduring qualities of a life that was immortal. Jesus could not be found at the tomb. He could be felt in the inner lives of personalities that had been enriched by his eternal love and faith. He had ascended to the spiritual Father. His followers then proceeded to rekindle the qualities of immortal Christian living. For nineteen centuries the Christ of human experience has been a quickening presence in the lives of people who have felt the touch of a life that has not lost its potent force for good. Easter brings us new invigoration and quickens us with the felt relation with the Eternal Father.

THE RESURRECTION.

Who made the Roman soldiers, with fear, though strong and brave,
Fall like dead men about our Holy Saviour's grave?

An Angel, with face "like lightning, and raiment white as snow,"

Who came to roll the stone away from death's chamber door,

In which the Saviour lay without heart-beat or breath.

In the cold and silent arms of unrelenting death?
When He rolled it back and threw it on the rocky ground,

Even old earth shook for miles around from its jar and sound.

And when the saintly women came to His sacred tomb,

With spices and flowers of sweetest kind and fairest bloom,

Him to adorn, and make sweet the air of death's dark room;

They, too, the Holy Angel saw, and were sore afraid.

But quickly to them, He kindly, consolingly said:
"Fear not, the Lord is not here; He has risen from the dead.

Go tell His friends to meet Him on the shore of Galilee,

On the mount near the place where once He walked upon the sea."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

TRUE MIRAGE.

"Thine eyes shall see Jerusalem."—Isaiah 33: 17-24.

The other day people in Waukegan, Ill., forty miles from Chicago, saw the Loop, the famous downtown district of this great city. It was mirrored clearly in Lake Michigan by a mirage. The vision was upside down, as all mirages are, but it was clearly distinct, and seemed to lift the city over the forty miles and set it down at hand.

So it is with the New Jerusalem in a Christian's life, only that mirage is right-side up. The vision of that city of our God is alongside the experiences of everyday. Nor is it fantasy, but all is solid and substantial. Nothing in life is more real to us. Those walls of silver, those towers of golden splendor, those gates of pearl, those green pastures and still waters may be touched by our hands and pressed by our feet. We see the places prepared for us by the Lover of our souls.

Prayer—May our eyes, dear Lord, see Jerusalem every day and all day. May we so live here below that, when Thy time comes for our departure thither, we shall be immediately at home. Amen.

TUESDAY.

POST-OFFICE FRIENDLINESS.

"How hear we, every man in our own language wherein we were born." Acts 2:1-12.

In the post-office of Buenos Aires they make a specialty of languages. Great numbers of immigrants reach that enterprising city every year. They all soon visit the post-office, and the government has made it a point to greet them with some one speaking their native tongue. It is said that the other day, at the same time, a German, a Chinese, a Frenchman, two Poles, a Lithuanian, and three Englishmen, none of them able to speak or understand a word of Spanish, entered that friendly post-office, and all came out feeling that they had reached another homeland.

Let every Christian get the spirit of that post-office of his own life. No one should be a stranger to a Christian. He should speak the language of love, which is current in every land. He should feel the sympathy which is the universal interpreter.

Have we not, in these considerations, come to the heart of Pentecost? In Christ every one of that conglomerate multitude had found a friend. In Christianity each of them, though from a far-distant land, had reached the home of his soul.

Prayer—We are Thy friends, Lord Jesus, and so we are the friends of all Thy brothers and sisters in earth. Help us to make this world a friendly place, in Thy name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A time to keep silence, and a time to speak."—Ecclesiastes 3:1-8.

Good news comes from Hiram Maxim's factory in Hartford, which, since Mr. Maxim's remarkable invention, has been making silencers for firearms. When one of these silencers is added to a pistol, the noise of its explosion is only a mild putt, heard but a few feet away. The invention is, of course, most useful in war, rendering it very difficult to locate enemy batteries; also a man may be shot, and people in full sight of the crime may hear no sound of the firing.

This fact has determined Mr. Maxim to discontinue the manufacture of silencers, but he will turn his attention to silencing airplane engines. His work will restore peace to the skies. This use of the invention is a real benefit, while the initial application of it was a curse.

How quick is the devil to utilize every means for evil, and how slow are the righteous in doing the same! Let us become more enterprising in all good. Let us apply to Christ's work every improvement devised by skill and wisdom. Let us not allow Satan to outspeed Christianity.

Prayer—Quicken our minds, Great Teacher! Make us more alert, O Holy Spirit. May our religion never become stagnant, but may every means of progress be ours. That thy will may be done and Thy kingdom come. Amen.

THURSDAY.

TWO BILLION.

"Jehovah . . . who giveth food to all flesh."—Psalm 136:16-26.

The statisticians declare that there are now two billion persons in the world. More than half of them are in ever-present peril of starvation. On the other hand, the rate of increase in the population of our own favored land is steadily diminishing, and we have too much to eat, while the rest are starving. We throw away enough every year to feed a population equal to our own in China or India.

Verily, "Jehovah giveth food to all flesh," the bounty of his fields is ample for the two billion; but those who have control of it are hard-hearted or so ignorant or so unenterprising—or all three—that they let the nations starve.

How soon will human beneficence come within sight of the goodness of God? And not the plentifulness of God's fields alone, but also the plentifulness of his uplifting and pardoning love?

Prayer—Grant, our Father, that Thy world may come to live the abundant life which Thy Son came to bring. And may we not wait for others, but may it begin in our charitable hearts and in our missionary souls—yea, in each one of us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

NEARER.

"Now is salvation: nearer to us than when we first believed."—Romans 13:8-13.

Ships' captains who watch the matter carefully find that the warm waters of the Gulf Stream are moving closer to the United States. If the Gulf Stream should shift its course close to our shore, our Atlantic seaboard would become semi-tropic and western Europe would become semi-arctic. Fortunately for Europe, the shiftings of the Gulf Stream are never likely to be permanent.

Christ and heaven have come to us in our conversation, but we may and should draw nearer to them all the time. We do not need to wait for winds to bring closer to us the Gulf Stream of God's grace. We can move our lives nearer to it; and as we do so, it will of its own motion move nearer to us.

Prayer—Nearer, my God to Thee! May we be ever reaching out for Thy blessedness. We are made for Thee, and Thou dost exist for us. Oh, may we not remain sundered! Amen.

SATURDAY.

WELL-FOUNDED HOMES.

"Jehovah hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth."—Mal. 2:13-16.

The number and nature of divorces in our country has become a national sin and shame. A wise move has been made by Dr. Bowie, the well-known rector of Grace Episcopal Church of New York City. He requires those married in his parish to sign a pledge looking to "a life-long union of mutual faithfulness and devotion, seeking 'the cultivation of those qualities of self-control, forbearance, and unselfish love which religious ideals can help to create,' and especially promising to seek membership in some church of the community where they reside.

No home is well established unless it is firmly based on religion. The love of God creates the love of man. The kingdom of God is closely allied with the kingdom of a happy home.

Divorce and the very thought of divorce will be at an end when God in Christ is the head of the household. When the husband takes Jehovah to be the witness between him and the wife of his youth, and the wife has a like relation to the husband through Jehovah, the marriage made on earth is attested also in heaven.

Prayer—In Thee, O God, we live and move and have our being. Thou art the Lord of our house, the Head of our home. May we ever dwell in Thy love, and so in the love of one another. Amen.

SUNDAY.

WEDGWOOD.

"Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined forth."—Psalm 5:1-6.

This year the world is celebrating the bicentenary of Josiah Wedgwood, the great English potter, whose classic designs and superb workmanship brought beauty to the common home. Nothing short of "the perfection of beauty" was his aim, and nothing short of that is the aim of his descendants who conduct that charming factory today.

Nothing brings peace and joy to a life so blessedly as the seeking of the best. That is the reality; all else is false and transitory. Say to every pretense, every fault, everything that falls short of perfection in word or act or thought or emotion, "That won't do for me." Put in its place the ideal and you will find your supreme happiness in flawless work.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, Thou didst bid Thy followers to be perfect. In ourselves and by our own powers we are sadly imperfect, and must always be, but we can reach our goals with Thee. May we dwell in Thee forever. Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A great many people don't know that it is an art to be able to hold the tongue. They seem to think it an indication of ignorance when they don't talk back. It is in fact a mark of greatness. Our old St. Bernard dog canters off down the street paying attention to no one. Usually there are three or four little whiffets prancing and barking about him. He pays no heed to their growls. He knows he is master and doesn't concern himself about trifles. It is just the same with men. The higher the position the more the little fellows nag at you. The best thing is just to hold your tongue and let them nag. You have work to do and can't stop to argue with every little chap who thinks that he can set the world straight.—Exchange.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE PLACE AND PERIL OF CYNICISM.

By REV. A. W. BEAVEN, D. D.

TEXT—"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."—Psalm 53:1.
"I will go in the strength of the Lord God."—Psalm 71:16.

These two texts bring us into tremendously differing temperatures. In the first we feel the cold chill of a cynical sneer. In the second we feel the warmth of strong faith. God is the same in both cases, but there is a vast difference in what these two speakers receive from God. One obtains nothing but his own depressing complex; but the other gets power to go calmly ahead with life's adventure.

There is a singular tendency today, however, for many to take the mood of the first text. Not only is there a vogue of atheism, but there is a vogue of cynicism, which sneers at morality and idealism, and glories in a veritable debauch of negations. One catches this note in the writings of a certain group of the intelligentsia. "Those sad young men," as a recent writer calls them, have not only flung over any faith for themselves, but it seems to make them feel tragically excited when everybody else does not eagerly follow them to the same morass of stark negation.

Listen to one leading exponent of this school of thought: "I'm so tired of all the rubbish about the higher life, and moral and intellectual progress, and living for ideals, and all the rest of it. It all leads to death. Christians and moralists and cultured aesthetes, and bright young scientists—all the poor little human frogs, just going pop, ceasing to be anything but fragments of a frog, decaying fragments at that. The whole thing is a huge, stupid, disgusting lie!"

Still others of this group of "de-bunkers," as they are known, feel called to smash all hero worship. Halo-snatchers they are, and when they get through with the living, they exhume the dead whom we admire—men like George Washington and Henry Ward Beecher. They rip their crowns off, hold them up to scorn, and then go to bed as though a good day's work had been done.

This mood of cynicism has touched youth. Careful observers of collegiate groups note frequently a blase attitude or cult of world-weariness. Some seem to feel ashamed if they are seen with an ideal on them, or disgusted if they should be discovered having an "enthusiasm" that could not be repressed. "It's all one big blah," said one 1930 model, when approached and asked to help develop some college spirit and back the team. The sophisticated and supercilious attitude toward the moral and religious concepts of the past, which is found so often among a certain type of youth, is of a piece with this same cynicism.

It probably is not difficult to understand and to account for this movement toward skeptical quizzicalness. It may easily be the swing of the pendulum away from the over-idealism of the World War. No doubt this is one of the causes. Any man, who after the war mingled with the soldiers, who had offered their lives for great ideals, had accepted thirty dollars a month and lived "in hell" in order to "do their bit," only to find on their return that some who had stayed at home had become immensely rich out of the same situation that had made the soldier immensely poor, can easily see why a man came out of the khaki with a feeling of disillusionment.

"A war to end war," said many a lad as he took his life in his hand. Then he saw how the politicians jockeyed with that ideal at the peace table, and later, and later, and no wonder he feels that he must have been "easy" to have accepted it as a slogan. When any of us think how gullibly we accepted propaganda during the war, and how false we later were convinced that much of it was, it is easy to construct an explanation for a general period when it would be the style to doubt everything and to believe nothing.

Further, when so many of the men thus disillusioned came back to our cities and became the idols and heroes of our children, or returned to college and have today become the instructors of our youth and the writers of our magazines, we get at least some little idea of how that bitter experience of theirs could be passed on to others as a real philosophy of life.

It is one thing, however, to be able to explain why such a mood is here; it is another matter to decide what to do in its presence. For one thing, we can not ignore it; neither can we deny it has some validity. The attitude of doubt, if kept in balance, is of immense value. In a sense, the refusal to believe, the determination to ask why, and to find new answers, has been the basis of much scientific progress. The real peril, however, is that cynicism as an attitude may be held long enough to rob ourselves of things that we can not recover later. Youth, for instance, is naturally optimistic, hopeful, idealistic. It is a blessing that it is so. The world needs the lift of hope and the inoculation of new enthusiasms and new ideals. It must get these from youth. Age becomes sodden; it knows so many things that can not be done; it dreads to try things; it is "afraid of that which is high."

Further, if, in youth, a person takes the attitude that none of these things can be, that love is a joke, happiness a mirage, goodness a passing custom, God an ancient fable, and ideals a trick played on us by our imagination, he robs himself and locks the door against the chance that these things will ever come true for him. It is not that he proves that these things do not exist; he merely determines that he is taking an attitude that will prevent his getting them. There is joy in love, permanence in goodness, reality in God, and inspiration in the ideals of Christ; but for him these things can not enter. With his cynical attitude he has barred the door against their entry. Such a person should be pitied. It is a tragedy when he takes that which is a cause of weakness, and prides himself on it as though it were an evidence of superiority.

Cynical youth may some day awake to find that it has lost something essential and has passed the place where it can acquire it. A lady of my acquaintance desired to be slender. She had heard that one who omitted certain articles from the diet would soon lose flesh. She proceeded to leave these out. The desired reduction followed. One day, somewhat later, she found her fingernails cracking and her scalp so dry that her hair was falling out. She applied to her doctor. On hearing what she had left out of her diet, he said, "You are leaving out essential foods. If you keep that up you will not only be sylph-like, you will be a corpse." When we leave out God, ideals,

Christian Orphanage

THE ORPHANAGE RECEIVES A CONTRIBUTION WHICH SUPPLIES A REAL NEED.

Some months ago, when the O'Henry Hotel, of Greensboro, N. C., changed hands, and J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, Va., became president, and T. L. Bland, of Raleigh, N. C., became vice-president and general manager (Mr. Bland is also president of the Sir Walter Hotel at Raleigh, N. C.), it was decided by the management to overhaul the O'Henry from bottom to top and make it modern and up-to-date in every way. In order to do this, it was repapered, repainted, old carpets replaced with new, old dressers, old chairs, old tables, broken or under repair, were discarded and replaced with new and up-to-date ones.

Then it was that these two big-hearted gentlemen thought that these discarded chairs, tables, dressers, old carpets (in good condition), crockery, and silverware, might be of much benefit to the Christian Orphanage, and they offered to donate it and we gladly accepted the splendid contribution and hauled four big truckloads amounting to several hundred dollars' worth of furniture to the Orphanage. The chairs and dressers have all been repaired, repainted and revarnished by Mr. Wagoner (the assistant at the Orphanage), without extra cost, and most of them will serve the Orphanage purposes as well as new ones. The crockery, glassware and silverware serves us well. This splendid contribution supplies a need that we would have been forced to supply in the near future at an outlay of several hundred dollars.

The new management retained in its employ Mr. J. S. Cator, who has personal charge of the hotel, and L. E. Bobbett and Ralph Davis as clerks. These gentlemen have been in the employ of the Hotel for a long time and know how to meet you cordially and with a smile. One can not help but be impressed on entering the O'Henry Hotel, with the courtesy shown by all employees from the time you enter until you leave. One is impressed with the general appearance of every department as to cleanliness and tidiness. The genial Mr. Cator carried us through the cold storage plants, where all vegetables, raw meats, etc., are stored; through the cooking department where the food is prepared, then into the dining room, where the food is served. He then took us on different floors and showed us the beautiful rooms newly papered, and furnished with beautiful furniture. The pretty, comfortable beds, clean as a snow bank, looked inviting and restful.

We were impressed with the cleanliness and the tidiness of every department, and the manager, with the broad smile on his face which he always carries, makes it so pleasant for you that you can not help but want to stop with him.

The O'Henry Hotel, with Mr. Darden, with his large business experience, as its president, and Mr. Bland, with his years of successful hotel experience, as its vice-president, located in the thriving city of Greensboro, N. C., will stand as one of the leading hotels of the South. We would not expect less.

The Christian Orphanage appreciates the donation.

The VEST POCKET is, beyond question, the most popular Testament published. In size, 2½x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4½ inches x¾ inch
 The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.
 The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.
 It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.
 One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.
 The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, Editor.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the publisher's price.)

A LANTERN TO OUR CHILDREN. By Margaret K. Bigler. Morehouse Publishing House. 68 pp. $1.50.

Mrs. Bigler is the successful mother of three children and an experienced director of religious education. She has written a very happy book of Christian nurture for the pre-school-church child, that is, from the first four years of life. In addition to this book, there is a Leader's Record Book (50c) and Parents' Leaflets and Cards (to be sent or taken each month for the first four years, total cost 90c). A binder is supplied for the material for $1.10. The whole, including this book, can be had for $3.50, and is certainly worth it. Religion is the most priceless quality of child life, and here is a book indispensable to the Leader of the Cradle Roll Department of the Church School, and to the anxious and consecrated mother.

THE ROAD AHEAD. By Harry W. Laidler. Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 86 pp. $1.00.

This book is written for late grammar grade and early high school boys and girls, and is a primer in socialism for them. It is not an argument, but an exposition of the history of industry from chattel slavery through feudalism to capitalism, and revealing socialism as the next step in industrial democracy. A socialist is defined as "a person who thinks first, last and all the time about the welfare of society as a whole rather than of a few persons in society." The poise and evident sincerity of the writer makes it a very attractive, not to say insinuating, book. It is real propaganda, and will be hard to combat.

The chief interest of Christian Church people in the book is perhaps the fact that Miss Mabel Pugh, formerly of Morrisette, N. C., now of New York City, is the artist who has embellished the book with many fine illustrations.

WHAT IS BOYS' WORK? By Walter L. Stone. Association Press. 196 pp. $2.00.

Professor Stone is director of Boys' Work Courses in the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, Nashville, Tenn., and has had a rich and varied experience in his work. For 35 years this Christian vocation has been struggling for recognition professionally. This book is an authoritative statement of its principles, objectives, and procedures. As such, it fills a large and necessary need.

Professor Stone defines boys' work as "character education through leisure-time recreational and social activities," and says it "becomes religious education in all activities and relationships of daily living which develop the best in boys." The first consideration is the boys and their needs, the next the fundamental institutions such as the home, the church, the school and their programs for serving these needs, and third, how can the boys' work specialist assist. He makes an earnest plea for correlation of programs in religious education and for such programizing of boys' work as will overlook none and result in an integrated personality for all.

True yoke-fellows are the quitter and the non-beginner.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

and the great hopes of life here and hereafter, we are omitting essential articles of diet for the human personality, and the result will be disastrous.

This final word to youth: Permanent cynicism is not worthy of youth. It is not natural, it is affliction. It is not scientific, it is too partial. It is not sensible, it robs one of too much. It is not wise, for it limits our chance. The world does not need more cynics, we have enough of them; the market is glutted. Cynics are not the ones to whom the world looks for leadership.

Negatives do not inspire. Destroyers do not enthuse others for long.

Doubt looks toward the thing we do not want; faith looks toward the thing we do want. If we are going to major on either, let us major on faith.

There is a God, He has helped millions; there is a Christ, He has blessed people through sixty generations. We do not need to find the experience which sustained the man who said: "I will go in the strength of the Lord God," but we can find it if we will; and let us pray God that we let nothing prevent the faith which opens the doors to that comradeship.—Christian Advocate.

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

OBITUARIES.

ANDERSON.

It was with heartfelt sorrow and deep regret that we learned of the sudden decease of our brother, Arthur S. Anderson, of Winchester, Va.

We, his co-deacons, wish to place on record this expression of our sincere sympathy with the wife and daughter of our late brother in the irreparable loss which they have sustained. Brother Anderson united with our church on February 4, 1912, and was elected a deacon on August 2, 1916.

In the capacity of deacon, he had always been conscientious and faithful in the discharge of his various duties, and regular in his attendance at the services of the church. A quiet, unassuming and kindly Christian man, he was liked and respected by all with whom he came in contact.

We desire this expression of our sorrow be spread upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family of our late lamented brother, and that a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun."

HARGROVES.

Whereas, our loving Heavenly Father has called home to reward our friend, neighbor and fellow church member, Mrs. Martha Driver Hargroves; therefore, be it resolved:

First: That the members of Berea Church submit our will to the will of Him who loves us and causeth all things to work together for good to those who love Him.

Second: That we express our sympathy to the members of her family in their bereavement and may God bless and comfort them.

Third: That we send a copy of these resolutions to be published in "The Christian Sun," a copy sent to the family and a copy put on the church records.

CROMER.

Mrs. Ellen Rolston Cromer was born October 18, 1835, and lived to the ripe old age of 96 years, 3 months, and 6 days departing this life January 24, 1932. Sister Cromer was blessed with good health practically all her life, coming to her death as a result of a fall which fractured her hip. She was a home, by the writer, assisted by Rev. O. D. Lambert, of the Methodist Church. Church, although her distance from the church made it impractical for her to get there often. She was the mother of 13 children, all living. There are 54 grandchildren, 86 great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. Funeral services were conducted January 27th, 1932, at Ottobine U. B. Church, near her

"Shall We Be Christians?"—

The general theme for the annual convention of Northern Baptists to be held in San Francisco, July 12th to 17th, will be the question, not "Shall We be Christians?" but "Shall We be Baptists?" The forum feature, because of its success at the Kansas City convention and the number of requests that have come for its continuance, will be given prominence this year, with discussions of the following questions: "Shall We be Christians in Our Industrial Order?" "In Our Home Life?" "In the Family of Nations?" Rev. Geo. W. Truitt will conduct noon-hour devotional services. The keynote address will be delivered by Rev. W. Quay Roselle, of Malden, Mass.

Founder of Anti-Saloon League Dies.—

Rev. Henry M. Tenney, one of the founders of the Anti-Saloon League, and for 25 years trustee of Oberlin College, died at his home in Webster Grove, Mo., February 23rd, at the age of 90 years. Dr. Tenney served for 25 years as pastor of the First Congregational Church, at Cleveland, and the Second Church, Oberlin. After his retirement from the Oberlin pulpit he was dean of the Schauffler Missionary Training School at Cleveland. It was during his pastorate at Oberlin that Dr. Tenney decided to organize a movement to remove the influence of the saloon from the students at the college, and this was the beginning of the Anti-Saloon League.

Book Plan for Pastors.—

Two years ago a coterie of business men presented their pastor with a check for $100 for the purchase of books for his own library at Christmas time. This year they turned over their gift for the third time. Meanwhile the project has called forth inquiries and other groups have taken up the plan. Recently the group in Banning, Cal., headed by Dr. A. L. Bramcamp, sent out 40,000 letters to communities all over the United States explaining this plan for the promotion of stimulating reading among the pastors. These orange growers of the West, who believe in the fertilization of their groves call these books "brain fertilizers." Try it with your pastor and see if the sermons are not better.

Student Volunteer Pioneer Gone.—

Dr. Fennell P. Turner, for 22 years—1897-1919—General Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions, died in Santa Cruz, Cal., February 7th, at the age of 64. He was the son of a Methodist minister, educated at Vanderbilt and entered the Y. M. C. A. work. During his service with the Student Volunteers, he was a key-man in many of the conventions of the period. Since the expiration of his services with the Volunteers, he has given several years to the Sunday School board of his denomination, and has recently been attached to the Institute of Social and Religious Research. The loss of such men in any church is a distinct loss to the entire church of all denominations.

A New Amendment.—

A new constitutional amendment is to be put before the States for ratification, the first since 1924. The Norris proposal to abolish the so-called "lame-duck" sessions of Congress was adopted by the Senate on March 2nd, and was immediately dispatched to the State Department for submission to the States. It must be ratified by 36 States within seven years. Its chief provisions are the elimination of the short session of Congress, extending from the first Monday in December until March 4th, and the establishment of sessions of indeterminate length to begin each January 3rd. Terms of the President and Vice-President, according to the new proposal, would begin on January 20th, instead of March 4th.

Christian Church Destroyed.—

The building of University Place Christian Church, Champaign, Ill., with all its equipment, was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning, March 6th. The minister announces that the congregation is already planning for a new building. In the meantime at a great gathering of the congregation it was voted to proceed with self-denial plans already under way for the March Missionary offerings. This is a great loss to the Christian or Disciples Church, but the self-denial missionary spirit manifested is commendable to all Christian churches during this, our missionary period. The churches of our faith should concentrate on raising missionary money to meet the demands of the mission field.

E. Stanley Jones.—

It has been the custom of Rev. E. Stanley Jones of the Methodist Episcopal Church to return to America to attend the general conference, but he will not do so this year. Rev. R. E. Diffendorfer, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, has recently received this word by cable from Dr. Jones: "After prayerful consideration I have decided not to return to America until January, 1933. Coming now would mean two years absence from the East. I cannot bear to leave when all life-moulds are breaking, when the East was never so confused, but never so eager, to receive what Christ offers." This note by cable indicates the need for missionary work at this critical time, and all our people should rally heartily, loyally and liberally to the missionary call at this time. Pastors should present the missionary call to all their churches, committees should plan to place an envelope in the hands of every member of the church for a missionary offering and encourage all to help. Shall it be done and will all help to meet this critical need?

Sherwood Eddy Seminar—

During the coming summer, for the twelfth consecutive year, a group of educators, ministers and editors will sail for Europe and make a first-hand study of the situation there under the leadership of Sherwood Eddy. This group will meet intimately outstanding political leaders, economic, educational and religious authorities, in London, Berlin, Moscow, Vienna, Geneva, Paris, and other centers. The program for London is being arranged by Lord Astor and others. After the Berlin visit, the party will divide, one group visiting Prague, Vienna and Italy, the other Russia. The groups will reunite for a week in Geneva, then go to Paris for several days. Throughout the summer, lectures are to be delivered followed by discussion periods. It is estimated that the total cost of the tour will be from $700 to $900. The party will sail from New York June 22nd, and will return September 2nd. This will be an opportunity for students of European conditions to have great advantages by accompanying the group or reading the report when it is completed.

The College and the Church.—

The college and the church are so closely connected in interests, life, service and mutual dependence that the very existence of the one depends on the other. The college cannot hope to continue its life and service without the loyal, liberal, devoted support of the church—the entire church—if we would have the best college possible. The church is equally dependent on the college for its leaders in pulpit and pew. Without this trained leadership, we shall not only not keep our present strength and conserve our present standard of service, but we shall soon be on the decline. There are some of our people, however much it is regretted, who think that the church is too small, even though it increased by over a million members through our union with the Congregationalists, to receive their loyal support. Some of our people think the college is not sufficient to receive their undivided patronage but patronize other schools and colleges that are no better than we have and could have by the united support and patronage of our own. Shall we show our loyalty, our faith, our devotion, our duty to our own this fall by sending every pupil possible from Christian homes to Elon College? Our service should not be confined to our own homes but we should use our best efforts to put the college authorities in touch with every possible college prospect for Elon.

NOTES-PERSONALS

A happy and glorious Easter to each and every CHRISTIAN SUN reader. The event of the resurrection should bring gladness and new hope to every Christian heart.

Quite a number of Elon's alumni gathered at Elon for a luncheon and council in the dining hall of the College, Saturday, March 19th. Pres. L. E. Smith presided, and much enthusiasm for the College was manifest.

E. M. Carter, of Youngsville, N. C., writes: "The interest in my churches is somewhat better than it was a year ago. The attendance is some better, and we are hoping to get more done this year than last."

The churches, through their secretaries, and letters to pastors and secretaries, have envelopes for the annual offering for missions. Surely, on the glad occasion of Easter all will want to make some offering to the name and glory of their risen Lord.

Our government has decided to give five million bushels of wheat, held by the Farm Board, to the unemployed. The Red Cross is to manage the distribution of the bread which the wheat is to make. The Farm Board holds forty million bushels of wheat purchased in an attempt to boost or uphold the price of wheat. Not a few feel that the whole forty million bushels might be given away without serious hurt. So in a time of peace, with no famine in the land, or flood or calamity from natural causes, we witness the fact of our government giving bread to the hungry. And we are told that the need, the hunger, the unemployment of our country is almost negligible as compared to that of many countries of Europe and Asia.

The Philathea Class, First Church, Greensboro, N. C., W. B. Truitt, teacher, has demonstrated what a class can do when it decides what it wants and then keeps continually at it, until it reaches the goal. This class of fine young women decided to give a pipe-organ to the church. On Sunday, March 13th, this organ was formally presented and dedicated, being paid for in full in the sum of $3,665.57, all payments being promptly met and no extension of time asked even during this period of depression and moratorium. Mr. Truitt, in formally presenting the organ, showed that the accumulation of this money by the class had not hurt any department of the church financially nor decreased the revenue going to any other source. It is an achievement in which the Sunday School class may indulge a pardonable pride.

According to the 1932 Christian Annual, carrying the statistics of the churches of our Southern Convention, there were in the churches in 1930, 31,801 members; in 1931, 31,893 members. A gain of 92 members for the conference year, 1931. There were twelve churches not reporting to the various Conferences. Allowing fifty members for each of these twelve churches, or a total of 600, the churches in the Conferences, composing the Convention, have now a total membership of 32,493. The gain in 1931 was meager, indeed. To think that it took the effort, the giving, the worship, the service of 31,801 Christians to gain 92 above losses for a year, isn't very inspiring. This Christian Church of ours needs the spirit of evangelism if souls are to be won to Christ, and people born into the Kingdom. Church membership increases through evangelistic effort, and if ever the spirit of evangelism was needed in the churches and in the world, surely that need is felt now.

Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor, is rejoicing in the good and glorious evangelistic campaign growing out of a meeting begun in the Henderson Christian Church on February 24th. The meeting continued with Bro. Whitten and his church from February 24th to March 5th, and then the campaign was taken up by other churches in the city, being followed by a very largely attended meeting in the First Baptist Church, at which Bro. Whitten preached and led some of the services, and then later in the Methodist Episcopal Church, until, according to the Henderson papers, interest in the meetings has become city-wide and the entire city has been greatly blessed and benefited through the agency of these meetings. Evangelistic movement goes on with hundreds of personal re-consecrations to the service of the Lord and additions to the membership of the Christian Church and the other churches of the city. The Henderson papers speak in highest praise of Bro. Whitten, the part he was permitted to take in the meetings and the work growing out of the same. Elsewhere we print an interesting letter from Bro. Whitten about the meetings that have meant so much to his own church membership and to the other churches.

Rev. David R. Shepherd, member of Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, N. C., and a graduate of Elon College and recently and for some time in the School of Religion, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., becomes pastor of United Congregational-Christian Church, Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga. A recent issue of the Ledger-Inquirer of Columbus gives an account of the merging of the North Highland and Rose Hill Christian Churches of Columbus under the name of the "United Congregational-Christian Churches." Rev. J. R. Prince, who was pastor of the North Highland Church, with "generous spirit," says the Columbus paper, "resigned and moved that the Rev. David D. Shepherd, of Nashville, Tenn., be elected pastor of the two churches now united, and he was unanimously chosen." The Columbus paper further says: "Mr. Shepherd graduated from Elon College, N. C., the largest college of the Christian Church in the South, where he was champion debater, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He is now graduating from the School of Religion, of Nashville, Tenn., with the degree of Bachelor of Divinity."

Quoting further from the Columbus paper: "As soon as the two Christian Churches are fully organized, Supt. Sweet expects to bring into the united groups members of the former Congregational Churches of Columbus, a number of whom are expecting to have an equal and fraternal part in the formation of the union of congregations and denominations."

BURLINGTON INVITES THE CONVENTION.

The Burlington Christian Church, Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor, has extended a cordial invitation to the Southern Christian Convention (now the Convention of the Southeast), to hold its next regular biennial session at that place. The invitation, we are advised, has been accepted and the program is in preparation and will likely be printed in next week's CHRISTIAN SUN. The session begins Tuesday, April 26, afternoon session, and continues through the evening session, Friday, April 29th, there being one session on Tuesday, the 26th, three sessions on each of the three following days—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, April 27th, 28th, and 29th, respectively.

Count on our Burlington Church to do the generous and loyal act always, which means also that the next session of the Convention will be happily entertained. Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the Convention, will give particulars and the program next week. J. O. A.

HENDERSON CHURCH REVIVAL.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:

Beg to report the following for SUN readers regarding our work at the Henderson Church.

We began our work as pastor here November 15, 1931. We found one of the most loyal congregations we have ever served. Our work has been pleasant and the people have a mind to work. On February 24th, we began a revival which continued until March 5th. During the entire series we had splendid congregations. The Lord blessed both preacher and people and the interest increased to the point that the pastors of the other churches in Henderson desired the meeting to continue. Upon the advice of all pastors this was done. We went to the First Baptist Church, the largest in the city, and held service each evening until Friday night of this week. At each service evangelism was stressed, and many people at every service came forward to rededicate their lives to the Master's cause. For all God has done for us we desire to praise him and try to serve him better. A goodly number of converts resulted from the meeting. Our church has been revived with added power. Since we came to the church here as pastor we have received sixteen members. We rejoice to have these new workers lined up with us for the cause of Christ.

The meeting is to be continued at the First Methodist Episcopal Church for the next two weeks. Pray for us.

The various organizations of the church are active at present. The church has been equipped recently with a beautiful lighting system which was badly needed. Doors and bulletin board have been painted, fencing around the parsonage lot and other things done in spite of the depression. There is no depression of spirit if we let God into our hearts.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

NORTH MIAMI, FLORIDA. Rev. O. H. Denney, pastor, received seven into church membership on March 6th, making twenty-one received since December 27th. Eight of these were women and thirteen men and boys. The pastor writes that more are to be received on Easter Sunday. This is an enviable record.

DR. LUTHER STIMSON, formerly a missionary of the American Board in the South Sea Island and now retired from missionary work on account of ill health, and also more recently professor at Atlanta Theological Seminary, is now living near Cocoonut Grove, and is identified with Plymouth Church, where he is now conducting a Bible class which is proving very interesting and popular.

COCOANUT GROVE, FLORIDA. Rev. J. D. Kuykendall, D. D., pastor of the Plymouth Church, has had experience with printing in his earlier days and his hobby now is a well-equipped printing press. He has prepared and is printing a fine pamphlet about this unique and beautiful church. The pamphlet is well illustrated and when finished will be for sale by the Woman's Society of the church.

MACEDONIA PARISH, organized a year ago, united in a big group of brotherly workers, have unanimously and with enthusiasm called Mr. Theodore Leverett to continue as pastor another year. He is doing a fine piece of work, and North Georgia appreciates this full-time pastor, who devotes all his strength to the ministry. It is that kind of service which builds the Kingdom in large communities.

SOUTHERN PINES, NORTH CAROLINA. The sympathy of all is extended to Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Willis Serl in the loss of their son, an only child, who died in February in California, where he has been for much of the past two years in hopes of the recovery of his health. The comradeship between the young man and his parents was of such a nature as to make the sorrow very hard to bear. The interment was in Wisconsin. Dr. and Mrs. Serl have recently returned to Southern Pines, where he has been for thirteen years pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship.

SANFORD, FLORIDA. Rev. J. Bernard Root, pastor. As the members of the congregation came from the church service Sunday noon, March 13th, flames were seen coming from the parish house next door. The fire was extinguished but quite a bit of damage was done. The pastor writes that at 3:00 o'clock they had two estimates on the cost of repairs and at 4:00 o'clock a meeting of the Board of Deacons was held and a full report to the insurance company was prepared. Monday night the Board of Trustees met and orders were given to a contractor to repair the building and have it ready for classes the following Sunday. That is prompt and business-like. The pastor also writes that recently a social for the young folks was held and after playing for a while, the young people "started a religious discussion, with Spinoza as a background. Can you imagine such a wild time as that among a group of lively boys and girls? I didn't start it. I just helped keep the ball rolling."

LA GRANGE, GEORGIA. Rev. J. H. Dollar, minister, is reaching many new people and strengthening the Christian forces of the city in a most heartening way. Since Mr. Dollar came to this United Church last November, an average of six new members have been received each month. They are quietly carrying out an Easter movement which will bring in many more, it is believed. And with this, the church is bending every effort to take care of a debt which has been running for a number of years. The prospect of doing this is very bright. These busy people are also rearranging the interior of the church building, bringing the pulpit forward, draping heavy curtains across the large platform back of the pulpit chairs and in other ways creating a more worshipful atmosphere in the large auditorium. They are also in a present campaign to secure new hymn books, which are badly needed. The people are very happy that the union was so splendidly effected last summer and that Mr. Dollar was the chosen man of God to lead them in their Christian program.

THE FREDONIA PARISH, Lawrence L. Stanley, minister, is worthy of mention in this page for two outstanding features at least: First, the upstanding spiritual life manifest in each of the four churches—Fredonia; Bethany at the Rock; Meansville, and Woodbury, Jones Chapel. Never within recent years, it is modestly and honestly reported, has the work of these churches on the spiritual side been higher. They take their religious duties seriously. They plan to raise their missionary apportionment and they are not waiting till next fall to work at it. It is true today as it was in other days, "If you feel your faith slipping, church members growing cold, take up a missionary collection." It works. And in the second place, these churches have organized their women. This means power to any church. Men may not always get away from work-a-day duties for many organizations and regular meetings, but women can and blessed is that church which organizes its women.

WEST TAMPA, FLORIDA. New interest is being shown in the prayer meetings of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society since the revival meetings which were conducted by the evangelist, Rev. E. H. Lantz. In line with a suggestion from him that special Bible courses be taken up by the young people, Bible texts on special subjects on fundamental doctrines like salvation and soul winning are placed together on sheets of paper with a hektograph and copies are distributed among the young people in advance of meetings. The texts are committed to memory. In the prayer meeting, after the regular service, sides are chosen and a contest is held. Each side is credited with points according to the number of texts repeated by its members as the opportunity is given in order from one side to the other, mistakes on one side being corrected by the other. The King James version is used and an error in one word loses a point in the friendly contest. There were over forty in the last prayer meeting and the contest at the close aroused keen interest. Fourteen new members were welcomed into the church during the revival meetings while Bro. Lantz was laboring here.

UNITED CHRISTIAN-CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH is the way they write it now in Columbus, Ga. Under the fine, vigorous, kindly and Christian leadership of Rev. J. D. Dollar, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Georgia-Alabama Conference, splendidly aided by Mr. J. R. Prince, pastor of North Highland Church, and with such suggestions as the pastorat-large could give, North Highland and Rose Hill voted to, and did, unite into one body during the days of last week, culminating in a united service in Rose Hill building, Sunday, March 13th. Mr. Dollar and his committee deserves great credit for sensing the situation and then by courage and faith and Christian work, leading these people to see the great advantage of union. Friday night, March 11th, was the time when the great decision was really made. It was then the vote was taken, at a joint session of the two churches. The next day a joint committee worked out articles of association and by-laws which were adopted the following day and officers elected. The new pastor called is Mr. David W. Shepherd, just about to graduate from Vanderbilt School of Religion, with the degree of B. D., he having taken the B. A. degree from Elon College before. The outlook is very promising especially as this new church will group with the United Church across the river in Phenix City, which also has called Mr. Shepherd. He will begin his pastorate April 1st.

LICENSED PREACHERS.

Licensed preachers are asking about the course of study adopted by the Georgia Conference last year and which is a part of the working plans of each of the Associations under their reorganization programs. Prof. Percy, Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., can give full information. In a word each man licensed is granted the right to preach for one year. He is not supposed to be licensed until he is actually in charge of a church. He is then expected to pursue the course of study provided for the first year. At the close of the year or whenever he thinks he is prepared for it, he will take an examination under the direction of the State Committee. If he gives satisfactory proof that he is prepared to go on, he is recommended for licensure by the committee, and will take the second year's work. When he has thus completed the three years of study, he may be ordained in the proper way, some church calling a council for examination, etc., just as their fathers have done before them. The tendency of this course is to raise the standard of the ministry and to provide men as pastors who have given serious study to prepare themselves for the important work of the ministry. It also looks to a man giving his full time to the ministry, for it has been proven time and time again that a church which is a mere preaching point seldom, if ever, succeeds in the course of years in coming to a large service to the community. What is greatly needed in so many churches is not so much one sermon a month, but regular and persistent pastoral leadership all of the time. Not even good preaching can do the job. It takes all the time of a devoted, well-prepared man in the ministry who can give all his time to the church or churches which he serves. And if it must be "churches," let them be as few as possible.

RICH KAOLIN BEDS FOUND.

Kaolin is a pure white clay used in the manufacture of porcelain and china. The name, incidentally, is derived from the Chinese Kau-ling, the name of the hills where it is extensively mined in China. But this important substance is also mined in England, France, Bohemia, South Africa and the United States. In this country, North Carolina has long been one of the largest producers of the clay. Now new deposits have been discovered there, some of the beds said to be as much as 100 feet deep. Besides being used to make china and porcelain, kaolin finds its way into many grades of paper as a filler or coating and is sometimes used in finishing calico.—Exchange.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EASTER.

It is not the date but the fact of Easter that is fixed and is important, in the mind and heart of the Christian world. The date of observing the resurrection of our Lord is questionable and varies. The fact of his resurrection and its supreme importance in the world cannot be denied. Our whole Christian system is built on that fundamental fact. Paul said as much: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." (I. Cor. 15:14.) The power of preaching and the strength and validity of our faith hinge upon the reality and the fact of the resurrection of our Lord. Paul in fact leads us not only to a faithless but to a sinful condition if the resurrection of our Lord be untrue: "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." (I. Cor. 15:17.)

So with song, praise, prayer, worship in our churches this year on Sunday, March 27th, we will celebrate the annual Easter event. A glorious event, indeed. The most glorious and glad-some of all the events in the annals of time. Springtime has come, little buds and blossoms are lifting their smiling faces from limb and stem and earth, where they have slept through the cold winter days and nights. They greet us with their gladness and sing to us of their own resurrection. The birds are again singing their songs of glee and gladness, for the springtime has filled them with a new hope and a new life. Nesting time and a new day has dawned for bird and beast and flower, and the earth rejoices in its own resurrection. There are those who claim we celebrate the resurrection of Christ every Sunday, because we observe the first day of the week as a sacred and holy day, instead of the seventh. There are those who say there is no biblical authority for keeping Easter and that the custom came to us from heathen tribes. All these claims are beside the issue, because they speak of dates and seasons and not of the fact. It is the fact of the resurrection of our Lord that brings to every Christian a brighter hope, a stronger faith, a more glorious outlook on life and on death, and on all events to come, for he himself, who was the first fruits of the resurrection, declared: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

JONAH AND SOME OF US.

One of the strange things, in the mind of this writer at least, is, that there are preachers and devout laymen who have their doubts, and sometimes their quibbles, about the Book of Jonah. It is spoken of as an ancient story, possibly an allegory or a myth. Strange, indeed! The fact is that this Book is as modern and as unmistakable as if it were written last week or last year. We wish we could be as certain of all things we read as we are of the Book of Jonah. It fits into human experience, the history of man, the life of the Church, the history and experience of the Jews and to our individual experiences as few books of the Bible. The book is simply filled with the life and the mind and the hand of God as few other books in the Bible. In fact we doubt if the word, "Lord," "Jehovah," "God," is used as often in any other book of the Bible, in the same space, as it is found in the Book of Jonah. There are only forty-eight verses in the four brief chapters of Jonah, and yet the name of the "Lord" appears thirty-six times in those forty-eight verses. In only one-fourth of the verses of the four chapters is the actual name of the "Lord" left out, but in that one-fourth, as well as in the other three-fourths of the verses in which his name is mentioned, his hand is in evidence, his spirit is operative, his voice is speaking, his power is manifest. About the only reason we can see for any preacher or layman side-stepping the Book of Jonah is that he doesn't care to come face to face with facts surcharged with the spirit and the power of God, facts freighted with the Word, the life, the active will of God. Jonah and all the human characters are merely secondary. The one supreme personality in the Book of Jonah is the Lord God. It was his word that came to Jonah. It's from his presence that Jonah would flee. It's the Lord that sent out the great wind. It's the Lord God upon whom even the foreign mariners called, and to the Lord God the mariners cried in their distress begging that the Lord God would not lay innocent blood upon them. It's the Lord whom these mariners feared. It's the Lord who had prepared a great fish. It's the Lord, his God, whom Jonah praises from the belly of the fish. It's the Lord whom Jonah remembers when he is swallowed up, and, even while in the deep, Jonah, like many another poor soul in distress, cried out: "Thou hast brought my life from corruption, O Lord my God." And while yet in the depth of his distress, Jonah declared that which the Lord had commanded him to declare to Nineveh, and in the day of his prosperity: "Salvation is of the Lord."

Would it not help some of us now if we could lay aside our quibbling, our doubts, and proclaim from our pulpits and from our daily life in these times of depression and distress that which Jonah cried out in the belly of the fish: "Salvation is of the Lord?"

It was the Lord who spoke unto the fish and it was the Word of the Lord who came unto

Jonah the second time. It's God, the God of whom Jonah preached that the people of Nineveh believed and in whose name they proclaimed a fast. It was God who saw the works of penitence and sorrow of the Ninevites and forgave them of their sins and saved their great city. It was the Lord who spoke to Jonah; the Lord God who prepared a gourd. It was God who prepared a worm and the vehement east wind and it was God who said to Jonah, "Dost thou well to be angry." It was the Lord who told Jonah that it was he who had pity on the gourd. It's the Lord who spared Nineveh, that great city with its 600,000 persons who were innocent, to say nothing of the other hundreds of thousands who had repented. We challenge a student of theology, a reader of the Bible, to find a book in the Bible in which the reader is drawn more often and more forcibly face to face, not with the spirit of man, but with the spirit of God; not with the sayings of man but with the sayings of God; and last, but not least, not with the will of man, but with the will of God. God's will had its way with Jonah in spite of his protest and hard-heartedness. And God is having his way with many of us today in spite of our protest. We protest that we need our money for our own personal welfare; that we need our dimes and dollars for our local demands; that if we do our duty at home and do the work about us it will take all that we have and can spare. And yet through these times God will have his will with some, and some will yield, and some will lay their offerings on the altar of God as Jonah laid his life there finally, and their offerings will be used for the same purpose that Jonah's was, viz.: To carry the message of "Salvation is of the Lord."

First of all, then, the Book of Jonah reveals the will and the way and the work of God as few books in the Bible reveal these things, and secondly, there is no book of the Old or New Testaments more thoroughly missionary, even foreign missionary, in its direct teachings, than the Book of Jonah, and certainly no book is more alive with the presence, power and personality of God.

This writer heard one of the leading Bible scholars of the world say last summer that there were not any old stories and old events and old incidents in the Old Testament. They were all new and fresh; as new and as fresh as the life we live and the experience we have and the day that God creates for us. The only reason we think they are old is because we look at the husk of them instead of the heart of them—think of the frame instead of the picture, and dwell upon the world and the flesh of them rather than the heaven and the spirit of them.

J. O. A.

WAR OR WORSHIP.

Mankind prefers war and death rather than worship and life. That is certainly true if the price paid is to be the index. Mankind spends more in one generation for war than he spends in a millenium for worship. If the money spent in the great World War could have been spent for churches and school-houses it would have built a church and a school-house each costing $25,000, for every five hundred inhabitants on earth. The Prince of Peace declared "That they who take the sword, shall perish by the sword," and though the experiences of centuries have proven the truthfulness of that statement, mankind will not believe in and keeps on taking up the sword.

We carry on the work of peace and the good news of the gospel by the pittance derived from voluntary gifts through self-denial. We carry on war and the science of killing our fellowmen by the appropriation of millions and billions out of taxes of the people. If the nations, the so-called Christian nations of Europe and America, would spend one-half as much for the propagation of peace through proclaiming the life and the teachings of the Prince of Peace as they will spend on war the next decade every man, woman and child on earth would have access to the gospel and the privilege of learning of him who said, "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly."

President Hoover, in a radio broadcast recently, called attention to the fact that the standing and reserve armies of the world, prepared or in preparation for war, are far beyond what they were when the war broke out in 1914. David Lloyd George, one of England's foremost statesmen, recently declared that "we are moving rapidly on toward the next war. Armaments are more powerful than ever, more men are trained in armies, and the machinery of war is far more destructive than we should have thought possible in the early days of the World War. We are spending more money on preparations for war, far more money in this and in every other country in the world than in 1914. The twentieth century has seen the greatest war that has ever been, and still the world goes on preparing for greater destruction than before." War will never cease until the spirit of our Lord, the power of the Prince of Peace shall have conquered the war spirit and taught man the love of worship rather than the love of war; taught man to care for and not to hate his brother. Thousands, yea millions of Christians, pay their tax money into the War Treasury to carry on the work of killing and preparing to kill; and yet many of these same individuals will give little and with a very close hand for the work of Missions—the work of saving souls, of winning this world to him, in whom is peace and without whom there can never be peace.

THE SABBATH DAY.

The Fourth Commandment is, no doubt, violated by more people and in more ways than any one of the Ten Commandments. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." The coin of the United States has on it: "In God We Trust." Deeds to property and contracts are void if made on the Sabbath. The business by which the majority of the people live is closed on the Sabbath. Farms are not cultivated. Factories are closed, stores are closed, schools are closed, and, in the main, legitimate business is shut down on the Sabbath. Congress closes its doors, State Legislatures are closed, courts close, and the nation's legitimate activities obey the Fourth Commandment. The command is, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy." Nations that do not obey this commandment are not the best nations; but nations that keep this day holy are the best nations; and the individual citizens who help to keep the Sabbath day are the best people. It is not an obligation to keep ourselves holy but to keep "it"—the Sabbath holy. One of the best ways to keep the Sabbath day holy is to keep the church the "house of prayer," holy by faithful attendance and true worship. To sit around soda fountains, ice-cream places, bathing beaches, and spend the day in auto drives or other needless pleasures, is a failure to "remember the Sabbath day to keep

"it" holy. Good roads, automobiles, plenty of money, have done much to carry the people away from home and church on Sunday. By this means good people fall into the swing of pleasure-seeking and Sabbath breaking, without remembering the Sabbath day to keep "it" holy.

The United States has a world-wide opportunity to set an example and to profit by it, of spending the Sabbath in rest and worship; the visiting of the poor and the sick and thus finding satisfaction and recreation for body, mind and spirit. Much of the Sabbath activities leave people less qualified for business and work, and school, on the Monday that follows with its real demands upon strength for service. No hour is more restful or recreative than an hour in worship in the House of God. What this nation needs is to go to church on Sunday and to work on Monday.

ANNIVERSARY OF OUR NATIONAL HYMN.

By H. H. SMITH.

While "The Star-Spangled Banner" is our National Anthem, "My Country 'Tis of Thee," is our popular National Anthem. It was written just one hundred years ago, by Francis Smith, who was a class-mate of Oliver Wendell Holmes, at Harvard. In a class-poem, Dr. Holmes referred to him as follows:

"And there's a fine youngster of excellent pith,
Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith;
But he shouted a song for the brave and the free
Just read on his medal, 'My Country,' 'of Thee.'

Later in life, when Smith's hymn had become universally admired as our patriotic air, Dr. Holmes said to him: "Your name and fame will live when I and my works' are forgotten."

Smith was born in Boston in 1808, and died in the same city in 1895. He was the author of more than one hundred hymns. Among his hymns that found their way into various Church Hymnals are: "Softly Fades the Twilight Ray," "When Shall We Meet Again?" "Yes, My Native Land, I Love Thee," "Lord of Our Life, God Whom We Fear," and "The Morning Light is Breaking." The last named is a popular missionary hymn. The author was deeply interested in foreign missions, and was disappointed in not being able to enter the foreign field. About that time Adoniram Judson was in the midst of his great labors in Burmah, and, after many obstacles, wrote home that the morning light was breaking and the gospel was gaining headway. Inspired by this report, Smith was moved to write the great missionary hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking." Only a year before his death, when he was eighty-six years old, he composed a hymn on the Church:

"Founded on Thee, our Only Lord,
On Thee, the Everlasting Rock," etc.

It was while he was a student for the Baptist ministry at Andover Theological Seminary, that he wrote "America." It was written in less than half an hour. Dr. Tillett, author of "The Methodist Hymnal Annotated," says, "The author had not the remotest idea that the words he dashed off thus hurriedly would ever become a favorite with any lovers of music and song, much less become the national hymn of a great and growing nation. National hymns do not become such by virtue of their loftiness of poetic thought and expression, but because they have in them that indefinable, simple something that gets into the hearts of the people. Greater national songs than this have been written—hymns surpassing it in dignity and nobility of thought—but it is doubtful if we shall ever have in America a national hymn more popular with the people than this."

When some one expressed regret in the presence of Dr. Smith that our national hymn should have the same meter and tune as the national hymn of England, he replied: "I do not share this regret. On the contrary, I deem it a new and beautiful bond of union between the mother country and her daughter."

"America" was written in 1832, and was first sung that year at a children's Fourth of July celebration at Park Street Church, Boston.

Dr. Ninde, author of "The Story of the American Hymn," quotes Dr. Smith as saying late in life: "I have heard 'America' sung half way around the world. I have heard it on the Atlantic Ocean, on the Baltic Sea, and on the Mediterranean; in London, Liverpool, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Paris, Rome, Naples, in the baths of Pompeii, in Athens, Calcutta, and Rangoon. On the earth I have heard it on Pike's Peak, and under the earth in the caverns at Manitou, Colorado, where it was played on the stalactites."

Ashland, Va.

SECURITY.

Twenty years or more ago The Atlantic Monthly carried a story of a young man of good family who fell in love with the daughter of a convict serving time in prison. The young man's family and friends opposed the marriage of the pair on the ground that her father had disgraced the whole family; the young woman's mother also objected to the marriage, perhaps because she feared her daughter would not be happy under the conditions. The young man would not yield, and was advised to go to the prison and discuss the matter with the girl's father. He did so. The report of the conversation is as follows:

Convict: "One wants absolute security in one way for Ruth; the other wants absolute security in another way for you. And security—why, it's just the one thing a human being can't have, the thing that's the damnation of him if he gets it! The reason it is so hard for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of Heaven is that he has that false sense of security. To demand security just disintegrates a man. I don't know why. It does."

Young man: "I don't quite follow you, sir. Oughtn't one try to be safe?"

Convict: "One ought try, yes. That is common prudence. But the point is that, whatever you do or get, you aren't secure after all. There is no such condition, and the harder you demand it, the more risk you run. So it is up to a man to take all reasonable precautions about his money or his happiness, or his life, and trust the rest. What every man in the world is looking for is the sense of having mastery over life. But I tell you, boy, there is only one thing that really gives it!"

Young man: "And that is?"

Convict: "It comes with the knowledge of our power to endure. That's it. You are safe only when you can stand everything that can happen to you. Then, and then only! Endurance is the measure of a man! Ruth is the core of my heart! I would rather die than have her suffer more than she must. But she must take her chances like the rest. It is the law of things. If you know yourself fit for her, and feel reasonably sure you can take care of her, you have a right to trust the future. I believe there is some One to trust it to."

This convict, through his various experiences had gained a degree of wisdom. He saw that by increasing our powers of endurance we lessen the force of evils that assail us. The terrifying evils of our childhood may not intimidate us in manhood. But there are evils to which we cannot make ourselves immune. The convict also sensed the fact that only God can give us absolute security, and that He may be depended on to do that if we trust Him and obey Him.—Methodist Protestant-Herald.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Girls' Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church was organized in February, 1913, and celebrated its 19th birthday on Monday night, March 14, 1932.

The charter members were: Phoebe Artman, Mary Andrews, Laura Bond, Eloise Crocker, Jessie Darden, Martha Darden, Mabel Edwards, Garland Farrar, Jamie Felton, Susie Holland, Mamie Holland, Virgie Holland, Thompsie Holland, Martha Jones, Ethel Jones, Le Clair King, Mamie Kelley, Melissa Klages, Maud Norfleet, Gladys Parker, Virginia Shoop, Ethel Shoop, Ruth Turner, Dorris Turner, Lola Turner, Etha Richards.

The following officers were elected at the first meeting: Mamie Holland superintendent; Ethel Shoop, president; Virgie Holland, vice-president; Phoebe Artman, secretary; Mary Andrews, corresponding secretary; Ruth Turner, treasurer. Miss Martha Jones was elected treasurer in 1914, and has served consecutively for 18 years.

The 19th birthday celebration was well attended and the exercises full of interest and inspiration. The chief speaker was Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, of Town Point, on the Nansemond River. Her subject was, "Why Have a Missionary Society?" She developed the subject along three lines of value: "Educational value; spiritual value; and social value," and urged a large and active membership. Her discussion was illuminating and inspiring.

The Mission Study Class was taught by Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle. Mrs. J. S. Morgan presided over the meeting and prayer was offered by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; and, after the lesson, slides were shown, with explanations by Mrs. Hardcastle, illustrating the peoples, customs, and locations where the church has sent missionaries. These pictures were full of interest as well as instruction to all who were present. It was a stormy night, but the following enjoyed the anniversary and the entertainment with the luscious feast in the kitchen:

Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, Mrs. Vernon Eberwine, Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Miss Julia Brinkley, Miss Thompsie Holland, Mrs. Goldie Britt, Miss Elizabeth Vincent, Mrs. J. D. MacClenny, Mrs. Julian Daughtrey, Mrs. G. B. Dixon, Mrs. A. G. Dunn, Miss Lottie May Cross, Mrs. J. E. Rollings, Mrs. J. T. Phillips, Miss Virginia Harvell, Mrs. J. S. Morgan, Miss Martha Jones, Misses Violet Andrews, Jamie Felton, Gladys Yates, Sara Phillips, Susie Holland, Sara Wall, Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Mrs. Miles Riddick and Rev. W. W. Staley.

The collections have been good for 18 years, the interest has been enthusiastic and the work has been full of consecration on the part of these young women. The criticism of young people in this generation is largely false and amounts to a slander of the worst type. When one considers the Christian service rendered by the young and the real enterprises initiated by them in missionary and spiritual work, the young people should be praised and encouraged in their undertakings. The young people contribute more money, prayer, and work for missions than the whole church did fifty years ago. Let the girls in other congregations be moved by what the girls in this congregation have done.

W. W. STALEY.

LIBERTY (VANCE).

A few days after our coming to this work, which was about the beginning of the New Year, the Workers' Council met at the parsonage for the purpose of rendering one of its monthly programs. At the close of the program we were invited to the dining room where we found the table filled with fresh meat, eggs, peas, beans, sugar, preserves, and on the floor near the table were potatoes, meal, chickens and other things which are appreciated for a preacher's table. There was also a nice bed quilt among the other articles donated. The above mentioned were given by the members of the Missionary Society and other loyal friends.

A few days ago a move was made to beautify the church grounds. A committee was appointed, and much interest has been created. The work is not complete, but shrubbery of various kinds has been planted about the church and parsonage. This work, when completed, will add greatly to the beauty of the church.

The church work is moving forward, and much interest is being shown in all of its enterprises. The church services are well attended.

The writer has never lived at a place where he enjoyed living better than at the present one. The people are generous and kind, and deserve much credit for their friendship, loyalty and love to their pastor and his family. They have shown the same attitude toward former pastors. They do this because they are a people with big hearts.

Mr. E. M. Newman, a loyal supporter of Liberty, has gone to the expense of having carbide lights installed in the parsonage. There have been carbide lights in the church for quite a while. Nothing can take the place of good lights in the home.

I find the people are willing to cooperate and do their part by their pastor. May God inspire our hearts and bless these people that much good may be accomplished in the great task and for the one common cause of building for the Kingdom.

THE GLORY OF THE CROSS.

There was no glory to be seen in the Cross when Jesus, the Christ, fainted beneath its burden as he toiled up Golgotha's hill, after the mock trial before Pilate and Herod, which had been carried on throughout the weary hours of the preceding night. Simon, the Cyrene, could not see any glory either as he was compelled to bear the cross the rest of the weary way to the top of Golgotha's hill. The sorrowing women, the few disciples who stood by as the cruel nails were being driven through the tender flesh, could see no ray of hope, much less of glory, in the ignominious death of their friend and leader. The stern soldiers thought only of carrying out the commands of their superior officers. One of the thieves merely thought of another criminal sharing a like fate with himself.

But the other thief, he must have been on the cross to the right of the middle cross, could see a glimmer of the glory that was to shine down through the ages to come. Remorse must have been filling his heart for the crimes which he had committed when he answered his fellow thief as he did. He was willing and ready to confess his sin against God and his fellowmen. Perhaps for years he had carried on his evil work and had never been brought to justice before. Friends and loved ones may have tried to turn him from his evil ways but he would not heed their pleadings. His own mother may have been in the midst of those who were sorrowing, with a sorrow more terrible than they could know. She thought of him as an innocent child when she had tried to get his feet set upon the right pathway; yet how soon they had left that path and started upon the downward way from which she tried to save him with her prayers and tears. But his heart was hardened and he would not listen, yet as he hung there those words and tears came to his mind and in deep repentance for his sin, against God and the loving heart of his mother, he cried, "Lord, remember me." He had heard the prayer of Jesus Christ, "Father, forgive them;" and believed that he too was included, even though his sins were as scarlet, for a fountain had been opened for sin and uncleanness. With what joy he must have received the words of Jesus, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Yes, the glory of the cross was revealed to him that very instant. It flooded his soul and body; death had no more terrors for him; his sin was covered by the blood of Jesus; today he would be in paradise with the sinless one. Oh, matchless love! Oh, joy divine! Then came the voice of Jesus again, "It is finished." Salvation for the thief was completely finished. A thief no more; saved by grace divine. Though death had been the punishment meted out to him by the tribunals of earth, yet the King of Glory had annulled the sentence and the courts of paradise received him with joy and gladness, for the Lord had brought back his own.

The disciples did not see the glory of the cross until the radiance of the resurrection revealed it to them. We can see it in no other way except in the revelation brought to us by the story of the resurrection. "Oh, wondrous cross where Jesus died, and for our sins was crucified; my longing eyes look up to thee, thou blessed Lamb of Calvary." In him only are we satisfied in this world, the Lion of the tribe of Judah does loose every fetter of sin that binds those who truly seek him; so we who are delivered from sin can say:

"There's no thirsting for life's pleasures
Or adorning, rich and gay;
For I've found a richer treasure,
One that fadeth not away.
And I love to follow Jesus,
Gladly counting all but dross,
Worldly honor all forsaking
For the glory of the cross."

"W."

THANKS.

Dear Editor:

Please permit us, through THE CHRISTIAN SUN, to thank the Woman's Missionary Society and the good women of Antioch Church, for the generous contribution made to us, consisting of good things to eat, such as canned fruit, preserves, jelly, marmalade, dried fruit, peaches and apples, sugar, flour, meal, eggs, syrup, peas, butter, beans, etc. God bless every one who had a hand in the affair.

And we thank the brethren who furnished us wood to burn during the cold weather. We desire also to thank Bros. Hill, Stevens, West and McCullough, of New Hope Church, for wood and pine brought us during the freeze, and Mrs. Hill and Mrs. West for nice butter furnished us.

May the Lord richly repay every one of you, my friends, and may He help us to be better servants and do more efficient work.

REV. AND MRS. G. D. HUNT.

BAR-ABBAS.

AN EPISODE OF THE CRUCIFIXION.

By A. M. Philleo.

All day a dun-colored haze had hung over the desert, causing the afternoon sun to look like a bronze shield hung in the sky. Down near the waddies and the dry water courses the air hung still and oppressive but the drifting dust clouds above denoted wind.

Coming up from the south and skirting the outer rim of the desert on the Syrian side, one might have discerned, late in the afternoon of a day in the thirty-third year of the Christian era, three horsemen making their way northward, one well in advance of the other two. Despite the stifling heat, all three were so swathed in the loose flowing garments of the Arab, that a close scrutiny would have had to be made to distinguish any definite identification of the trio. This, however, was not true of the horses ridden by these men; while the mounts of the pair lagging in the rear showed every sign of exhaustion, the one ridden by the leader seemed untired and fresh. Could one have made a close inspection of this horse and rider, he would have been repaid with the following inventory. A small, but beautifully shaped horse, in color a wine-red bay with black pointing, small ears, large intelligent eyes, a short arched neck, a broad chest, flat legs and ivory-white hoofs, all marking denoting him to be an Arab of purest blood, which he was. His equipment was the simplest, being merely a folded berous and a girth to which was attached a pair of stirrups; a stray over the head, holding the bit, to which the reins were attached, completed the arrangement.

The rider was scarcely less interesting than his horse, apparently of moderate height, his hands and arms were strong and sinewy, but his face would have quickly arrested one's attention precluding a further scrutiny of his person. His hawk-like nose and crisp dark hair proclaimed him a Jew. The rather high forehead and almost furtive mouth marked the dreamer, while his burning eyes denoted the fanatic, one who would go to almost any length in following an ideal or a dream. Plainly the only bond existing between this oddly assorted trio was the common bond of the criminal, all three were fugitives from justice. "By Baal Melkarth, and this wind does not settle, we shall have to spend another night in one of those waddies like a rabbit escaping a hound," exclaimed one of the pair, now well in the rear of the leader. His oath marked him as one whose ancestors had paced the deck of a Phœnician galley, rather than a son of Ishmael. His companion thus addressed, roused from the lethargy into which he had fallen, looked about and answered, "Thou speakest true, Malchus, it would be madness to try the desert until there is less wind; one would be lost ere he had ventured ten stadia into it!" "Methinks our comrade is over-anxious and it must truly be something other than the trivial crime of which he spake, which makes him want to try the sands before night," replied Malchus. "Belike, 'tis the long arm of Rome, from which he would escape," replied the other.

Had they but known, these were almost the thoughts that were passing through the mind of the rider before them. "Fool I was to ever become thus entangled. The Procurator hath overlooked many of my small crimes, even winking at the death of Shelo with whom they might easily have linked my name, only I was too useful to him. But I needs must always have money, and for the gold of that old fox, Caiaphas, I did stir up a mangey rabble, the scum and offscouring of Jerusalem, and for my pains what have I received: three sesteria, when I was promised five, and Pilate's wrath, Jehovah's curse on Caiaphas and his whole brood."

While thus indulging his bitter reflections, he had materially widened the distance between himself and his two companions. As he started to descend the bank of a waddy, his horse suddenly pricked his ears forward and gave voice to a low, pleased whinny. Too late, he noticed the trap into which he had unwittingly fallen, for he had walked into the grip of the very power from which he was fleeing, namely, a score of Roman Legionaires.

For twenty years Gaius Sextus had followed the Eagles of Rome, from northern Gaul to the southern colonies of Carthage, from the valley of the Rhone to the hills of Syria, as camp-follower, legionaire and now centurion, Rome had been his mistress and he her willing slave. He was the living embodiment of that spirit which characterized the Roman soldier of his day and which sentiment was afterward crystallized into the motto Semper Fidelis. For two years he has been stationed at Jerusalem with a part of the Legion then in Syria, serving under Pilate, then Procurator at Jerusalem. He had been an indifferent spectator to the drama unfolding before him in the stormy conflict between Pilate and the Jewish Heirarchy in the Holy City. He had performed his duty faithfully and was recognized as a man well fitted for the duty in which he was now engaged.

The bitter animosity that had existed between the Jewish inhabitants of Jerusalem and the Roman governors for nearly a century found its culmination in the struggle now being waged between Pilate and his subjects. The hatred of the people had been used by the crafty high priest Caiaphas in an abortive attempt at revolution. The revolt was quickly and ruthlessly crushed by the Roman soldiers, but the leader had escaped, and it was for his apprehension that Gaius Sextus had set out with a score of Roman soldiers, to scour the country north and east along the Jordan. Aided by the weather and the inborn instinct of the man-hunter, Sextus felt sure that the quarry would be run to earth near the river. His theory had proven true.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father, out of the night we come to thee. May it be as new creatures into the new day. With the passing hours of sleep grant thou to have closed upon time every page that would make us ashamed. Help us to appreciate the receptivity of the pages unwritten, and by their very blankness and cleanness may we be led to know that all the light and hope of the world is ours to embrace and occupy for our Lord Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

ANNUAL MISSIONARY OFFERING.

It will be no easy matter to face a congregation, all of whose members need what they have and more, and ask that congregation to make a contribution to Missions. And yet this is exactly what all our pastors and church leaders are called upon to do at this time. Our Convention, the Conferences and Church Councils have all decided that this is the thing to do, and have made the very life of our mission cause dependent upon the outcome of such an annual offering.

It may seem strange to some that the Creator, to whom belongeth all the silver and gold and the cattle upon a thousand hills made the financing of his kingdom on earth dependent upon the self-denial of his followers. All other kingdoms have been financed through taxation or other sources, self-getting and self-enrichment. The kingdom of God is financed on self-giving, self-denial, even self-improvement, so far as finances are concerned. Christ, who sat over against the treasury, beheld those who cast in of their abundance, but said he, "The poor widow hath cast in more than they all, because she gave her very living." It was an act of self-denial that our Lord commended, for he knew then, and he taught always, that his kingdom was to be built up on this earth through the principle and practice of self-denial. The missionary offering is the most thoroughly Christ-like and unselfish of any we are ever called upon to make, because it is done solely in faith to help give the gospel to those who will never thank us, and with the sole thought of giving our Lord a chance with the hearts and lives of those who have not had the privilege of knowing and accepting him. It is the one offering we make solely in the name and for the sake of our Lord, that his glory, not ours, shall be made manifest, and that his love, not ours, shall reach others, and that his life, not ours, may be made known to those who are perishing without him. With our other gifts, we help to buy bread for the body; in Missions, we are seeking to give the bread of life to souls that are perishing without it. Missions are not a benevolence or a charity. They are a spiritual act; an attempt to give spiritual life and to carry the life more abundant to those who are hungry and thirsty, not for bread and water that sustain the body, but for bread that feeds the soul and that water of life which, if one drinks, he shall never thirst.

At some expense envelopes have been printed and mailed to all church secretaries and letters have gone to pastors as well as church secretaries begging that the envelopes be distributed discreetly, carefully and universally so that all may have a chance. We should at least give all the members of our congregation an opportunity of self-denial for their Lord, that they may have a hand in the spiritual task to deepen their own spiritual lives through self-denial and to give to others that Name that is above every other name.

MRS. L. W. STAGG, Sec'y.

JESUS, GOD'S ONLY SON, FOUNDS THE MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE.

1. Luke's Testimony. (Acts 1:1-2.):

"The former treatise I made, O Theophilus, concerning all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which he was received up, after that he had given commandment through the Holy Spirit unto the apostles (missionaries) whom he had chosen." This clause with which Luke opens Acts is left without having its counterpart stated in any corresponding terms. His thought clearly is: This second treatise I make of what Jesus continued to do through his followers by the power of the Holy Spirit after he was received up. Jesus did not win the world: The Christ is winning the world.

2. How Jesus Emphasizes This.

In the Upper Room talk, the night of the betrayal, Jesus said: "The words that I say unto you I speak not of myself, but the Father abiding in me doeth his works. Believe me that I am in the Father and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very work's sake. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father. And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If you love me ye will keep my commandments." (John 14:10-15.) Is it not clear from this that Jesus regards himself as the channel of God for undertaking a divine enterprise; that he thinks of himself as originating that enterprise; that the development of it, the "greater works" of it, must be done by others; that love for him will cause these others to guard and to put into effect his words, meaning, of course, his program and enterprise; that He will be able to work more effectively by "going unto the Father" and meeting all the needs of his work among his followers, as they carry on his work?—The Bible Missionary Message, by Carver.

BAR-ABBAS.

But little could be elicited from the taciturn Roman officer, beyond the curt reply, "Thine offense is great and one against the Emperor himself; I was sent to bring thee, not to try thee."

Back in Jerusalem the prisoner was secured in the deepest dungeon of the old Herodian palace. Well he knew what would follow; too many times he had been an idle witness of such cases; a hurried hearing before the Procurator, a few brief questions, perhaps a witness or two, the stern pronouncement of sentence, death by crucifixion. And with that cruel method of execution he was also familiar. He shuddered as he thought of it now. He had seen prisoners die that way, nailed to those low crosses, where they writhed and creamed for hours, where the jackals and half-wild dogs came at night and tore their flesh while they were still alive. He recalled one Zox, a lusty villain, who met death that way but last year, and he had lived from sunset to sunset, though horribly mangled and torn.

And what of Aquilla, his horse, where was he now; who was his master? Strange as it may seem, this man of crime, who would show no mercy to anyone, loved his horse dearer than anything or person on earth. He cursed Pilate, the Procurator, he cursed Rome, but deepest of all he cursed the High Priest, Caiaphas. He had been made a catspaw, and now while he gasped out his last hours in the agony of torture, dying the death of a felon, well he knew that Caiaphas would give no thought of him, unless it was to make sure that no hint of recognition passed between them. He lifted his manacled hands and tore at his hair, he screamed and moaned until a froth stood upon his lips, but the stone walls gave back no sound except the sound of his own voice. Finally through sheer exhaustion he sank down upon the pile of musty straw that served as a pallet for the chance occupant of this cell. He had no means of telling how long he had been in the place. He dozed fitfully, starting always from his sleep with the thought of the agonizing death awaiting him. Twice food and water had been brought to him, but they remained untouched until removed by the mute who served as turnkey. Now, however, he sat with every nerve stretched, for the footfalls he heard were not the soft padding of the turnkey, but the steady tread of a soldier, and as he came nearer there could be heard the metallic clank of a scabbard against mail. Deliberately his cell door was opened and his eyes were blinded by the glare of a torch held in the hand of a Roman soldier. This was the end, before him only death, but he would cheat them of part of the price—he would not flinch. They should see that though a dog of a Jew, he could die like a Roman. Methodically the soldier removed the chain from around his waist, but left his hands manacled and then stepping out into the corridor beckoned the prisoner to follow him.

As they ascended to the higher levels of the castle, there was borne to their ears the sullen and uneasy roar of an angry mob, and now as they stepped out into the court, a sight met their gaze, calculated to freeze the blood of even the boldest. Filling the entire inner court and surrounding on three sides the pavement or seat of justice, was an unleashed, writhing monster, a mob, bent on death and inflamed by every cunning device at the command of an unscrupulous priest class. Anger-swollen faces were visible on every hand from whose foam-flecked lips issued a scream of oaths and shouts of "Death doth he merit," "Crucify him," "Away with him." As the prisoner and his guard stepped out onto the pavement there was a momentary hush and then a shout, "Bar-abbas, Bar-abbas." Every fiber in him went cold, was he to be thrown to this monster to be torn to pieces? And then for the first time he noticed that there was another on the pavement beside Pilate. As Bar-abbas looked up his gaze fixed on that figure. A young man he was, in the prime of life, his body, which was exposed to the waist, showed, despite the mutilation of recent scourgings, the marks of one who had lived a strong, clean life, full of virile manhood and health. The hands and arms were muscular and well formed, the shoulders were broad, the neck full and rounded, the head was well shaped, the face somewhat oval, but it was the eyes looking from that face which arrested the attention of Bar-abbas. Never had he seen eyes so filled with pity as were the eyes that were turned on him. There was no hint of fear, either in the bearing or the gaze of this man who stood facing his doom at the hands of the mob—only pity, infinite pity. As he stood transfixed by that look, the lips parted and the shadow of a smile flashed from that face and it seemed that this strange man was about to speak to him, but again the roar of the rabble rose and again the shout was "Bar-abbas, Bar-abbas." And now Pilate arose from his chair and holding up his hand, commanded silence. As the menacing roar of the mob died into a growl and then into a murmur, Pilate began to speak. "Ye well know it is my custom during the observance of your Feast to release unto you, one prisoner whom ye may choose. Before you are two prisoners, both accused of crimes worthy of death, which of this twain shall I then release unto you, Bar-abbas or Jesus, who is called Christ?" There was a momentary pause and then the shout from one of the chief priests, "Bar-abbas, give us Bar-abbas." Again the mob roared its approval and a great shout went up, "Bar-abbas, release to us Bar-abbas." Once more Pilate held up his hand and when silence had again been restored, he asked, "And what will ye do with Jesus?" This time there was no pause. The answer came from a mob filled with a blood lust. All pity had fled. Like a restless tide beating against a shore, the crowd drew closer, hate-distorted faces were thrust forward, arms were upraised, and here and there the glint of a weapon flashed in the sun. From every throat there rose but one cry: "Crucify him, Crucify him." Pilate had his answer. He saw before him what every Roman governor feared, an insurrection in the making. If this rabble could be bought with the life of but one man, the price would be cheap. He would accede to their demand and give them this Jesus and have done with the whole business.

Bar-abbas stood as one in a stupor; could he believe his own senses? To be snatched from the very shadow of the cross and set free, left him in a daze. He was rudely awakened by his guard pushing him in no gentle manner before him. Once in the guard-room his wristirons were struck off and he was led by a side passage to one of the sally-ports of the castle, where impatiently pawing the ground stood Aquilla, his horse. A joy never before known to him welled up in his crooked soul—freedom and life were his. Instinct and training, however, made him cautious. He would win clear of the city before nightfall, lest haply Pilate should change his mind. Throwing the reins loosely over his arm he made his way through lanes and bystreets, until near the Sheep Gate. Here he mounted, and with a curt nod to the guard, galloped through. He would follow the circuit of the wall until he reached the Jericho Road, and then make for the country beyond.

As he neared the Damascus Road a crowd was issuing forth from the Gate of Gardens, a turbulent, shouting crowd, the same mob into whose faces Bar-abbas had looked but a short hour before. And in their midst was he, this Jesus whose life had been forfeited that he, Bar-abbas might live. A cold rage possessed him. Audibly he cursed them all; how he hated them, those canting priests, obese from rich living at the sacrificial altars; those immaculate but hypocritical Pharisees, who only tolerated the rabble to make sure their victim did not escape before being securely nailed to the cross; those temple attendants, who trafficked in the sale of sacrifices, of virtue, honor or even life itself; and then once more he was looking into those eyes. All anger left him; there flashed before him a vision of life as he might have lived it. Though this man was not carrying his cross, it being borne by sturdy countrymen, he, nevertheless, seemed nearly exhausted, but his eyes still held that look of pity for a people who knew not what they did; no cringing fear, no bravado, only an infinite pity lit those eyes. Suddenly the whole being of Bar-abbas was shaken by the inspiration of a great and noble deed. Aquila was strong and tireless; he would dash into their midst, snatch their victim from them and make one desperate bid for freedom for both—better a thousand times die in the attempt than to end life on the cross. He calculated the distance and then as his determination gave pause to action the moment was lost, for a file of Roman soldiers interposed themselves between him and the object of his desperate venture. The rabble closed in behind the soldiers, a long queue of the offall of a degenerate population, a sinister menace always, bleary-eyed and scrofulous; what cared they for the suffering of one more victim? Did it not afford diversion for one more day?

Bar-abbas sat motionless with unseeing eyes until the last of this scum of humanity had passed, and then suddenly turning Aquila he rode, not toward the hills to the north but back through the gate and into the city.

* * * * *

Ah, Caiaphas, rub thy moist palms together and gloat; thy minions have brought thee word that this blasphemer, Jesus, has expiated his crimes on the gibbet of a felon; thy sacred office is secure, thy hucksters and money changers may ply their nefarious trades without molestation within the precincts of the Temple. That sun that is shining over those Judean hills and which seems to carry down to darkness the last hope of that little group of reformers, shines on thy rich vestments, marking thee the High Priest of thy people. But two days hence, and for all time, thy name shall be a mockery, and the name of Jesus shall be "King of Kings, and Lord of Lords."

Thou, Pilate, ask thy simple question. Wouldst thou know truth? It stood before thee today, but thou, blind egotist couldst not see it. Perform thy foolish ceremony of ablution. Dost thou think that there is water enough in all the seas to wash away one stain of that sacred blood? Draw thy imperial toga about thee; today thou art procurator of a Roman province and hast vindicated thy high office by punishing one guilty of setting up a kingdom of righteousness in the hearts of men, but tomorrow, and for all time, thou wilt only be remembered by the one sentence, "He suffered under Pontius Pilate."

And thou, Bar-abbas, common criminal that thou art, thy name shall endure through the ages. When thou wast released by Pilate, what didst thou do with thy blood-bought life? Didst thou go back to thy life of crime and debauchery, or didst thou make what restitution thou couldst? None may ever know, but on that day when thou stoodst for a few moments side by side with the Son of man and a rabble shouted the names of Jesus and Bar-abbas, thy name became immortal. Norfolk, Va.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Glen Raven, N. C.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND PROHIBITION.

Young people are playing an increasingly important part in the fight for the Eighteenth Amendment which is being waged by the Allied Forces for Prohibition, now engaged in a country-wide speaking tour embracing 587 cities.

Allied Youth Councils, which have been formed in more than 200 cities in connection with this campaign, are constantly gaining in number and strength all over the country. Every State in the Union is represented in the present signed enrollment of 150,000. Letters requesting details of the Allied Youth movement are received daily from young people in cities which have not been visited by the Allied Campaigners. These are usually followed a few weeks later by requests for enrollment blanks.

Among the most important steps that have been taken by the Allied Youth Councils are the employment of part or full-time field secretaries. This is particularly true in the large cities, such as New York, Los Angeles, and Philadelphia.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the Allied Forces for Prohibition, believes that young people, who have grown up since prohibition became a fact, and consequently have no idea of conditions before the advent of the Eighteenth Amendment, need to be educated as to its advantages. Once cognizant of the facts, they invariably rise to its defense, eager to play a part in supporting and making effective National Prohibition.

An interesting phase of the Youth Educational Program consists in the formation of study classes for youth leaders. The Campaigners are endeavoring to place as much literature as possible at the disposal of young speakers and debaters in public libraries, reserving a special shelf for the purpose, and including a complete bibliography of all the material on prohibition that has been published.

In a number of cities Allied Youth groups have formed speaking teams to operate in their respective territories, becoming in this way an effective force in educating and stirring to action, adults, as well as other young people.

One youth alone, through a series of speeches at high school assemblies, succeeded in enrolling 9,000 students in only a few months.

Several youth Councils have sent out delegates to other communities for organization and enrollment. Sponsors of the campaign hope to stimulate all the Youth Councils to send out speaking deputations of young people to neighboring cities and towns, until the movement has reached out to the most remote communities.

One youth alone, through a series of speeches at high school assemblies, succeeded in enrolling 9,000 students in only a few months.

Allied Youth Councils are getting splendid help from Allied Women, a powerful women's organization, sponsored by the Allied Forces. Realizing the necessity for cooperating in the Youth Educational Program, such representative women as Mrs. George Strawbridge of Philadelphia, Mrs. Truman Newberry of Detroit, and Mrs. Ripley Hitchcock of New York are acting as sponsors for their local youth groups.

Officers for the Allied Forces for Prohibition believe that the youth of the country are destined to determine to a large extent the success of prohibition, and feel that the youth meetings being conducted in connection with the campaign are one of the most important phases of their work.

Headquarters for Allied Youth have been established at 419 Fourth Avenue, New York, and steps are being taken to extend its activities to all communities as rapidly as possible.

Dr. Poling has long been known for his work with young people. As president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, 4,000,000 young people look to him for leadership, as well as thousands of others who hear his radio addresses every Sunday, mainly in the interests of youth and vocational guidance. Now he is traveling all over the country with the Allied Campaigners to show young people, as well as their parents, that the Eighteenth Amendment must be preserved for the benefit of this and future generations.

Referring to young people, Dr. Poling says, "They are not gin-soaked, cynical or blase. They love life, people, opportunity, vision and reality. They will not permit lawlessness to destroy their incomparable birthright of liberty under law."

Robert C. Ropp is chairman of the national organization of Allied Youth (which is sponsored by the Allied Forces for Prohibition, and his work consists chiefly in organizing support for the amendment among the young people. He speaks at youth banquets or rallies in each city visited by the Campaigners, as well as at the general meetings. "The report that has been circulated broadcast that all young people are drinking is wholesale slander," says Mr. Ropp. "For every boy who carries a hip flask, there are 999 who will not touch liquor. It is unfair to judge the great middle class of American youth by the antics of the few." Already America's youth have done much to repudiate the slanders that have been cast upon them, and this is only the beginning.

Young people all over the country are grasping eagerly at this, their first, opportunity to join in the fight. Hitherto, the importance of youth as an active agent in behalf of prohibition has been almost completely ignored. Youth education in this connection has been forgotten. Now, for the first time young people are given the facts and allowed to voice their own sentiments. Encouraged by the response, officers of the Allied Forces are hopeful that out of this movement may come a far-reaching and permanent influence for law observance.

I AM THE CHURCH.

I am the Church!

I call you, on this day of rest, to think.

The liberty you enjoy was in the heart of my Lord.

Good men, of all generations, have supported me.
They tested me,
And have trusted me.

Human hands have shaped me, not without fault;
But my Lord has triumphed over despair, decay and death.

My call to worship has pealed the bells of the soul,

And many people have found the Good—
At my altar they have hallowed their wills;

Going forth with benediction
To enjoy the world.

I am the Church!
My name is legion,
But my Lord is one.

WHY DO WE HAVE A CHURCH?

Matt. 5:13-16; 13:33.

The poem, "I Am the Church," appearing elsewhere on this page may be used in this program. It might prove profitable to have each thought, or stanza, of this poem assigned to some person for discussion in the meeting. This should bring out several good ideas on "What the Church Is." This will help in the discussion of "Why Do We Have a Church?"

A discussion of the early Church and of the development of religion among primitive peoples will be helpful in this meeting. This discussion should be a background for determining just why we have a Church today. It should discover some of the needs the Church has helped to fill, as well as point toward the discovery of reasons for continuing the Church.

Some quotations from the "American Institute of Sacred Literature," University of Chicago, are fitting for this discussion. "Just as one would not think of normal education without a school, or a normal state without a governor, or a normal marriage without a home, so it is unnatural to think of religion without some form of organization. In particular, the function of the Church seems to be still what it had been in the past: First, it makes possible a fellowship between individuals and God through the means of group actions, group worship, and group instruction; second, it endeavors to evoke in its members and those who are not its members the attitudes of Jesus; third, as a group it offers opportunity for the organization of these attitudes into activities." Fellowship with God and with man, is the key-word in any consideration of the value of the Church.

Fellowship in Worship.

Public worship and private worship each have their values. Both are essential. Association with others in an expression of worship deepens our spiritual life, broadens our vision, and helps to strengthen our purposes.

Fellowship in Service.

Our personal lives are greatly enriched by sharing our talents with others in Christian service. Before anyone discounts the value of the Church he should know what it is doing to make this a better world.

Fellowship Builds Personality.

Though we have different gifts, ambitions, and needs and problems, our personalities are enriched through contact with others whose ideals and purposes are in harmony with the ideals of Jesus. The Church offers such a group of interested and helpful people.

GOD IN CREATION.

LESSON I—APRIL 3, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: Genesis 1:1-5; 26-31.

Introduction.

We have spent the last quarter in the study of the Gospel of John, with its wonderful spiritual interpretations. That Gospel begins with the significant statement, "In the beginning was the Word." This quarter we are to study the other book of the Bible which starts with the words, "In the beginning." Genesis is the Hebrew book of origins. The author has assembled a most informing body of material. During the present quarter we will be studying this great book of beginnings. Let us search this rich mine of religious material for its spiritual truths of greatest worth and significance for the religious needs of our own time.

Creation Stories.

Genesis is a Hebrew book. There are other stories of creation. Other peoples had their stories of the universe. It seems that the national quality of man has led to some observation and analysis of the things about him. Stories that attempt to explain the origin of things have grown up. There are certain religious values in the Genesis stories of creation that are a priceless treasure of moral and religious worth.

God Is First.

This account of creation puts one supreme, creative God as a unifying, controlling, determiner of destiny. Other accounts are polytheistic, but this is monotheistic. This conception of Deity has proved to be the most productive of human good. Hebrew religion presented in acceptable form the idea of God, a universal God, as the first cause and creative agency of all the universe. Here at the very beginning of the Bible man is introduced to God. The Bible shows many refinements in the idea of God from this early view of Genesis until we see the more perfect Father of Jesus' faith. But Genesis places God first, and Hebrew religion bequeathed to man the noblest ideals of Deity the race has ever received.

God Said.

God's edict, God's word, God's thought expressed, is set forth here as the creative force. This idea of Genesis is dwelt upon in the first chapter of John as we noticed last quarter. The author conveys the idea that God has orderly, rational processes in the creation of his universe. Chapter one is a carefully developed literary production. The whole panorama of creation is cast in the formula of six days' perfect work of a perfect God. This lends dignity to the institution of the Sabbath as a day of rest and religious worship. The first four verses of chapter two are an essential part of the real thought unity of the first chapter.

In the Image of God.

Another of the supreme religious values of Genesis is the dignity that is assigned to man. "And God created man in his own image." God made all the natural universe and dignified the human race by making man in the image of the Creator. This noble account assigns to man a unique kinship with his creator. Only a noble view of the nature of man can give to man the most ennobling aspirations. Realization of this kinship with the Eternal is one of the most potent spiritual forces in human life. Let man aspire to the glorious image of his highest possibilities, and not fall to the lower levels of desire.

A Creative Task.

Verses 28 to 30 assign to man a creative task.

As the human race sets itself to the accomplishment of the difficult tasks of creative achievement the supreme energies are released and man is able to rise to higher levels of human attainment. God looked upon it all, and it was good. (Verse 31.)

The narrative recognizes a moral order. This moral nature of the universe has challenged the incentives of man. Would that men of today would be true to this moral note that sounds like a clear clarion call to the race. Our God is a creator of things in ages past, and also the creator of the present and the future. Let us help him make the future glorious.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

A GOSPEL FOR ALL.

"Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God."—I. Cor. 1:24.

First Corinthians is full of tragic pathos of Paul's life. We read there emotions, hopes, despairs, fears and loves. He was confronted constantly by the hate of the Jew and the scorn of the Greek; and he was beset ominously by the jealousies, divisions and misunderstandings of his heathen and Hebrew converts.

But behind Paul were years of labor and sorrow. He was familiar with the fact that love does not leap always in answer to love, and that faith does not always rise to greet one's coming. He was accustomed to beatings, stripes, stocks and prisons as a reward for loving. He could tell how enmity to his teachings had driven him from place to place.

So as he writes to the Corinthians, these things come like a flood in his memory. He must have known that his hearers knew it too—that Christianity gave no promise of security from these things, and therefore they asked for signs, for proof. His answer is: you ask for signs and wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified for all. The Jews, the Greeks, the Gentiles, all who are called are saved by accepting him. He is the power and the wisdom and the sign.

Prayer—Dear Father, it is in Christ we live and in him we are what we are. Make this not only an acknowledgment of our lips but a reality in our hearts. As thou hast accepted us, we plead that we may accept thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THEM THAT ARE CALLED.

"Unto them that are called . . . Christ is the power of God."—I. Cor. 1:24.

"Whom he called them he justified."—Romans 8:30.

The term "called" here referred to any one who came out of their nationality and accepted Christianity. It appears that many of them were poor, outcasts, slaves, friendless while alive and when dead not missed. But God called them and gave them a new life and they were His.

The fact is that the greatest wisdom we can find is not very wise after all. If mere human wisdom or power held the gates of the Kingdom, we would not be in it. "Can ye by reasoning find out God?" Can we by our own goodness commend ourselves to Him? Of course, there is a great deal of wisdom in the church. It is filled with the noble. Yet, it is true, that whoever is in Christ Jesus is not so through any wisdom of their own.

Yea, verily, those who are in the Kingdom are those only who have heard the voice of God, and responded to it. To be sure, all are called, but the chosen are those who respond to the call. Paul was what he was by grace and upon the unbeliever he looked with compassion for he said, "But for the grace of God, there goes Paul."

Prayer—Our Father in Heaven, we are thine, we have heard thy voice, we know thy love. Help us to rise in the arms of faith and be drawn closer to thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MODERN IDOLATRY.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life."—Prov. 4:23.

There is in our days a marvelous idolatry of intellectualism, scholarship, scientific revelations, talent, materialism, gold, heroism, and what more? It is a strange thing to see how men bow down to the genius of these things. The harangue of the voices of those who seek settlement of differences and disputes and cry for international peace is so loud that we are reminded of the negro spiritual "I couldn't hear nobody pray."

Goodness is one thing and talent is another. Jesus came not as a Scribe but as a plain working man—"a servant." He was a teacher not a Rabbi. He was goodness, not scholarship. He was spirit, not machinery. He was humility, not heroism. Let scholarship, or science, or materialism, or heroism, or talent, or intellectuality enter the church as the principal thing, then farewell to spirituality.

It is but a truism, as F. W. Robertson puts it, "When men ask their teachers, not for that which will make them humble and God-like, but for the excitement of an intellectual bouquet, then farewell to Christian progress."

The throne of the universe is love and mercy and not marble. The name of the world Ruler is Great Heart, and not a crystal mind. Reform and salvation is accomplished by the eternal pulse of the heart of God through forms of love. The springs of civilization are in the heart and not in the mind.

Prayer—Dear Father the Giver of all good and perfect gifts bless us with all spiritual blessing in Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FOLLOWING CHRIST.

"I am the way."—Jno. 14:6.

"Thy will be done."—Matt. 6:10.

The dominant characteristic of a person is his will. From the new-born babe to old age a person has a will and he insists that that will shall be served or there will be trouble. That is not Christlike.

God never enforces his will. He pleads with us, but He never compels us. To do so, would only mean distress, and to point out distresses as God's will would only produce atheism.

Whatever the conditions or circumstances, that which is God's will is right; that which is wrong is not His will. And it is sometimes right to submit to wrong. In controversy the one who is wrong and intent on his own will, will not give in. The one who is right, but willing for God's will to be done, will give in first. That is the true meaning of His instruction, "If thine enemy smite thee on the right cheek turn to him also the left." To say that we must stand up and take abuse like that is absurd. It does not mean that. It means: be right—do God's will—do as Christ did—give in, if necessary for harmony. The enemy is won more quickly thereby.

We Christians have a long way to go to say the Lords' prayer and mean it without reservation.

Prayer—Dear Lord, our Saviour, help us in every undertaking to try to find out from thee what thy will is, and make us willing to any personal sacrifice that thy will may be done. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A COMMON TEMPTATION.

"The Jews ask for signs."—I. Cor. 1:22.

Paul's hearers demanded a demonstration of physical power as a proof of heaven's blessings. It is the same old story of the temptations of Jesus. He was told to leap from a high pinnacle and he would be accepted as the Christ. Humanity has never ceased to clamor for a sign. In this modernistic and prosperous age the world still bids the church to remove mountains, or to cause the sun to stand still, or to demonstrate a superhuman power, and thus prove beyond a doubt that God is what the church claims for Him.

Indeed signs are aplenty. The history of the church, yea the nations, is replete with wonders, which in number, power, and beneficence surpass anything of the world, could they but believe. But they are not satisfied. This desire rises higher as it is satisfied.

So the Gospel has to counter this spirit. The counter is "in Christ" and a simple acceptance of him. We would force material action; he is the life. We would pull down the supply; he is the supply. We would gather wealth; he is the giver of every good and perfect gift. We would know the way; he is the way. We would know what is right; he is righteousness. We would solve our problems; he is the giver of peace.

"In joy of inward peace, or sense

Of sorrow over sin,

He is his own best evidence,

His witness is within.

—Whittier.

SATURDAY.

THE HIGHEST RATING.

"That we should be holy and without blame before Him in love."—Eph. 1:4.

"In Christ," is the key expression of Paul's letter to the Ephesians. Your automobile will take you to a distant city in a few hours. If one were to try to run it afoot, he would faint and fall before he covered the smallest fraction of the distance. But in your automobile you can make it in comfort and glory.

Of ourselves we can do little to attain God's glory, but "in Christ" we can do all things and have all spiritual blessings.

The highest rating that can be given any one is "He is faithful." We all have loved the old-time faithful family horse. Would that we were all as faithful to one another and to our God.

Prayer—Our Father in Heaven, baptize us with the desire to be in Christ in all things. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THINKING ABOUT POTATOES.

"Whatsoever things are lovely . . . think on these things."—Philippians 4:4-9.

A college girl who spent the summer as counsellor in a girls' camp was also expected to help out in the kitchen. One day she was busy peeling potatoes when the head of the camp came and spoke to her. "It's too bad," she said, "that a young woman of your education should have to peel potatoes." The girl looked up brightly. "But, Miss Baldwin," she said, "I don't have to think about the potatoes while I am peeling them."

That was a Pauline utterance. "Whatsoever things are lovely . . . think on these things." Our minds are ours though our fingers may be hired out. And even if our humdrum tasks require constant attention as we work there is an upper self that may be living at the same time, and communing with the angels. If we "set our minds on the things that are above," the "things that are upon the earth" will not suffer—be sure of that—but will be vastly advantaged.

Prayer—Our Saviour, prince of toilers, thy work always rose above the toil because thy soul was above it. Grant us thy thoughts in all that we do. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher

"THE UNPARDONABLE SIN."

The following sermon on the subject, "The Unpardonable Sin, or Sin Unforgiven," was delivered recently by Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor of the Henderson, N. C., Christian Church, during the successful revival meeting just closed. Rev. Whitten's able discourse was heard by a congregation which filled the church to capacity, with a noticeable number of representatives from other churches of the city in the audience.

The speaker, taking Matthew 12:31-32 as his text, spoke as follows:

"The doctrine of everlasting punishment for sins is repulsive to many modern minds. To a multitude of people it is a horrible and offensive doctrine. Nevertheless, the church of God has been teaching it for centuries. It underlies the principles of Christianity and our hymnology is pregnant with thoughts concerning it.

"Two obstacles are in the way for us to adopt the modern, popular idea concerning it, human conscience and the teaching of Jesus. We might as well depend on an act of Congress to eliminate pain and poverty, as to try to eliminate the doctrine of future punishment from the mind of man who instinctively believes there might be a day of reckoning and a reward. Eliminate the word hell from the Bible and the many passages of Scripture and you still have the great and last commission of our dear Lord (Mark 16:15-16.) Whether Jesus spoke literally or figuratively, I do not know. Of this I am certain, that his words are true and represent a reality. He said: 'He that believeth not shall be damned.' There is a hell to shun, as sure as there is a heavenly reward. The elimination of the doctrine of future punishment would be inconsistent with divine justice, and redemption would no longer be a matter of undeserved grace. Why John 3:16? Why the Cross?

"Unpardonable sin against music, is to stop the ears; against light, is to close the eyes; against air, is to refuse to breathe. Jesus was healing the sick, opening blind eyes, deaf ears and restoring life. The Scribes and Pharisees, because his work did not harmonize with their teaching, ascribed the power to Satan. Many opinions have been advanced as to what sin constitutes the Unpardonable Sin. The text suggests a possibility of the withdrawal of divine mercy. It suggests also the possibility of the human heart becoming so hardened by rejection of the Holy Spirit that the soul might get beyond the dead line and have no desire or ability to return.

"The mind of man may never comprehend its deep meaning. It is not certain sins such as adultery, theft, drunkenness, lying, murder; however, there will be no liars, murderers, thieves, or drunkards in heaven, unless forgiven before leaving this world. It might be one sin or many. To die with sin unforgiven means that it will not be forgiven in this world or in the world to come, according to God's word.

"To desire or feel that you should become a Christian is evidence that you are still on the side of pardon and mercy. Aaron Burr, a brilliant character, was stirred by the Holy Spirit during a revival while in school at Princeton University. He consulted a friend, a skeptic, who advised him to wait till the excitement blew over. When later he was asked what he had decided to do, he said, 'I have settled the matter; I told Jesus if he would leave me alone,

I would leave him alone.' He became prominent in politics, lacked one vote of becoming president of the United States, later betrayed his country, and years afterwards told a friend that he had settled it forever.

"Many hear the pleading and appeals from God's servants and reject the appeals of the Holy Spirit. Jesus said, 'Ye shall die in your sins.'"

PRIZE SERMONS.

The Macmillan Company plans to publish a volume of Prize Sermons in the fall of 1932.

A prize of two hundred and fifty ($250.00) dollars will be given for the sermon that in the judgment of the Editors best meets the conditions outlined in this prospectus.

In awarding this prize, announcement of which will be made in September, the Editors will consider pre-eminently the following points:

1. Exegesis.
2. Spiritual insight.
3. Evangelical emphasis.
4. Homiletical technique.
5. Relevance to modern life and thought.
6. Style.

From the manuscripts submitted it is intended by the Macmillan Company to form a volume of about thirty sermons. It is agreed that the Editors are granted permission to use any of the submitted manuscripts that in their judgment are suitable for the book without recompense to the authors.

It is the hope of the Editors that the material gathered in this way may serve to indicate to all ministers and church people how keen minds and consecrated hearts are meeting the spiritual, intellectual and social needs of this age.

The purpose of this volume is to give all preachers the opportunity of gaining a national hearing for their message. The Editors believe that some of the most constructive preaching today is being done by men not yet recognized, but at the same time they hope that men of national reputation will enter the contest.

Rules of Contest.

1. No author may send more than two manuscripts.
2. No manuscript shall exceed 2,300 words.
3. Manuscripts must be typewritten and double-spaced.
4. Authors must guarantee that their manuscript contains no copyright material without having received full permission for its use.
5. Manuscripts should be sent to the Rev. E. A. McAlpin, D. D., 130 Madison Ave., Madison, New Jersey.
6. Manuscripts must be submitted before June 15th.
7. All inquiries must be accompanied by return postage.
8. No manuscripts will be returned.
9. All contributors, by submitting a manuscript, accept all these rules and conditions.
10. The Editors' judgment on all points shall be final.

Editors.

Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, D. D., L.L. D., Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Rev J. Newton Davies, S. T. D., Drew Seminary, Madison, N. J.

Rev. C. Wallace Petty, D. D., L.L. D., First Baptist Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Rev. Edwin A. McAlpin, D. D., 130 Madison Ave., Madison, N. J., Chairman.

The Macmillan Company will gladly send full information to any preacher who may wish to submit a manuscript to the Editors.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends :

If it were not for good letters like the following, we would become discouraged and blue during these strenuous times, when our income is small and mothers with little children without work, and no income for support, appealing to us from every side.

Letters of encouragement do us lots of good. We sometimes wonder if we are forgotten and then in our discouraging moments we will receive a letter from some good soul that brings sunshine and inspiration to our soul, and we take on new life and forget our troubles and work the harder.

I just want to quote you a part of a letter we received this week: "I am sending you a check for ten dollars for the Orphanage. Just wish I could send more, for there is no part of our church work that appeals to me more than the splendid fight you are making in taking care of those orphan children. I read everything in the CHRISTIAN SUN about the Orphanage with keen interest and I am always inclined to write you and assure you of our appreciation of your wonderful work there, and of our sympathy for you in the sacrifices you are making. May the dear Heavenly Father be always with you."

Let me quote you from another letter we received this week: "I can sympathize with you in the loss of your money owing to the bank failure. I have had some experience in bank failures, both in savings and checking account, with considerable reduction in my income; but always willing to divide with you in your noble work. May God's blessing abide with you." A ten-dollar check was enclosed in this letter.

It is an inspiration to one in this work to know he has such noble souls interested in the welfare of the lovely little children who are cared for in your Christian Orphanage. Let every Sunday School and church realize that the Christian Orphanage is its institution; that the children are wards of the Christian Church, and every member of the denomination is responsible for the welfare of the children. Do you give anything to help feed them? If you don't, would you be so unkind to your own? Suppose sometime your child or your grandchild will be forced to go to an Orphanage. No fault of its own forced it there. Would you not bless the hand that gave it bread?

ROANOKE, ALA.

On Wednesday night, following the close of our revival meeting here, we were very generously remembered by the friends and members of our church here. They brought us many of the very things our pantry and dining room needed, and our hearts rejoiced as we enjoyed their fellowship. If every one could be a pastor and be pointed by his congregation, such as has been our lot of late, it would help wonderfully in relieving the burdened heart of the struggling servant of God.

For all of these substantial gifts we are thankful, and Heaven's blessing be upon all.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4½ inches x¾ inch. The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MARRIAGES

FUSSELL-SMITH.

Robert Curtis Fussell of South Norfolk, Va., and Hannah Veneer Smith of Holland, Va., R. 1, were united in marriage by the writer at Holland, Va., March 5, 1932, in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The groom is a son of Mr. A. B. Fussell of Newport News, Va., and the bride the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Joe Smith of Holland, Va., R. 1. Mr. Fussell holds a responsible business position and is an active member of South Norfolk M. E. Church, South. Mrs. Fussell is one of the most active and useful of the younger members of Holy Neck Christian Church and very popular in her community.

A six o'clock wedding dinner was served at the Smith home. Mr. and Mrs. Fussell will reside in South Norfolk, Va.

May their wedded life be long, happy and useful.

OBITUARIES.

COBLE.

Mrs. Sallie Lashley Coble died March 4, 1932, at the age of 72 years, 3 months and 6 days. She was married to P. E. Coble, August 1, 1903.

She was a faithful member of Pleasant Hill Church for forty-eight years, having joined in March, 1884.

She is survived by her husband, one brother, D. H. Lashley, and many other relatives and friends. The expression was general, "a good woman has gone."

She was faithful to her church and Lord to the end.

Burial services by Dr. Fleming, Rev. J. U. Fogleman, and the writer, at Pleasant Hill Church.

WELDON.

Mr. William Ernest Weldon was born January 9, 1875, and went to his reward March 5, 1932. Age 57 years, 1 month and 26 days. He leaves to mourn his going a wife, Mrs. Lillian Ellington Weldon, one daughter, Mrs. Emmett Mitchell, of Henderson, one son, Raymond, who is at home with his mother, three brothers, Messrs. J. T., O. J., and Edd Weldon of Franklinton County, five sisters, Mrs. Joe Tharington, Mrs. D. L. Foster, Mrs. P. D. Dement, Mrs. William Dunn, and Mrs. Edd Ellington all of Franklinton County.

Mr. Weldon united with the Liberty Church when he was about 34 years of age, and lived a peaceful life. He was much devoted to his family and gave much of his time to the interest of his wife and children. He made the remark that he didn't mind going as he had lived to see his children grown and that he knew they would care for his wife.

Funeral services were conducted at Liberty March 7, 1932 at 3 p. m., by the writer assisted by Rev. J. H. Mitehner, pastor of the Baptist church at Epsom. The body was placed in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Weldon and both of the children are members of Liberty. May God bless the bereaved family.

S. E. MADREN.

HOLLAND.

Mr. Jackson Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Holland, R. 2, Holland, Va., was accidentally killed by a tractor on March 5, 1932, in the 24th year of his life. The funeral was conducted at Holy Neck Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. W. M. Jay, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The music was furnished by the Holland quartet with a duet by Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Davidson. The burial was in the family cemetery.

The deceased had been a member of Holy Neck Church since his childhood. He leaves a father and mother, four brothers, Conway, Foy, John Thomas, and Kenneth Holland, all of R. 2, Holland, and six sisters, Misses Lucile, of Hopewell, and Kathleen, Myrtie May, Evelyn, Bernice and Viola Holland of R. 2, Holland, one uncle, H. J. Rawles, and three aunts, Mrs. W. R. Womble, of Whaleyville, Mrs. W. H. Britton of Suffolk, and Miss Effa Rawles of Whaleyville.

May our Heavenly Father comfort and sustain his grief-stricken loved ones.

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

ROBERTSON.

Eugene Robertson was born March 11, 1924, and passed to the better world February 28, 1932. He lacked 12 days being 8 years old. He leaves to mourn their loss a father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Obey Robertson, one brother, Milder, and two sisters, Gracie and Louise Robertson.

It is hard for parents to give up their children, and more so while they are yet so tender in life. Yet we know that God in His infinite wisdom is too good to make a mistake, and that He doeth all things well.

May God help his father and mother to cast their burden upon Him who said: "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

The funeral services were conducted from the home and the body placed in the home burying ground.

Stanley High On China.—

Stanley High, former editor of the Christian Herald, and now pastor of the First Congregational Church at Stamford, Conn., is scheduled to address the Congregational Club of New York at its dinner Monday evening. His subject will be "China's Crisis", and his address is awaited with deep and keen interest because he has been a student of this problem and for a time resided in that land where he was a secretary of the Methodist Episcopal board of foreign missions.

Alumni Meeting.—

The alumni meeting at Elon College since the last notice in this paper, was well attended by some of the leading alumni in this community. We had luncheon together and sat around the tables and discussed the future of Elon College. One of the most interesting discussions was concerning students for next fall. It was revealed that numbers of students have been sent to the college through the influence of men and women who are in the teaching profession. They come into personal contact with young people who are preparing for college and they naturally will influence them to attend Elon without any special effort except a conference with their parents. Now is the time for all lovers of our college to work for its future. Send names of prospective students to the Registrar.

Sherwood Eddy Campaign.—

It is a relief to turn from these comments on the terrible situation in Shanghai to Mr. Eddy's recent campaign. Within four and one-half months, he has made a campaign in 21 Chinese cities. The meetings were attended by a total of 193,905, there were 8,313 decisions of whom 64½ per cent elected Christianity, and 35½ per cent decided to be Christians. With the exception of 10,000 women attending special meetings, the major appeal of these campaigns was to men. The response that they made was encouraging. In Peiping it is true that communists made an uproar in one meeting. In no other place, however, did Dr. Eddy, though he always dealt frankly with communism and conditions in China, meet open opposition, and even in Peiping, as elsewhere, students gathered eagerly to hear him. In that city alone, 2,000 students attended each of six meetings held for them.

Chinese Christians.—

Chinese Christians in the danger zone have suffered with others. One instance will indicate something of the war methods followed by the Japanese forces. In the Fitch Memorial Church, one of the largest churches in Shanghai, about 30 Chinese, mostly women and children, had, on June 29th, gathered for safety. Firing was going on in front of the church. Finally in the afternoon a Japanese marine patrol of about 50 entered the church, naturally causing great fear. The young lad who opened the door was at once seized and carried away. A search revealed no bombs or anything else. Nevertheless the pastor, his wife, his son, his nephew, secretary and two servants were separated from the rest of the group and seized. Both the pastor and his wife were beaten repeatedly. They were finally bound and marched off. Though that occurred January 29th nothing has been heard of them since. The worst is feared. Such incidents could be multiplied.

Shanghai University Closed.—

In conversation with a Chinese lady student this week at the University of North Carolina, the information came to me that the Chinese did not want missionaries to impose Western civilization upon their country. They refuse to allow any schools to continue unless they register with the government and agree to teach approved courses. The government will not allow religious schools to continue to teach religion and the Bible in the schools by compulsion. Shanghai University is, perforce, closed under this ruling, as are all Christian schools in the northern part of the city. There is some doubt as to whether St. John's will open in the immediate future. It appears that their plans for registration have all failed. They are quite prepared to close if they cannot carry on unregistered. The whole trouble seems to be that the Bishop in charge of the University dogmatically wishes to make the Bible compulsory. They may teach the Bible in the school if they will register with the government, but this the Bishop refuses to do.

Prohibition Helps Trade.—

At the annual meeting of the Hartford, Conn., "Builders Exchange" last week, its president, Mr. Benard Lyon, said: "We hear much about the plentiful supply of liquor; but in the last five years 30,000 men have applied to our bureau yet none could be classed other than sober. Here are great numbers of unemployed, fighting the hardest kind of battle, but always courteous, understanding and sober! Once intoxication constituted the greatest evil in our trade. When weather stopped construction, men would flock to the saloons; and a superintendent, when the weather cleared, would have to send messengers to the bars to round up the gang. Now mothers dress up the children and dads take them to the 'movies' and there we page them." Most of the agitation for the repeal of the prohibition law seem to be politicians, or those who want the money that they hope to make by the return of the liquor traffic. Take the question out of the hands of politicians and submit it to the people as a non-political issue and the American people will never go back to conditions as they were before the nation went dry.

What Shall We Do?—

Shall we have a united pull to place four hundred students in Elon College this fall and work our college up to its full capacity for the service of the Church and the Kingdom or shall we run next year at half capacity? It all depends on the cooperation of all the members of the Christian Church and the friends of the college. The college is improving its financial condition as fast as the energy, wisdom and work of an untiring president can bring these things to pass, but unless he has the complete cooperation of all those who can assist, it will be more difficult for him to lead us to success. It will cost about as much to run the college at half capacity as it will to run at full capacity. The additional students that we can provide for in reaching four hundred would be the greatest source of income we could have through our patronage. If there are those who have been patronizing other schools for any reason during the past year from our friends and church membership, they might join the other forces of the church in helping to make our college the best possible by giving us their patronage this year and helping to make our college as good as the best.

Conditions in Japan.—

Some time last spring there came a report from Japan that the churches and Christian workers were participating more energetically in the evangelistic activities of the Kingdom of God movement than in the gospel schools and cooperative features of Mr. Kagawa's plan. Now the intelligence comes that this opinion needs revision, and we are reminded of the more than fifty peasant gospel schools which have been successfully conducted during the past year and a half throughout Japan. A fine balance of agricultural, social and religious instruction is imparted in these rural schools, and officials from the provincial government have cooperated largely with religious teachers, in making the courses of study of most value to the communities served. Another feature of the Kingdom of God program is the establishment of gospel night schools in Tokyo and other cities. The subjects taught in these schools are such as, "The life of Christ," "Old Testament and New Testament Studies," "Theology," "The Relation of Natural Science and Religion," "Sociology and Social Service," "Mutual Aid and Cooperation," "Comparative Religions," "Church Polity," "Sunday School Methods," "Methods of Evangelism," "Music," and the "Fine Arts of Religion."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Every man is his own ancestor, and every man is his own heir. He devises his own future, and he inherits his own past.—H. F. Hedge.

Rev. S. E. Madren, whose address has been changed from Elon College, N. C., to R. 1, Henderson, N. C., writes: "I am enjoying my work and field of labor just fine. The people are a pleasure to work with. My work is going well at present."

The Mission Secretary, J. O. Atkinson, had the privilege of preaching for the Wake Chapel congregation, Sunday, March 20th. The pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, is remaining out of the pulpit by order of his physician for a season, greatly desiring, as all of us do for him, that he will soon be back at his beloved work stronger in nerve and body for the service to which his undivided strength has been given through the years.

The Southern Christian Convention meets in annual session with our Burlington Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., Tuesday P. M., April 26th. This time it will be the Convention of the Southeast, the Christian and Congregational constituency working in the Convention for one common purpose. It should be a Convention of large attendance and interest, since our fellowship through the merger has been considerably broadened.

President Staley has been selected by the Program Committee of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly to deliver one of the leading addresses before that body at its next annual session in Asheville, N. C., June 16th to 19th. The entire evening, Thursday, the 18th, is given to him. His subject is "The Acropolis and Greek Culture." The Assembly will hear something fine, especially as the Doctor has just returned from his European travels; and Elon will be well represented.—The Sun, April 16, 1896.

Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Mission Secretary for the Congregationalists of the Southeast, was a welcome visitor at Elon the past week, sharing with Dr. L. E. Smith the work of preparing a program for the coming Convention of the Southeast, at Burlington, April 26th to 29th. Dr. Bloom reported a very pleasant and promising meeting of Christians and Congregationalists at Winston-Salem, Sunday night, March 20th. Rev. W. T. Scott was in charge of the service and expects to be permanently located in Winston-Salem soon after April 1st.

If the Easter offering for Missions was not taken on Easter Sunday, as in some churches it was not, it should be taken at the first possible service after Easter. We cannot believe that any pastor will neglect this all important matter, since the Convention and the Conferences have all requested such an offering at or about Easter, and that every member in every church and Sunday School be given an opportunity to make some contribution to Missions. This was never more essential than now. None can give largely, but all can give if opportunity is afforded.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, has been assisting the pastor, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., the past week. At last reports the meetings were well attended and the interest was deepening. Bro. Poythress is one of our most faithful and tireless pastors and evangelists, and the Lord seems to use him mightily in winning souls and building up the kingdom. Bro. Poythress is hopeful of his own work at South Norfolk, but at this time many of his members are unemployed and the strain on the anxious pastor is constant and heavy. Devoted pastors carry the burden of their congregations.

CONVENTION TO MEET IN APRIL.

The first session of the Southeast Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches, including the Southern Christian Convention, Incorporated, 30th annual session, and the Congregational Council of the Southeast Convention, Incorporated, will meet in its first regular session with the Burlington Christian Church, April 26th to 29th, inclusive. This will be a very important session of the Convention. In addition to settling questions that are already under consideration affecting the United Church, it will be necessary to plan carefully and wisely for the future.

It is, therefore, hoped that every delegate representing both communions will make it a point to be present for the opening session on Tuesday evening, and remain through the entire session. Members of either church who are not delegates are invited to attend and will be welcome to all sessions.

ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertaining church will undertake to furnish lodging and breakfast free to all delegates who may wish it, providing they will write Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor of the church, not later than April 20th, making requests for such entertainment. The Alamance Hotel, which is a good modern hotel, will make special rates to the delegates, offering a flat rate of $2.00 per person for all rooms where there is one in a room. With two in a room, single beds, the rate will be $1.50. This is a reduction off regular rates and it will be necessary for you to write Mr. Williams, proprietor, Alamance Hotel, Burlington, N. C., asking for special reservations.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

The Woman's Missionary Convention will meet Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, and will remain in session throughout the day.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S PROGRAM.

A special young people's program is being planned by the chairman of the Board of Religious Education, Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va. This program is to be inclusive and promotional. It will probably be held on the afternoon and evening of the last day—Friday—with a special program, banquet and a nationally-known speaker. Please make your plans to attend the Convention.

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD.

It seems to me that in this age we are not thinking very much of this theme or subject. We are a Christian nation, have, to a large degree, become infatuated with worldly things—things that we know will destroy our souls in hell. These things of the world, which are worldly altogether, are in places where you will not find the Christ of Calvary, except to lift a poor soul which is stooped in sin, out of the Devil's coops before He can save it.

Now we, as Christian, will never be able to bring a charge of evil against the world until we have first cleaned up our own life.

The Protestant Church of today is polluted entirely too much with worldly amusements. How can we, as Christians, ever expect to have any part in bringing sinners to the Lamb of Calvary?

With due respect and love for God's ministry, Jesus has something against it. This is hard to say, but nevertheless it is true, and Jesus has laid it upon my heart to say these words.

I am amazed at so many of our preachers indulging in the present-day pleasures—the theater, the pool halls, the bowling rooms, the rook parties, the bridge parties, and community houses. Nearly all of these enterprises are owned and operated by church members.

Can any good thing come out of these things I have mentioned? I challenge any one to show any real good for Christ that might be derived from any one mentioned.

No preacher can ever get any where preaching one thing and living and practicing another. God help us to be true to the trust reposed in us. For Christ's sake, let us be God's men, and God's women, and God's boys, and God's girls. That is the only way the church can ever help Christ win the world to himself.

The ministry is losing its power and influence, and, as the writer sees it, it is because we are not altogether true to our Heavenly Father.

God speed the day when the Christians will lay aside every weight and the sin that doth beset us that we may run the race that's before us, patiently. The righteous is a tree of life; he that winneth souls is wise.

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the council of the ungodly nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful; but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate night and day.

And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season, his leaf shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

The ungodly are not so. The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, and the way of the ungodly shall perish.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

UNION HOLY WEEK SERVICES of a unique character were held in the little town of Jupiter, Fla. Rev. Frederick Held, Congregational minister, and Rev. D. B. Sargent, pastor of the Methodist church, not only united in a daily service during Holy Week, but together visited every home in the whole region, inviting the people to attend the services and leaving a card with the topics and the place of the service, which alternated between the two churches. This served to develop good will between the two churches.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY NUMBER of the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, was of especial interest to the Southeastern fellowship. There was an interesting article entitled, "In the Mountains of Tennessee," by Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, of Chattanooga, and another article entitled, "Youth Serves Youth in Tennessee," by Rev. Edwin E. White, of Pleasant Hill. Both of these articles were of great interest. In addition there were news items in the regular news columns and also in the page edited by Dr. Eldredge, which were of special interest.

THE CONFERENCE OF THE CAROLINAS will hold its annual meeting at Raleigh, June 7th and 8th. This will be a joint meeting with the three Christian Conferences of North Carolina uniting in building the program, carrying it out, sharing in all deliberations, and, it is believed, adopting a constitution for the proposed "United Congregational Christian Conference of the Carolinas." This will be a very important meeting. It is requested that pastors of all Christian Churches, as well as Congregational, announce this meeting time, and place—June 7th and 8th, at Raleigh.

PROFS. VANCLEAVE AND BENNETT of Elon College, were recent visitors at the Jacksonville office. They were making a short Easter vacation trip through Florida. Miss Annie Campbell also was a recent visitor in the office on her way to her home in Winter Park for a week's vacation. Miss Campbell had a conference with Miss Coghill and others concerning the organizing of a Young People's Summer Conference for Georgia. Miss Campbell is in a way a product of the Florida Young People's Conference at Camp Immokalee, having been commissioned there for her first experience in Student Summer Service work.

THE EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY of Rev. Horace D. Herr was celebrated at the Edison Park Congregational Church in Ft. Myers. There has since been printed a little folder with the picture of the church and a Friendly Ballad addressed to the Cadets of Youth, written by Dr. Herr. It is entitled, "If I Were Seventeen Again," and shows the fine philosophy of life developed through the years. It is a fine message to young people. There was also printed beautiful words of appreciation addressed to the congregation previous to the reading of the poem. Dr. Herr has a fine record of long service in the ministry in Iowa prior to retiring and coming to Florida. He is a man of very scholarly mind and friendly personality. He and Mrs. Herr are greatly beloved in the Ft. Myers church and community.

THE SEMINAR QUARTERLY.

The Seminar Quarterly is a new publication issued under the auspices of the Seminar on Worship and also the Seminar on the Christian Message. It is published quarterly by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life. Single copies sell for ten cents and the annual subscription is twenty-five cents. Issue number two has recently come to our desk and it is an interesting and worthwhile publication. One of the features is a symposium on "My Gospel," being short articles by several of our Congregational-Christian ministers, among them being Dr. Elisha A. King, of Miami Beach, Fla.

ST. PETERSBURG CALLS DR. BEALE.

Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., who has been serving as interim pastor at the church at St. Petersburg, Fla., has been called to the pastorate of the church for one year. This church was left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Kerrison Juniper after a thirteen-year pastorate, Dr. Juniper going to become pastor of the First Church in San Francisco. Dr. Beale has won an enviable reputation for interim pastoral service, having served many of the leading churches of the country in that capacity since his retirement from full pastoral service in Milwaukee.

Dr. Beale's service during the past few months at St. Petersburg has won the enthusiastic approval and the devoted loyalty of all members of the church and congregation. During the season this large church has been filled with eager listeners for his messages and he has also delivered interesting weekday lectures which have drawn large numbers. In addition he has been a very fine force in the church's life, increasing the harmony and spirit of the church, meeting the difficult situation wisely and bringing the people to an increased faith and devotion to their church. These times are hard for churches without having to face the problem of pastoral changes, and discouragement is all too common. It has been a great blessing to the church to have a man of such faith and fine Christian spirit leading the worship and the work of the church. As a result the church has voted to ask Dr. Beale to continue as pastor of the church for one year and he has accepted this invitation. We will be absent, however, for quite a long period during the summer for which period the committee is making arrangements. Dr. Beale, in spite of the fact that he was ordained over fifty years ago, maintains a vigorous mind and a winsome personality, and his preaching is vital with the wealth of personal religious experience and human sympathy developed through the long years of a wonderful ministry.

PECANS FOR MISSIONS.

The planting of pecan groves for the Mission Cause is a very hopeful development in six churches of Southern Alabama. Three of the four churches of the parish of Rev. Nathaniel A. Long took the first step in giving the acre back of Christian Hill Church to the church for a pecan grove. The scheme of things here is attractive. The nice white church is surrounded by a grove of oak trees. Just back of it is the cemetery of the honored dead. Several ministers rest there. Beyond this is a garden where the women of the community have masses of beautiful flowers in the summer time, and last of all is the acre of pecan trees. The church on the highway is for the community, the pecan grove, in the near distance, is for the world work. What Rev. Samuel Long did for this church, the young people are doing for Blackwoods Church near Headland, where they cleared land belonging to the church and planted a pecan grove. This church has a nice church house and grove, a flower garden, a small cemetery, and now a pecan grove. It has also arranged to rent land for a crop of pecans to be raised for the benefit of the fine grand piano which the church has bought. New Hope Church at Clio is the third organization of the parish to plant pecan trees for missions.

The Antioch Church, at Andalusia, is also planting a number of pecan trees in several tracts for the Mission Cause. M. L. Thrasher, the pastor, is interesting a number of the C. E.'s each to furnish a tree for the grove. The trees will not be bearing for a few years, but should make a nice contribution to the cause ultimately. Wesley Chapel Church, R. F. D., Goshen, which is located in the little town of Henderson, has also started a pecan grove project. Liberty Church, Brantley, is the third church in this group to plant pecan trees.

ENTERTAINS COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Two hundred college men and women were entertained by Dr. and Mrs. J. Edward Kirby, United Church, Raleigh, N. C., recently, in honor of Mr. Walter H. Judd, of the American Board, Boston. It was a rare occasion. These young people came from all the State colleges of North Carolina. They comprised those who have definitely dedicated themselves to missionary work through the Student Volunteer Movement. It was one of the many things Dr. and Mrs. Kirby are doing in their forward-looking program with this progressive United Church. Mr. Judd in a letter to Mrs. Kirby afterward, says: "You are surely doing a courageous and forward-looking Christian work there." It is this kind of cordial and generous entertainment which gives heart and determination to young people who hear the call, see the need and respond with the zeal and the faith which is surety for the work of missions of the future. Many thanks to Dr. and Mrs. Kirby. Those two hundred young people will long remember this beautiful occasion which you made possible for them. To be in your home and to meet Mr. Judd was an inspiring event.

DOES EDUCATION PAY?

Does it pay an acorn to become an oak?

Does it pay to escape being a rich ignoramus?

Does it pay to know how to make life a glory instead of a grind?

Does it pay for a chrysalis to unfold into a butterfly?

Does it pay to add power to the lens of the microscope or telescope?

Does it pay to acquire a personal wealth, which no disaster or misfortune can wreck or ruin?

Does it pay to learn how to focus thought with power, how to marshall one's mental forces effectively?

Does it pay a diamond to have its facets ground, to let in the light, to reveal its hidden wealth of splendor?

Does it pay to have expert advice and training, to have high ideals held up to one in the most critical years of one's life?

Does it pay to open a little wider the door of a narrow life? to push out one's horizon in order to get a wider outlook, a clearer vision?

Does it pay to experience the joy of self-discovery, to open up the whole continent of possibilities in one's nature which might otherwise remain undiscovered? —Dr. Orison Sweet Marden in the New Success.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

In a very light-weight editorial, on the usually well-timed and weighty editorial page of the Greensboro Daily News, this paragraph is found in concluding a piece "Of Missionarying": "It is high time we made a real beginning of our charity at home, even if it demands the return of some of our foreign missionaries to help us." This rather surprising conclusion is reached in commenting upon some remarks, or writings of Rev. Francis Cox, of Raleigh, N. C., who has been in China and says that "the Chinese are now nursing hatred against Japan." The Greensboro News, editorially, in so far as we are able to make out, seems to hold that since missionaries have been in China for several years, they should have by this time so converted the Chinese that they would not any longer cultivate hatred against the Japanese. This is assigning the comparatively few missionaries, who have worked in China, a most gigantic task for a time so brief. Fact is that all our preaching here in the homeland, where we have been talking about "charity beginning at home" through countless decades, has not curbed our own hatred, and we yet indulge in war when occasion offers. But let that go as it may. What interests us is that even a brilliant newspaper man can pick up an outworn phrase, which is entirely a misfit, and use it as if it were fact, faith and logic. The paragraph quoted is built on two errors, the one about as senseless as the other:

1st. "It is time we made a beginning of our charity at home." This, of course, is pulled out of the Bible for use here, and one wonders how such a good phrase can be so distorted. Charity does begin at home. But, in heaven's name, how long will it be charity if it remains there? One uses that phrase and hears it used as if it meant charity begins at home and should not go away from home, and, to be charity, must stay at home. The opposite is true. Learning the alphabet, and how to spell and read a few words and sentences are the beginning of an education, but pray tell how much education one will ever get if one goes no farther than the alphabet and a few monosyllables. Charity begins at home. Education begins with the alphabet. But one fails to bear in mind the fact that it is only a beginning, and not an end.

2nd. But the most unkindly cut and the most senseless thrust of the editorial in the paragraph in particular is the suggestion "that missionaries be returned to help the work of charity." May heaven help us! The man who wrote that must think that the human race is a little lump sum of money off in a corner somewhere and the amount of that lump that said human race uses for Missions cannot be used for charity, and the only sum available for charity is out of that one lump. Maybe the writer of the Greensboro editorial is not aware of the fact that the most charitable people on this earth (and this is not any contribution to a Wednesday afternoon missionary meeting either), we say it with emphasis, that the most charitable people on earth, those who are most willing, most ready and most anxious at all times to hear the call of charity at home, are those who can feel the need also of their fellows a long way from home, and may lift up their eyes and hearts of compassion and have pity upon the people who suffer most even if they do live beyond one's own doors. The writer in the Greensboro News ought to know, for instance, that there were orphaned children in the lands where missionaries preach the gospel years before the missionaries were sent there, but until the missionaries went there were no such institutions there as orphans' homes, or houses of charity and benevolence and refuge. In those lands where the missionaries preach now, there are hundreds of orphans' homes, and they are there where the need is greatest, where poverty most abounds, and where the real orphan is without friend or father or mother. They are there by the hundreds since the missionary has gone there and preached the gospel of mercy and love and life, the gospel of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Hospitals by the hundreds have been built there, also leper's asylums, and asylums for the blind, homes of retreat and refuge for the infirm. And they have all sprung up there since the missionary went and preached the gospel of Him who said: "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." And the very churches, the very people who have sent the missionary there and have done the most to carry light into the dark places, and give the bread of life to souls that were dying without it, are the very churches and the very people who here at home have taken the lead, and do take the lead, in every movement for charity and benevolence and human uplift. We are told that even Homer nodded. Yes, the great do sometimes nod and take a nap. Even the Greensboro Daily News seems to have gone to sleep and dreamed one vague and idle dream, when that so-called editorial was being written. "Charity begins at home." But how long does it take it to begin, and how will it be charity if it stays where it begins? We wonder.

J. O. A.

"MY WORK IS DONE."

George Eastman, who had amassed millions and given liberally to benevolence and philanthropy, but who was known best by the Eastman Kodak and camera which he had made, wrote the words: "My work is finished. Why wait?" Then he ended his earthly career by self-inflicted death. Possibly the tragic end of no one in recent times has been more discussed, nor his parting words more frequently quoted than those of Eastman. There is one reason why this man ended his life as he did. Without question he looked upon work as the content and the end of life. Only a distorted vision and an unbalanced mind can arrive and live by such a conclusion.

One is ready to admit that work is a privilege and a real joy, and a big part of life, too much in fact in many lives. But work is a means, not an end. We work, as we walk and as we worship, with an end in view, hoping and expecting to reach some place. Only those who look at life in its material aspect can regard work as the whole aim and achievement in human existence. The world about us is both to improve and to enjoy. If work filled life, why did God create the glorious sunsets, the rich and rare colors of the rainbow, the beauty and the glory of growing things in hedge and field and forest? If work were the only end and aim in life, why art and music and poetry? Meditation, contemplation, relaxation, play, intellectual, moral and spiritual pursuits and diversions are parts of life, essential parts which really make life worthwhile and give it content. If work is all, then one may end it when one thinks one's work is done.

But there is a deeper question to which Mr. Eastman gave no heed. How did he know, how can any of us know, when our work is done. Why wait. Only man's Creator can tell when the work of a human being is done and when it is no longer necessary to wait. The fact is we may make a real contribution to life and to love by learning "to wait and murmur not." Moreover, we are commanded to "wait upon the Lord and He shall bring it to pass." It may be that when we poor, frail mortals have decided that our work is done, we are just beginning to do our best work and make our largest contribution to life and to the world. The meridian sun may fill the earth with light and heat, but we discover and behold the real glory, grandeur and gladness of the sun as it slowly, leisurely, waitingly sinks behind the western hills, sending out its glad gleams through the whole expanse of sky and earth. The full glory and beauty of some lives do not appear until those lives have quit fretting and worrying, and working and pushing and pulling and, with folded hands, not physically strong enough to work, now quietly and serenely think on and cultivate the better virtues and graces, and show the rest of us how to live.

George Eastman's life is a demonstration of how one may achieve worldly goods and possessions and yet reach a sad, tragic end. He had no religion, we are told, on which he could lean in his last years. He belonged to no church and sought no place of soul refuge and worship. He had never married and had no loved ones about to cheer and comfort him in his old age. His nearest relative was a niece who lived many miles away. And so finding nothing now to live for, no fixed religious belief to support him, no love as husband and father to stay and steady him, he becomes impatient and cries out: "Why wait?" Well, on the other hand, why not wait? All nature asks that question, all sound philosophy and good religion, the three of them together, inquire why not wait until the summons come calling to a better place and a happier world?

THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The announcement that this Convention will meet in Burlington, N. C., on the evening of April 26th, as the guest of the Burlington Christian Church, of which Dr. G. O. Lankford is pastor, suggests several things of importance to the work of the Convention. The total number of delegates elected by the Conference as found in the Annual is 146. Now it is very important for all these delegates, an equal number of ministers and laymen—73 of each—to make their arrangements to attend this important meeting. The presumption is that all ministerial delegates will attend and, if regular lay delegates cannot attend, they should secure the attendance of their alternates. No more important meeting of this Convention has been held in the seventy-five years of its existence, since the organization at Union Christian Church in North Alamance County in 1856. It has done a wonderful work in these seventy-six years, and a great obligation rests upon it in the Burlington session.

The major problems of this meeting will be to work out a solution of the Elon College question. This will require the combined wisdom and united effort of the entire body, and that means a great opportunity to demonstrate faith and courage. Doubt as to the future of Elon should not enter the mind of a single delegate; but thanks for its past history and service should increase faith for the future and loyal support on the part of the Conference, churches, and delegates, and even the entire membership of the Convention. If we put more into the Institution, liberal-hearted people of means will help us.

Alamance is a historic county. The first battle of the Revolutionary War was fought in that county—"The Battle of Alamance." If any reader doubts this, turn to pages 400-401, volume 3 of Bancroft's History of the United States and read the history of the battle between Tryon and the Regulators, May 17, 1771. It was a memorable day in the history of this county. Elon College is located in Alamance County, and not many miles from the monument that marks the spot of this first battle. W. W. S.

THE POVERTY OF THE PRESENT HOUR.

(Note.—Economists, civic engineers, politicians and statesmen are trying to explain to us the cause and relief of the present depression. There are men of God, however, who interpret present conditions in the light of moral and spiritual factors. A correspondent, deeply interested and spiritually concerned, writes the editor this paragraph in a personal letter.—J. O. A.)

"We are praying that the Church universal may be awakened and aroused from that spirit of indifference toward things spiritual. Seemingly, they hear their 'only hope with a senseless wonder and seem satisfied with a show of things.' And this attitude is translated into our mission program which has no passion, no sacrifice, to speak of. 'Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus' (Phil. 2:5), must become the text motto of the men of God if the missionary program shall conquer the apathy of the Church, for his was a mind of compassion which had in it more than pity or sympathy. 'When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.' (Matt. 9:46.) 'Where there is no vision the people perish.' (Prov. 29:18.) I like the original Hebrew translation better. 'Where there is no vision the people are naked.' God knows this is true, both physically and spiritually. The poverty of this present hour can be attributed to only one thing, in my estimation—the Church just lacks any vision, the people are naked and the end is not here. 'Oh God! give us a compassion which moves through a vision which is from Thee.'"

CLASS PRESENTS ORGAN.

By W. B. TRUITT, Teacher.

The world is so full of disappointments that if it were not for faith and hope and love, the wheel of life would be sadly out of balance. Comprehended within this last and greatest virtue are friendship, companionship and pleasant associations.

It has been my profitable privilege to have been associated intermittently for about 24 years and constantly for the last 12 years with the Philathea Class of our Sunday School, as teacher. This association has meant much in my life. When I mention that I married and have continued to live with one member for almost 20 years, you can realize how I have, to a certain extent, grown up with the class. And the association has been profitable to me from many angles. It has compelled me to search the Scriptures more diligently, and through that search learn how to commune with God, and through that communion to find the greatest of all human blessings—peace.

A good many years ago, some member of the class, I know who it was, suggested accumulating some money for some purpose, the idea being that such money might ultimately be used toward the construction of a new church building, or for some of its equipment. And so by nickels and dimes, and by dint of perseverance, the grand total of $1,000 became, through a period of years invested in building and loan stock, and another $500 of such investment started. The idea of a pipe-organ for the new church building had in the meantime, been gradually taking root. When it became apparent that, on account of parsonage investment, a new church building was very indefinite, the knowledge that hoarded money brings no pleasure, caused the class to determine on definite action.

The March 1929 monthly meeting of the class is memorable for at that time the decision was made. The teacher had made no recommendation whatever, for the members had always been so considerate to follow his suggestions and the installation of a pipe-organ being rather a sizeable proposition it was thought best to let the members make their own decision and then to lend every possible encouragement.

To attempt to give credit individually for the accomplishment would be almost equivalent to calling the roll. Almost every member helped, and at least 50 per cent were enthusiastic. But it seems fitting to mention at least two names, not however, to the disparagement of others too numerous to mention, and who in some instances, worked just as hard.

Mrs. R. L. Caviness became president of the class at the same meeting at which the organ proposition was launched and successfully led the work. She became "organ-minded," and could talk no other subject whatsoever. At work or at play at home or away, in mountain or at seashore, her one topic was "organ." Without her enthusiasm the undertaking would have dragged.

But due credit must also be given to her successor Miss Rena Cole who joined the class after the organ was installed, and, taking over the leadership after the enthusiasm had partly burned itself out, and when those last hard payments had to be met, led the work in surprising manner to completion.

It is necessary, also, to mention the liberal aid extended by the Ladies' Aid Society. Without solicitation that Society donated $500 in one lump sum to help in paying for the organ. This donation is mentioned with the sincere thanks of the Philathea Class.

Friends from outside the church were liberal, contributing $500. Their names are published on the bulletin board and will be kept as part of the records of the class.

To any and all of these friends from without the church organization the class wishes to publicly extend sincere thanks.

I would not bore you with statistics but inasmuch as just a few members of the church thought that the organ was a mistake and would cripple the church finances the following statistics are particularly interesting.

The organ cost installed, $3,665.57. From where did this money come?

1. From the Philathea Class treasury, $1,949.57—54 per cent.

2. From direct donations of class members, $431.00—11 per cent.

3. From the Ladies' Aid Society $500.00—14 per cent.

4. From outside contributions, $500.00—14 per cent.

5. From church members, not including class members, $285.00—8 per cent.

The class as a whole, and as individual members thus contributed 65 per cent to the organ fund.

Did the organ hurt the church finances? The answer is that during the 2 years of payments, including the lean years of 1930 and 1931, our current church debt was reduced from $3,203.25 to $1,959.20, as of February 29, 1932, or $1,244.05.

During the same lean period our capital debt on parsonage was reduced through investment by the sum of $2,736.00, as follows:

By the Ladies' Aid Society.....$ 832.00
By the church treasurer..... 1,904.00

$2,736.00

I have never known any sizeable undertaking in our church to proceed as smoothly as this organ proposition. Truly it was a large undertaking for a ladies' class. But it is accomplished. Every payment was met when it came due. There were no extensions asked for at any time. There was no cry of "depression." True, on the last payment, on account of some seemingly necessary delay in collection of pledges the class had to draw heavily on another fund not intended for the organ. Incidentally when these pledges are paid in the Philathea Class may possibly desire to go further and add certain stops and pipes to make the instrument more complete and melodious.

Being a Sunday School teacher makes it necessary to stop and draw the lessons:

1. Any individual or organization can accomplish anything that he or she or it has faith to undertake.

2. No individual or organization can be worth while which does not undertake in faith beyond present vision.

3. No larger organization can fail to benefit by the faithful undertakings of one of its subsidiaries.

This is a happy day for every member of the Philathea Class and for its teacher. The job is done! The organ is paid for!

It was not sponsored however for the glory of a class but for the glory of God. The organ is the one musical instrument above all others for a church. On it jazz cannot be successfully played. It is the musical instrument for spiritual uplift. Its tones flow into the listener's very soul, if he will but heed. And as you and I grow a little more in grace, we shall realize that when the organ begins to give forth its melody it is time for silence, for meditation, for prayer, for worship; that it is the time for us to turn our weary selves away from the cares of our lives, and seek God even as he may be found.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Science is useful as long as it works in the field of known facts; but when it goes out into the field of imagination, it often draws conclusions that confuse or weaken faith in the truth. A recent discussion by "Professor Ernest J. Opik, of the Tartu University Observatory, Esthonia, at the dedication of the astrophotographic building of the Harvard College Observatory, startled his hearers by suggesting that the age of the universe had been grossly overestimated." He said, "observed facts indicated the present universe could hardly have existed longer than 3,000 million years, an estimate that represents an enormous reduction in the conception of the age of the universe held by many scientists." Prof. Opik pointed out that a survey of meteorites and a measurement of their ages by the most newly developed methods, had led Prof. Paneth of Konigsburg, to estimate their ages at no more than a billion years." He said the estimates of the earth's age did not run higher than 2,000 million years. Then he turned to the sensational discovery in the astronomical world, the fact that the spiral nebulae are apparently receding from our galactic system at incredible speed—as though the universe were exploding. Their distance at the present would indicate that they could not have been traveling more than a few billion years. From these facts he inferred that not much more than 3,000 million years have elapsed since the spiral nebulae, the stars and star dust, were born out of the original parent system.

Prof. Arthur Holmes, of Durham University, an authority on the age of our planet, described recent investigations that placed the age of rocks on the earth at 1,800,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 years. Yet he stated in the beginning of his address a return to the idea that the universe was created all at once as set forth in the Bible. Perhaps these scientific statements are difficult to make plain to readers of this letter the origin and age of the universe; but I have a theory of creation derived from Genesis, the first chapter.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." (Gen. 1:1, 2.) Creation, in my thought of it, was first in the mind of God, as a building is in the mind of an architect, a painting in the mind of an artist, or a poem in the mind of a poet; but it had not yet taken material existence. It was, as the second verse says, "without form and void." It did not, in the beginning, exist except in the divine mind. Then He took six days in putting into material reality His creation. 1. The first day He created light, and divided the light from the darkness. 2. The second day He created Heaven. 3. The third day, the earth and the seas. 4. He placed two lights in the firmament, one for the day and the other for the night. 5. All life in the waters and on the earth fish, fowls, and beasts. 6. He made man in His own image and put him in charge of the earth and all that it contains. Then God rested on the 7th day, blessed and sanctified it and, later, commanded man to work six days and rest the seventh.

The Bible is the oldest book, the simplest book, the profoundest book, goes deeper, reaches farther and blesses more people, than all other books. As long as science works in the field of facts, it enlightens, blesses, and helps mankind; but when it goes into the field of imagination it confuses man, interferes with religious faith and simple obedience to the word of God—the Bible. The Bible is the most reliable Book in the world: "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." (Matt. 5:18.)

W. W. STALEY.

AN INSIDIOUS ARGUMENT.

The last issue of THE SUN (March 17th) carried a pointed article by Dr. Clarence True Wilson entitled, "The Most Insidious Heresy." Although insisting that he concerns himself with heresy only if forced to do so, Dr. Wilson makes haste to tell his readers that "The subtle error in the Methodist Church is the defective program of the religious education movement."

Under the apparent supposition that members of the Congregational-Christian fellowship ought to be informed of this "subtle error," Dr. Wilson's message is released through THE CHRISTIAN SUN. May I, therefore, reply to Dr. Wilson's indictment of religious education.

In his spare time from promoting the interests of prohibition, Dr. Wilson becomes concerned over the loss in his denomination's membership, and rightly sets up a search for the source of the cause. Religious education has, of late years, received a larger consideration on the part of his church, although only a marginal amount of time or support, when viewed in relative terms. This new-comer is at once made the goat upon which to saddle all the trouble in the ecclesiastical household.

Suppose Dr. Wilson had found that church membership, to say nothing of finances, had greatly increased. Is it reasonable to suppose that he would have bestowed upon religious education the full credit? Hardly. He would no doubt point out that a mere coincidence is not sufficient ground for so important a conclusion. He would hardly want any one to say that inasmuch as prohibition had absorbed a good deal of churchmen's time and money, pre-occupation with prohibition was the cause of the loss in church membership.

But let us look further. It is a known fact that for at least the last generation not less than seventy-five to eighty per cent of the church's new members have been received through the channels of the church school. This percentage has not, so far as is known, suffered a decline. On the contrary, there is some basis for asserting that the church school has added an even larger ratio of new members during the past decade. Without assuming that the processes of religious education are beyond reproach, it is nevertheless unconvincing to conclude that if only the church school had not received too much attention, the church membership would not have declined.

Many a minister who has allowed religious education no quarter in his own ecclesiastical garden, and who has unwaveringly preached conversion of the acceptable brand, knows all too well that his own flock has not experienced the usual increase in recent years. Many a minister has finished his "annual meeting" only to admit that the "visible results" consisted for the most part in reviving those "in good and regular standing."

I invite Dr. Wilson to show that churches which have "outlawed" the church school as an agency of evangelism have enjoyed numerical gain over that of churches that have devoted themselves to a constructive program of Christian education.

Dr. Wilson's chief animus is directed against what he calls a false emphasis in religious education. "It has made salvation a personal achievement, rather than the acceptance by faith of a gift from God. . . . The one says Christ came down from heaven to bring a gift to man; the other teaches that religion is man's achievement through religious education. . . . Give us converted and consecrated Christians, and then a religious education to fit them for service."

The basic trouble here is that Dr. Wilson theoretically disjoins what in actual life are inseparable. The epistle of James says in plain language that faith without works is dead. The farmer who, through faith alone—assuming that such a state could rightly be called faith—expects to reap a harvest is doomed to disappointment. And productive effort is possible only when reinforced and sustained by faith in the possibility of reaping a crop. In sum, a harvest is always the combined result of both working and believing.

So it is with the person who would be religious. Anything more than pseudo-faith must surely interweave itself inseparably with such efforts as one's deepest insight and conviction may dictate. It is not one or the other, but both, and both united in one and the same process. Those who, for example, say that they have faith that God will not allow people to starve during this depression, and who in this resignative mood make no effort to feed the hungry, do not have the root of faith in themselves. More still, they are a menace to the real faith of others. And it is more than a theory that those who sacrificially share their bread with those who are starving are living epistles of faith. It is a caricature to call this mere human effort.

Under a one-or-the-other view of faith and works, Dr. Wilson proceeds to score religious education as being humanistic. If religious education be circumscribed in such fashion as Dr. Wilson suggests, then without doubt something more is needed. But who in his right mind makes such an unfounded claim? To be sure, one may always find some person whose insight is so stigmatized as to render him an undisciplined crank. But what type of service does not furnish its quota of this sort? Only the indiscriminate person would indict a whole movement just because some particular individual in its ranks had talked foolishly.

When one conceives Christian education in its full significance, however, one refuses to agree with Dr. Wilson that the only function of Christian education is to "fit them (persons) for service" after "conversion" has taken place. Why after? Upon Dr. Wilson's presupposition, what may religious education do before conversion takes place? If, as in the heyday of revivalism, conversion should not occur until middle adolescence, what might Christian education be expected to do for the individual during his first fifteen years of life?

It is at once clear that Dr. Wilson's trouble comes from separating factors that inevitably compose one creative process. It is not Christian education after; it is Christian education first and last. But it is Christian education whose central purpose is fulfilled only when persons are being "born again," not once but as many times and as often as the church is vital enough in its fellowship to convict one another, including those already in the church, of sin. The earlier in life that this process of rebirth can get started the better. And it will be a sign of growth in grace if, under progressively higher demands, this experience of being born again should recur again and again throughout life. H. S. SMITH.

WORK OF THE GENERAL CONVENTION.

(The Southern Christian Convention meets in Burlington, N. C., this year. We wonder how many remember the Convention which met there in 1896. To them, as to others, this article published in the SUN of April 16, 1896, may be interesting.):

We have from time to time endeavored to interest our people in some of the leading questions that will come up before our next General Convention that meets in Burlington in about a month or two (the Executive Committee has not fixed the date yet). If we are to judge, however, from the little that has been said about them through the correspondence columns of our church paper, we must conclude that not much interest has been awakened. As a people, our great fault has been—and, indeed, we are not rid of it yet—that we are too slow to take hold of any new progressive enterprise, not because it is progressive, but because it is new. Not a half dozen men have even so much as mentioned publicly anything that they expect the Convention to do. We sincerely trust there has been a great deal more thinking than talking—if not, the Convention ought not to be anything. We don't believe in jumping at conclusions; and yet, that is just what a great majority of us do. A few men may carefully and prayerfully study a question for a whole year, finally come to some decision as to what is best to be done, and present it to the general body for ratification, only to see it killed by those who have, perhaps, never thought of it before, and yet presume to set up judgment against it with all the assurance of one who has given his life-study to it. They say they are not ready for it—they don't want to go too fast. "Ready for it," indeed; how can they be, if they can't be induced to think? Many a good measure has been killed by "votes" rather than by thought; and we fear that in our General Convention we will find the same thing to be true, unless a few more of us do some fast thinking between now and then.

Biblical Chair.

There is the establishment of a Biblical Chair in Elon College, that we will be called upon to consider. How many have considered this question enough to discuss it and vote upon it intelligently? We have already given our views and suggestions in an editorial; and a few others have mentioned it. We believe that it can be established. The need for it becomes more and more patent every day, and we want to see it established. We are not so wedded to our plan of attaining it but that we can and will support somebody else's plan, if it seems better. Let everybody be thinking about it.

Young Ladies' Dormitory.

An effort may also be made to lay plans for the building of a Young Ladies' Dormitory at Elon College—and, indeed, if the Convention could do nothing more it will have done a great work. The growth of the college makes this an absolute necessity; and it ought to be erected at once. We want to hold out every inducement possible to get and hold our girls at Elon. We have, it is true, already a goodly number of them there; but if we had a dormitory fitted up with all the modern conveniences, nicely furnished, and economically managed, we could soon double the number of our young lady students. Certainly, it will cost us something, but it will yield us far more. We may not be able to make it as commodious and imposing as we want it now, but we can build it so that it can be added to and beautified later on. We trust that somebody will suggest a plan for its erection.

The Orphanage.

Another enterprise that we have been talking about for several years is an Orphanage—and we need that, too. This, we believe, could be established and run at a comparatively small cost. Everybody will contribute something to such a charitable and merciful work as this.

Grouping of Churches.

Some of our ministers are anxious to have the churches in the various Conferences so grouped that regular pastorates may be established. They want groups of churches to come together and call a pastor, just as the members of individual churches do now. The object of this, they claim, is to lessen the traveling expenses of pastors, to locate the pastor in his immediate field of work, and to give him better support. This question will come before the Convention.

These are some of the most important questions that we will have to meet; and it is every man's duty to come prepared to meet them, not with prejudice and personal interest but with clear judgment, unbiased minds, and an earnest desire for the general good of the church.

There is yet time for a discussion of any of them through the columns of the SUN. Let us hear from you.

MISSIONARY RALLIES MEET.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father, out of the night we come to thee. May it be as new creatures into the new day. With the passing hours of sleep grant thou to have closed upon time every page that would make us ashamed. Help us to appreciate the receptivity of the pages unwritten, and by their very blankness and cleanness may we be led to know that all the light and hope of the world is ours to embrace and occupy for our Lord Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

THE DOLLAR PLAN.

This plan proposes that each individual in the church, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor or Missionary Society be asked to contribute a dollar by laying aside TEN CENTS per week for ten weeks to terminate by June 30th. In the Easter offering through the envelopes some may have given in a lump sum all they plan to give for Missions during the Mission period; but we are sure that many did not. These and all, who will, are asked, through the "Dollar Plan," to accept a coin card, which will be furnished by the Mission Secretary to any who will receive them, and this coin card has ten pockets, each for a dime. By placing in one of these pockets a dime each week, say Saturday night or Sunday morning, for ten weeks, the dollar will be the result. Then at the end of the ten weeks, the one in the school, church or society, who has kept the names of those taking the coin cards, will call the roll and a consecration service will be held and the money sent in through the Treasurer to the Mission Secretary.

In 1931 our receipts for Missions fell off tremendously. Similar shrinkage will be inevitable in 1932 unless we learn individually, day by day, to deny ourselves for the sake of our Lord. The "extra dollars" laid up by saving a dime at a time will help to counteract the tragic results of this decrease. Collected in dime coin cards, brought together in an appropriate service of dedication and reported accurately and promptly through your church to the Mission Secretary, these dollars will mean in the aggregate a tremendous "lift" for our Lord's work through Missions, without interfering with the regular giving of the churches. Please note that success of this "Dollar Plan" depends upon what each local church and each individual does with it.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS FOR APRIL.

By MRS. W. M. JAY, Editor.

WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

These programs are on India, taken from the booklet, "India Today." We would suggest that before you enter upon these programs that you study carefully the suggestions given in the Introduction on page three of the booklet, then you will be much better prepared to carry out whatever part you may select from the different chapters. Chapter 1—Our Neighbor India. Chapter 2—How Shall We Help India? Chapter 3—India in Transition. Chapter 4—What India Needs. The booklet, "India Today," may be secured from American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. The price is ten cents.

(It might be well to get at least two copies of these program booklets.)

Test of a good program—It shall provoke thought; make a deposit of facts; arouse to activity.

Suggestions:

Get many to help in the preparation and work for each meeting. Mrs. Cronk once said at Northfield: "You never hear a woman say a meeting was poor if she took part." One person may arrange in advance for assignments.

One may prepare a definite list of things the church needs to pray for, in connection with the topic, then type and distribute the list at the meeting.

One may be sponsor to work up attendance, provide publicity, and see that many are invited.

Three people may be asked to report something they have heard recently about India, from the radio, an address, or magazines.

Much depends upon a proper atmosphere for the successful meeting. A very large map of India may add toward a sympathetic attitude. Let there be few preliminaries in the way of business.

India prints, maps, brasses, or curios will add artistic atmosphere. Some family may be able to lend them.

Some of India's great poems, such as those by Tagore, Tilak, or Tukaram, may be used as readings. Books and material may be borrowed from the Loan Library of the American Board, for two weeks, free, except for postage.

PROGRAM I.

"OUR NEIGHBOR INDIA."

Hymn—"This Is My Father's World."

Leader's Introduction.

Talk—"Land of India."

Solo—"In the Secret of His Presence," written by an Indian Christian.

Talk—"India's Ancient Culture."

Address—"Our Mission Stations."

Leader's Summing-up.

Reading—"Neighbors," Luke 10:25-37.

Hymn—"Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," (to be sung or read.)

Prayer for India, and for us, her Christian neighbors.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

This is the time for the Society to present a pageant. Have this at the church hour and take a special offering for Missions. The pastor may have charge of a short worship program before the pageant, or it may be led by one of the society members.

WILLING WORKERS.

Topic—"Open Windows."

Theme—"Service."

I. Worship Period.

1. Call to worship. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."
2. Song—"Lift Your Glad Voices."
3. Scripture—Luke 24:1-12.
4. Prayer—Thanking God for the Easter season and what it means to boys and girls.
5. Offertory.
6. Poem—(Select some poem on Easter and give to one of the members to recite. Do this before time of meeting so it can be prepared.)
7. Special music.
8. Talk—(The leader should carefully pre- the last chapter of "Open Windows," reviewing briefly the first five chapters, correlating the whole with the Easter idea, that Jesus rose for boys and girls in every land and of all races. Have a picture, "The Hope of the World," placed so all can see, and around this your talk can be most effectively woven.)
9. Song—"What a Friend We Have in Jesus."
10. Benediction.

Poster VI. White background. Use pictures of Japanese house scene, in center of poster. Write at the top: "We Look at Japan."

"FRANCIS E. WILLARD."

By MISS LOIS RABEY.

It is appropriate that we consider at this time the life of Frances E. Willard, the best-loved woman in America. She does not speak from a remote period, when customs and problems were far different from those today, but she lived in the life-time of many who live today.

Frances Willard was a pioneer in many ways. She lived in a pioneer period, having been born in Churchville, New York, on September 28, 1839. Soon afterwards her parents moved to Oberlin, Ohio, and her father taught in Oberlin College. This college life was soon broken by the failing health of her father. Then they moved to Janesville, Wis. They remained here until the children were grown, and the interests of Frances in the University brought them to Evanston, Ill.

In her ambitions Frances was a pioneer. College education was not as universal seventy years ago as it is today, particularly in the case of women. Nevertheless, she was determined to secure a complete education and fit herself for a life of usefulness.

Miss Willard was first an educator. She gave fifteen years of her life to teaching. She taught her first school during the summer vacation in the little "brown nut" school-house and she was very happy in this work. When she graduated from college at the age of twenty-one, she wanted to teach, but her father did not approve of it. The next fall she obtained a position away out on the plains and she was very successful although she had many problems. She and a girl friend established a Sunday School in the little school-house and today this is represented in a prosperous Methodist Church in what is now River Forest, one of the little suburbs of Chicago.

More years of teaching followed, part of the time in the public schools of Evanston. While in the teaching profession, one of her teacher friends invited her to go on a two-year tour of Europe, all expenses paid. She hesitated to accept it at first as her father had died but a few months before and she felt that she could not leave her mother. She finally accepted and these were delightful years for her. She came back "with a picture gallery in her heart" far exceeding the riches which crowded the most marvelous galleries of Europe. While in her mind surged one burning question: "What can I do to better the condition of women everywhere?" But for the question the answer was not yet.

Shortly after returning to America she became head of the Evanston College for Ladies, being the first woman president of a college in America. Here as elsewhere she was faithful.

In the taking up of the tasks of life the pioneer spirit continued to prevail. As a teacher she proposed new measures, some of which even today are not universally adopted, but are still considered new. She favored student self-government in the university, and was severely criticised for her liberalism. In spite of success and brilliant prospects in the educational and literary field, she finally struck out into an uncertain career as a champion of social reform. To those who questioned her wisdom in the choice of this venturesome work in preference to the more staid educational career which awaited her, she responded: "What greater art than to restore the image of God to faces that have lost it?"

The story of her life since that eventful year of 1874, has become common property of the English-speaking world. She had a wonderful religious experience and after that she longed for a more unrestricted field of usefulness. This she found in a Crusade which was slowly rising against the terrible dragon which imperiled the earth and was destroying thousands of human lives and millions of dollars' worth of property every year.

She thought that she could succeed in helping to slay this dragon, this loathsome, hideous fiend, Strong Drink, and she would be doing a service as noble as any that had been rendered in thirty or more crusades that had been waged to make the world better. She read everything she could find bearing upon this movement and then she came to the East to confer with its leaders. After seeing the slums in New York City her heart was filled with pity and after attending the Gospel Temperance Campmeeting held at Old Orchard, Me., her heart and soul were alive to the burning need and righteousness of the Temperance Cause.

Miss Willard's greatest achievements was in the organization and direction of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. She was a born organizer and she saw clearly that what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union most needed was a leader and she felt that she was eminently fitted to step into the place, but one thing stayed her hands, and that was it required money to be a reformer. She had so little and she had to help care for her mother. She turned to the Bible and found these words: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed."

She was not yet fully decided. Her brother urged her to stick to her educational work and do what she could in her own place as he feared she would suffer for the very necessities of life. She received many offers for new positions. One of the best of these was an offer of Lady Principal in one of the most select schools for young women in New York City, at a salary of $2,400. With it, in the same mail, came a letter from Chicago begging her to accept the presidency of that branch of the W. C. T. U. She accepted the latter with the determination to dedicate her life to the cause of humanity. She made the urgent appeal to the best that was in women everywhere and together they would wind the White Ribbon, with its lofty ideals, around the globe.

Her sacrifices at the beginning were heroic. "Alone we can do little," she said. "Separated we are the units of weakness; but aggregated we become batteries of power. Agitate, educate, and organize; these are the deathless watchwords of success." She resolved to speak in every city in the United States having a population of 10,000 or more and in the course of twelve months she addressed about 4,000 audiences. She put machinery in motion that eventually resulted in the enactment of laws requiring the study in the public schools of the effect of alcohol, stimulants and narcotics. Her interest finally took her beyond the limits of her own country, and she organized the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, thus carrying the battle against alcohol to the farthest corners of the globe.

Miss Willard literally wore herself out in her public work. She passed away in her fifty-ninth year in New York City, February 18, 1898. At her death she was the "Best Loved Woman in America" and president of the W. C. T. U. of the World.

So significant was the work that Frances Willard accomplished that seven years after her death she was publicly recognized by the leaders of the nation. In the Capitol building in Washington a hall has been set apart for the commemoration of the outstanding figures of our history, each state being permitted to select the two persons from among its citizens that have contributed most to the world. On February 15, 1905, there was unveiled there a statue of Frances Willard, the first and thus far the only woman to be selected for that honor.

In surveying the far-reaching achievements of Frances Willard, we instinctively ask for the secret of her success, for the power that motivated her life. She had the love of God and of humanity in her heart.

Then there was her persistence in work and her heroic sacrifice to duty. No one enjoyed life more than she and yet so many will not lay all aside and sacrifice everything in order to accomplish the work that is before them.

At least once a year we should give ourselves a little time to meditate on the influence that Frances Willard continues to have on the women of the world. New and lasting memorials are being erected to her. The world is dotted with these memorials in homes, churches, schools, hospitals, community centers, social settlements and countless young men and women who bear her name. But after all the real memorial of greatest value to humanity today is the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, for the triumph of which she worked and sacrificed to the end of her earthly career.

THE SECRET OF POWER.

"Now shalt thou see what I will do."

Many priceless secrets have been lost. As a result, the world is today impoverished. But the loss of the secret of power with God and men, has resulted more disastrously than any other. That it may be speedily recovered by the servants of Christ, in this time of grave crisis, should be the longing desire and earnest prayer of God's people. Its recovery will mean the revival of the Church, the salvation of sinners, and the glory that is due to the worthy name of the Lord Jesus.

D. L. Moody went up and down this and other lands, exemplifying and preaching this secret of power. From the time of his own infilling with the Holy Spirit, his work for Christ became marvelously successful. He searched the Scriptures to know what were his privileges in Christ, and did not rest until the power of Christ rested upon him. At that time, the men of the Bible were his constant spiritual companions. A like study of their experiences will prove beneficial to every Christian worker.

Take Moses, for example: Moses was eighty years of age before he learned this secret of power, the difference between his working for God and God working through him. Consequently, with all his superlative qualifications, his Divine commission, his wisdom and devotion, Moses failed because he did not wholly rely upon the Lord. This is manifested in his impassioned prayer, after his disappointing visit to Pharaoh: "Since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered thy people at all." (Exodus 5:23.)

How much Moses depended upon himself appears when we hear the Lord's response to that prayer. The Lord said unto him: "Now shalt thou see what I will do." (Exodus 6:1.)

The "I" of Moses and the "I" of God, came into sharp contrast. The "I" of Moses was finite, the "I" of God was infinite. Moses never fully realized his own inability and God's ability until that hour. When his resources had failed, God was only at the beginning of His. From that day forward, it was no longer "I", but Jehovah.

What a difference there is between what God can do through us and what we can do for God! The things that are impossible with men, are possible with God. May our lives, like that of Moses, become blessed commentaries on the text, "Now shalt thou see what I shall do."—Commission Prayer League.

On February 18th, at 7:00 P. M., forty young women of the Burlington Christian Church Sunday School met in the church dining hall for the annual banquet of their Sunday School class. This class has been organized for nearly twenty years. Special honor guests at the banquet were several charter members of the class. Mrs. Walter R. Sellars has been the teacher of this class of the young ladies of the Sunday School during the lifetime of the class. As a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Sellars and the wonderful influence upon the lives of the members of the class, she has been made teacher of the class for life. Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor of the church, who is just recovering from a recent operation, addressed the banqueters briefly. Stunts and music were enjoyed in addition to "talks" and "food."

The Southern Christian Convention has been invited to meet with the Burlington Christian Church for its regular session during the last of April of this year. Plans are included in the Convention program for a special young people's session. Officers of Youth Fellowship are shaping plans for a banquet for the youth of the church for one evening of the Convention. Ample plans will be made to care for any young people who may care to attend, in addition to those who will be at the Convention. Those who wish to register their desire to attend this banquet and the special young people's program may write to Herman N. Truitt, President of Youth Fellowship, Glen Raven, N. C., registering for the banquet.

Florida Young People join in making an offering for World Friendship at Easter time. Young people throughout the Congregational-Christian Church set this as a definite goal of work for this season of the year. Easter—the time of supreme sacrifice.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, for several years with the Board of Christian Education of the Christian Church, and now working with Congregational young people in Florida, sent the following letter to the young people in her State:

"Dear Friends:

"I feel sure that you, and many members of your Society, will be interested in the Dollar Plan which the enclosed leaflet and coin card explain.

"It is an emergency call for help. The 'Repression,' which most of us know all about, has meant that our church giving has fallen off so that there is much actual need among some of our missionaries in the home and foreign fields. We can do much now, though, to prevent schools from closing down, missionaries from being returned to this country, and other curtailment of our work, if ALL of us will help a little.

"The plan is to have just as many individuals—children, young people, and adults—as care to, to take one of these coin cards and make a contribution of one dollar by adding a dime at a time until the card is filled. Harry Thomas Stock, Congregational Young People's Secretary, says it will mean giving up 'two movies and three ice-cream sodas.' It, no doubt, will mean some sacrifice on the part of all of us but we will have the glow inside which comes from helping when there is actual need. How many of your young people will be interested in making this EXTRA GIFT?

"I am sure that your pastor will be glad to have the help of the young people in putting across the plan in your church. Let him know how many cards are wanted in your society and he will secure them for you.

"My best wishes to all of you.

Sincerely,

"PATTIE LEE COGHILL."

EVANGELISM AND THE SOCIAL GOSPEL.

There is only one Gospel in the New Testament, and that is the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. This gospel is applicable to all men and to all human conditions. It is a spiritual gospel with an individual and a social message. When this is applied to individuals, we call it a personal gospel; when it is applied to groups of individuals and social conditions we call it a social gospel, but in each case it is the same gospel. No presentation of the Gospel in our day can be effective without both of these applications.—John McDowell.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

APRIL 10, 1932.

HOW SHOULD I USE SUNDAY?

Scripture Reading: John 9:1, 13-16; Acts 20:6, 7.

A Day of Rest.

The need for one day in seven for rest is undeniable. Even Jewish and non-Christian lands are recognizing this need. The policy of theistic Russia provides for days of rest. Rest may not mean the same thing to every one. The person who does strenuous physical work during the week may need hours of bodily relaxation and sleep to restore the torn-down tissues and exhausted energy. The person who works at a desk in a close, crowded room may get the most benefit from exercise in the great out-of-doors. Because of the crowded conditions in which most of us live and our constant association with people one feels that we all need some time for calm, quiet meditation in which we may look at ourselves.

A day of worship—Six days in the week our minds are occupied largely with the affairs of school or of making a living. Our eyes are so much on the ground that our range of vision is narrow. Our attention is so centered upon using the resources of our world to satisfy our material desires that we forget the Creator and giver of all good gifts. Surely at least once a week we should join with other youth in worship and praise to God. The world is full of sin and sorrow, of discord, of ugliness. Sunday is a day on which we may enter into communion with the God of goodness, joy, harmony, and beauty. Through worship we lift our souls into union with the purposes of God for our lives and for the world.

A day of inspiration—Ofttimes the days become dull and monotonous. We meet disappointment and disillusionment. We wonder if it is worth while to struggle on toward a goal that seems unattainable. Then comes Sunday. We hear a sermon that stirs our imagination and quickens our pulse. The world's needs are revealed to us. New faith, hope, and ambition surge through us and an eagerness to meet the challenge to build a Christian world leads us out into the adventures of the next week.

A day of service—Service is one of the foundation stones of Christian living. "He that loseth his life shall find it." "Whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister." Every day should be a day of service, but Sunday offers us an opportunity to do things that we are unable to do on work days. A part of our day may be given to some specific work of the church. Our joy in the day will be in proportion to the joy we give others, so let us visit any who are ill in the community, any who are strangers, or lonely.

Our Burlington Society often holds meetings with an invalid who has been confined to her bed for nearly twenty years. Once each month they hold a service at the county convict camp. These meetings that are shared with others are the most enjoyed of all the services of the Society. No doubt many of our other Societies share in similar services.

HOW SIN BEGINS.

LESSON II, APRIL 10.

LESSON TEXT: Genesis 2:15-17; 3:1-8.

Introduction.

The Bible is the greatest religious book ever written. Its materials accumulated out of the religious experience of the race. The purpose of its materials as assembled was to perpetuate and promote the most significant religious experiences in life. There is constantly discernible in the Bible that which meets the religious needs of man. As we study about the Garden of Eden and the first sin of the race, let us observe the elements of universal application to human life.

Reality of Sin.

This famous story of the fall of man portrays sin as a stern and devastating reality in life. Human experience agrees that sin is a terrible reality in the world today. Some define sin as a transgression of God's law, some insist that the word willful must be inserted. Others define sin as any kind of conduct that is detrimental or harmful to life. However one defines it the universal experience of man agrees that sin is a stern and terrible reality in life. The vivid, dramatic language of this old story portrays truth.

Sin and Freedom.

A moral order involves social responsibility. Freedom of choice is a necessary part of any moral order. Sin enters through wrong choices. The act of will is involved. In a moral universe man must often choose the road he will take. As he chooses the lower levels of desire he fails to reach the higher levels of welfare. Sin comes in by free choice of the lower. As man seeks experience and knowledge on the lower levels sin enters.

Sin Is Attractive.

The fruit looked good. The desire for knowledge seemed good. Be like the God, said the serpent, and live forever. If sin were always recognized as a terrible and dreadful thing people would not choose it. However people are constantly choosing to enter areas of sinful conduct. With desires and affection focused upon unsocial interests people see the results as desirable and attractive. Humanity constantly needs to have its level of satisfactions lifted and refined. This parents and teachers can do by the processes of habit formation and by the development of attitudes and ideals. Religion is a dynamic spiritual agency in refining the desires of the race. Men must be enabled to see and experience the "more excellent way."

Personal and Social.

Sin has both personal and social implications. The serpent tempted Eve. She ate and gave to Adam. He partook of the forbidden fruit. There was the act of will of the individual. There was also the influence of one upon the other. This classical biblical story shows important personal consequences of sin. It also shows a long, long train of social consequences. There is a social solidarity to the race. Man does not live alone. We are our brother's keeper. There is profound truth in the social significance of this story. Sin is both personal and social in its causes and in its results.

The True Law of Life.

This story also conveys the enduring truth that the divine will is the true law of life. There is a higher law of life than the mere physical levels of desire. There is a place for bodily appetites and desires. Knowledge is a legitimate and worthy goal. In a moral universe with its possible good there must also be a possible evil. This ancient narrative could teach us that there is a divine will in the universe. Through the discovery of this divine will and conformity to it man may learn the true law of life.

Sin enters life in much the same way now as it did in ages past. A careful analysis of this Hebrew account of the origin of evil and sin shows much in common with present-day experience. Religion is constantly seeking to aid man by showing him the better way and inspiring him to walk therein.

A FIRST DUTY.

By PROF. A. R. FLOWERS.

Having recently served on a committee to adjust a misunderstanding that had found its way into the membership of a church, I am impressed to write this brief article for CHRISTIAN SUN readers.

Somehow, and for some cause, I have been added to several such committees, in the years of my Christian ministry, and at different times by churches of different denominations. It seems to me that there is nothing that can cause more unnecessary distress and many times, permanent estrangement and heartaches, than to take up some unauthentic evil report against some brother or sister and circulate it among the brotherhood before ever going to the person censured and ascertaining the truth in the matter. Jesus has given Christians a law by which they are to be governed in this matter and if it were obeyed the tale-bearer and the backbiter would soon cease to disturb the peace and harmony of the brotherhood. I fear that pastors often fail to emphasize the importance of brotherly love and spiritual unity, in purpose, as much as they should. They get too much absorbed in other matters and forget that the good-will, peace and harmonious activity of the brotherhood is the greatest asset to any church. I believe that the greatest admonition a pastor can give his congregation is to be faithful in the duty of safeguarding the brotherhood by helping one another in the spirit of meekness. In fact, a brother in fault may be restored when approached in the spirit of love and brotherly kindness. I feel that each one of us, in whatever brotherhood he may have become identified, should make spiritual fruitfulness his first object and if we will take care of this part of the work other matters will usually take care of themselves.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street,

Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

EASTER EVERY SUNDAY.

"The whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works which they had seen."—Luke 19:33-40.

We have been following through Lent to Easter, and now the voices of the multitude who welcomed Jesus to Jerusalem on that Triumphal Entry resound in our ears and in our hearts, celebrating the coming of our Lord into eternity.

The Son of God is coming into his own. He is working wonders in our midst every day. Christ's heralds are walking our streets, visiting our homes, preaching in our churches, going out and helping the poor, visiting the sick and forlorn, and where are our hosannas? We are Christ's: let us enter every day into his resurrected life and help him lift everybody else up from what they are to what they ought to be, and let us make every Sunday a hosanna day of praise, and thus let the world know it.

Prayer—O Lord, let every hill and valley of the United States resound in Christ's praise, and make every day a day of triumph for Christ our King. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR BARABBAS.

"Pilate released unto them Barabbas, and delivered Jesus."—Mark 15:6-15.

The Christian world looks upon that choice of the multitude as the worst choice ever made by any group of people. By insisting on the release of Barabbas and the crucifixion of Jesus, they fixed on the Jewish race the opprobrium of the murder of the Messiah, and settled the Jews as in opposition to Christianity. Nothing can release that stigma but the acceptance of Jesus Christ as their Saviour. But dare we hold up to scorn this Jewish mob? Had we been there would we have done differently? Are we sure that we are doing differently now? How about our voting; is it for some man, or some personal interest, or is it for what we believe Jesus would vote for? Are we standing for the principles of righteousness and justice, love and mercy in all things at any cost, or are we living for short cuts and selfish motives? There are many Barabbases, and each has a shouting mob. What crowd are we in?

Prayer—O Lord Jesus, if we are wrong, or in the wrong crowd, forgive us, and shame us, and by any means draw us out of such iniquity. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

JUST CAUSE FOR TEARS.

"Daughters of Jerusalem . . . weep for yourselves, and for your children."—Luke 23:26-32.

The sorrowful road to the cross and the tomb was not a road of defeat for Jesus. He was on his way to the ascension and back to the Father. "In like manner will he come again and receive you unto himself."

Christ seems to tell us that it is a very small thing to weep over the sorrows we experience, through the incidents and misfortunes of life; that it is of far greater importance to be more concerned about our sins, and the certain sins and sufferings which will come upon our children. If it is true that our lives are thrust forward into the oncoming race, it is also true that we have a great responsibility for the character of the oncoming generations. And it is to be found that a great many will suffer one hundred fold for wrong living. We believe that the greatest need of our times is universal contrition—grief over present sins. If we could have this, the reason for grief would pass away.

Prayer—O Lord, thou who art a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, help us to substitute thy wisdom for our foolishness. Grant unto us thy cleansing tears, over the heartbreak that will mend our lives and make them right, and thrust forward into the lives of our children a legacy of holy faith. Amen.

THURSDAY.

MY BALANCE SHEET.

"What I have written, I have written."—John 19:16-22.

After such a terrible sentence, Pilate would try to appease his own accusing conscience by insisting on an inscription for the cross that would displease the Jewish people.

But was this an act of loyalty to Christ, or was it a case of spite? It looks like it was a trick of all crooked dealings, an act against an act that does not balance.

It is easy for us to fall into the same error, isn't it? And especially so when we think of all that the cross means. Is there anything that can balance against the cross? Is there any good deed that can balance against an act of sin? Nothing! Only penitence, acceptance of Christ, and following him.

Prayer—Dear Lord, help us to be honest with ourselves. Grant that we may insist on right thinking and right doing, and be bold when boldness counts for thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE OPEN DOOR.

"And they found the stone rolled away."—Luke 24:2.

How absurd it seems to us that any one ever had a thought that they could bury Jesus! Life cannot be buried. Life cannot be hid. Jesus was "the life." One could as soon hide the sun with a slab of marble, or put the Milky Way in the cellar.

Today we can go forward in new hopes of life, because he lives. We are reminded of the story coming from Martin Luther's life, at a time when he was terribly depressed. His wife appeared in mourning; and when, in great surprise, he inquired the reason, she answered, "Because God is dead." Again he inquired what she meant and she replied, "He must be, or you would not be so downcast."

Perhaps before contrition and penitence, we need Faith that transcends temporal conditions and is planted firmly in him who can "do abundantly above all that we can ask or think," and who doeth "all things well to them that love God." The victory over death and the grave gives to one and all that hope.

Prayer—Father of Life and Light, admit us into the tomb of our Lord where thou wilt cause us to see heaven and feel the Fountain of Joy in our lives, and make us alive in thee forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HAVE YOU SEEN HIM?

"Mary Magdalene cometh and telleth the disciples, I have seen the Lord."—John 20:11-18.

Can we imagine the thrill with which the disciples heard this announcement? Yet, they must have disbelieved for they had to have a lot of proof, even to the extent of putting their fingers in his wounds.

If some one were to tell you today, "I have seen the Lord," would you believe it? That would depend upon whether you had seen him or not. Well, have you seen him? If you are a Christian, the answer is, "yes."

Prayer—Dear Lord, our Saviour, it must be our fault if we have not seen thee. Clear our eyes that we may see thee every day, and help our faith that we may follow thee all the way. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WORD OF TRUTH.

"In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth."—Eph. 1:13.

The ground and root of faith in anything is in receiving the truth. This also obtains in our faith in God. The ground and root of faith is in receiving the truth. "Thy word is faith. Faith comes by the word of God." This being true, we are not to be misled by thinking that faith comes by prayer, by reading, by study, by church membership, by mere emotional feelings, or by imagination; but by truth.

This is what the church and Christians long for: To give the Gospel, have it received by the people, and thereby come to know Christ for themselves.

This makes a person whose life is "love, joy, peace, temperance, meekness . . . etc.," against which there is no law. This is Christian.

Prayer—We honor thee, our Father, and thou wilt honor us, heart, soul, life, desire and power to witness for thee in everyday living so that they who see us may too receive thy truth and be saved. Amen.

I BELIEVE IN IMMORTALITY.

I believe in conscious personal immortality because I want to and because I think so strong a want, so attested by the effects which flow from it in life, is its own warrant.

I believe in it because I believe in the permanence and persistence of personality and of the capacity for self-sacrifice.

I believe in it because of love and the unity of love and the conviction that love is stronger than death.

I believe in it because of the significance of the sense of memory, the conscious continuity of life and the principle of responsibility.

I believe in it because I think that the idea is veracious.

I believe in it because I think it is a primitive, human instinct, enriched and assured by the best and truest development and verification, in life and fruitage, of our primitive ideas.

I believe in it because I see values in human souls that I believe are indestructible and I do not see perpetuated in the mere continuance of the human race.

I believe in it most of all because I believe in Christ; in what he had to say about duty and destiny; about God and the human soul; and because I believe in his resurrection and in all that his resurrection signified and signifies forever.—Robert E. Speer, in We Believe in Immortality.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher

A PRECIOUS HOPE.

By REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

"I shall go to him—2 Sam. 12:23.

David's little boy was gone. The angels had taken him to heaven. He could not return; but David was comforted by the assurance that he should go to him when he left this world.

The desire to meet our friends in heaven is enshrined in human nature. Every mother who has children in heaven longs to meet them there in their own appropriate forms. If I should tell such a mother that she should meet her child again, but not as her child in its own form, she would answer in the language of the poet:

"Oh say not so! How shall I know my darling
If changed her form and veiled her shining hair:
If, since her flight, has grown my starling,
How shall I know her there?
On memory's page, by viewless fingers painted,
I see the features of my angel child;
She passed away ere vice her life had tainted—
Passed undefiled.

"O say not so! for I could clasp her even
As when below she lay upon my breast;
I would dream of her as a bud in heaven,
Amid the blossoms blest.
My little one, she was a folded lily,
Sweeter than any on the azure wave,
But night came down, a starless night and chilly,
Alas! we could not save.

"Yes, as a child, serene and noble poet—
O heaven were dark were children wanting there—
I hope to clasp my bud as when I knew it,
A dimpled baby fair.
Though years have flown toward my blue-eyed daughter,
My heart yearns oftimes with a mother's love;
Its never-dying tendrils now enfold her,
E'en as a child above.

"E'en as a babe, my little dark-eyed daughter,
Nestle and coo upon my breast again;
Wait for thy mother by the river water,
It shall not be in vain.
Wait as a child—how shall I know my darling,
If changed her form and veiled with shining hair:
If, since her flight, has grown my little starling,
How shall I know her there?"

The tender sentiment of these beautiful lines is far more common than we are wont to imagine, but the mother will not meet her child just as it left her. Its powers are being enlarged under the elevating influence of heaven, and the mother will meet it in a higher sphere of being. No mother, on reflection, would have her child remain an infant forever. It is far more pleasing to think that it is growing in heaven, and all the yearnings of the parent's heart are met if we can think that amid all the progress of that brighter clime it still retains the human form—that even there the mother may trace the family likeness.

Though retaining the human form after it leaves the body, the soul will be far more beautiful in its appearance than the body was. There will be all the difference that there is between the spiritual and the material. Just what this is we know not, for it is entirely beyond the boundaries of our experience. We see something of the beauty of the pure soul even here in its power to transform the physical man, for there are persons yet in the embodied state so under the control of the love of Christ that the body is almost spiritualized. The soul has transformed the body into its own image. As Christ was transfigured on the Mount, and the outer man, all aglow with the light of the divinity within, so the pure soul transforms the material body into the image of its own loveliness. The beauty of the soul shines out through the body, and from this we form some idea of what the beauty of the spiritual man will be when freed from this gross material nature in which it now lives.

Death is usually looked upon as a misfortune to man, but this is a wrong idea of it. Instead of being a misfortune it is an advance to higher life. It is the putting off of the gross material part of our nature, and the passing into the spiritual realm. We have illustrations of this wonderful change in the lower forms of life, in which insects and birds pass from an embryo state into a higher life. The bird in the eggshell has all the power of the lark soaring and singing in the air, but it is in prison. This is the incipient state of its being, and there is no possible chance for the development and exercise of its powers while in this prison house. The breaking of the shell and the letting out of the bird is not a misfortune to it, but a blessing. It is the introducing of it into a higher life where all its powers can be developed and used. What the breaking of the eggshell is to the bird, death is to the Christian. It is freeing the soul from this prison house of clay, and its introduction into the higher life of heaven, where all its wonderful capacities shall be developed.

We find a beautiful illustration of this subject in another form of life. In the latter part of the summer may be seen an uncouth worm crawling on the ground without any capacity to rise above this low condition of life. After a time it fastens itself to the limb of some shrub, wraps itself up in a shroud, and to all appearance dies. It remains in this dormant condition until the warm days of the opening of the following summer. Then the shroud is broken, and a beautiful imperial butterfly comes out clothed in all the blended beauty of the rainbow. Was this change a misfortune to this insect? Certainly not. It had passed from a low to a higher form of life. In its first estate it could not rise above the dust through which it crawled, but now it can soar through the air from flower to flower. At first it was a coarse, loathsome object that all shunned or crushed beneath their feet; but now it is a thing of beauty floating through the air, the admiration of all. Such is the mysterious change we call death to the Christian. It is exchanging the heavy material body for a spiritual one, and the passing out of the low estate, in which we now live, and are confined to the earth by the inexorable laws of nature, into a higher realm of spiritual existence, where the soul will be independent of all the laws that govern physical nature. Like the crawling worm we are now chained to the earth and cannot rise above it, only in thought and feeling, but in the change we call death we drop off the physical, rise into spiritual realms where we will possess the power to rove at will from point to point in the vast universe of God. Is this a misfortune to man, and something to be dreaded?

To illustrate this subject let us suppose that a man is confined in a dark prison, and doomed to remain there until the walls of the tower rot

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our friends are beginning to mail in soap coupons, and more than ten thousand have already been mailed in. If all our Sunday Schools will take an interest it will not take long to get the one hundred and fifty thousand which will be enough to buy our refrigerator. Then our little children can have the best of milk to drink. Let every Sunday School and every friend help us in this undertaking. It don't cost you any money, but it means the value of money to the Orphanage.

The good women have been so good to us this Easter season that we are just as happy as can be. They made and sent to us many beautiful Easter dresses and every girl received a pretty dress to wear to Sunday School on Easter day. We truly hope those who had a part got as much joy out of the giving as we did out of the receiving, and are as happy as the little girls are who received them.

The following has been sent in since our last report:

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., 4 coats, 4 dresses, 1 pair slippers.

Mrs. L. C. Huffines, Guilford College, N. C., 2 dresses.

Honor is a strange commodity. It cannot be divided and sold in part. All or none is the rule of the market. While it can be sold in a way, it cannot be truly bought. It vanishes in the transfer of its title and is no more. Who seeks to buy it gains only loss. It is the one thing which distinguishes manhood from property. Who sells his honor sells his manhood and becomes simply a thing of meat and blood and bones, a thing to be watched, and driven, and cudgeled like an ox; for he has sold that which he cannot buy, not if all the riches in the world were his—Selected.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, Editor.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the publisher's price.)

LIGHT IN THE VALLEY, by Mitchell Brouck. Judson Press. 120 pp. $1.00.

Are you hesitant about the future life? Has some loved one passed over and are you cast down with grief and loneliness? Does some friend need the support of the message of Christian hope and consolation? Are you nearing the great divide? Then here is the book you need—a soul tonic, a spirit stabilizer, a message of hope and consolation. Read it, and renew life's vigor, spiritually.

THROUGH EXPERIENCE TO FAITH. By F. K. Stamm. Abingdon Press. 213pp. $1.50.

The pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, of Brooklyn, has had a rich and radiant experience of Christ. He tells about it in this book, not chronologically, but analytically and dynamically. It is a book not only for preachers and the great and wise, but for average people, whose Christian hope will be given a new vigor by these stirring pages. Educators are pleading that we should make experience the basis of the curriculum. Here is a book that makes it the certitude of religion, that finds in experience the solid basis for a growing and exultant faith.

THE RELIGION OF JESUS, by Toyohiko Kagawa. John C. Winston Co. 127 pp. $1.25.

The Japanese Christian mystic and social reformer—a rare and unusual combination—his mysticism giving zest to his reform measures, gives in the five chapters of this book the secret of his power and of his consecration. We know God through Jesus, who is tender toward men's failures, always forgiving sinners and never condemning them when they show repentance, given to prayer as indicative of his fellowship with the Father, dying to show the terribleness of sin and God's tragic suffering when we do wrong, and training his disciples to carry on his work when he has physically withdrawn from earthly scenes. It is a simple, gripping book, because it comes out of the very heart of a great, simple life—"hid with Christ in God," and in the service of human-kind.

THE RELIGIOUS CONTROL OF EDUCATION, by Wayne Leys. Ray Long and Richard R. Smith. 229 pp. $2.00.

Dr. Yeys is one of that growing group of young ministers who has specialized in philosophy as the basis of a constructive approach to our present-day world. Mental disintegration is one of the major characteristics of our time and much of it is directly traceable to unbalanced emotional life. In company with such psychologists as Conklin and Stevens, Dr. Leys thinks that religion can prevent or at least control these dangerous and disintegrating emotional tendencies. In order for religion to exercise this beneficent effect it must be localized in a single system. The concept of religion in general will not achieve the sought for integration. It must come out of a religion, preferably Christianity, but also from one of the cognate religions, such as Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Hinduism, or Confucianism, to particularize only a few of the living cults which have proved helpful and may continue so to prove in bringing emotional disintegrational states under spiritual control.

and fall down. Then he can come forth and be at full liberty. Would he not be right glad to see the walls begin to tumble, and would he not look forward to the day of his release with joy? Thus our soul is imprisoned within this body, as in captivity and bonds; and must remain thus until the prison is taken down. Hence death is represented as a dissolving of "this tabernacle." When the prison begins to totter and our eternal deliverance approaches, ought we to be sorry?

A full realization of what death brings joy to the soul of the good man. "I want to talk to you about heaven," said a dying Christian to a member of his family. "We may not be spared to each other much longer; may we not meet around the throne of glory, one family in heaven?" Overpowered at the thought of her father's death, the beloved daughter exclaimed, "Surely you do not think that there is any danger?" Calmly and beautifully he replied, "Danger? My darling! Oh, no, do not use that word. There can be no danger to the Christian, whatever may happen. All is right; all is well. God is love. All is well—everlastingly well—everlastingly well."

Such is death to the Christian—a joyfully-welcomed change from a low to the highest state.—From an old issue of THE SUN.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

WHITLEY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

NEW TERM OPENS JANUARY 25th, and any student may begin the college work at that time.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has called from our midst our friend and sister, Mrs. J. N. McCullum.

Therefore, be it resolved,

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of God who doeth all things well,

Second, That we extend to the entire family our deepest sympathy, realizing the husband has lost a loyal wife, the children a loving and devoted mother, the community a cheerful and encouraging friend and the Church a faithful member.

Third, That we may strive to profit by all that was good and true in her life.

For That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy sent to the Christian Sun for publication and a copy be put on the records of New Lebanon Christian Church.

Respectfully submitted,

Honor is a strange commodity. It can be driven, and cudgeled like an ox, for not be divided and sold in part. While it can be sold in a way, it cannot be truly bought. It vanishes in the transfer of its title and is no more. Who seeks to buy it gains only loss. It is the one thing which distinguishes manhood from property. Who sells his honor, sells his manhood, and becomes simply a thing of meat and blood and bones, a thing to be driven, and cudgeled like an ox, for he has sold that which he cannot buy, even if the riches were his.—Selected.

New Students.—

How many names have you sent to Elon College for prospective students for the ensuing year? There should be a united effort by all our people at this time for a large student body for next year. Young people are graduating from many high schools this year and will enter college this fall somewhere, and many of them are connected with the Christian Church by family ties and church affiliations. There are many others that have no choice as to what college they attend just so it is a good institution. We should have a large number of students from both of these classes.

Home Missions in Roumania.—

At a recent conference of the clergy of the Roumanian Orthodox Church much time was given to the problem of home missions, especially as it concerns atheistic propaganda. Among the measures adopted are the following: the publication of a church daily, serving primarily home mission purposes; counter propaganda by radio, in answer to extensive radio-preaching of communism and atheism received from Russian stations. The churches and Christian people of the world need to keep busy in their missionary activities if they keep pace with the many evil influences that are at work to lead the world from Christ and the Christian religion.

Best Sermon.—

The Macmillan Company announces that a prize of $250.00 will be given for the sermon that in the judgment of the contest editors best meets the conditions proposed. The editors will consider the following points: Exegesis, spiritual insight, evangelical emphasis, homiletical technique, relevance to modern life and thought, style. About thirty sermons from those submitted will be published in the autumn. The prizes will be awarded in September. The editors of the contest are Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, Rev. Newton Davies, Rev. C. Walker Petty and Rev. Edwin A. McAlpin. Full details may be obtained from the Macmillan Company, New York.

Peace Issues.—

A common discussion theme in all of the institutes in the Philippines was that of world peace. It was the first time that many of these young Filipinos had come face to face with the problems of war and peace. At each institute held there were many who signed a disarmament petition to be sent to the Geneva world disarmament conference. In addition steps were taken in at least two institutes to mobilize public opinion against compulsory military training in the high schools and the university. Progress was made at all of the institutes in gaining the active participation of the young people themselves in discussion courses, open forums and life quest groups.

United Church.—

The term United Church does not mean much except that some body of Christians have united in closer fellowship, unless something more definite is said about the nature of the union. In December a union was consummated of eleven Protestant groups which are independent of any mission in the Philippine Islands, being principally the results of splits and sub-splits from mission churches about fifteen years ago. Henceforth this group will be known as the United Evangelical Church in the Philippine Islands. There are about 12,500 communicants in the new church. It is to be hoped that they are all so united that there may be no more splits and sub-splits among them, but this result may not materialize, as they have the habit of splitting.

New Religious Education.—

A new practical course in religious education designed as "Supervised Student Teaching in Week-day Church Schools," is being offered this semester by the Religious Education Department of New York University. The Greater New York and Brooklyn Church Federations are cooperating. The course is open to all students eligible for admission to the school of education. Students in the course teach under the supervision of university instructors one or two afternoons each week in week-day church schools conducted by the church federations. This will be a fine opportunity to get something of practical value for young people who wish really to train for such service. There is no doubt but that the churches will feel valuable effect of this work among the younger generation.

Dr. Sherer Passes.—

Rev. Melancthon G. G. Sherer, secretary of the United Lutheran Church in America since its organization in 1918, died March 9th, at the home of his son, Rev. Paul Sherer, of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, New York City. He had been ill for many months. Ordained in 1883, Dr. Sherer served as pastor for several years, and for three years was president of the North Carolina College. He was president of the United Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the South from 1914 to 1918, when it was merged with the General Synod and General Council. The consolidated organizations became the United Church in America. Dr. Sherer was a delegate to the conference on life and work at Stockholm and the world conference on faith and order at Lausanne. He was director of several Lutheran Church organizations.

World Unity Memorial.—

To perpetuate the peace ideals of the late David Starr Jordan, a "World Unity Memorial" has been established by his friends and associates. Sponsored by Mrs. Jordan, the memorial is being promoted by an international committee of which President Hamilton Holt, of Rollins College, is chairman. Other members are Jane Addams, Salmon O. Levinson, Sir Norman Angell and Baron Sakatini. The purpose of the memorial is to make possible the wider diffusion of Dr. Jordan's important statements on peace and international cooperation by magazine and pamphlet publication, and to encourage the development of the peace spirit among college students. Such an organization should do great good among the young people of all lands by educating the future leaders of the world to advocate peace.

Good Templars.—

The Good Templars Lodge, one of the oldest and most active temperance organizations in Yugoslavia, has just celebrated its 25th anniversary. Due largely to its efforts there are now a score of special temperance organizations in that country, among the most significant of which are those among the students, high school youth, railroad men, and physicians. Nine temperance periodicals are published in Yugoslavia. The temperance influence of America, if the Christian people will stand by their guns on prohibition, and not get lost in the muddle of politics, will bear good fruit in all other lands as well as in America. The anti-prohibitionists are greatly concerned in our country about the failure of prohibition. If it is worse with prohibition than without it, they should rejoice, but there are many who believe that what we need to do in America is not to change the law, but to enforce it.

Sherwood Eddy.—

Sherwood Eddy, just returned from China and Japan, has been lecturing and preaching in Chicago during the past week. On Sunday evening, March 13th, he spoke before the Sunday Evening Club; Tuesday evening he lectured to the Oak Park High School; and Friday evening in Orchestra Hall for the benefit of the Adult Education Council's emergency fund. In September, Mr. Eddy saw the capture of Mukden by the Japanese. Later he saw the beginning of the battle of Shanghai. He had conferences with leading Chinese and Japanese liberal leaders. His addresses constituted a devastating arraignment of the whole business of war, and particularly the error and cruelty of the present encounter. To hear Sherwood Eddy is to have one's moral revolution against the hideous wickedness of war thoroughly aroused, and to be stirred to do all that one can to end the war system.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of the First Christian Church, Durham, writes: "We had splendid services Easter and received fifteen into the church fellowship during the day."

Oh, beloved pastor! Have you taken the Easter offering for Missions? You will not overlook or neglect it, will you? It is our Lord's resurrection command: "Go ye . . . and lo, I am with you."

Rev. W. T. Scott, Salisbury, feels much encouraged over the prospect of a good beginning at Winston-Salem. Quoting from a personal letter: "We are expecting to begin the Sunday School and regular church services at Winston-Salem on Sunday, April 10th. Am planning to be there for that date. We had a very interesting meeting of a committee of the group at Winston-Salem last night (April 1st). They are much encouraged over the prospects for a new work, and I believe that if the work can be pushed we shall make a go of it."

A recent distribution of the Duke Foundation Funds to 92 hospitals and 45 orphanages, all located in North and South Carolina, gives our Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., $2,400.89. This goodly sum comes at a most happy and helpful time, and we rejoice with Brother Johnston and all who are interested in the welfare of our Orphanage. The Duke Foundation allocates to the charitable institutions of the two Carolinas a goodly portion of the income from its power lines, and this wise provision is, indeed, a blessing and a benefit to thousands.

Rev. W. T. Scott, Salisbury, N. C., expects to move to Winston-Salem at an early date with the expectation of giving constant attention to our Congregational-Christian Church movement there. He plans to begin regular morning services and Sunday School organizations the second Sunday in April. The work will still be kept up at Salisbury, with the assistance of Rev. Milo J. Sweet, pastor-at-large, and Miss Priscilla Chase, Director of Religious Education. Quite a group of interested Congregationalists and Christians in Winston-Salem seem anxious for the work to begin and are willing to give it their cooperation and support.

Rev. D. M. Spence, writing under date of April 1, 1932, gives this information: "1821 Vanderbilt Place, Nashville, Tenn. Dear Dr. Atkinson: I am to receive my Bachelor of Divinity degree at Vanderbilt University in June and will be open for church work at that time, as I am sure you will recall I served First Christian Church at Henderson for two years and our Ocean View Church, Ocean View, Va., one year. I will be open for pastoral work beginning in June, and shall be glad to correspond with any church desiring my services." Brother Spence is one of our very consecrated young men, a graduate of Elon, and has had experience as noted above. We commend him highly to any church needing the services of a loyal and faithful minister.

It was the privilege of THE SUN's editor, J. O. Atkinson, to be present Sunday at 3:30 P. M., at the First Christian Church, Durham, and officiate at the christening of Mary Ann Harrell, the precious child of Rev. and Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, and Elizabeth Cannon Boone, the precious child of Dr. and Mrs. W. Waldo Boone, of Durham. The official ceremony of the Christian Church was used at the christening, the same being opened and concluded with appropriate solos. If there is a sweeter and more impressive service than presenting little children by their parents at the altar of consecration, we know not what it is. Both of the children, consecrated Sunday afternoon in the presence of a few relatives and good friends, are the joy and promise of their fond parents and grand-parents, and are sweet, precious babies, indeed.

The following is from the Greensboro Daily News, April 4th: "David W. Shepherd was licensed as a minister of the Christian Church on Sunday morning. The licensing ceremony was conducted at the First Christian Church by Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., pastor of that church and president of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. The new minister is a graduate of Elon College and of Vanderbilt University. He had stood examinations before the conference committee and had been recommended for license. Dr. Rowland licensed Mr. Shepherd in the presence of a large congregation after delivering a sermon on 'The Courage for a Crisis.' Mr. Shepherd will become pastor of Rose Hill Congregational-Christian Church, Columbus, Ga. He will be ordained later. 'He is a promising young man,' said Dr. Rowland, 'and we are expecting him to do a good work in the ministry'."

One of our very intelligent and observant ministers, having read in THE SUN the article by Dr. C. T. Wilson on Christian Education, writes to the editor a personal impression and observation: "May I express to you my thanks for 'releasing' to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, in the issue of March 17th, the article by Dr. C. T. Wilson. I feel grateful that some one has arisen to put in such trenchant and illuminating statements the situation in modern church life as to so-called Christian or religious education. A number of us have been feeling for some time that the emphasis in this connection has been misplaced and the mischief of this is becoming more and more in evidence. No intelligent person for a moment questions the importance of the culture of the Christian life and graces—but how can there be a growth in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ unless there is an awakened consciousness of the person and spirit of the Christ?"

Rev. A. D. Woodworth, one of our beloved veteran missionaries writing from Tokio, Japan, recalls an incident worth reading: "One of the benefactors of the Stanfordville Theological School gave $25,000.00 to that school and afterwards was broken up financially. When some of his friends suggested to him that it was a great pity he gave away so much because in his poverty it would have been such a help." His reply to Dr. Woodworth was: "That was the only money I did save. If I had kept it, it would have gone the way of all the rest." And then Dr. Woodworth very wisely adds: "So far as I know people are not getting poor because they give to the Lord." We very much regret to learn that Dr. Woodworth is suffering from a severe and continuous throat trouble, the result of overwork. He had sixteen hours in the classroom, five Bible classes, an extra English class, and an hour with the French Catholic Priest, an hour with some boys, etc. He has been compelled for the time being to give up his work. In another column elsewhere in THE SUN, we present a worth-while communication from him.

The Committee on Education of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference met at THE CHRISTIAN SUN office, Elon College, Friday, at 2:30 P. M., and examined Mr. David Winfield Shepherd on his call, fitness and equipment for the ministry as licentiate. Mr. Shepherd is a member of our Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, and graduated from Elon College in the Class of '27. The past three years he has been at Vanderbilt pursuing the theological course for his Bachelor of Divinity Degree, which he hopes to secure at the close of the present spring term of the Divinity School. The committee of examination, composed of J. O. Atkinson, chairman, Dr. J. U. Newman, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Rev. A. W. Hurst, unanimously voted to recommend the licensure, and Dr. C. H. Rowland, president of the Conference, in behalf of the Executive Committee, was requested to issue the license with an appropriate service at First Church, Greensboro, at 11:00 o'clock, Sunday, April 3rd. Bro. Shepherd has recently been called to and has accepted the pastorate of the Rose Hill Congregational-Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., and enters upon his duties immediately. He is a man of fine scholarship, preparation and character and gives promise of a useful and fruitful ministry.

VALLEY LETTER.

The mid-year session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference met at Bethlehem Church, March 10th. The weather was unfavorable, the roads, in many places, were impassable as a result of a recent snow, and in consequence, the attendance was small. However, those who were there enjoyed a good day together. Good talks were made by W. C. Wampler, Loy H. Hook and Dr. L. E. Smith. The visit of Dr. Smith to the Conference was greatly appreciated, and his presence and several addresses added much to the Conference. We hope to have him at another time when conditions are more favorable, and when larger numbers can hear him.

The Committee on Resolutions recommended, among other things, that we take our stand definitely on the dry side of every question in which the cause of temperance is involved, and that we vote for dry men only, if such are available.

The committee also recommended that we heartily endorse the election of Dr. L. E. Smith as President of Elon College, and pledge him and the college our full support.

Dr. Smith remained over a few days after the Conference, and visited and spoke to the congregations at Leaksville, Winchester, Joppa and Dry Run. The people were glad to hear him and get acquainted with Elon's new president.

Our Sunday School Convention will meet this year at Timber Ridge, twenty miles west of Winchester, on June 16th and 17th.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

THE WINTER PARK CHURCH, Dr. C. A. Vincent, pastor, has already contributed six hundred dollars on the 1932 apportionment. This is a splendid record and is appreciated, because the money contributed early saves the Boards the necessity of borrowing that amount.

DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM has the sympathy of all his friends in the Southeast in the illness of his son. The son, who bears the father's honored name, was taken ill in New York at Easter time, and was operated on for appendicitis. According to reports, as we go to press, Mr. Bloom is recovering satisfactorily.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA. Rev. Frank Atkinson, pastor. This church had a beautiful and successful celebration of the Easter season. One feature was the reception of sixteen new members on Thursday night of Holy Week. The pastor has conducted for some weeks a pastor's class in preparation for church membership. This is a most effective method and is recommended to all pastors.

THE DOLLAR PLAN Coin Cards are being requested by many churches, which indicated a cordial response to this method of meeting the financial problems of our Boards. It is hoped that throughout the country there will be a large response, meeting the needs of the Boards for the current year. If your church has not ordered its coin cards, do so at once, so as to have a share in this expression of loyal support to the Boards which serve the world.

CHRISTIAN LIFE CONFERENCE of Georgia, will be held at LaGrange, Friday night, April 22nd, continuing through Saturday and to Sunday noon. This is the annual meeting for this State, and all Congregational and Christian Churches in Georgia are supposed to share in this annual event. Miss Annie R. Campbell is in charge of the program and calls upon young people everywhere to assist. It is understood that the young people themselves will carry on the program almost entirely by themselves. This is as it should be.

MISS GRACE BRECK, missionary of Lint-sing, North China, is reported home on account of illness and is at a hospital at Salem, Oregon, her home being Portland. Miss Breck, who is a missionary of the American Board, has been supported by the women of the churches of Florida for a number of years. Consequently there has been a great interest in her work and her friends in Florida will regret to hear of her illness. The American Board continues to provide for her and the gifts from the churches for that purpose will be needed. The best wishes of all her friends are extended to her for her complete recovery of health.

NEW MEMBERS were received by many churches at Easter time. Only a few churches have reported. Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., George N. Edwards, pastor, received twelve new members. Southern Pines, N. C., Church of Wider Fellowship, Elmer Willis Serl, pastor, received ten new members and three babies were baptized. Niagara, N. C., under the leadership of J. M. Canoy since last November, received fifteen new members. It was a very great privilege to the pastor-at-large to be present and to share in the service by acting, at the request of Mr. Canoy, who has not yet been ordained, as pastor and receiving the members, giving the right hand of fellowship and conducting the communion service. It was a great service for this small church which was without even a Sunday School when Mr. Canoy came to it at about Thanksgiving time.

THE CONFERENCE OF THE CAROLINAS will hold a joint meeting with the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Christian Churches, the Western North Carolina Conference and the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference, on June 7th and 8th, at Raleigh. At this time Christian and Congregational Churches will be represented on the same basis. The program is in process of building. But it is a known fact that the matter of forming and organizing a United Congregational and Christian Conference for the Carolinas will come up for definite action. A committee is and has been at work on the plans for some time. Since this State holds more of the Christian Churches than any other State in the Southeast, this United Conference will be unusually significant. News of this meeting will be given from time to time, but let every Congregational and Christian Church know that it is expected to send regularly appointed delegates. And let all the Congregational Churches surely know that their per capita tax should be paid by June 1st.

MELBOURNE, FLORIDA. The issue of the Melbourne Times for March 25th, contains several announcements concerning our church and pastor, Rev. Orville D. Ullom. It contained a sermon by the pastor on, "Jesus at the Crossroads." It also announced that Mr. Ullom was to deliver the sermon at the Easter Sunrise Service at the beach, a service which later reports indicated was attended by several hundred. It also announced that an Easter pageant would be held at the church and also special Easter music on Sunday morning. Among the other announcements were an Easter egg hunt, a picnic at the beach for Mrs. Ullom's class, and also that Mr. Ullom was to be the speaker at the Rotary luncheon. All these indicate a busy and active service on the part of the pastor and the church. The pastor writes that the attendance at all services was large, especially for the Easter pageant in the evening when 175 people were present. The Easter offerings were very generous and were most gratifying. The young people of this church have already raised money to send five delegates to Camp Immokalee next June. The pastor writes: "Our little church plant here is ideally equipped for such occasions. In fact this little plant is so well equipped in every way that one can do anything one wants to do."

EASTER AT MIAMI BEACH.

Five years ago, Dr. Elisha A. King started the holding of Easter Sunrise Services on the beach at this beautiful resort city. There was an overwhelming attendance each year since the Easter service, under the management of the Ministers' Association of greater Miami, has been a great feature of the Easter celebration. The newspapers reported that forty thousand people attended the Sunrise Service. An effort is made to get a fairly accurate count. The service is a beautiful one and the setting is impressive.

At the Miami Beach Church the Easter Sunday School session was held out of doors with four hundred and fifty seated on the lawn, a beautiful picture. For the Easter service the church was so crowded that the social hall was used for an overflow with the service broadcast there through a loud-speaker. Six new members were added to the church.

FLORIDA CONFERENCE.

The forty-ninth annual meeting of the Florida State Conference will be held April 22nd to 24th, with the church at Lake Worth entertaining the Conference. This is the first time the State Conference has held a week-end meeting, and it is hoped thereby to have a larger attendance of laymen and of young people. A varied and interesting program has been arranged, including one afternoon given up to four group conferences for the discussion of evangelism and worship, world friendship, social problems of the day and a conference on young people's work.

The Conference is peculiarly fortunate this year in having a visit from Dr. F. G. Coffin, one of the Moderators of the General Council. It is felt that his visit will count in developing the consciousness of the merger in the minds of the people of Florida, where there are no churches of the Christians. The Moderator of the State Conference is Mr. Robert G. Williams, of Lake Worth, and the pastor of the Lake Worth Church is Dr. Lillian B. Fulton.

A BUSY YOUNG LADY.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has been leading a very busy life of late. After a trip by way of Tampa, Fla., she visited Miami, where she spent Easter attending the Sunday School and the morning service at the Miami First Church, and sharing in a fine young people's meeting at the Coral Gables Church in the evening. Monday and Tuesday were spent at Lake Worth in preparation for the young people's participation in the State Conference. Then down again to Miami, visiting the North Miami Church, attending and speaking at three different meetings there, with two meetings at the First Church the following day, these meetings being the Woman's Society and the Sunday School teachers' and officers' conference. After going to Miami Beach for a conference, she returned to Jupiter, where a Young People's Rally was held for the young people of the Palm City, West Palm Beach, Lake Worth and Jupiter Churches. From there she went to Key West for the Sunday participation in the Sunday School and the Christian Endeavor Societies, besides the regular church service. After returning to Jacksonville for two days in the office, she goes to Mount Dora to speak to the Woman's Society and then to Sanford for a Young People's Rally for the churches in that region. From there she goes to the Regional Meeting at Atlanta. She writes: "Great life, and I love it."

CHRISTIAN SUN LETTER.

We truly hope the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will take advantage of our special offer of giving three months' extra on your subscription for every renewal or new subscriber sent in up to the 1st day of May. This offer will expire on that date. Some have already taken advantage of this offer and we trust at least two thousand subscribers will not let this offer go unheeded. Mail us your check for $2.00 and get THE SUN for 15 months; $4.00 and get it for 30 months; $6.00 and get it for 45 months; $8.00 and get it for 60 months, or 5 years. Please act quick, as this offer will expire on May 1st.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"I LIKE TUBERCULOSIS."

"I like tuberculosis. It isn't that I enjoy poor health, and it was not until I walked out of the sanitarium—an apparently arrested case—that I began to like it." So says Mrs. Ruth Reed, in the April Number of the Atlantic Monthly, relating graphically and agreeably, her experience, in and out of a sanitarium, with tuberculosis. At last accounts she is still in, and closes her cheery account of coming to grips with the white plague with this paragraph: "Half-life lying here all day? Yes. But every life is burdened with sadness and frustration. My world is singularly serene, free forever from small irritations, because I have learned how very small they really are. I like tuberculosis."

Why shouldn't Mrs. Reed like tuberculosis? It came to her unsought, unbidden and without warning. It has taken her a few seasons to find herself, and readjust her thinking to conditions imposed, but, like Rudyard Kipling's ship, she has at last found herself, and has buckled down to the business of being happy and getting along contentedly and taking life as it comes. Why not? Emerson is our authority, and a good one, for saying, "There is compensation in life." Mrs. Reed likes tuberculosis because it has its compensations. Believe it or not, just take her own words for it: "Days do not drag; many of them are busy and full. When my breakfast tray comes, hot and fragrant with coffee, I am ready. Anything may happen today. Perhaps a lot of mail, perhaps a new book, a little surprise of some kind. My locker is full of good books; each of them means a day or two chased away. When reading has tired my eyes I rest them on the hills and trees beyond my window. They are lovely in any weather, but they are loveliest on misty afternoons or when it is clear at dusk."

A tree never looks so friendly, full and fragrant as when seen from the window of a kept-in. This writer remembers a steady and stalwart maple just outside the window of a certain hospital. Day by day that tree waved its welcome to our eyes, rustled its leaves and branches merrily, showed how gracious it could be in coloring, how glad it could be to cheer the heart of him who, on the inside, was confined to his bed, so could not come out. That one tree could entertain, and did entertain, with its wavy foliage and restful, shivering colors for hours on hours at a time. It made one forget all about being shut-in, or the need of a nurse or doctor, or any other help to happiness. That one tree had the capacity to make one happy for hours on hours.

Why shouldn't one like tuberculosis, or any other disease that comes, especially when the body is free of excruciating pain and the mind is free of torture? The sick as well as the healthy make their contribution to life. One is led to think that the world itself is divided into two classes—the sufferers and the servers. And one is doubtful which contributes most to the actual serenity and salvation of life and society. Here is a family that is impatient, irritable, at cross currents in their attitude and activity towards each other. A member of the family gets sick. The whole household changes. A new patience on the part of the members begins to develop. The helping hand is extended, the smile of hope and cheer comes on the faces of the household, so that no cloud of despair may be carried into the sick-room. That shut-in is making a contribution to the patience, to the cheer, to the hope, to the unselfish service of the whole family. There are far more smiles in many hospitals than there are in many homes. This writer has often found more cheer, more sunshine, more radiance, more hope, more actual life in and about hospitals and sick-rooms than he has found in banquet halls or at so-called places of entertainment and amusement. Many who are confined to their rooms, and their beds, in home and in hospital are making larger and better contributions to life and to all that makes up life, than they did make during the days when they were strong in body and went fretting about a thousand things that mean nothing and were wearing themselves out with trifles that did not count. Happiness is within and not without. Joy comes from the soul and not from the surface. Real life is found and lived within the confines of a sick-room as well as in the wide open spaces. And this says nothing of the keen joy of conquest over the days of confinement, and the ills of the body. We presume the Good Book has it about right: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength," and then that which is more to the point: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him." No doubt Paul gets at the heart of the whole matter in these words: "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." The fact is that we may have some glory as we go along in the suffering, and this is what Mrs. Reed is telling about in The Atlantic when she says, "I like tuberculosis."

THE AFTER-EASTER MESSAGE.

The message just prior to, and during, Easter was "Look up at the Cross—at the Christ and then gloriously at the resurrection." Hundreds and thousands heard that message and gave heed. It was the message of Evangelism. It was the pulpit, through the power of God, carrying conviction to the heart of the hearer, release and comfort to the mind of the believer, joy and consolation to the soul of the saint. The Easter message was one of life, of love, of forgiveness. The churches flung wide their doors, and reports from every direction are that church rolls were increased and manifold numbers of such as should be saved, were added to the congregations. It was a message vibrant with life, buoyant with hope, dynamic with saving power. That was as our Lord would have it, for it was from his lips that came the promise, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." (John 12:32.) This our Lord declared to his anxious disciples, signifying what death he should die. It gave the promise of assured and ultimate victory. The Easter message told of his lifting up, of the sin that put him there, of the suffering that he endured, and then of the glory of his resurrection, a glory which could not be dimmed by the shadow of the cross, nor by all the sin of the world.

The Easter message, with its call to repentance and promise of victory, is not the end but the beginning. Our Saviour followed his resurrection with the most emphatic command every falling from his blessed lips: "Go ye, and lo I am with you." The empty tomb means little except as the life coming therefrom fills the world with its power of redemption, of salvation and of ministry to all the needs of mankind. It is not enough to behold the open tomb and to share the fellowship of his suffering and the joy of his resurrection. All this looks to the command and the promise that came after the resurrection. The world today awaits the presence and the power of the living Christ. But it will wait in vain until those who accept him as their Saviour and Leader obey his most emphatic command and, through their sacrifices and service, make him known to the world. True, we may easily excuse ourselves by pleading depression, "hard times," no money. None of these will daunt the souls of the brave nor stay the hand of the courageous. Christ gave no impossible command. These times may test, and they do test, our courage, our faith, even our belief. We agree most heartily with the editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate in declaring this "is no day for doubts, for questionings, for estimating the meager resources of the Church for its world task. It is a day for advance, and the pledge of his power and the assurance of victory is for a Church that goes forward. What better day than this for the rededication of the Church of Christ to world conquest and world service?"

J. O. A.

SELF AND OTHERS.

There are so many relations in life that it is difficult to do right in all of them. Other people are related to us in so many ways that it is often a serious question as to how to treat those relatives. We often condemn politicians by charging that their attitude toward others contains self-interest. No doubt this charge is often true, but it may often be false. Are we frank in our dealing with others and expressing our views on subjects that concern the community? Do we not often avoid questions that seem to embrace self-interest? Do we treat others as we would have them treat us under similar circumstances? Are we always fair with others when our own interests are involved? Do we find it difficult to get along with some people? Is this true even of church members? Is it not more difficult to get along with those with whom we are most intimate? Is it not more difficult to be on good terms with family relations that with others? Hard feelings spring up between those who are intimately related. That is the cause of divorce, of family feuds, neighborhood jealousies, and financial brawls. The more one knows of others the greater the danger of hard feelings and of estrangement.

Well, the most difficult person to get along with is self. Self crosses our path at more points and in more ways than others do. How about the control of speech, of action, of thought, of feeling? Can we be satisfied with our own way of thinking, speaking, acting and living. It is more difficult to get self to obey our will than it is to get others. The parent, the teacher, the official, the minister, the individual in all positions finds it more difficult to control himself than others. We know what is right, but does self obey our will? We withhold what we know we ought to say lest we will suffer loss in some way; we say what we really do not believe in the hope of pleasing others. Nature wants to go one way and we know that way is wrong; but will weaken and nature goes its own way. It would be easier to control the community than to control self. A thorough examination will reveal the fact that self gives the honest individual more trouble than all others. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." (Matt. 16:24.) It is easier to deny others than to deny self.

EASTER.

By C. C. HOWELL.

It is so appropriate and fitting, that it must have been divinely ordained that the most joyously significant day in all the Christian's calendar, comes at the gladdest time of all the year.

Doubt may have been cast in the minds of some, upon many of the comforting teachings in the Book of Life, without a man's security of salvation being wholly destroyed; much of its charm and attraction might have been sacrificed without its essence being irretrievably lost. But if the crowning occurrence in the life and death of Jesus is in the lightest shadow of the least doubt, if Jesus were not and is not risen from the dead, then, as the most learned, certainly one of his most devoted followers said, "We are indeed of all men most miserable."

My thoughts this morning are not with any attempt to prove the fact of resurrection. All writers and thinkers upon the life of Jesus agree in his historicity, i. e., that 1900 odd years ago there lived a Galilean named Jesus, who lived and moved and had his being among the hills of Judea, along the dusty roadways that led him through Samaria, who visited at the home of Mary and Lazarus in Bethany, who spoke words of light and life and power that have never since been equaled; and who was finally crucified, dead and buried by the cruel, irresponsible arrogance of Rome at the no less cruel and equally irresponsible behest of his own people who refused to receive him. Even as observant and matter-of-fact a writer as Arthur Brisbane concedes and acknowledges the historical accuracy of the sacred accounts of the birth and life and death of Jesus; and Brisbane says, with convincing emphasis, that the man who doubts this fact of history would demand proof of the blazing sun in the midsummer sun.

It is only a step further from this universal acknowledgement, to a belief in the resurrection. But my purpose is not to marshal proofs that have convinced such men as the original master of the law of evidence in English-speaking courts, as well as millions of others, high and lowly, and ought to convince any intellectually honest mind, that Jesus is risen. On this point, I merely call attention to the fact that if for any reason he is not, his advent, his earthly existence, and the wild-fire spread of a belief in him as the Son of God he claimed to be, is one of the most astounding and inexplicable events in all history.

I take it that every man whose interest in the things of the spirit accounts for his presence here on this glad Easter Day joins me, if not in fact, at least for the purposes of what more I have to say, in an abiding conviction that Jesus Christ was crucified, dead, and buried, and that the third day he rose again from the dead. And upon this premise I invite your consideration briefly to a hurried and therefore necessarily incomplete view of the general significance of the resurrection, and then, as the theme of what I have to say, I submit to you a few propositions which I think are, in their lessened, narrower scope, of perhaps as much importance, certainly of as much comfort, as the fact of the bodily resurrection of the dead who die in the Lord is in its sublimer, completer, all-incisive sphere.

In the first place, the assurance of the resurrection answers unmistakably, forever, the haunting query that has troubled and disturbed men since the first dim pages of history were written, the almost despairing doubt was expressed by the suffering Job when he wondered, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

In the second place, it knits us with ties stronger than the finest steel to the hosts of dear loved ones whom we have lost a while, and whose angel faces, smiling, beckon us in dearest dreams and fondest hopes that the human heart can hold, to the land where there shall be no more night, and where all tears shall be done away.

In the third place, the assurance of the resurrection comforts, soothes, and sustains us here, and now, in those heart-broken, anguished hours that inevitably, sooner or later, come to us all as we stand with hearts bowed down and spirits almost crushed beside a tenement of clay from which the beloved imperial tenant has moved to his long home in the skies, and we lift up our drooping heads, and with tear-dimmed eyes behold the all-comforting presence of him who rose from the same sort of death on the first Easter day, as, moved with compassion, just as he was here on earth, he assuages our sorrow and beguiles our grief with his assurance, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whomsoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

And just as in the spring the winter wakes up from its long sleep, and new life all around us bears silent but eloquent testimony of a resurrection, as well of the body as of the grass and trees and flowers, and springtime blooms again in the heart, so on this vernal Easter day, appropriate and desirable it is that we leave behind us all those things, physical, financial, material, mental, which have so grievously and sorely burdened us in the dark days of the winter of our spiritual discontent and doubt.

New Year's Day is not the only appropriate day for casting up old accounts, bringing down a new balance at the bottom of the page, charging it into a convenient Profit and Loss, and starting out anew on a clean, spotless page. Easter Day, commemorating new hope, interest, determination and enthusiasm in all living things, is a better day yet, and this particular Easter Day is the very best one of all, because just now it is the only one we have—indeed, the only one of which there is any certainty or assurance to men constituted like us who know not if we will breathe out the next breath we breathe in.

I, therefore, venture the admonition for each of us that from this good day on we forget the troublesome, corroding cares that have thus far so easily and grievously beset us, and with renewed faith and hope press on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling to which each of us has undoubtedly been called—in our business or profession, in money matters and all the material things that contribute to our material welfare and success also, but above all and more important than all, in the satisfying and eternal things of the spirit; for after all has been said and done the very highest calling of all to which we have been called is to be sons of God, children of the All Highest, heirs to a divine patrimony, earth-bound princes from the royal court of the King of Kings.

The days that follow such a day of divinely inspired and heaven-born resolves as this Easter Day, will remind us of the age-old truth that we have long known only too well—that no man since Peter (and none before him for that matter) has been able to abide on the mountain top in solitary companionship with transfigured glory. Most of our days have been, and will continue to be, spent on the plain, in the dust of the busy day's toil and turmoil, where men like us are enduring, suffering and sorrowing, and where we, too, as men among men, must also bear the heat and burden of the ordinary workaday world.

Such an inescapable necessity is not as irksome as at first glance it appears to be—it is a part of my philosophy of life that divinely ordained and ordered things and conditions never are. This situation has at least two helpful and encouraging compensations, one of which is well-nigh satisfying.

First of all, character is not developed, strength is not renewed, men do not become men, on birthdays, at Christmas, or New Years, nor yet on Easter Day. Nothing in this life springs erect suddenly and all at once. "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear," is the law of life as well as the law of the harvest. No masterpiece of music, or architecture is produced all of a sudden. No great oration or soul-stirring sermon is ever delivered on the spur of the moment. None of the outstanding accomplishments in any phase of human endeavor have burst into being, full-grown, like the goddess Minerva from the skull of imperial Jove. No war has at any time been won by a single lightning flash of genius even though it were that of a Napoleon. Behind them every one, and behind every accomplishment that men or angels consider great or sublime, there lie days and weeks of grinding, unrelenting toil, and nights and months of concentrated thought and design and purpose. The flowers of life—meaning by that the things that are listed in the catalogue of the heart's desire—are like the flowers of the garden that lavish their beauty and fragrance on the morning air; their beauty and perfume and perfection are obvious to the most casual observer, but not every one stops to think of the dark, damp region where the roots of nourishment grow, nor of the long days and nights of solitary growth and development that have gone before. And it is faith in the ultimate outcome that has sustained and borne, made bearable and endurable, the cold rains of discouragement and the chilling winds of disappointment.

The one compensation for the daily necessities that cannot be avoided, is this: While our feet are inescapably rooted in the ground, our heads may be among the stars, and our thoughts above them. There is never a time when we may not look to the hills of eternal truth, and spiritual help whence cometh all our strength. If we have the faith, even a portion as large as a mustard seed, we may as easily and certainly put our hearts and lives in tune with the infinite and eternal as we may get Buffalo or Los Angeles or Schenectady on the radio. There is always flowing from the fountain of all life the living water, of which, if one but drinks, he shall never thirst for any of the needful things of the mind, heart, or spirit.

These, as I see them, are two of the divine compensations for the necessity that is upon us

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Annual Rally of the Western District of the Young People's Congress of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference was held in the Suffolk Christian Church Sunday School Auditorium on Friday night, April 1, 1932, with over two hundred present. The Chairman, Miss Doris Eure, called the meeting to order and announced the hymn "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," which was sung very heartily. The worship was led by Miss Thelma Boone who read Scripture and led in prayer for Friendship, prepared and joined in by the congregation, with a response—

"For the joy of human love,
Brother, sister, parent, child
Friends on earth, and friends above,
For all gentle thoughts and mild;
Lord of all, to Thee we raise
This our hymn of greatest praise."

Then hymn, "I Would Be Like Jesus" was sung. The roll of Churches was called, and those representing them responded in appropriate words.

Miss Elizabeth Sharpe of Waverly gave the report of the Holiday Conference and presented many deservedly good things about Elon College. Special music was rendered by the group from Liberty Spring Church with Mrs. I. W. Johnson at the piano. It was well rendered and greatly enjoyed by the audience.

The main address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Charles E. Shelton, pastor of the Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Va., and in his address, he pictured human preparation for life, laying emphasis upon the responsibility of the individual in decisions, and life work. In his interesting and clear thought way he held the audience in rapt attention and left them with good lessons for use. At the close of his fine address, he gave a good account of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and expressed the belief that it would lead to a better relation of religious bodies in the whole world. Dr. Shelton maintained his reputation as a clear thinker, an expert speaker, and an interesting presentation of serious and useful lessons.

An offering was taken, a business session of the Congress was held, and the closing exercises brought the good meeting to an end.

There were ten ministers present: I. W. Johnson, Chas. E. Shelton, N. G. Newman, W. D. Harward, R. E. Brittle, H. S. Hardcastle, W. M. Jay, C. E. Geringer, L. L. Lassiter, and W. W. Staley. It speaks well for ten out of the twenty-five ministers in this conference to be present at the Western District Congress. Only six of this district were absent.

So much is said and written in these days about the decline of spiritual religion, and the waywardness of young people, that such meetings as this Congress, attended by more than 200 people, would seem to sound a note of encouragement to all who are striving to keep alive the spirit of Christianity and to maintain its growth in the church. Conditions have changed, education is more universal. Self-expression more common, and social life greatly enlarged; liberty has gone to seed, and the fruit may not be the best; but one thing is plain that the good is growing better, and the bad is growing worse; but on the whole, good is making a gain. A Young People's Congress of this type would have been impossible twenty years ago. I could praise the young people for their progress in the things that obey truth and honor God.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

Because of road conditions following one of the most destructive storms visiting this section in years, the attendance at our Mid-year Conference held with the Bethlehem Church, March 10th, was small. However, a few who could reach the Valley Pike were present and an interesting and, we think, a profitable session was held.

The program included the following: Morning worship by Rev. B. J. Earp; address of welcome, by Mr. R. C. Myers; response by Mr. T. W. Mathews; address by President L. E. Smith, of Elon College; discussion on "The Church: Its Place and Purpose in the World," led by Mr. W. C. Wampler; discussion on "How to Increase the Membership and Interest," led by Dr. Smith; "How to Finance," discussion led by Mr. L. H. Hook.

Dr. Smith, by his presence and participation, added much to the interest and success of the meeting. We feel that the people who heard him have a deeper interest in the college, and also in our work and institutions generally. We wish to express this word of appreciation to all who helped to make the Conference a success. And while we do this we are not unmindful of the splendid dinner served by the good ladies of the church.

After the Conference, Dr. Smith visited several of our churches and found interested groups at each place. He was with us Sunday morning, the 13th. The service was well attended and he brought to our people a great gospel message. So much was one of his hearers impressed with his earnestness, personality and resourcefulness, that he remarked: "I believe that Dr. Smith will pull the college through." Many of us share with him the same view. But we must realize that he cannot do it alone. We may not any of us have much money, but we all have something that can be used at the college. Let us put our littles together, and bring relief to this most worthy and needy institution.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

PIEDMONT LETTER.

Students and faculty members have returned from the Easter vacation and have entered heartily upon the work of the last term of the year. The summer school bulletin is expected from the press this week. We are looking forward to a very successful summer term in spite of financial conditions in the country generally. Religion and education are two vital factors in human life. Whatever economies must be made in our living, we cannot afford to diminish our interest in or our support of our churches and educational institutions. The insistence of the governor of one State that education should suffer the same retrenchment as other agencies shows a lack of proper appreciation of life's values.

We appreciated the presence recently upon our campus of Professors Simon A. Bennett and A. Ray VanCleave of Elon College. Their visit was very short and they were unable to remain for the assembly of faculty and students at which they would have been cordially welcomed by the college. They were making a flying trip through the Southeast during their Easter vacation.

Pres. Guy H. Wells, of the South Georgia Teachers College, and R. J. H. DeLoach, of Statesboro, Ga., gave us fine chapel addresses recently. Dr. Wells is one of Georgia's outstanding educators and is president of the State Education Association. Mr. DeLoach was formerly head of the research department of Armour & Company, and is now serving this company in an advisory capacity, and preparing manuscripts for publication.

Dean and Mrs. J. C. Rogers tendered President Wells, Mr. DeLoach and Professors Bennett and VanCleave a very delightful reception at their home on the occasion of their recent visit. The men of the college faculty were invited and enjoyed a very pleasant fellowship with these visitors. One of the inspiring experiences of college life is the privilege of meeting men and women of keen intellects, broad sympathies, and cultural attainments. We count ourselves fortunate in having a goodly number of such visits each year by men and women of national and international reputation.

Easter was an inspiring occasion at Piedmont. The Union Church had special services three evenings preceding Easter. The communion service on Thursday evening was a deeply spiritual occasion. The church had been carefully decorated for the occasion and the service was so planned that the communion itself was the heart of the worship period. On Easter Sunday, by the courtesy of Professor and Mrs. Homer Stevens, the church was attractively decorated for the Easter services. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have a greenhouse and brought generous supplies of potted plants to symbolize the resurrection of our Lord. Four persons were received into church fellowship.

DANIEL B. ATKINSON.

WINSTON-SALEM—SALISBURY.

Trinity Parish, in North Carolina, is a new development. Churches, as well as men and financial institutions, know how to live and grow and let live. More than that, they know how to "Help Live."

Scarcely too much can be said in praise of the United Church at Salisbury in loyally sharing their minister with the new work at Winston-Salem and Salem Chapel. For several months the leaders of our denomination have urged Rev. W. T. Scott to preach at least once a month at these two churches, Salem Chapel and Winston-Salem. For years the Christian Church people have wanted a Christian Church in this rapidly growing and wealthy city. Promotion took definite form last fall when Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Rev. M. J. Sweet, and Rev. W. T. Scott met in conference with more than eighty people in the Y. W. C. A. building at Winston-Salem, and talked things over. Vision predicted that dreams would come true, Work chimed in, Wisdom guided. People thought and thought hard and worthily. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference voted to help with money. Many ministers gave unstinted praise to the service being rendered by Mr. Scott in this great business center of North Carolina. All ended in the proposition to put a full-time minister in the field. Everything was all set—but no money. How could it be done? The answer was not easy to find. It took patience, careful consideration and the weighing of possibilities. One way, and one way only, could be seen. That way was that well-known saving word, "Combine." Take the message to Salisbury. Will they do it? Will they share their pastor with two other churches and thus make it possible for three to grow where now there is only one or, at best, two? Who can tell? Who will dare ask this United Church the important question? It had to be done, and done it was.

Not so easy to say, "Yes, take our pastor; let him go and come back to us once a month. We will work harder than ever to help Salem Chapel and Winston-Salem. We shall miss Mr. Scott and his fine family of wife and two smart boys, but we will give this time till it hurts terribly, but we will give." No, not so easy; but Salisbury did it, and we are proud of such a church. The story must be shortened, but let it be known that Sunday, March 20th, was a day when thought and action took the place of nearsighted selfishness. After several conferences among themselves, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom came. He, like Jesus, "Came preaching." And what a sermon for a time like this. The people met in sacred conference. Everything was fully explained. They were asked to let Mr. Scott go—and come back every third Sunday. The pastor-at-large was to become responsible for keeping the pulpit well supplied every Sunday. Miss Priscilla Chase, with the young people with her, would take care of one Sunday. Mr. Sweet another, and the third by the pastor, Mr. Scott, and the fourth would be supplied. Thus it was voted. And it was an inspired people who did the voting.

That same Sunday night, Dr. Bloom preached again to the Winston-Salem people. Following the service a preliminary organization was effected. A special committee of five, three men and two women, was appointed to carry through the first work of the new church. The people were grateful to Salisbury for their willingness to share. And now the program is being completed and the first Sunday morning service will be held in Winston-Salem, Sunday, April 10th.

Of course, much must yet be done. But with the spirit of these three churches, "Trinity Parish," a three-fold plan, whereby three large communities may be served efficiently, begins well and the rich harvest expected will not be long delayed. Some even dare to predict that this is only the beginning, something like an example of uniting churches in North Carolina—an example which will soon be followed by others so that many churches now but preaching points will follow the larger parish plan, so making it possible for all of them to have at least one minister who can give all his time to the ministry, and many churches will have full-time pastors.

HERE AND THERE IN THE VALLEY.

K. B. HOOK, Director of Religious Education, Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference.

Since my last report to THE SUN, I have visited several of our churches, namely, Wood's Chapel, Whistler's Chapel, Mayland, Bethlehem, Winchester and Palmyra.

As most SUN readers know, practically all of our churches in this Conference are small, rural churches. This does not mean, however, that nothing is being accomplished. We feel that a great deal of good has resulted and is resulting from the work in this section. As we drop in, and observe the work in some of the smaller churches, we wonder not how it happens that so little is accomplished, but rather how they get as much done as they do. When one stops to consider that many of our congregations have the services of a minister for only one Sunday each month, it is really remarkable how well the work progresses.

On our visit to Woods' Chapel, Whistler's Chapel and Palmyra we found small but exceedingly interested and active groups of Christian workers. Though unable to give a large amount of time to any of these churches, Rev. B. J. Earp is doing a great deal. At Mayland we found a somewhat larger group, and one composed of both young and old. The young people at Mayland enjoy preparing special programs. They rendered an excellent program at Christmas and were preparing one for Easter.

Several weeks ago we attended one of the very best services we ever attended. It was an evening service at Bethlehem Church under the direction of Dr. M. L. Weekley, and consisted of open forum discussion based on the subject, "What I Am Trying to Put Across in My Christian Work." The following gentlemen spoke on the various aspects of the subject: Mr. W. C. Wampler, Sunday School teacher of Antioch Church; Superintendent Turner, of the Mt. Olivet Sunday School; Superintendent Hoskins, of the Beulah Sunday School; Mr. R. Roy Hosaflook, Sunday School teacher of the Lineville Church; Superintendent Owen Andes, of the Antioch Sunday School; Mr. Jack Bradford, Sunday School teacher of Bethlehem Church.

Each of the above Sunday School workers is wide-awake and eager to serve his church and community. The facts presented were certainly worth while. The reports on work accomplished in these various churches and Sunday Schools were of such a nature as to challenge every member present to far greater accomplishments.

Though it was growing late when the six scheduled talks had been completed, Dr. Weekley happened to notice the Conference Religious Education Director in the audience, and prevailed upon him to speak. Following the theme of the meeting the last speaker attempted to show what he was trying to put across as director of religious education.

Dr. Weekley holds the union services at least every two months, at which members of all six of his churches come together for worship and the discussion of important problems. Just now he is engaged in conducting a revival at the Linville Church, with Prof. J. H. Ruebush, of Shenandoah College, Dayton, Va., in charge of the music.

At Winchester, and in several other Valley churches, it was our privilege to have Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, as a guest speaker during the week of March 10th. We were delighted to have him in our midst.

Census figures just published at Simla show that India now has a total population of 350,353,000. The Hindus increased 10 per cent in the last 10 years and now number 238,330,000, while the Moslems increased 13.1 per cent during the same period, now numbering 77,743,000. Sikhs increased 33 per cent; Jaines, two; Buddhists, eight, and Parsees, two.—Pathfinder.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Jesus, how futile our following if it be not all the way! Halting is losing. We may test the footing and circumnavigate the steeps, but Golgotha may not be lost to view, nor its enactment unrealized. Thou, blessed Lord, didst not seek to escape from the rugged climb. It was the Father's will to bring thee to the pinnacle of divine power, and we thank thee that in thy victory is our sufficiency for gaining the summit of eternal light. To thy name be praise forever. Amen.

"THE DOLLAR PLAN."

Quite a few of our Sunday Schools and churches are sending in their orders for the coin card to be used in "The Dollar Plan" for Missions. Certainly every church and Sunday School should give "The Dollar Plan," through the use of the coin card, an opportunity and a trial. This plan proposes that each member be asked to accept a coin card which is supplied, without charge to the one requesting it, and which card has in it ten pockets with the invitation for the receiver to deny himself or herself of one dime a week for ten weeks, placing the dime in the pocket of the card, say on each Sunday morning for ten Sundays, and then at the end of the ten weeks return the same to the church, or Sunday School, where a consecration service will be held and the roll called of all who have taken the cards.

This certainly is a plan that is calculated to stimulate interest in the school and church, and give to all who are willing the opportunity of making a donation within their reach. It is fully realized that only a few in times like these can make large donations out of hand, but by some effort, interest and energy all can make small donations through self-denial, the total of which will mean great things for the kingdom.

Think of how our women carry on their great work throughout the year by making their constant small donations. Their work has come to be a great factor in our missionary effort, and they have made it so by steady, even if small, donations. Now we all have an opportunity to make a similar contribution, and we are sure that many will avail themselves of the plan. It is truly said that "what a dollar can do depends on the company it keeps." This "Dollar Plan" is a call to all who care to put in a dime a week for ten weeks and then let the dollar thus accumulated join other dollars, and represent the giver in sharing the ministry of our Lord with others.

Our chief hope for the maintenance of Missions and Christian enterprises in this time of stress is in the multitude of small gifts. By laying aside in the pocket of the coin card a dime a week for ten weeks nearly every member of the church, Sunday School, and Christian Endeavor Society can spare an extra dollar without serious inconvenience.

Why not join the increasing army and get in the good company of those who are determined, by the help of God, even through a contribution of a dime a week for ten weeks, that our Mission work shall not suffer defeat even in a time of depression? Any school or church wishing the cards can get them by addressing the Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

MY MONEY AND I.

In an old story, a miser, having accumulated great wealth, died and passed on to the other world. But to enter the Kingdom of the blessed, it was necessary to cross the river Styx in a boat rowed by the old boatman named Charron. The miser, true to form, objected to paying the fee for crossing the river, and, braving the dangers swam across.

But the government of the other world depended on the boatman's fees for running the government. Thus the act of the miser created a great commotion because it was seen that if swimming the river became a custom, the government would have no revenue and must collapse.

The question then arose as to what punishment should be inflicted on the miser. All kinds were discussed; flogging, imprisonment, torture. But at last the chairman of the assembly arose and said: "The punishments which have been suggested are all severe, but they are not severe enough, so it seems to me that the severest punishment we can inflict is to put him in a position where he can see what use his heirs are making of his hoarded money."

In my boyhood, I knew a good old couple who by hard work and economy accumulated 1300 acres of land and probably $50,000 in cash. The heir was an only son who, on receiving the property, proceeded to build a country palace. In this palace dances, big feasts, and big card parties were held. They were not cheap. He bucked the Board of Trade in Chicago and lost thousands. He was unscrupulously immoral. He did not believe in a future life and lived the principle of eating and drinking for tomorrow we die. His manner of life soon exhausted his ready money, so he borrowed repeatedly at the banks until they became anxious and demanded payment. He could not, but, following his philosophy that the world and his body were like an orange from which the juice has been sucked and the remainder worthless. With a pistol he committed suicide.

His parents might have done something to confer blessings on mankind for all time. What they did do was to provide a spendthrift son with the means of becoming an immoral pest in society. Much better would it have been for the parents to put their money into some great benevolent enterprise and made it necessary for the son to work. A very good mother once said to me: "I want to give my children as good an education as I can to fit them to make a living, and then let them find for themselves."

When we, who have been stewards of the bounty of the Lord, shall stand before Him and are asked to give an account of our stewardship, what shall we do here that we may have confidence and joy on that important day?

FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

Cagayan, Misamis, P. I.,
October 11, 1931.

Dear Folks at Home:

Now that I have a little daughter to look after, I will not have as much time to take in passing events or to tell you of them. Doris True is a little over a month old now, and she is growing and we think the grandest baby ever.

I attended Sunday School today for the first time in quite a while. Dr. Ching has been taking charge of my class for me. It was promotion day for the Sunday School and each class of beginners, primaries and juniors had special recitations, songs and dramas. The children were well trained, and they do so enjoy these programs. I am sorry to say there is a general falling off in attendance in both the Sunday School and the church. Our pastor here speaks no English and lacks the background and training which would make him efficient in his work. If we do not get a well-trained native or American evangelist very soon, I don't know what we will do. Our hospital work must be followed up by active evangelistic work. The Catholics are making great strides here. They are running free busses to their private high school and one place near where we started a Sunday School, and had an enrollment of 45 children, the Sisters came and started daily classes and threatened the children so that they were afraid to come to the Sunday School again.

We are indeed fortunate in having a good Filipino doctor on our hospital staff. He is a good Christian and a conscientious worker, and his twelve years of experience in the United States has made him very efficient. His wife (Dr. Ching mentioned above), is in private practice here (being also a doctor), and is very popular with the women. She is an American citizen, though of Chinese parentage, because she was born in the Hawaiian Islands. We wish we could afford to have her on our staff. We are enjoying good health.

Dear Folks at Home:

This afternoon I have been getting Christmas packages ready, but it's hard to have any enthusiasm when the temperature is 85 and everything is so green. But one good thing about Christmas in the tropics, it lasts a long time, since we have to start so early and packages keep coming long after.

Dr. White had to make another trip to Manila so baby and I are alone. One of the Americans at the pineapple plantation needed an operation that could not be undertaken here for lack of instruments. As the patient was so very ill they hired a specialist in Manila to come by plane but a typhoon near Manila stopped that. A boat made a special stop here and took him. One of their men died here this year of a rare disease, the only case reported in the Philippines. It is doubly hard when things like this happen out here where one is away from home and friends. I sat up all that night with the young wife and tried to comfort her. We had a fatal case this week also. A school boy from another province was brought in dying of blood poisoning caused by an abscessed tooth. The strange thing was the brother of the boy who came with him asked Dr. White if they could have the witch doctor come to see the boy. He said, "I do not have faith in witch doctors myself, but our relatives think the boy has been bewitched, and I want to try everything." It is still a custom in this province to make pomohut (offerings they burn when there is illness in the family to keep the evil spirits away). However, the witch doctor did not come.

I have a beautiful orchid hanging here in my dining-room, which is in full bloom. One of our friends here has more than 1,000 plants in a small greenhouse they have made. It is an interesting hobby collecting orchids, as there are over 800 varieties in the Islands. Well, there is one thing we have here which reminds us of Christmas—the poinsettias in our yard are 10 to 15 feet high, and are just turning red. We have them on two sides of the hospital also. They will be glorious by Christmas. How I would like to see the shop windows and all the Christmas decorations and the busy shoppers rushing about everywhere. Our hearts turn more toward home at this time and Thanksgiving than any other. We miss the family gatherings and good things to eat.

May your hearts be full of kind thoughts and good cheer as you approach the glad Christmas season.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS FOR APRIL.

By MRS. W. M. JAY, Editor.

WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

These programs are on India, taken from the booklet, "India Today." We would suggest that before you enter upon these programs that you study carefully the suggestions given in the Introduction on page three of the booklet, then you will be much better prepared to carry out whatever part you may select from the different chapters. Chapter 1—Our Neighbor India. Chapter 2—How Shall We Help India? Chapter 3—India in Transition. Chapter 4—What India Needs. The booklet, "India Today," may be secured from American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. The price is ten cents.

(It might be well to get at least two copies of these program booklets.)

Test of a good program—It shall provoke thought; make a deposit of facts; arouse to activity.

Suggestions:

Get many to help in the preparation and work for each meeting. Mrs. Cronk once said at Northfield: "You never hear a woman say a meeting was poor if she took part." One person may arrange in advance for assignments.

One may prepare a definite list of things the church needs to pray for, in connection with the topic, then type and distribute the list at the meeting.

One may be sponsor to work up attendance, provide publicity, and see that many are invited.

Three people may be asked to report something they have heard recently about India, from the radio, an address, or magazines.

Much depends upon a proper atmosphere for the successful meeting. A very large map of India may add toward a sympathetic attitude. Let there be few preliminaries in the way of business.

India prints, maps, brasses, or curios will add artistic atmosphere. Some family may be able to lend them.

Some of India's great poems, such as those by Tagore, Tilak, or Tukaram, may be used as readings. Books and material may be borrowed from the Loan Library of the American Board, for two weeks, free, except for postage.

PROGRAM I.

"OUR NEIGHBOR INDIA."

Hymn—"This Is My Father's World."

Leader's Introduction.

Talk—"Land of India."

Solo—"In the Secret of His Presence," written by an Indian Christian.

Talk—"India's Ancient Culture."

Address—"Our Mission Stations."

Leader's Summing-up.

Reading—"Neighbors," Luke 10:25-37.

Hymn—"Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," (to be sung or read.)

Prayer for India, and for us, her Christian neighbors.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

This is the time for the Society to present a pageant. Have this at the church hour and take a special offering for Missions. The pastor may have charge of a short worship program before the pageant, or it may be led by one of the society members.

WILLING WORKERS.

Topic—"Open Windows."

Theme—"Service."

I. Worship Period.

1. Call to worship. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."
2. Song—"Lift Your Glad Voices."
3. Scripture—Luke 24:1-12.
4. Prayer—Thanking God for the Easter season and what it means to boys and girls.
5. Offertory.
6. Poem—(Select some poem on Easter and give to one of the members to recite. Do this before time of meeting so it can be prepared.)

7. Special music.

8. Talk—(The leader should carefully prepare the last chapter of "Open Windows," reviewing briefly the first five chapters, correlating the whole with the Easter idea, that Jesus rose for boys and girls in every land and of all races. Have a picture, "The Hope of the World," placed so all can see, and around this your talk can be most effectively woven.)

9. Song—"What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

10. Benediction.

Poster VI. White background. Use pictures of Japanese house scene, in center of poster. Write at the top: "We Look at Japan."

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING, JUNE 20-26, 1932.

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS.

Dean—Rev. F. C. Lester.
Dean of Boys—Rev. W. L. Scott.
Dean of Girls—Mrs. Grace Stewart.
Registrars—Jewell Truitt and Priscilla Chase.

DAILY SCHEDULE.

6:45—Rising Bell.
7:15-7:45—Breakfast.
8:00-8:45—Chapel, led by the representatives of the American Board.
8:50-10:30—Credit Classes.

Since each student can secure only one unit of credit, we are placing all credit courses at one time and have the following four courses included. For the credit courses, we have scheduled a period of an hour and forty minutes. Half of this is for class and half for supervised study and later the second class period. This leaves just one hour of preparation which can be done easily in the afternoon. The credit classes:

The Pupil—Prof. VanCleave.

New Testament—Prof. Simon Bennett.

Youth at Worship (Adolescent Worship or Training in Worship and the Devotional Life), Miss Coghill.

Story Telling—Priscilla Chase.

10:30-10:45—Intermission—Recreation.

10:45-11:30—Three classes of one period each day.

Appreciation of the Bible—Rev. Alfred Hurst.

World Missions (Course planned for adult leaders especially), Representative of the American Board.

Young Peoples' Methods—

11:30-12:20—Repeat credit classes.

12:30—Lunch.

1:30-3:00—Rest and study.

3:00-5:00—Recreation.

6:00—Supper.

7:00—Vespers, in charge of Miss Coghill and her Class in Worship.

8:00-9:30—Evening programs of a varied nature.

9:30—Group meetings.

10:00—Good-night signal.

10:30—Lights out.

It is planned that the Conference will begin with lunch on Monday, with an opportunity for assignment of rooms, registration, and short meetings of classes for lesson assignments. The last session will be Sunday dinner on the 26th, and it is planned to make the Sunday morning service the peak of inspiration and consecration of the whole Conference.

Our Conference meets during the same week a Presbyterian conference will be held at the college. Mr. Fleming and Mr. Baker of the Presbyterian conference were most generous in allowing us to meet at the same time.

The representative of the American Board, who will be with the Summer School for the week, is Mrs. Adward Parsons, a returned missionary from China. She is a young woman and the widow of a missionary doctor. Other members of the faculty are quite well known to the church constituency, and most of them have taught in previous sessions of the Summer School.

The cost of the Conference will be $8.00 for board and room and $2.00 for registration. It will help those who are planning for the Conference more than we can say if you will send in your registration at the very earliest possible moment. As in the past, you will need to bring your own bedding and toilet articles, a Bible, notebook, and plan to buy one inexpensive textbook.

We have attempted to make the rules as few as possible, but it is expected that those attending the Conference observe the following:

Absolute quiet after 10:30. We cannot do our best work if sleep is disturbed. All students are expected to share in the activities planned for the school throughout the day. Students must not leave the grounds without permission. This applies to both boys and girls.

Further information regarding the evening programs will be given at a later date.

Further information regarding the details of the Conference may be secured from Jewell Truitt, Glen Raven, N. C., or Priscilla Chase, Elon College, N. C.

We are expecting you to come and to help work up a large delegation from your church that this may be the biggest and best Conference ever held at Elon.

YOUTH.

Because this page is for youth, the editor is calling attention to what Youth really is by the use of an anonymous article on the subject, "Youth." May all who read be able to say, "I am young."

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits . . . Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."—Psalm 103:2-5.

"Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips, and supple knees; it is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions; it is a freshness of the deep springs of life.

"Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite of adventure over the love of ease. This sometimes exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty.

"Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years; people grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear, and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the head and turn the growing spirit back to dust.

"Whether seventy or sixteen, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the unfailing child-like appetite for what next, and the joy and the game of life.

"You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubts; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

"In the center of your heart there is a wireless station; so long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, courage, grandeur, and power from the earth, from men, and from the Infinite, so long are you young.

"When the wires are all down, and all the central place in your heart is covered with the snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism, then are you grown old indeed."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR LIFE INVESTMENT.

Scripture Reading: Matthew 25:14-29.

Agriculture—Many Young people of today ignore this field in considering their life work. This is unfortunate for the products of the soil are the first essential to the preservation of human life. The seeming overproduction which was a factor in the recent depression was misleading. The problem was not one of overproduction but of an unequal distribution of wealth that prevented millions of people from buying the products of the farm which they needed and wanted.

It is true that agriculture has become a highly developed science in some sections, but in parts of our own country and in vast areas of many other lands, it is still in a primitive state. Agricultural missions are receiving more and more emphasis as our concept of the program of Christianity is expanded to include everything that is related to human welfare. The story of Sam Higginbottom's work in India is one of the most fascinating chapters in the history of missions.

Business and industry—The need in these lines is not primarily for new types of business, new products of industry, nor even for greater efficiency. The challenge to youth is for the investment of life and talent in making these major phases of the world's life Christian. The recent world depression has convinced us of the weakness of the old materialistic philosophy. The hour is here for a change in policy. There is sure to be an increasing demand in the commercial world for a new type of leadership. There have been a few experiments in democracy in business and industry but the field is wide open for further developments. These need not be limited to large corporations. The same principles can apply in the small factory and the corner grocery.

Journalism and literature—This seems an appropriate time to sound the challenge to young people of Christian ideals to enter these fields. The daily newspaper is probably the strongest single influence in molding public opinion. It will be a tremendous factor in building a better world when it is brought under the influence of a Christian leadership. Literature in the twentieth century has forfeited its soul for money. It needs some idealistic genius to redeem it. The same is true of all the arts.

Social service—The field of social service is constantly expanding as the complexity of our civilization creates new social problems. There is a growing need in foreign lands for the social engineer who can aid in the reorganization of society made necessary by the introduction of western industrialism.

Religious service—All the fields for life investment we have mentioned may rightly be called "religious service." However, we are thinking just now particularly of full-time Christian service such as the ministry, missions, religious education, and church secretarial work. The program and problems of religious agencies today require a leadership of high intelligence, moral courage, intensive and extensive training, and deep consecration. It is no easy task to which the Master calls us. But the reward is a new world where truth, justice, peace, love, and brotherhood shall reign.

NOTE: The various types of educational and professional work should not be omitted from this discussion.

The true Christian is neither afraid of dying nor living; he desires to go to heaven to see Christ, yet he is willing to stay upon earth to serve Christ.

THE CALL OF ABRAM.

LESSON III—APRIL 17, 1932.

LESSON TEXT: Genesis 12:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be thou a blessing."—Genesis 12:2.

Introduction.

The book of Genesis is in two main divisions. Chapters one to eleven deal with origins in general. Two lessons for this quarter have been selected from this section of the book. We now turn to the second section of Genesis, which deals with the tribal stories of the origin of the Hebrew people. The remaining lessons of the quarter are arranged from these tribal stories. Naturally, we think of the characters as individuals, but we must remember that the individual name signifies a tribal group. The Hebrews used this dramatic method of making vivid and real the truths of worth associated with their early tribal relations.

Jehovah Said Unto Abram.

Repeatedly Abram is represented as receiving insight from God. The founders of great and significant social and religious movements feel the mystical presence of the Eternal. Abram, whose name is later changed to Abraham, felt the spiritual urge of God seeking to determine a larger spiritual destiny for him.

Out Of Thy Country.

His call was to leave native country, kindred and land. It is hard to break the ties of kindred association. The closing verses of chapter eleven indicate that Abram left Ur of Chaldea. We know now that a great and highly developed civilization flourished in the Tigris-Euphrates River valleys over two thousand years before Christ. Abram was called to leave a land of worth and opportunity. Perhaps the great Hammuraysi had unified his empire with his famous code of laws. It was no mean civilization that Abram was asked to leave.

A Great Adventure.

"Unto the land that I will show thee." This was an adventure into the unknown. Abram knew not the land that was to be his future home. But he trusted the One who called him and lured him on in his adventure of faith. Many times we can not see the land that lies just ahead but, if we can trust the One who leads us, we can go forward with confidence. The adventure of faith is always interesting.

Be Thou a Blessing.

The Eternal seems to be more interested in the survival of social and racial values than in the survival of the individual. Abram is to be a blessing to others, "in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Religion seeks to lift the plane of our joys and satisfactions. Human nature is more readily adjusted to enjoy selfishly than to find joy in social welfare. Religion seeks to give us a new birth so that our joys and satisfactions are on a socialized level rather than on a personal level. Happy are they who learn to get joy in helpful service to others.

An Altar Unto Jehovah.

These early tribal stories show the conflict of Jehovah worship with the other forms of religious worship of that time. Abram erected an altar to Jehovah. Wherever he was he worshipped this one supreme God. Hebrew religion gave to the world an ethical monotheism. This was a great and permanent contribution to religion. Here Abram erects his altars in various places and worships Jehovah. These stories thus try to explain the origin of famous old religious shrines in Palestine.

The Tribal Leader.

Careful reading shows that Abram is a tribal chieftain. He has a large retinue of tribal followers. (See chapter 14.) At Haran (verse 5) there were accessions to the tribe. Many of his tribe had likely been connected with the tribe for generations. There were new births. Slaves were sometimes purchased. Others may have voluntarily sought protection and association with them. For protection, strength and mutual welfare the tribe migrated from place to place with their flocks and herds. The edges of the desert today have their Bedouin tribes who live much the same life now as four thousand years ago.

Father of the Faithful.

The Jews look upon Abram as the father of the faithful. Faithful to the vision of his call, he preserved faith in God through many wanderings in various countries and left a tribe with customs of Jehovah worship. Paul, in his letters to Romans and Galatians, refers to Abraham as an example of enduring faith. The Epistle of Hebrews also emphasizes this fact. Jews, Christians and Mohammedans regard Abraham as a great pioneer in faith. His adventure of faith is a challenge and example to millions today. God called; Abram answered and was true.

EASTER.

to do our daily work and suffer uncomplainingly its burdens and perplexities, its heartaches and disappointments. If we do, and by his grace we can do all that is required, the same authority that has called us here today assures us that some time in the coming years there will come another Easter Day when it may be said of you and me, of Tom and Bob and Harry and Joe, of every single one of us, as today it is said of him to whom this day is Holy, "He is not here. He is risen."

(The above is from an address by Attorney C. C. Howell, to the Men's Bible Class of the Riverside Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Fla., on Easter, March 27, 1932, and is a beautiful expression, as well as a sublime conception, of a glorious event.—J. O. A.)

Somewhere in each one of us is the power by which great things are done. It is the problem of each individual to find the work that will release his greatest force. If we but look, each day opens another lane to achievement, but we must have the courage, the enthusiasm and the willingness to follow it.—Western Electric News.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of the servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name, and prosper, I pray, thy servant this day."

MONDAY.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO YOU.

"Take heed to thyself and to thy teaching, continue in these things, for in doing this, thou shalt save both thyself and them that hear thee."—I. Timothy 4:9-16.

This was Paul's instruction to Timothy, and what he said to him he would say to every one of us. Of course, the great majority does not set itself up as preachers and teachers, but it is inherently true none the less that every one is a teacher by personality, by conversation, by opinions, by action, and by influence, and others take heed to our lives, and are helped or hindered by them.

Every deed we do, every look we cast, yea, every thought we think, has its effect on some life, perhaps many lives. There is no such thing as an uninfluential existence.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us, we pray thee, how to live that we may be a blessing to others. May our influences be best and only the best. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ALL WILL BE RIGHT.

"He looked upon the recompense of reward."—Heb. 11:22-27.

Life has so many reverses, misfortunes, depressions, dark clouds, even to the faithful Christian, that it is hard to see that everything works out for good. The ability to see that, lies in a faith in One whose thoughts are far above our thoughts, and also lies an understanding that that which He calls joy and prosperity is different from what we call prosperity. It takes a vision that sees beyond the material values of this world and understands spiritual values even of adversity.

God holds out before His children the "recompense of reward," and every faithful one has a right to expect a happy ending to the doing of right. Every sorrow has its new and deeper strength. Every failure has its new courage. Every loss has its gain.

This is not true of the wicked. Sorrow is sorrow to him; loss is loss; and failure is failure. But this is not true of the faithful Christian. He has wonderful transformations vouchsafed unto him.

Prayer—Dear Father, we trust thee. We know that thou canst make all things right. Teach us to see this, to rely upon it, and to abide thy time confidently. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE HIGHER COMPASS.

"We walk by faith, not by sight." 2 Cor. 5:1-9.

Aboard a battleship there are three sets of compasses and steering. One is on the bridge, which is the usual place of navigation and steering. Another is half-way up the mast, where it is not affected by the large amount of steel, and the other is down in the bowels of the ship. The latter is used only in emergency. If ever compasses differ, the navigator steers by the higher one. If for any reason the upper ones are put out of commission there is still the one down in the heart of the ship. So it is with the ships of life which plow the stormy seas. There is the compass of feeling which may be affected by any or all the changes and whims around it. This compass is unreliable. It may be so deviated that it will put us on the rocks. But there is always the compass of Faith with us. It is high up. It is with God. It points true always. We have our emotions. They are always with us. We also have God's guidance in whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning. Keep check on thyself always, and when thy way differs from Christ's way, follow Christ.

Again, when our own feelings cannot be trusted, and the things of this world have beclouded our vision of the higher guidance, we still have within our hearts, the knowledge and the truth of God. His word is a chart unto our lives. Follow this guidance of truth. "The spirit of truth will guide you into all truth." Salvation is "chosen through belief in the truth." (2 Thess. 2:13.)

Prayer—O Blessed Spirit, we desire to yield to thy leadership. Forbid that we shall forget thy guidance. Thou art true and wise. We commit ourselves to thy hands. Bring us home to thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SEE AND BELIEVE.

"Whosoever the gospel shall be preached in the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of as a memorial of her."—Matt. 26:6-13.

The disciples thought this act of Mary's was uncalled for and extravagant. But Jesus gave them an inspiring story about it. This humble fragrant deed of self-sacrifice, our Lord said, should go down in fame to the end of time, not anonymously, but linked with her name as "a memorial to her." This is just what happened.

And the same has happened to many a soul since. The humble, sincere, and lowly followers of Jesus Christ, make oft-repeated sacrifices in honoring the name of Jesus in their lives, which are recorded in the archives of heaven. You and I know many of them, and, could we all, there would be uncounted myriads so honoring the Lord, and upon whom he is bestowing his jeweled crowns of love and sweet memories. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

Prayer—Dear Father, at the beginning of this day, we honor thee, and we pray thee to honor us with the blessed assurance of our acceptance with thee now and forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TRACE IT BACK.

"In the beginning, God."—Gen. 1:1-8.

Could the Bible begin more inspiringly than with those four words? Man is so made that he must search for origins. When he sees a beautiful house, he knows that it had a builder, he scents the idea that it could have come about by mere chance. But he is not satisfied with learning the name of the builder; he must know whence came the stone and the brick and the wood that make up the house. Even here he refuses to stop. He wants to know who made the materials that the builder put together in the house, and thus he traces back all effects.

Now, only two answers to this question of origins are possible. We can trace everything back to chance or to God. As some one has said, as we go back in our search we can come either to Fate or to Father. But Fate is blind and the world we see around us is a most marvelous piece of intricate work. Fate is cruel, and the world is full of evidence of love. Only an obstinate and stupid mind can see Fate as the origin of the universe. The thoughtful soul sees in it all the hand of His infinite Father.

What we find, as we thus trace things back, will decide our life attitude. Is it Fate? Ours will be an attitude of gloom, suspicion, doubt, antagonism, despair. Is it Father? Our attitude will be one of cheer, confidence, faith, love and hope. Let the last be our view, for it is the truth.

Prayer—Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven. Amen.

SATURDAY.

AVERAGE FOLK.

"Mark the perfect man."—Psa. 37:34-40.

Is there any such thing as a "perfect gentleman?" Once a lady complained to the company that the men who filled her coal bin were ill-mannered. The head of the company wrote in reply, "Madame, we find it difficult to secure perfect gentlemen to put in our coal."

In the same vein a lady once wrote to another regarding a certain servant, asking a great many questions. The reply was, "If Ruth could answer half your demands, I would have kept her myself."

We are forever expecting perfection in others, quite forgetting how short of perfection we are ourselves.

We need to bear in mind that we are dealing with average folks, and that we are hardly better than the average ourselves. If we did, maybe we would be more patient with the shortcomings of others.

Yet, we are enjoined by our Lord to "be perfect." Paul bore witness that Christ brings us unto the perfect man, that it is the purpose of Christ to present every man faultless before God, and James 3:2 says, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." How are we to reconcile our imperfections with heaven's injunction that we can be perfect?

G. Campbell Morgan answers this this way: Take a flower as an illustration. The seed is a strange little thing, without beauty, the embodiment of weakness, not a line of grace, nor a gleam of glory, but there lies in it the potentiality of a perfect blossom of gorgeous colors and magnificent beauty. From that seed, through the process of nature's law, cultivation, pruning, fertilizer and water, the plant and bud proceed, until at last the perfect blossom is formed.

God's humanity blossomed in one perfect man, and it was the realization of this thought that was in the mind of God, when He said, "Let us make man in our own image." It was what was in the mind of Christ when he said, "Be ye perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect." And it was what was in his mind when it was said, "Ye shall be like him."

However faulty we may be, we may still mark the perfect man and have so much of the Christ spirit within that we may be perfect in our intentions, and it is our privilege to struggle on until he makes us perfect in him.

Prayer—Our Father, keep us from judging others. Fill our hearts with thy love, and our lives with thy patience. Amen.

CHRISTIANITY'S BOOK—THE BIBLE.

REV. JAMES I. VANCE, D. D.

"Continue thou in the things which thou hast learned . . . that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Tim. 4:14-17.

The Bible is unique and commanding among all the books of the world and among all the literature of time.

The Bible is one book, but it is made up of many books. These books were written in different languages, through many centuries, by more than 50 authors. They discuss themes as varied as life, and sweep across epochs embracing six great civilizations. Each of its 66 books has a definite message and is apparently complete in itself. Collaboration between the writers was difficult, if not impossible; time, distance, language, nationality, culture, personality, and temperament erecting barriers that were impassable.

The Bible is not only made up of many books, it is a literature. History, poetry, philosophy, prophecy, theology, oratory, humor, irony, drama, tragedy, strategy, folk-lore, travelogue, music, law, jurisprudence, sermons, songs, warnings, prayers, all are in the Book.

The Bible starts in a garden and ends in a city. It breaks the silence with "In the beginning God," and it hushes a weary world to rest with "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all!" It finds man at the shut gates of the lost Eden, and leaves him before the open door at the top of the road. It begins with "Thou art cursed" and ends with "Let him that heareth say come!" It opens with a condemnation and closes with an invitation. At the shut gates of the lost Eden stands an angel with a drawn sword to keep man out; at the open door at the top of the road the Spirit and the bride wait to welcome all who would enter the door that no man can shut.

The Bible breaks at dawn with God's voice saying, "Let there be light!" and sets at dusk with God's voice saying, "Let there be life!" Between the two speak all the voices that can breathe a prayer, or plead a need, or confess a sin, or utter a warning, or sob a sorrow, or sigh a penitent's tear. Between the two are the tragedies of hate, the follies of fear, the sag and shame of sin, the paralysis of doubt, and the choke of the fog that ends it all.

Between the covers of the Bible are stories of nations, the acclaim of heroes, the fall of kingdoms, the rise of empires, the decline of dynasties, the crash of civilizations, and the coming of him who is the bright and morning star. Was there ever such a literature!

The makers of the world's best literature have gone to the Bible for their inspiration. Historians, essayists, poets, philosophers, journalists, all have found their masters in the Bible. Any literature that ignores the literature of the Bible condemns itself, and any study of the Bible which blinds itself to its literary charm and beauty may not hope by an affectation of piety to atone for such stupidity.

For several seasons I have been speaking at some Lenten services in a theater in one of the lakeside cities of the North. It is the custom for the chairman to read the Scripture lesson from memory. One day the lesson was the first chapter of Genesis. Without book or paper he stood before the vast audience, and in a deep, rich voice recited the divine story of creation. Suddenly I was wide awake, I seemed to be listening to something I had never heard before, my pulses were beating faster. The first chapter of Genesis is a poem, a divine poem, not fiction but divine truth expressed in poetic form. It is the childhood of the race singing the dawn of the world. It is the breath of God.

The Bible is not only a literature, a book made up of many books; the Bible is one book. Read it from Genesis to Revelation and it does not jar. There is no confusion of thought, no countending of ideals, no contradiction of ethical standards, no mixing and muddying of types and symbols and imagery. From beginning to end there is one line of thought.

There is revelation, but the revelation is progressive. Things are getting clearer, becoming more luminous, but there is no contradiction. John is plainer than David, but he does not contradict him. Paul is plainer than Isaiah, but they do not worship different Gods. There are the Ten Commandments, and the Sermon on the Mount, and the Golden Rule, and the Psalms of David, and the love song of Solomon, and the 13th chapter of I. Corinthians, and the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th chapters of John, Paul's love letter to the Philippians, and a thousand other literary treasures. Bind them all together and they do not fight each other! Let them all speak at once and there is no discord!

How are we to explain the unity of the Bible? What is the secret of it?

It is not theological. Men have attempted to give the Bible that sort of unity. They have forged its truths into systems of linked logic until to challenge one is to break all. But the unity of the Bible is not the unity of a chain.

It is not an ecclesiastical unity. Men have attempted to give the Bible that sort of unity. They have made its authority depend on presbytery or pope. Organization must be behind the Book, the church must speak, but the unity of the Bible is not the unity of hierarchy. It is not ritualistic. It is not a unity of phrase and posture and garb. Men have tried to give the Bible that kind of unity and have merely substituted a clay pitcher for the living water.

The unity of the Bible is the unity of a person. It is not the unity of an encyclopedia, but the unity of a great personality.

It is as though a great pile of material were heaped in confusion on a stage, and then at a word the curtain rises, and as it rises at the sound of every word everything finds its place. Chaos is gone. Order has taken its place. It is like a great mosaic. There is absolute harmony.

What is the name that pronounces unity over all the material gathered in this wonderful Book? It is the name of JESUS!

The Bible is not only one book; it is the one Book!

The Bible takes care of itself. We waste energy trying to steady God's ark. We grow nervous and fearful lest some hostile hand may shake down the impregnable rock of sacred Scripture. We contend with one another, and argue, and discuss, trying to defend this or that or the other theory of the inspiration of the Bible, imagining God's throne stands or falls with our theory. Meanwhile the Bible takes care of itself. It goes on proving that it is the word of God by doing the work of God.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Hot weather will soon be here and we will have 50 gallons of milk to handle every day. It will be hard to handle it satisfactorily without a refrigerator. We have undertaken to buy this with Octagon soap coupons, which will not cost anyone anything, for you will buy soap anyway. Just clip the coupons and mail them to the Christian Orphanage. 150,000 of them. Tell the little children in your Sunday School how they can help the little children at the Orphanage by finding some Octagon soap wrappers and bringing them to their Sunday School class one Sunday in April, and let the teacher mail them in. Let everybody help in this unique way, and I feel sure we will get the refrigerator and no one will be out a penny. A number of our sister institutions in North Carolina have had splendid success in this way and are enjoying their refrigerators. Will our Sunday School children, teachers, and everybody help us buy a refrigerator? As soon as we get enough on hand to justify us in buying, we will get it, and as the coupons come in we will pay for it, but we must get 75,000 first.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

voused for the battle of King's Mountain, starts a line of steel that carries a little railroad up out of Happy Valley into the land of the sky. In the construction of that road mule teams were let down by derricks from the dizzy heights of mountain precipices to stone ledges on the mountain-side where engineers did the difficult work of construction.
